7 But we hold this treasure in clay jars,[d] to show that the surpassing power belongs to God and does not come from us. 8 We are hard pressed on every side, but not hemmed in; at a loss, but not at our wits’ end; 9 hunted down, but not abandoned; knocked to the ground, but not destroyed; 10 always carrying about in our body the dying of Jesus, so that the life of Jesus may also be revealed in our body. 11 While we live, we are continually being surrendered to death because of Jesus, so that Jesus’ life may be displayed in our mortal flesh as well. 12 Death, then, is busy in us, and life is busy in you. 13 We have the same spirit of trust that the Scripture describes: “I believed, therefore I spoke.”[e] We also believe and therefore speak, 14 for we know that the one who raised the Lord Jesus[f] will raise us as well with Jesus and place us, together with you, in his presence. 15 All this is for your benefit, so that as grace spreads to more and more people it may make thanksgiving abound all the more, and God may be glorified.
16 That is why we never give up. Though our outward person is decaying, our inward person is renewed from one day to the next. 17 The light trouble of this passing moment is working out for us a glory that is eternal and weighty, past all comparison, 18 for our gaze is fixed not on what is visible but on what is invisible. What is visible lasts for a time; what is invisible lasts for ever.

Notes

- a (4:5) Servants: literally “slaves.”
- b (4:6) Gen 1:3; compare Isa 9:2.
- c (4:6) Face of Christ: many manuscripts read “Jesus Christ,” and some “Christ Jesus.”
- d (4:7) Clay jars: or “earthenware vessels,” cheap and fragile pottery.
- e (4:13) Ps 116:10 (115:1 Greek), following the Greek Old Testament.

Chapter 5

1 We know that if the tent that is our earthly house is taken down, we have a building from God, a house not built by human hands, everlasting in the heavens. 2 Meanwhile we groan in this tent, longing to put on over it our dwelling from heaven, 3 assuming that, once we have put it on,[a] we will not be found naked. 4 For while we remain in this tent we groan under our burden, not because we wish to be unclothed, but because we wish to be further clothed, so that what is mortal may be swallowed up by life. 5 God is the one who prepared us for exactly this, and who gave us the Spirit as a down payment guaranteeing what is coming.

6 So we are always full of courage. We know that while we are at home in the body we are away from the Lord, 7 for our life is guided by faith, not by sight. 8 We are confident, I repeat, and would rather be away from the body and at home with the Lord. 9 Whether we are in our home or away from it, then, our one ambition is to be pleasing to him. 10 Every one of us must be exposed to view before Christ's tribunal, so that each person may receive his due for the deeds done through the body, good or evil.
11 Since we know the fear of the Lord, we seek to win people over.
God sees us as we are, and I trust that your consciences see us so as well. 12 We are not recommending ourselves to you once more; rather, we are giving you a reason to be proud of us, so that you can respond to those who boast about outward show rather than inner reality. 13
If we have lost our senses, that is God's concern; if we are sober-minded, that is for your benefit. 14 For Christ's love holds us fast, since we have reached this conclusion: one man died for all, and therefore all have died. 15 His death was for all, so that the living should stop living to please themselves and live instead for the one who died and rose again on their behalf.
16 So from now on we regard no one from a merely human point of view. Even if we once regarded Christ in that way, we no longer do.
17 So if anyone is in Christ, there is a new creation.[b] The old things have gone; look, new things have come into being![c] 18 Everything is God's doing. He has reconciled us to himself by means of Christ, and has assigned to us the service of reconciling others: 19 God was in Christ, reconciling the world to himself,[d] no longer charging people with their offenses, and he has placed in our hands the message of reconciliation. 20 We are envoys, then, representing Christ, and God is appealing to you through our words. On Christ's behalf we plead with you: be reconciled to God. 21 The one who knew no sin God made to be sin[e] for our sake, so that in him we might become the righteousness of God.

Notes

- a (5:3) Once we have put it on: so the Westcott–Hort text and most manuscripts (as reported), endysamenoi; the original hand of Claromontanus and a few others read ekdysamenoi, "once we have taken it off," which some editors prefer as less obvious.
- b (5:17) There is a new creation: or "he is a new creature."
- c (5:17) New things have come into being: many later manuscripts read "all things have become new."
- d (5:19) God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself: or "in Christ God was reconciling the world to himself."
- e (5:21) Sin: or "a sin offering," a sense the Hebrew word for "sin" can bear (for example Lev 4:24).

Chapter 6

1 As God's fellow workers, then, we also appeal to you not to let the grace of God you have received go for nothing. 2 For he says, "At the moment of my favor I heard you, and on the day of rescue I helped you."[a] Listen, now is the time of favor; now is the day of rescue! 3 We give nobody any cause for offense in anything, so that our service may not be discredited. 4 Instead, as God's servants we commend ourselves in every way: by great endurance, in afflictions, in hardships, in distresses, 5 in floggings, in imprisonments, in riots, in labors, in sleepless nights, in hunger; 6 in integrity, in understanding, in forbearance, in goodness, in the Holy Spirit, in love without pretense, 7 in the message of truth, in God's power; armed with righteousness in right hand and left; 8 through honor and dishonor, through slander and praise; treated as impostors, and yet true; 9 as unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and look, we live on; as punished, and yet not put to death; 10 as grieving, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, yet possessing everything.
11 We have been completely open with you, Corinthians; we have welcomed you with an open heart. 12 It is not on our side that you are cramped; you are cramped in your own affections. 13 In return (I speak as to my children), open wide your hearts as well.

14 Do not be yoked unequally with unbelievers.[b] For what partnership can righteousness have with lawlessness? What fellowship has light with darkness? 15 What harmony is there between Christ and Beliar?
[c] What does a believer share with an unbeliever? 16 What common ground can God's temple share with idols? For we[d] are the sanctuary of the living God; as God declared: "I will dwell among them and walk with them, and I will be their God, and they will be my people."[e] 17 So "Leave their company and keep yourselves apart, says the Lord, and lay no hand on what is unclean;[f] then I will receive you,[g] 18 I will be a Father to you, and to me you will be sons and daughters, declares the Lord Almighty."[h]

Notes

- a (6:2) Isa 49:8, following the Greek Old Testament. In the Hebrew text the speaker is Yahweh.
- b (6:14) Yoked unequally with unbelievers: compare Deut 22:10; Lev 19:19.
- c (6:15) Beliar: a form of Belial (Hebrew, "worthlessness"), used in Jewish writings of the period as a name for Satan.
- d (6:16) We: many manuscripts read "you."
- e (6:16) Lev 26:11–12; compare Ezek 37:27.
- f (6:17) Isa 52:11. In the Hebrew text, "the Lord" is Yahweh.
- g (6:17) Ezek 20:34, following the Greek Old Testament.
- h (6:18) 2 Sam 7:14, 8; compare Isa 43:6. "The Lord Almighty" renders the Greek Old Testament's kyrios pantokratōr, which translates the Hebrew "Yahweh of hosts."

Chapter 7

1 These, dear friends, are the promises we hold; so let us purify ourselves of everything that pollutes flesh or spirit, and in reverence for God bring our holiness to completion.
2 Open your hearts to us. Not one person have we wronged, corrupted, or exploited. 3 I am not saying this to condemn you; I have told you before that you are in our hearts, to die together and to live together.
4 My frankness with you is great, and great is my pride in you. I am full to the brim with encouragement; through all our troubles my joy overflows.

5 For even when we came into Macedonia, our flesh had no relief; we were afflicted at every turn: conflicts outside, fears within. 6 Yet God, the comforter of the lowly, gave us comfort when Titus arrived, 7 and not only by his arrival but also by the comfort he had received from you, as he told us of your longing, your sorrow, your zeal for me, so that I rejoiced still more. 8 Granted that my letter grieved you, I have no regrets about it. I did regret it at the time (for I see that the letter pained you, if only briefly),[a] 9 but now I am glad, not that you were pained, but that the pain brought you to repentance. Your sorrow was of God's kind, so that we did you no damage in any respect. 10 For grief as God intends it produces a repentance that leads to salvation and leaves no regret, but the world's grief produces death. 11 Look at what this godly sorrow has brought about in you: such diligence, such eagerness to be cleared, such outrage, such dread, such yearning, such ardor, such determination to set things right! In every way you have proved yourselves blameless in this affair. 12 So my letter was written not for the sake of the offender or for the sake of the injured party, but so that before God you yourselves might see clearly how devoted you are to us.[b] 13 This is what has brought us comfort. And on top of our comfort, we were made gladder still by Titus' gladness, because all of you have refreshed his spirit. 14 Whatever I bragged about you to him, you have not embarrassed me; just as everything we told you was true, so what we boasted to Titus about you turned out to be accurate as well. 15 His heart goes out to you even more as he recalls how all of you obeyed, and how you welcomed him in awe and trembling. 16 I rejoice that in everything I can have confidence in you.

Notes

- a (7:8) If only briefly: the punctuation of vv. 8–9 is uncertain; the sentence may instead run "even if I regretted it, I see that the letter pained you, if only briefly; now I am glad…"
- b (7:12) How devoted you are to us: literally "your earnestness on our behalf"; many later manuscripts read "our earnestness on your behalf."

Chapter 8

1 Brothers, we want you to know about the grace God has bestowed on the churches of Macedonia. 2 In the midst of a severe ordeal of affliction, their overflowing joy and their deep poverty have welled up in a wealth of generosity. 3 I can vouch that they gave what they could afford, and even more than that, entirely on their own initiative, 4 begging us with much entreaty for the privilege of taking part in this service to the saints. 5 And they did not do merely what we had hoped; they gave themselves first to the Lord and then, by God's will,
to us. 6 So we have urged Titus that, as he had made a beginning, he should also bring this act of grace to completion among you. 7 You excel in everything: in faith, in speech, in knowledge, in every kind of eagerness, and in the love from us that lives in you.[a] See that you excel in this act of grace as well.

8 I am not saying this as an order; I am testing the genuineness of your love by the eagerness of others. 9 You are familiar with the generosity of our Lord Jesus Christ:[b] he was rich, yet for your sakes he made himself poor, so that by his poverty you might be made rich. 10 And in this matter I am giving you my advice. It is to your advantage, since a year ago you were the first not only to act but even to want to act. 11 So now finish the task, so that the eagerness of your intention may be matched by its accomplishment, as your means allow. 12 For if the willingness is there, a gift is acceptable in proportion to what a person has, not what he does not have. 13 The aim is not that others should have relief while you are hard pressed, but that there should be equality. 14 At the present time your surplus can meet their need, so that their surplus may in turn meet your need, and so there may be equality. 15 As Scripture says, "The one who collected a lot did not have too much, and the one who collected a little did not have too little."[c]

16 But thanks be to God, who puts into Titus' heart the same eager concern for you that I have. 17 For he not only welcomed our appeal; being very eager himself, he is going to you of his own accord. 18 Along with him we are sending the brother whose service in the gospel has won him praise in every church. 19 More than that, he has been appointed by the churches to travel with us as we administer this act of grace, for the glory of the Lord himself and to show our goodwill. 20 We are taking this precaution so that no one may blame us about the way we are administering this generous gift. 21 Our purpose is to do what is right not just before the Lord but before human eyes as well.[d] 22 With them we are also sending our brother, whom we have repeatedly put to the test in numerous matters and found keen, and who is now far keener because of his great trust in you. 23 As for Titus, he is my partner and fellow worker in your service; as for our brothers, they are envoys[e] of the churches, a glory to Christ. 24 Show them, then, in front of the churches, how real your love is and why we take pride in you.

Notes

- a (8:7) The love from us that lives in you: so the Westcott–Hort text, with P46 and Vaticanus (as reported); many manuscripts read "your love for us."
- b (8:9) Our Lord Jesus Christ: "Christ" is bracketed in the Westcott–Hort text.
- c (8:15) Exod 16:18.
- d (8:21) Prov 3:4, following the Greek Old Testament.
- e (8:23) Envoys: Greek apostoloi, "apostles," here in the general sense of messengers sent by the churches.

Chapter 9

1 It is quite unnecessary for me to write to you about this service to the saints, 2 I am well aware how willing you are; I keep boasting of you to the Macedonians that Achaia has been prepared since a year ago, and your enthusiasm has stirred up most of them. 3 Still, I am sending the brothers, so that our boast of you on this point may not be proved hollow, and so that you will be prepared, just as I kept saying. 4 Otherwise, if any Macedonians come with me and find you unprepared, we (to say nothing of you) would be humiliated for having been so confident.[a] 5 I therefore judged it needful to ask the brothers to go to you ahead of me and get your promised gift ready beforehand, so that it may be on hand as a free gift, not one extracted from you.[b]

6 Remember this: whoever sows sparingly will reap sparingly, and whoever sows generously will reap generously. 7 Each one should give as he has made up his mind, not grudgingly or under compulsion, for "God loves a cheerful giver."[c] 8 God has the power to cause all kinds of grace to abound toward you, so that in every circumstance you always have all you need and have plenty left for every good deed. 9 As it is written, "He has scattered his gifts, he has given to the poor; his righteousness endures for ever."[d] 10 He who supplies seed to the sower and bread for food[e] will supply and multiply your seed and increase the harvest of your righteousness. 11 In every way you will be made rich enough for every kind of generosity, and your generosity, passed on by us, will lead to thanksgiving to God. 12 For the carrying out of this public service is not only filling up what the saints lack; it also spills over into abundant thanks to God. 13 Through the proof that this service provides, they will glorify God for the obedience of your confession of the gospel of Christ and for the generosity of your sharing with them and with all, 14 and their longing for you and their prayers for you will reflect God's grace, which surpasses all bounds in you. 15 Thanks be to God for his indescribable gift!

Notes

- a (9:4) So confident: many later manuscripts add "in this boasting."
- b (9:5) Extracted from you: literally "as greed," that is, as an extortion.
- c (9:7) Prov 22:8, in the Greek Old Testament only.
- d (9:9) Ps 112:9.
- e (9:10) Bread for food: Isa 55:10.

Chapter 10

1 It is I myself, Paul, who plead with you by the meekness and kindness of Christ, I who am "lowly" in your presence but "daring" toward you from a distance. 2 I beg you that when I am present I may not have to show the boldness I count on displaying against certain people who reckon that we behave by worldly standards. 3 For though we live in the flesh, we do not wage war by the flesh. 4 The weapons we fight with are not of the flesh, but powerful through God for tearing down strongholds. We demolish arguments 5 and every lofty barrier raised up against the knowledge of God, and we take every thought prisoner to make it obey Christ, 6 and we stand ready to punish every disobedience, once your obedience is complete.

7 Look at what is right before your eyes.[a] If anyone is sure that he belongs to Christ, let him think again and consider that, as he is Christ's, so are we. 8 Even if I boast rather freely about our authority, which the Lord gave for building you up and not for pulling you down, I will not be put to shame. 9 I do not want to seem to be frightening you with my letters. 10 For "His letters," they say, "are weighty and forceful, but his bodily presence is feeble and his speaking amounts to nothing." 11 Let such a person understand that what we are in word by letter when absent, we are also in action when present.

12 We would not venture to rank ourselves or measure ourselves against certain of those who write their own testimonials. They gauge themselves by each other and rate themselves against each other, and they have no sense.[b] 13 We, however, will not boast beyond limits, but will keep to the limits of the field[c] God has assigned to us as our measure, a field that reaches even as far as you. 14 We are not stretching beyond our bounds, as if we had never reached you; in fact we came as far as you, the first to bring the gospel of Christ. 15 We do not boast beyond limits in other people's labors. Our hope is that as your faith grows, our field among you may be greatly enlarged, 16 so that we may carry the gospel to regions past you, and not take credit for ground another has already worked. 17 "Whoever boasts must make his boast in the Lord."[d] 18 Approval comes not to the person who recommends himself, but to the person the Lord recommends.

Notes

- a (10:7) Look at what is right before your eyes: or, as a question, "Are you looking at things as they appear on the surface?" or, as a command, "Look at the facts."
- b (10:12) They have no sense: some Western witnesses (as reported) lack these words and the first words of v. 13, so that the sentence runs: "…but we gauge ourselves by ourselves and rate ourselves against ourselves, and will not boast beyond limits…"
- c (10:13) Field: Greek kanōn, a measuring rule, and so a measured area or sphere of work.
- d (10:17) Jer 9:24; compare 1 Cor 1:31. In the Hebrew text, "the Lord" is Yahweh.

Chapter 11

1 I wish you would bear with a little foolishness from me! Do bear with me. 2 I feel for you a jealousy that is God's own, for I promised you in marriage to one husband, to present you to Christ as a pure virgin. 3
My fear is that, just as the snake tricked Eve[a] with its craftiness, your thoughts may be corrupted and drawn away from single-minded and pure[b] loyalty to Christ. 4 Someone arrives proclaiming a Jesus other than the Jesus we proclaimed, or you take in a spirit unlike the Spirit you took in before, or a gospel unlike the gospel you welcomed, and you tolerate it beautifully! 5 Yet in my estimation I fall short of these superlative apostles in nothing. 6 I may lack training as a speaker, but I do not lack knowledge; we have made that clear to you in every way and in every respect.
7 Was it a sin, then, that I lowered myself to lift you up, proclaiming God's good news to you without charging you anything? 8 Other churches I plundered, taking pay from them so as to minister to you.
9 While I was with you and ran short, I was a drain on nobody; my needs were met by the brothers who arrived from Macedonia. I have kept myself from weighing on you in any way, and I will keep on doing so. 10 By the truth of Christ that is in me, nobody throughout Achaia shall stop me from making this boast. 11 And why? Because I do not love you? God knows I do! 12 I will continue as I am doing, so as to deny any opening to those who are looking for one, so that in their boasting they may be found to work on the same terms as we do. 13 Men like that are sham apostles, dishonest laborers, masquerading as Christ's apostles. 14 And no wonder, for Satan himself disguises himself as an angel of light. 15 It is hardly surprising, then, if his ministers masquerade as ministers of righteousness. They will end as their works deserve.
16 Again I say, nobody should think me a fool. Or if you must, then welcome me even as a fool, so that I may boast a little myself. 17 What I am saying in this boastful confidence I am saying not as the Lord would, but as in foolishness. 18 Since many boast according to the flesh, I too will boast. 19 Wise as you are, you are glad to tolerate fools.
20 You tolerate a man who makes slaves of you, who eats you up, who snatches what is yours, who lords it over you, who slaps your face.

21 I admit, to our discredit, that we have been weak in comparison!
Still, whatever anyone ventures to boast about (this is fool's talk), I will venture it too.
22 Are they Hebrews? So am I. Are they Israelites? So am I. Are they descendants of Abraham? So am I. 23 Are they ministers of Christ?
(Now I am raving.) I am a better one: in labors more abundantly, in prisons more often, in beatings beyond counting, and many times facing death. 24 From the Jews I received thirty-nine lashes[c] on five occasions. 25 Three times I was beaten with rods; once I was stoned; three times I was shipwrecked; a night and a day I spent adrift at sea; 26 I have been constantly on the road, at risk from flooded rivers, at risk from robbers, at risk from my countrymen, at risk from the nations, at risk in towns, at risk in open country, at risk on the sea, at risk among sham brothers; 27 I have known labor and weariness, many nights without sleep, hunger and thirst, frequent fasting, cold and lack of clothing. 28 Besides everything else, I carry the pressure of care for all the churches, bearing down on me each day. 29 When someone is weak, am I not weak as well? When someone is tripped up, am I not on fire?
30 If I must boast, I will boast of the things that show my weakness.
31 The God and Father of the Lord Jesus, he who is blessed for ever, knows that I am not lying. 32 In Damascus the governor[d] under King Aretas[e] was guarding the city of the Damascenes in order to seize me, 33 but I was let down in a basket through a window in the wall and escaped his hands.

Notes

- a (11:3) Eve: Hebrew Chavvah, associated with chai, "living" (Gen 3:20).
- b (11:3) Single-minded and pure: "and pure" is bracketed in the Westcott–Hort text; many manuscripts lack it, and others put the two words in reverse order.
- c (11:24) Thirty-nine lashes: literally "forty less one," keeping within the limit of forty set in Deut 25:3.
- d (11:32) The governor: Greek ethnarchēs, a ruler or representative of a people.
- e (11:32) Aretas: Aretas IV, king of the Nabateans (about 9 BC–AD 40), whose capital was Petra. Compare Acts 9:23–25.

Chapter 12

1 Boast I must.[a] Nothing is gained by it, but I will move on to visions and revelations granted by the Lord. 2 I know a man in Christ who fourteen years ago was caught up to the third heaven; I do not know whether it happened in the body or outside the body; God knows. 3
And I know that this man (whether in the body or apart from the body
I cannot say; God knows) 4 was snatched up into paradise[b] and heard words too sacred for speech, which no human being is permitted to utter. 5 About such a man I will boast, but about myself I will not boast, except of my weaknesses. 6 Even if I should choose to boast, I would be no fool, for I would be telling the truth. But I hold back, so that nobody may credit me with more than he sees in me or hears from me, 7 even given the surpassing greatness of what was revealed.[c]
So, to keep me from becoming overly elated, I was handed a thorn in the flesh, Satan's messenger, to beat me about, so that I would not become overly elated. 8 Three times I pleaded with the Lord about this, asking that it might leave me. 9 His word to me was, "My grace suffices for you, for my power reaches its completion in weakness." Gladly, then, I will rather boast of my weaknesses, so that Christ's power may rest upon me like a tent. 10 That is why, for Christ's sake, I am content with weaknesses, insults, hardships, persecutions, and pressures; for when I am weak, then it is that I am strong.
11 I have turned into a fool; you drove me to it. I ought to have had your commendation, for I came behind those superlative apostles in nothing, even though I am nothing. 12 The marks of a true apostle were produced among you with all perseverance, by signs, wonders, and mighty works. 13 How were you put at a disadvantage compared with the rest of the churches, apart from this: I personally laid no burden on you? Pardon me for this injustice!
14 See, I am ready to come to you for this third time, and I will not be a drain on you. It is not your possessions I am after but you. Children are not obliged to save up for their parents; parents save up for their children. 15 For my part, I will most gladly spend and be spent for your souls. If I love you more, am I to be loved less? 16 Very well, then: I did not burden you myself. Yet, crafty as I am, I caught you by trickery, did I? 17 Of those I dispatched to you, was there one through whom I took advantage of you? 18 I asked Titus to visit you and sent the brother along. Did Titus take advantage of you? Were we not guided by one Spirit, and did we not tread in the same tracks?

19 Have you been supposing all this time that we are defending ourselves before you? We are speaking before God in Christ, and all of it, dear friends, is for your upbuilding. 20 My fear is that on my arrival I may find you otherwise than I want, and you may find me otherwise than you want; that there may be strife, envy, fits of temper, factions, backbiting, whispering, conceit, and turmoil. 21 I am afraid that on my return my God may bring me low in front of you, and that I may grieve for many who were sinning before and have not turned away from the uncleanness, fornication, and sensuality they indulged in.

Notes

- a (12:1) Boast I must: many manuscripts read "If I must boast," and some "I must boast, though it is not profitable."
- b (12:4) Paradise: from a Persian word for a walled garden; in the Greek Old Testament, the garden of Eden, and in Jewish writings, the abode of the righteous with God.
- c (12:7) What was revealed: the punctuation is disputed. These words may instead close v. 6 ("…more than he sees in me or hears from me, even given the extraordinary revelations") or begin a new sentence with v. 7, as here. Many manuscripts lack "For that reason."

Chapter 13

1 This will be the third time I am coming to you. "Every charge must be established on the evidence of two or three witnesses."[a] 2 I warned those who sinned before and all the rest, and I warn them now, absent now as I was present on my second visit: if I come again, I will not spare them, 3 because you are looking for evidence that it is Christ who speaks in me. Toward you he is not feeble; he is mighty in your midst. 4 For he was crucified in weakness, but he lives by God's power.
We too are weak in him, but we shall live with him by God's power
in dealing with you.[b] 5 Put yourselves under scrutiny to see whether you are living in the faith; test yourselves. Can you not recognize that Jesus Christ is in you? Unless, that is, you fail the test. 6 I hope you will come to recognize that we have not failed it. 7 Our prayer to God is that you will do no wrong; not that we may be seen to stand approved, but that you may do good while we may look like failures. 8 We have no power to act against the truth, only for the truth. 9 We are glad when we are weak and you are strong. And this is what we pray for: your complete restoration. 10 This is why I am writing from a distance: so that when I arrive I will not need to be severe in exercising the authority the Lord gave me for building you up, not for demolishing you.

11 Finally, brothers, farewell.[c] Set yourselves right, take my appeal to heart, agree with one another, live in peace; and the God of love and peace will be with you. 12 Greet one another with a holy kiss. 13 All the saints send you greetings.[d] 14 The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ,[e] the love of God, and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit[f] be with you all.[g]

Notes

- a (13:1) Deut 19:15.
- b (13:4) In dealing with you: Greek eis hymas, bracketed in the Westcott–Hort text.
- c (13:11) Farewell: or "rejoice."
- d (13:13) Greetings: in the Greek text, and in some translations, vv. 12–13 are numbered as v. 12, and v. 14 as v. 13.
- e (13:14) The Lord Jesus Christ: "Christ" is bracketed in the Westcott–Hort text.
- f (13:14) Fellowship of the Holy Spirit: or "sharing in the Holy Spirit."
- g (13:14) With you all: many manuscripts add "Amen."

Galatians

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 From Paul,[a] an apostle[b] commissioned neither by people nor through any human agent, but by Jesus Christ[c] and God the Father, who raised him from the dead, 2 and all the brothers[d] who are with me, to the churches of Galatia:[e] 3 May grace and peace be yours from God our Father and from the Lord Jesus Christ,[f] 4 who gave himself for our sins to rescue us from this present evil age, according to the will of our God and Father, 5 to whom be the glory for ever and ever. Amen.
6 I am astonished that you are deserting so quickly the one who summoned you by the grace of Christ, and defecting to a different message,[g] 7 which is not another gospel at all. It is only that there are some people who are unsettling you and want to twist the gospel of Christ. 8 But even if we, or an angel from heaven, should proclaim to you a gospel contrary to the one we proclaimed to you, let him be accursed.[h] 9 As we have said before, so now I say again: if anyone is proclaiming to you a gospel contrary to what you received, let him be accursed.

10 Am I now looking for human approval, or for God's? Is it people I am trying to please? Were I still courting people's favor, I could not be Christ's servant.[i]

11 For I want you to know, brothers, that the gospel I proclaimed is not of human origin. 12 No human being handed it to me, and no one taught it to me; it came by a revelation from Jesus Christ.[j]

13 You have heard how I once lived as a follower of Judaism: how violently I hunted down God's church and set out to ravage it. 14 I was advancing in Judaism beyond many of my own age among my people, and I was far more zealous for the traditions of my ancestors. 15 But then God, who chose me while I was still in my mother's womb[k] and called me through his grace, decided 16 to disclose his Son within me, so that I would announce him among the nations.[l] At once, without talking it over with any mortal,[m] 17 nor did I go up to Jerusalem to those who were apostles before me. Instead I went away into Arabia,[n] and then returned to Damascus.

18 Three years later I did go up to Jerusalem, to become acquainted with Cephas,[o] and I spent fifteen days in his company. 19 Of the other apostles I saw no one, apart from James, the brother of the Lord.[p] 20 As for the things I write to you, look: before God, I am telling no lie. 21 Then I went into the regions of Syria and Cilicia.[q] 22 The churches in Judea that are in Christ still did not know my face. 23 All they had heard was this: "The one who used to persecute us now proclaims as good news the faith that he once set out to ravage." 24 And they glorified God because of me.

Notes

- a (1:1) Paul: Latin Paulus, "small." Paul also had the Jewish name Saul (Acts 13:9), after the first king of Israel ("asked for").
- b (1:1) Apostle: Greek apostolos, "one who is sent," a messenger with authority from the one who sends him.
- c (1:1) Jesus: the Greek form of Hebrew Yeshua (Joshua), "Yahweh saves." Christ: Greek Christos, "Anointed One," equivalent to Hebrew mashiach, "Messiah." In Paul's letters it usually functions as part of Jesus' name and is rendered "Christ."
- d (1:2) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, the usual term for fellow believers, including both men and women; so throughout the letter.
- e (1:2) Galatia: a region and Roman province in central Asia Minor (modern Turkey), named after the Gauls (Celts) who settled there in the third century BC.
- f (1:3) From God our Father and from the Lord: so the Westcott–Hort text, with Sinaiticus and Alexandrinus. Many other manuscripts, reportedly including P46 and Vaticanus, read "from God the Father and our Lord."
- g (1:6) Gospel: Greek euangelion, "good news"; so throughout.
- h (1:8) Accursed: Greek anathema, something handed over to God for destruction, the Greek Old Testament's word for Hebrew ḥerem (Josh 6:17).
- i (1:10) Slave: Greek doulos, a slave or bond-servant, one wholly owned by a master.
- j (1:12) A revelation of Jesus Christ: either a revelation that came from Jesus Christ, or one in which Jesus Christ was revealed (compare verse 16).
- k (1:15) Before I was born: literally "from my mother's womb," echoing the calls of the prophets (Isa 49:1; Jer 1:5).
- l (1:16) Gentiles: Greek ethnē, "nations," the non-Jewish peoples.

- m (1:16) Any human being: literally “flesh and blood.”
- n (1:17) Arabia: probably the Nabatean kingdom, which lay south and east of Damascus and extended into the Sinai (compare 4:25).
- o (1:18) Cephas: Aramaic Kepha, “rock,” the name Jesus gave to Simon; its Greek equivalent is Peter (John 1:42).
- p (1:19) James: the English form of Greek Iakōbos, that is, Jacob (“heel-grabber” or “he supplants,” Gen 25:26). This James led the Jerusalem church (Acts 15:13; 21:18). The Greek can also be read, “I saw no other apostle, only James.”
- q (1:21) Cilicia: the region on the southeast coast of Asia Minor, whose chief city was Tarsus, Paul’s birthplace (Acts 22:3).

Chapter 2

1 Then after fourteen years[a] I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas,[b] taking Titus[c] along also. 2 I went up because of a revelation, and I laid before them the gospel that I proclaim among the Gentiles.
I did so privately before those who were held in high esteem, for fear that I might be running, or had run, in vain. 3 Yet Titus, my companion, though a Greek, was not forced to undergo circumcision.
4 The pressure came from false brothers who had been smuggled in, men who crept in to spy out the freedom that is ours in Christ Jesus, intending to enslave us.[d] 5 We did not give in to them by submitting even for a moment,[e] so that the truth of the gospel might remain with you. 6 And from those who were held in esteem (whatever they once were makes no difference to me; God shows no partiality)[f] — those esteemed men added nothing to my message. 7 Quite the reverse:
they saw that the gospel for the uncircumcised had been put into my hands, as the gospel for the circumcised had been put into Peter’s.[g] 8 For God, who empowered Peter for his mission as apostle to the circumcised, empowered me as well for mine to the Gentiles. 9 James, Cephas, and John,[h] who were reputed to be pillars, acknowledged the grace granted to me, and they gave Barnabas and me their right hands in partnership: we were to go to the Gentiles, and they to the circumcised. 10 Their one request was that we keep the poor in mind, and that was the very thing I had made it my concern to do.
11 But when Cephas came to Antioch,[i] I opposed him to his face, because he stood condemned. 12 Until certain people arrived from James, he had been eating with Gentiles; but once they came he started to withdraw and hold himself aloof, fearing the advocates of circumcision. 13 The rest of the Jews joined him in this pretense,[j] so that even Barnabas was carried away by their pretense. 14 I saw that they were not walking straight with the truth of the gospel, and I said to Cephas before everyone, "You are a Jew, yet you live in Gentile fashion and not in Jewish fashion. How then can you force the Gentiles to adopt Jewish ways?"

15 We are Jews by nature, not sinners of Gentile stock, 16 but we know that no one is put right with God[k] by works of the law, only through faith in Jesus Christ.[l] And so we ourselves came to believe in Christ Jesus, so as to be put right by faith in Christ and not by works of the law; for by works of the law no human being[m] will be put right. 17 But if, while we seek to be justified in Christ, we ourselves are also found to be sinners, does that make Christ a servant of sin? Certainly not! 18 For if I rebuild what I once tore down, I prove that I am a lawbreaker. 19 Through the law I have died to the law, in order to live to God. With Christ I have been crucified.[n] 20 I no longer live; Christ lives in me. The life I live now in this body,[o] I live through trusting the Son of God, who loved me and surrendered himself for my sake. 21 I do not set aside the grace of God; for if righteousness came through the law, then Christ died for nothing.

Notes

- a (2:1) After fourteen years: counted either from his conversion or from the visit of 1:18.
- b (2:1) Barnabas: interpreted in Acts 4:36 as "son of encouragement"; the derivation is uncertain.
- c (2:1) Titus: a Latin name of uncertain meaning; he was a Gentile coworker of Paul (2 Cor 8:23; Titus 1:4).
- d (2:4) The Greek sentence of verses 4–5 is broken off and does not complete its grammar; the opening words have been supplied to make the sense clear.
- e (2:5) A moment: literally "an hour," an idiom for a brief time. A few Western witnesses lack "to them, not even," which reverses the sense ("we gave in for a moment"); the earliest manuscripts, including P46, have the negative.
- f (2:6) Shows no partiality: literally "does not receive the face of a person," a Hebrew idiom for judging by appearances.
- g (2:7) Peter: Greek Petros, "rock," the Greek equivalent of Cephas (1:18).
- h (2:9) John: the Greek form of Hebrew Yohanan, "Yahweh has been gracious."

- i (2:11) Antioch: Antioch in Syria, on the Orontes River, the third city of the Roman Empire and a center of the early Gentile mission (Acts 11:19–26).
- j (2:13) Pretense: Greek hypokrisis, "play-acting," traditionally "hypocrisy."
- k (2:16) Put right with God: traditionally "justified"; Greek dikaioō, to declare or put in the right before God; related to dikaiosynē, "righteousness."
- l (2:16) Faith in Jesus Christ: Greek pistis Iēsou Christou, which may also be translated "the faithfulness of Jesus Christ"; so also later in the verse, in 2:20 and 3:22. Scholars are divided.
- m (2:16) No human being: literally "all flesh shall not," echoing Ps 143:2 (142:2 in the Greek Old Testament).
- n (2:19) In the Greek text, "I have been crucified with Christ" begins verse 20.
- o (2:20) In the body: literally "in the flesh."

Chapter 3

1 Senseless Galatians! Who has put you under a spell, you before whose eyes Jesus Christ was publicly displayed on the cross?[a] 2 I only want to find out one thing from you: was it by keeping the law that you received the Spirit, or by believing what you heard?[b] 3 Can you be that senseless? You started out with the Spirit; are you now completing it through human effort?[c] 4 Have you experienced so much to no purpose? If it really was to no purpose.[d] 5 When God gives you the Spirit and works deeds of power among you, is it because you do works of the law, or because you heard and believed?
6 It was the same with Abraham: "He believed God, and it was counted to him as righteousness."[e] 7 You see, then, that the people of faith are the real children[f] of Abraham. 8 The Scripture saw ahead that God would put the nations right through faith, and announced the good news to Abraham in advance: "All nations will be blessed through you."[g] 9 Accordingly the people of faith share the blessing with Abraham, who had faith.
10 All who depend on works of the law live under a curse, for it stands written, "A curse is on everyone who does not abide by all that is written in the book of the law, to do it."[h] 11 That no one is put right with God by the law is clear, because "By faith the righteous one will live."[i] 12 But the law does not rest on faith; on the contrary, "The one who does them will live by them."[j] 13 Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law by becoming a curse for us, for it is written, "Cursed is everyone who is hung on a tree."[k] 14 This was so that the blessing of Abraham might reach the Gentiles in Christ Jesus, and that through faith we might receive the Spirit who was promised.

15 Friends, I will use an everyday illustration:[l] even a person's will, once it is validated, cannot be canceled or amended by anyone else. 16
The promises were spoken to Abraham and to his offspring. Scripture does not say "offsprings," referring to many, but speaks of one: "and to your offspring,"[m] that is, Christ. 17 My point is this: a covenant that God had already ratified is not annulled by the law, which came into being four hundred and thirty years afterward,[n] so as to make the promise void. 18 If the inheritance depended on the law, it would no longer depend on a promise; yet it was by a promise that God freely granted it to Abraham.
19 What, then, was the law for? It was added to deal with offenses,[o] until the descendant to whom the promise was made would arrive; it was ordained through angels, by means of an intermediary.[p] 20 A go-between does not act for one party alone; but God is one.[q] 21 Does this set the law against the promises of God? By no means! If a law had been given that was able to make alive, righteousness would truly have been by the law. 22 But Scripture has locked up everything under the power of sin, so that what was promised might be given, by faith in Jesus Christ, to those who believe.
23 Until faith came, we were kept under guard by the law, confined until the coming faith should be revealed. 24 So the law became our guardian[r] until Christ came, so that we might be justified by faith. 25
But now that faith has come, we are no longer under a guardian. 26 For in Christ Jesus you are all children of God through faith. 27 All of you who were baptized into Christ have put on Christ like a garment. 28 Gone are the distinctions of Jew and Greek, slave and free, male and female;[s] all of you are one in Christ Jesus. 29 If you are Christ's, you are Abraham's offspring, and heirs as the promise said.

Notes

- a (3:1) Publicly displayed: Greek prographō, to placard or post a public notice. Later manuscripts add "that you should not obey the truth" and "among you."

- b (3:2) Hearing with faith: or “the message of faith”; Greek akoē means both “hearing” and “what is heard”; also in verse 5.
- c (3:3) The flesh: Greek sarx, here human nature apart from God, and perhaps also a pointed allusion to circumcision.
- d (3:4) Experienced: or “suffered”; the Greek verb paschō can be used of good experiences as well as of suffering.
- e (3:6) Gen 15:6, in the wording of the Greek Old Testament. Abraham means “father of a multitude” (Gen 17:5).
- f (3:7) Children: literally “sons”; so also in 3:26 and 4:6–7, where it carries the legal sense of heirs.
- g (3:8) Gen 12:3, combined with Gen 18:18. Nations and Gentiles translate the same Greek word, ethnē.
- h (3:10) Deut 27:26, quoted freely from the Greek Old Testament, with wording drawn from Deut 28:58.
- i (3:11) Hab 2:4. The Hebrew reads “by his faithfulness”; the Greek Old Testament reads “by my faithfulness.” The Greek can also be read “The one who is righteous by faith will live.”
- j (3:12) Lev 18:5. In the Hebrew text it is introduced by “I am Yahweh.”
- k (3:13) Deut 21:23, quoted freely. Tree: Greek xylon, “wood,” also used of the cross (Acts 5:30).
- l (3:15) Literally “I speak according to man.”
- m (3:16) Offspring: literally “seed,” a collective noun in Hebrew and Greek. The promise is found in Gen 12:7; 13:15; 17:8; 24:7.
- n (3:17) Four hundred and thirty years: compare Exod 12:40, where the Greek Old Testament and the Samaritan Pentateuch count this period as including the time in Canaan as well as Egypt; the Hebrew counts it for Egypt alone.
- o (3:19) Because of transgressions: either to restrain them, or to expose them and define them as such (compare Rom 4:15; 5:20).
- p (3:19) Through angels: a Jewish tradition held that angels took part in giving the law at Sinai (Deut 33:2 in the Greek Old Testament; Acts 7:53; Heb 2:2). Mediator: Moses.
- q (3:20) This verse is notoriously difficult and has been interpreted in hundreds of ways. Its point may be that the law came indirectly, through intermediaries, while the promise came directly from the one God.
- r (3:24) Guardian: Greek paidagōgos, a household slave who escorted a boy to school and supervised his conduct until he came of age; not a teacher.
- s (3:28) Male and female: the wording echoes Gen 1:27 in the Greek Old Testament; note the change from “nor” to “and.”

Chapter 4

[1] I mean this: so long as the heir is under age, he is no better off than a slave, even though all the property is his. [2] Guardians and stewards have charge of him until the time his father has fixed. 3 So with us also: when we were minors, we were enslaved under the elemental forces of the world.[a] 4 But when the full time had arrived, God sent out his Son, born of a woman, born subject to the law, 5 so that he might buy freedom for those subject to the law, and that we might be adopted as children.[b] 6 And because you are children, God has sent the Spirit of his Son into our hearts, crying, "Abba! Father!"[c] 7 You are therefore no longer a slave but a son, and since you are a son, God has also made you an heir.[d] 8 In the past, not knowing God, you served as slaves those who by nature are not gods. 9 But now you know God, or rather God knows you. How can you go back again to those feeble and beggarly elemental forces, and long to be their slaves once more? 10 You are observing special days and months and seasons and years! 11 I fear for you, that I may have labored over you in vain.

12 Brothers, I beg you, become as I am, because I also have become as you are. You did me no wrong. 13 As you know, it was an illness of the body[e] that first gave me the occasion to preach the gospel to you, 14 and although my condition put you to the test,[f] you neither scorned nor spurned me;[g] instead you made me welcome as though I were an angel of God, even as though I were Christ Jesus. 15 Where then is your sense of blessing? For I can testify that, if it had been possible, you would have torn out your eyes and given them to me. 16 Have I then become your enemy by telling you the truth? 17 Those people are eager to win you over, but with bad intentions. They would like to isolate you, so that you will be eager to follow them. 18 It is good to be courted for a good purpose at all times, and not only when I am present with you. 19 My little children, I am once again in labor pains for you, until Christ takes shape in you. 20 I wish I could be present with you now and change my tone, because I am at a loss about you.
21 Tell me, you who want to be under the law, do you not listen to the law?
22 For it is written that Abraham had two sons, one by the slave woman and one by the free woman.[h]

23 But the son of the slave woman was born according to the flesh, and the son of the free woman through the promise.
24 This is an allegory:[i] the two women stand for two covenants.
One comes from Mount Sinai and bears children into slavery; that is Hagar.[j]
25 Hagar stands for Mount Sinai in Arabia;[k] she matches the Jerusalem of today, which is enslaved along with her children.
26 The Jerusalem that is above, though, is free, and that city is our mother.
27 Scripture says,

> "Be glad, you barren one who never gave birth;
> burst into song and cry aloud, you who never felt labor pains;
> for many more are the children of the forsaken one > than of the one who has a husband."[l]

28 Now you, brothers, like Isaac, are children of the promise.[m]
29 Yet just as then the child born by natural descent harassed the child born through the Spirit, so it is today.
30 But what does Scripture say? "Drive out the slave woman and her son, for the son of the slave woman shall never share the inheritance with the son of the free woman."[n] 31 So, brothers, we are not the slave woman's children but the free woman's.

Notes

- a (4:3) Elemental forces: Greek stoicheia, "basic elements," meaning either the elementary principles of religion, or the physical elements and the spiritual powers thought to rule them; also in verse 9.
- b (4:5) Adopted as children: Greek huiothesia, the legal adoption of a son, which gave him full rights as heir.
- c (4:6) Abba: Aramaic for "father," the word Jesus used in prayer (Mark 14:36); Paul gives the Greek translation after it.
- d (4:7) God has also made you an heir: literally "an heir through God"; later manuscripts read "an heir of God through Christ."
- e (4:13) An illness of the body: literally "a weakness of the flesh." Its nature is unknown; verse 15 has suggested to some an eye disease.
- f (4:14) My condition put you to the test: literally "your trial in my flesh," so the earliest manuscripts; later ones read "my trial that was in my flesh."

- g (4:14) Spurned: literally “spit out,” perhaps alluding to the ancient practice of spitting to ward off evil from someone sick.
- h (4:22) Gen 16:15; 21:2. The slave woman is Hagar, the free woman Sarah.
- i (4:24) Taken figuratively: Greek allēgoroumena, “spoken as an allegory.”
- j (4:24) Hagar: perhaps related to Arabic hajara, “to flee” or “to emigrate”; the meaning is uncertain.
- k (4:25) Hagar stands for Mount Sinai in Arabia: literally “Now Hagar is Mount Sinai in Arabia,” so the Westcott–Hort text. Some manuscripts, including Sinaiticus, read “For Sinai is a mountain in Arabia.” Paul may be playing on an Arabic word for rock or mountain that sounded like Hagar; this is uncertain.
- l (4:27) Isa 54:1, in the wording of the Greek Old Testament.
- m (4:28) Isaac: Hebrew Yitsḥaq, “he laughs” (Gen 21:6). Some manuscripts read “we … are.”
- n (4:30) Gen 21:10, where Sarah says “with my son Isaac.”

Chapter 5

1 Christ freed us so that we might be free. So stand your ground, and do not let yourselves be held once more under a slave’s yoke.
2 Take note: I, Paul, say to you plainly that Christ will be of no use to you at all if you let yourselves be circumcised. 3 I declare again to every man who accepts circumcision that he is bound to carry out the entire law. 4 You who look to the law to put you right with God have been severed from Christ; you have dropped out of grace. 5 But we,
by the Spirit and through faith, wait eagerly for the righteousness we hope for. 6 For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision nor uncircumcision counts for anything; what counts is faith working through love.
7 You were running a good race. Who blocked your way and kept you from obeying the truth? 8 Such persuading does not come from him who calls you. 9 It takes only a little yeast to work through all the dough. 10 I am confident in the Lord about you that you will take no other view. But the one who is unsettling you will bear the penalty, whoever he may be. 11 But if I, brothers, am still preaching circumcision, why am I still being persecuted? In that case the stumbling block of the cross has been removed. 12 I wish those who are disturbing you would go so far as to castrate themselves![a] 13 Brothers, you were called to be free. But do not let freedom become a foothold for the flesh; instead, be slaves to one another through love.

14 For the whole law is summed up in a single command: “You shall love your neighbor as yourself.”[b] 15 If you go on biting and tearing at one another, watch out, or you will be eaten up by one another.
16 This is what I say: let the Spirit direct your steps, and you will never satisfy the cravings of the flesh. 17 What the flesh craves is contrary to the Spirit, and what the Spirit desires is contrary to the flesh; the two are at war with each other, to keep you from doing whatever you wish. 18 But if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under the law. 19 Now the works of the flesh are plain: sexual immorality, impurity, indecency, 20 idolatry, sorcery,[c] hatreds, strife, jealousy, fits of rage, selfish rivalries, divisions, factions, 21 jealousy,[d] drinking parties, orgies, and similar things. I warn you, as I warned you earlier, that those who practice such things will not inherit God’s kingdom. 22 But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, 23 gentleness, self-control. Against such things there is no law. 24 And those who belong to Christ Jesus have crucified the flesh with its passions and desires.
25 Since the Spirit gives us life, let the Spirit also order our steps. 26 Let us not become conceited, provoking one another and envying one another.

Notes

- a (5:12) Castrate themselves: Greek apokoptō, “cut off,” a bitter play on circumcision, perhaps alluding to the self-castration practiced by priests of the goddess Cybele in Galatia.
- b (5:14) Lev 19:18.
- c (5:20) Sorcery: Greek pharmakeia, the use of drugs and potions in magic.
- d (5:21) Envy: later manuscripts add “murders.”

Chapter 6

1 Brothers, if someone is caught in any wrongdoing, you who are spiritual should restore such a person in a spirit of gentleness. Watch yourself, so that you also are not tempted. 2 Carry one another’s burdens, and in this way fulfill the law of Christ.[a] 3 Anyone who imagines he is something, when he is nothing, is fooling himself. 4 Let each one examine his own work, and then his reason for pride will be in himself alone, and not in comparison with someone else. 5 For each will carry his own load.[b]

6 Whoever is being instructed in the word should share every good thing with his instructor. 7 Do not be deceived: God is not mocked. Whatever a person sows, that he will also reap. 8 Sow to please your own flesh, and from the flesh you will reap ruin; sow to please the Spirit, and from the Spirit you will reap eternal life. 9 We must not tire of doing what is right, for when the time comes we shall reap, if we do not lose heart. 10 Therefore, whenever we get the chance, let us work for the good of all, above all for those in the family of believers.
11 Notice how large the letters are as I now write to you in my own hand![c] 12 Those who want to make a good showing in the flesh are the ones who are trying to compel you to be circumcised, only so that they may not be persecuted for the cross of Christ. 13 Even those who are circumcised do not keep the law themselves; they want you circumcised so that they can boast of your flesh. 14 But as for me, may I never boast except in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, through which[d] the world has been crucified to me, and I to the world. 15 For neither circumcision nor uncircumcision is anything; what matters is a new creation. 16 And for all who will follow this rule, peace be upon them, and mercy, and upon the Israel of God.[e]
17 For the rest, let no one make trouble for me, because I carry the marks of Jesus branded on my body.[f]
18 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit, brothers. Amen.

Notes

- a (6:2) Fulfill: the Westcott–Hort text has the command; other manuscripts, among them Vaticanus as reported, read "you will fulfill."
- b (6:5) Load: Greek phortion, a person's own pack, distinct from the heavy "burdens" (barē) of verse 2.
- c (6:11) In my own hand: Paul usually dictated his letters to a scribe (Rom 16:22) and added a closing in his own handwriting (1 Cor 16:21; 2 Thess 3:17).
- d (6:14) Through which: or "through whom."
- e (6:16) And upon the Israel of God: or "that is, upon the Israel of God." The phrase may refer to the church of Jews and Gentiles together, or to Jewish believers, or to the Jewish people as a whole. Compare the Jewish benediction “Peace be upon Israel” (Ps 125:5; 128:6).

- f (6:17) Marks: Greek stigmata, brands such as were put on slaves to show who owned them; here the scars of Paul’s sufferings for Jesus (2 Cor 11:23–25).

Ephesians

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 Paul,[a] an apostle[b] of Christ Jesus[c] by God's will, to the holy ones who are in Ephesus,[d] who are also faithful in Christ Jesus: 2 grace be yours, and peace, from God our Father and from the Lord Jesus Christ.
3 Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who in Christ has blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly realms.[e] 4
For he chose us in him before the world was founded, that we should be holy and without blemish in his presence. In love[f] 5 he marked us out beforehand to be adopted as his children through Jesus Christ, in keeping with the good pleasure of his will, 6 so that the glory of his grace might be praised, the grace he has freely given us in the one he loves.[g] 7 In him, through his blood, we have redemption, the forgiveness of our wrongdoings, as rich as his grace is rich, 8 that grace he has poured out on us in full measure, with all wisdom and insight. 9 He has made known to us the secret of his will,[h] according to the good purpose that he set forth in Christ, 10 a plan for the fullness of the times:[i] to bring all things together under one head in Christ, the things in heaven and the things on earth. 11 In him we also were made God's portion,[j] having been marked out beforehand by the purpose of the one who works out everything as his will determines, 12 in order that we, who were first to place our hope in Christ, might bring praise to his glory. 13 In him you also, after hearing the true message, the gospel[k] that saves you, and believing in him, received the promised Holy Spirit as your seal.[l] 14 The Spirit is the down payment[m] on our inheritance, until God redeems those who are his own possession, to the praise of his glory.
15 That is why I too, since I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus and your regard for all the holy ones,[n] 16 never stop giving thanks for you as I mention you in my prayers. 17 My prayer is that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the glorious Father, will give you a spirit of wisdom and insight as you get to know him, 18 the eyes of your heart having been filled with light, so that you may know what hope his calling holds, what wealth of glory is in his inheritance among the holy ones, 19 and how surpassingly great his power is toward us who believe. It is the same mighty strength at work 20 that he put to work in Christ when he raised him from the dead and seated him at his right hand[o] in the heavenly realms, 21 far above all rule, authority, power, and lordship,[p] and every title that can be given, not only in the present age but in the coming one. 22 God has placed everything beneath his feet,[q] and made him head over everything for the sake of the church. 23 The church is his body, the fullness of him who fills all in all.[r]

Notes

- a (1:1) Paul: Latin Paulus, "small." Paul also had the Jewish name Saul (Acts 13:9), after the first king of Israel ("asked for").
- b (1:1) Apostle: Greek apostolos, "one who is sent," a messenger with the authority of the sender.
- c (1:1) Jesus: the Greek form of Hebrew Yeshua (Joshua), "Yahweh saves." Christ: Greek Christos, "Anointed One," equivalent to Hebrew mashiach, "Messiah."
- d (1:1) In Ephesus: these words are absent from the earliest manuscripts, P46 (about AD 200) and the original hands of Sinaiticus and Vaticanus (4th century), and from the text known to Origen; Westcott and Hort print them in brackets. Without them the Greek reads awkwardly, "to the holy ones who are, and faithful in Christ Jesus," and the letter may have been a circular with a space for the name of each church. In the second century Marcion knew it as the letter "to the Laodiceans" (compare Col 4:16). Ephesus, a port on the west coast of Asia Minor, was the capital of the Roman province of Asia, where Paul worked for over two years (Acts 19:1–20).
- e (1:3) In the heavenly realms: Greek en tois epouraniois, "among the heavenly things," a phrase found only in this letter (also 1:20; 2:6; 3:10; 6:12). Verses 3–14 are a single sentence in Greek.
- f (1:4) In love: these words may go either with what precedes ("without blemish before him in love") or, as here, with verse 5.
- g (1:6) The one he loves: literally "the Beloved," a title for Christ.
- h (1:9) Secret: Greek mystērion, traditionally "mystery," not a puzzle but God's purpose once hidden and now disclosed; so throughout the letter.
- i (1:10) Plan: Greek oikonomia, "household management," the arrangement by which God carries out his purpose; also in 3:2, 9.

- j (1:11) Were made God's portion: or "obtained an inheritance." The Greek verb klēroō means to be chosen by lot or allotted, as Israel was the Lord's allotted portion (Deut 32:9).
- k (1:13) Good news: Greek euangelion, traditionally "gospel"; so throughout.
- l (1:13) Sealed: a seal marked ownership and guaranteed that something was genuine and protected.
- m (1:14) Down payment: Greek arrabōn, a deposit or first installment that guarantees the full amount will follow.
- n (1:15) Your regard for: literally simply "your [faith] toward"; the Westcott–Hort text, with P46, the original hands of Sinaiticus and Alexandrinus, and Vaticanus, lacks the word "love," which most later manuscripts include ("your love toward all the holy ones"), probably from Col 1:4.
- o (1:20) At his right hand: an echo of Ps 110:1 (109:1 in the Greek Old Testament), the place of highest honor and authority.
- p (1:21) Ruler … dominion: terms for ranks of spiritual powers, as in Col 1:16.
- q (1:22) Ps 8:6 (8:7 in Hebrew).
- r (1:23) Who fills all in all: or "who is being filled, all in all." The Greek participle can be middle or passive, and the meaning of the whole phrase is much discussed.

Chapter 2

1 As for you, you were dead through your wrongdoings and sins, 2 in which you once lived your lives,[a] following the course of this world, following the ruler of the domain of the air, the spirit that is now at work in the children of disobedience.[b] 3 Among them all of us also once lived, in the cravings of our flesh, doing what the flesh and its impulses willed, and we were by nature children of wrath, as the rest of humankind were. 4 But God is rich in mercy, and because of the great love he had for us, 5 even when we were dead through our wrongdoings, made us alive together with Christ (it is by grace you have been saved), 6 and raised us up with him and seated us with him in the heavenly realms in Christ Jesus, 7 so that in the ages to come he might display the overflowing riches of his grace in his kindness toward us in Christ Jesus. 8 It is by grace that you are saved, through faith. Nor does this come from you: it is God's gift,[c] 9 and not earned by works, so that no one may boast. 10 We are his handiwork,[d] created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God prepared in advance as the path for our lives.

11 Keep in mind, then, that you were once Gentiles by birth,[e] people whom those calling themselves “the circumcision” (a circumcision done in the flesh by hand) called “the uncircumcision.” 12 Remember that at that time you were without Christ, cut off from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers to the covenants of promise, with no hope and without God in the world. 13 But now, in Christ Jesus, you who were once far away have come near through Christ’s blood. 14 For he is our peace. He made the two groups one and broke down the dividing wall that kept them apart,[f] 15 the hostility, by setting aside in his flesh the law with its commandments and regulations, so that in himself he might create one new humanity[g] out of the two, so making peace, 16 and that through the cross he might reconcile both of them to God in a single body, killing the hostility by it.[h] 17 And he came and proclaimed peace to you who were far off and peace to those who were near,[i] 18 for through him we both have access in one Spirit to the Father. 19 Consequently you are no longer strangers and outsiders; you are fellow citizens with God’s people and belong to God’s household, 20 You stand built upon the foundation laid by the apostles and prophets, and its cornerstone is Christ Jesus himself.[j] 21
In him the whole building is joined together and grows into a holy temple in the Lord. 22 and in him you too are being built up together to become a place where God lives by the Spirit.

Notes

- a (2:2) Lived your lives: literally “walked,” a Hebrew idiom for one’s conduct; so throughout the letter.
- b (2:2) Children of disobedience: literally “sons of disobedience,” a Hebrew idiom for people marked by disobedience; also in 5:6.
- c (2:8) This … God’s gift: the Greek pronoun “this” is neuter and refers to the whole event of salvation by grace through faith, not to “faith” alone (a feminine noun).
- d (2:10) Handiwork: Greek poiēma, “something made,” a work of craftsmanship or art.
- e (2:11) Gentiles: Greek ethnē, “nations,” the non-Jewish peoples; so throughout.
- f (2:14) Dividing wall: perhaps an allusion to the barrier in the Jerusalem temple that kept Gentiles out of the inner courts on pain of death, a stone warning from which survives.
- g (2:15) Humanity: literally “man” (Greek anthrōpos, “human being”); also in 4:13, 22, 24.

- h (2:16) By it: that is, by the cross; or “in himself.”
- i (2:17) Isa 57:19; compare Isa 52:7.
- j (2:20) Cornerstone: Greek akrogōniaios, the stone that sets the line of a building (Isa 28:16 in the Greek Old Testament); some understand it as the capstone at the top of an arch.

Chapter 3

1 This is why I, Paul, am a prisoner of Christ Jesus on behalf of you Gentiles[a] — 2 assuming that you have heard how God entrusted me with the stewardship[b] of his grace for your benefit: 3 the secret was disclosed to me by a revelation, as I wrote in brief a little earlier.[c] 4
When you read this, you will be able to perceive my understanding of the secret of Christ. 5 This was not disclosed to people[d] in earlier ages as it has now been uncovered by the Spirit to his holy apostles and prophets: 6 through the gospel the Gentiles are co-heirs with Israel, parts of one body, and partners in the promise in Christ Jesus. 7 I was made a minister[e] of this gospel through the gift of God’s grace, which was granted to me by the exercise of his power. 8 Though I am less than the least of all God’s people, I was given this privilege:
to announce to the nations the boundless wealth of Christ, 9 and to bring to light what the plan of the secret is,[f] which for ages past was hidden in God who created all things, 10 so that through the church the manifold wisdom of God might now be made known to the rulers and authorities in the heavenly realms. 11 This was according to the eternal purpose[g] that he carried out in Christ Jesus our Lord, 12 in whom we have boldness and confident access to God through faith in him.[h] 13 I ask you, therefore, not to be discouraged by my afflictions on your behalf, for they are your glory.
14 For this reason I kneel before the Father,[i] 15 from whom every family[j] in heaven and on earth takes its name. 16 I pray that from the wealth of his glory he may give you strength, and make you mighty through his Spirit in the inner person, 17 so that Christ may make his home in your hearts through faith; and that you, rooted and founded firmly in love, 18 will be strong enough to comprehend, along with all God’s people, how wide, how long, how high, and how deep[k] 19 is the love of Christ that surpasses understanding, and so be filled with all the fullness of God.

20 To the one who can accomplish immeasurably more than anything we ask or think, through the power operating within us, 21 to him be glory in the church and in Christ Jesus through every generation, forever and ever. Amen.

Notes

- a (3:1) Paul breaks off his sentence here and takes it up again in verse 14.
- b (3:2) Stewardship: the same Greek word, oikonomia, as "plan" in 1:10 and 3:9.
- c (3:3) A little earlier: probably referring to 1:9–10 and 2:11–22.
- d (3:5) Humankind: literally "the sons of men."
- e (3:7) Servant: Greek diakonos, "servant" or "minister," one who serves on another's behalf.
- f (3:9) To bring to light: many manuscripts add "for all people" ("to make all people see"); the Westcott–Hort text, with the original hand of Sinaiticus and with Alexandrinus, lacks it.
- g (3:11) Eternal purpose: literally "purpose of the ages."
- h (3:12) Faith in him: or "his faithfulness."
- i (3:14) The Father: later manuscripts add "of our Lord Jesus Christ."
- j (3:15) Family: Greek patria, a family or clan descended from one father, a wordplay on patēr, "father."
- k (3:18) Breadth … depth: the object is not stated; probably the love of Christ (verse 19), or the whole scope of God's purpose.

Chapter 4

1 As a prisoner for the Lord, then, I appeal to you to lead a life that is worthy of the call you have received, 2 Be humble in every way and gentle; be patient, putting up with one another in love, 3 doing all you can to preserve the unity that the Spirit gives, through the peace that ties you together. 4 There is one body and one Spirit, as there is one hope to which you were called; 5 one Lord, one faith, one baptism; 6 one God and Father of all, who is over all and through all and in all.

7 But to each one of us grace was given according to the measure of Christ's gift.

8 That is why it says, "When he went up on high he led captives away, and he gave gifts to people."[a]

9 (Now what does “he went up” mean, except that he had also gone down into the lower regions, the earth?[b] 10 The one who went down is the same one who also went up far above all the heavens, so that he might fill all things.) 11 And he is the one who gave certain people to be apostles, others prophets, others evangelists, and others pastors and teachers,[c] 12 to equip the holy ones for the work of service, for the building up of the body of Christ, 13 until all of us arrive at the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, at mature adulthood, at the measure of the stature[d]
of the fullness of Christ.
14 Then we will no longer be infants, tossed about by the waves and swept around by every wind of teaching, by human trickery, by craftiness in deceitful scheming.[e] 15 Rather, as we speak the truth in love, we are to grow in all respects into Christ, who is the head.
16 from whom the whole body, joined and knit together by every supporting ligament, grows as each part does its work, and builds itself up in love.
17 This then I tell you, and I insist on it in the Lord: do not go on living like the Gentiles, whose minds are set on empty things. 18
Their understanding is darkened, and they are estranged from the life of God because of the ignorance that is in them, because their hearts have grown hard. 19 They have become callous and have given themselves over to indecency, to practice every kind of impurity with greed. 20 But you did not learn Christ that way — 21 if indeed you have heard of him and were taught in him, as the truth is in Jesus: 22 that you were to put away your former way of life, the old self[f] that is being ruined by its deceitful desires, 23 and to be made new in the spirit of your minds, 24 and to clothe yourselves with the new self, which has been created after God’s likeness[g] in righteousness and holiness that come from the truth.
25 So, putting away falsehood, let each of you speak the truth with his neighbor,[h] for we are members of one another. 26 “Be angry, yet do not sin.”[i] Let the sun not set while you are still angry, 27 and do not give the devil[j] a foothold. 28 The thief must no longer steal; rather he must work hard, doing what is good with his own hands, so that he may have something to share with anyone in need. 29 Let no foul language leave your lips, only what is useful for building others up as the occasion demands, so that your words will bring grace to those who listen. 30 And do not bring grief to God's Holy Spirit, with whom you have been sealed for the day when you will be redeemed.[k] 31 Let all bitterness and rage and anger and shouting and slander be removed from you, along with all malice. 32 Be kind to one another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, just as God in Christ forgave you.[l]

Notes

- a (4:8) Ps 68:18 (68:19 in Hebrew; 67:19 in the Greek Old Testament), where the Hebrew and the Greek read "you received gifts among people." The reading "gave" agrees with an interpretation also found in the Aramaic Targum of the Psalms, which applies the verse to Moses giving the law.
- b (4:9) The lower regions, the earth: or "the regions lower than the earth," that is, the realm of the dead. The Greek may mean either the earth itself (the incarnation) or the underworld. Later manuscripts add "first" after "gone down."
- c (4:11) Pastors: Greek poimenes, "shepherds." The Greek groups "pastors and teachers" together, perhaps as one ministry.
- d (4:13) Stature: or "age"; Greek hēlikia can mean either.
- e (4:14) Trickery: Greek kybeia, "dice-playing," cheating.
- f (4:22) Self: literally "man" (Greek anthrōpos); also in verse 24.
- g (4:24) After God's likeness: literally "according to God."
- h (4:25) Zech 8:16.
- i (4:26) Ps 4:4 (4:5 in Hebrew), in the wording of the Greek Old Testament.
- j (4:27) Devil: Greek diabolos, "slanderer."
- k (4:30) Compare Isa 63:10.
- l (4:32) You: some manuscripts read "us."

Chapter 5

1 So be imitators of God, as dearly loved children,
2 and live in love, just as Christ loved you[a] and gave himself up for you as an offering and a sacrifice to God, a fragrant aroma.[b] 3 As is fitting among holy people, sexual immorality, any kind of impurity, or greed should not so much as be mentioned among you.

4 Shameful conduct, silly talk, and coarse jesting are not fitting either;
let there be thanksgiving instead.
5 Of this you may be quite certain: no one who is sexually immoral, impure, or greedy (for greed is idolatry) has a share in the kingdom of Christ and of God.
6 Let no one deceive you with empty words, for because of these things the wrath of God comes on the children of disobedience.
7 So do not become partners with them.
8 There was a time when you were darkness; now, in the Lord, you are light. Conduct yourselves as children of the light, 9 since what the light produces[c] is every kind of goodness, righteousness, and truth.
10 Test and discover what pleases the Lord.
11 Take no part in the fruitless works of darkness; instead, expose them.
12 For it is shameful even to speak of the things they do in secret.
13 But everything exposed by the light becomes visible,
14 for everything that becomes visible is light. That is why it says,
"Wake up, sleeper,
and rise from the dead,
and Christ will shine on you."[d] 15 Take great care, then, how you conduct yourselves, as wise people and not as fools, 16 making the most of the time,[e] because the days are evil. 17 So do not be foolish, but understand what the will of the Lord is. 18 Do not be drunk on wine, for that is the way of ruin;[f] let the Spirit fill you instead, 19 speaking to one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making music to the Lord with your heart, 20 giving thanks at all times and for all things to God the Father, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ; 21 and be subject to one another in the fear of Christ.[g] 22 Wives, submit to your own husbands as to the Lord.[h] 23 For the husband is head of the wife as Christ also is head of the church; he himself is the Savior of the body. 24 Just as the church is subject to Christ, wives should also be subject to their husbands in all things. 25
Husbands, love your wives in the way that Christ loved the church and offered himself on her behalf, [26] so that he might make her holy, cleansing her by the washing of water with the word, [27] so that he might present the church to himself glorious, with no stain or wrinkle or any such flaw, holy and without blemish. [28] So husbands too are bound to love their wives as they love their own bodies; to love one's wife is to love oneself. [29] For no one ever hated his own body,[i] but he nourishes it and cares for it, just as Christ does the church, [30] because we are members of his body.[j] [31] "For this reason a man will leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, and the two will become one flesh."[k] [32] There is a great secret here, and I take it to refer to Christ and the church. [33] However, each one of you must also love his wife as himself, and the wife must see that she respects her husband.[l]

Notes

- a (5:2) You: some manuscripts read "us," here and later in the verse.
- b (5:2) A fragrant aroma: literally "an odor of fragrance," the Greek Old Testament phrase for a sacrifice acceptable to God (Gen 8:21; Exod 29:18).
- c (5:9) The light: later manuscripts read "the Spirit," from Gal 5:22.
- d (5:14) Not a quotation of any known Old Testament text; probably an early Christian hymn, perhaps sung at baptism, drawing on Isa 26:19; 60:1. In the Greek text the first half of verse 14 ("for everything … is light") completes verse 13.
- e (5:16) Making the most of the time: literally "buying up the opportunity."
- f (5:18) The way of ruin: Greek asōtia, dissipation, a wasted and unrestrained life (compare Luke 15:13).
- g (5:21) Verse 21 completes the sentence that begins in verse 18, and at the same time heads the instructions to the household that follow (5:22–6:9).
- h (5:22) Wives, submit: the Greek of the earliest manuscript, P46, and of Vaticanus has no verb here and takes it from verse 21 ("submitting … wives to your husbands"). Other manuscripts supply "let them submit" or "submit."
- i (5:29) Body: literally "flesh."
- j (5:30) Later manuscripts add "of his flesh and of his bones," from Gen 2:23; the Westcott–Hort text, with P46, Sinaiticus and Vaticanus, lacks it.
- k (5:31) Gen 2:24, in the wording of the Greek Old Testament.
- l (5:33) Respects: literally "fears," in the sense of reverence or respect.

Chapter 6

[1] Children, obey your parents in the Lord,[a] for this is right. [2] "Honor your father and your mother" (this is the first commandment with a promise), [3] "so that it may go well with you and you may live long on the earth.”[b] 4 Fathers, do not provoke your children to anger, but bring them up in the discipline and instruction of the Lord.

5 Slaves,[c] obey those who are your masters in this life,[d] with fear and trembling, with an undivided heart, as though you were obeying Christ; 6 not only while you are watched, as people-pleasers,[e] but as slaves of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart, 7 rendering service with goodwill, as to the Lord and not to human beings, 8 for you know that the Lord will repay each one for whatever good he has done, whether slave or free. 9 And masters, do the same toward them, and stop threatening them, knowing that both their Master and yours is in heaven, and that with him there is no favoritism.[f]
10 Finally, be strong in the Lord and in the might of his strength. 11 Clothe yourselves in God’s full armor,[g] so that you may hold your ground against the devil’s tactics. 12 We are not wrestling[h] with flesh and blood; we are fighting the rulers, the authorities, the world powers of this present darkness, the spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly realms. 13 That is why you must take up God’s full armor, so that when the evil day comes you can withstand it, and after you have done all you can, remain standing. 14 Stand, then, with the belt of truth fastened around your waist,[i] and with righteousness as your breastplate, 15 and with your feet fitted with readiness[j] for the good news of peace. 16 Above all, lift the shield of faith,[k] by which you can extinguish all the burning arrows shot by the evil one. 17 And take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God. 18 Pray at every time in the Spirit, with every prayer and request.
To that end stay alert, with all perseverance and petition for all the holy ones, 19 and also for me, that when I open my mouth, words may be given to me so that I may boldly make known the secret of the good news,[l] 20 for which I am an ambassador in chains, so that I may declare it boldly, as I ought to speak.
21 Tychicus,[m] our dear brother and a faithful servant in the Lord, will give you all the news, so that you too may know about my affairs and how I am getting on. 22 That is exactly why I am sending him to you:
to let you know how things stand with us, and to encourage you.

[23] Peace be to the brothers,[n] and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. [24] Grace be with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ with a love that does not die.[o]

Notes

- a (6:1) In the Lord: the Westcott–Hort text brackets these words, which are absent from Vaticanus and some Western witnesses.
- b (6:3) Exod 20:12; Deut 5:16, in the wording of the Greek Old Testament of Deuteronomy. The commandment continues "in the land that Yahweh your God is giving you"; the letter omits these words. On the earth can also be translated "in the land."
- c (6:5) Slaves: Greek douloi, slaves or bond-servants, as in verses 6 and 8. Slavery was widespread in the Roman world, and many members of the early churches were slaves.
- d (6:5) Masters: Greek kyrioi, "lords," the same word as "Lord." Here "in this life" is literally "according to the flesh."
- e (6:6) Only while you are watched: literally "according to eye-service."
- f (6:9) Favoritism: Greek prosōpolēmpsia, literally "receiving of faces," a Hebrew idiom for partiality.
- g (6:11) Full armor: Greek panoplia, the complete equipment of a heavily armed soldier. The imagery of verses 14–17 draws on Isa 11:5; 52:7; 59:17.
- h (6:12) Wrestling: Greek palē, a wrestling match, a struggle.
- i (6:14) Waist: literally "loins."
- j (6:15) Readiness: or "firm footing"; Greek hetoimasia can mean either.
- k (6:16) Shield: Greek thyreos, the large, door-shaped shield of a Roman soldier, which could be soaked in water to put out burning arrows.
- l (6:19) Of the good news: the Westcott–Hort text brackets these words, which are absent from Vaticanus and some other witnesses.
- m (6:21) Tychicus: from Greek tychē, "fortune," "fortunate." He was from the province of Asia (Acts 20:4; Col 4:7; 2 Tim 4:12).
- n (6:23) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, the usual term for fellow believers, including both men and women.
- o (6:24) With a love that does not die: literally "in incorruption," "in immortality." The phrase may also go with "grace" or with "our Lord Jesus Christ." Later manuscripts add "Amen."

Philippians

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 From Paul[a] and Timothy,[b] slaves[c] of Christ Jesus,[d] to all God's holy people[e] in Christ Jesus who live in Philippi,[f] together with the overseers and helpers:[g] 2 grace and peace to you from God our Father and from the Lord Jesus Christ.
3 Each time I call you to mind, I thank my God. 4 In every prayer I offer for you all, my prayer is a joyful one, 5 because of your partnership in spreading the good news[h] from the very first day until now. 6 I am confident of this very thing, that the one who began a good work in you will carry it through to its finish, right up to the day of Christ Jesus. 7 And it is fitting that I should think this of you all, because you are in my heart.[i] All of you are partners with me in grace,[j] in my chains as well as in my defense and confirmation of the good news. 8
God is my witness how I long for all of you with the deep affection[k] of Christ Jesus. 9 And I pray this: that your love may grow richer and richer still in knowledge and in every kind of insight, 10 so that you can approve the things that really matter,[l] and be pure and free from fault on the day of Christ, 11 filled with the fruit of righteousness that comes through Jesus Christ, to the glory and praise of God.
12 Brothers,[m] I want you to understand that what has happened to me has actually served to move the good news forward. 13 The result is that the whole imperial guard[n] and all the rest have come to see that it is for Christ that I wear these chains. 14 And most of the brothers, gaining confidence in the Lord from my imprisonment, are daring
all the more to speak the word of God without fear.[o] 15 Some indeed preach Christ because they are envious and quarrelsome; but some do it from good will. 16 These do it from love, knowing that I am placed here to defend the good news. 17 The others announce Christ from selfish ambition, not with pure motives, supposing that they will make my chains harder to bear.[p] 18 What does it matter? Only that in every way, whether for show or in truth, Christ is proclaimed; and in that I rejoice. Yes, and I will go on rejoicing, 19 I know that this will turn out for my deliverance,[q] through your prayers and the support of the Spirit of Jesus Christ, 20 This is my eager expectation and hope:

that I will never be put to shame, but that, boldly now as always,
Christ will be magnified through my body, whether by my life or by my death. 21 For me, to live is Christ, and to die is gain. 22 If I am to go on living in the body, that means fruitful work for me, and I do not know which I prefer.[r] 23 I am caught between two desires: I long to depart and be with Christ, which would be far better, 24 but for your sake it is more necessary that I remain in the body.[s] 25 Convinced of this, I know that I will stay, and stay on with you all, for your progress and joy in the faith, 26 so that when I come to you once more, your pride in Christ Jesus may abound on my account.
27 Only, live as citizens[t] worthy of Christ's good news, so that whether I come and see you or am away and hear about you, I may learn that you are standing firm in a single spirit, contending together as one soul for the faith that the good news brings, 28 not frightened in any way by your opponents. To them this is a sign of their destruction, but of your salvation, and this comes from God. 29 For it has been granted to you, for Christ's sake, not only to believe in him but also to suffer for him, 30 for you have the same contest on your hands as you once saw me fight, and as you now hear I am fighting still.[u]

Notes

- a (1:1) Paul: Latin Paulus, "small." Paul also had the Jewish name Saul (Acts 13:9), after the first king of Israel ("asked for").
- b (1:1) Timothy: Greek Timotheos, "one who honors God," Paul's coworker, who had helped found the church at Philippi (Acts 16:1–12).
- c (1:1) Slaves: Greek douloi, slaves or bond-servants, wholly owned by their master.
- d (1:1) Jesus: the Greek form of Hebrew Yeshua (Joshua), "Yahweh saves." Christ: Greek Christos, "Anointed One," equivalent to Hebrew mashiach, "Messiah."
- e (1:1) God's holy people: Greek hagioi, "holy ones," traditionally "saints"; the believers as set apart for God.

- f (1:1) Philippi: a Roman colony in Macedonia (northern Greece), named after Philip II, father of Alexander the Great. Paul founded the church there about AD 49–50 (Acts 16:11–40); it was his first in Europe.
- g (1:1) Overseers and helpers: Greek episkopoi and diakonoi, traditionally "bishops and deacons," here probably local leaders and those who served the congregation.
- h (1:5) Good news: Greek euangelion, traditionally "gospel"; so throughout.
- i (1:7) Because you are in my heart: or "because you hold me in your heart"; the Greek can be read either way.
- j (1:7) Partners with me in grace: or "sharers in my grace," perhaps meaning the privilege of suffering for Christ (1:29).
- k (1:8) Deep affection: Greek splanchna, literally "inward parts," the seat of the emotions; also in 2:1.
- l (1:10) Approve the things that really matter: or "test the things that differ."
- m (1:12) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, the usual term for fellow believers, including both men and women; so throughout.
- n (1:13) Imperial guard: Greek praitōrion, either the Praetorian Guard, the emperor's bodyguard in Rome, or the governor's headquarters in a provincial capital (as in Acts 23:35).
- o (1:14) Of God: some manuscripts lack these words; others read "of the Lord."
- p (1:17) Later manuscripts reverse the order of verses 16 and 17.
- q (1:19) This will turn out for my deliverance: the exact wording of Job 13:16 in the Greek Old Testament. Deliverance (Greek sōtēria) can also mean "salvation," or vindication before God.
- r (1:22) The Greek of this verse is broken and can be punctuated in several ways.
- s (1:24) In the body: literally "in the flesh," as also in verse 22.
- t (1:27) Live as citizens: Greek politeuesthe, a striking word in a letter to a Roman colony whose people prized their citizenship (compare 3:20).
- u (1:30) Compare Acts 16:19–24; 1 Thess 2:2.

Chapter 2

1 If, then, Christ gives you any encouragement, if love brings you any consolation, if you have any fellowship in the Spirit,[a] if you know any tenderness and pity, 2 then complete my joy by thinking alike, having the same love, being one in soul and one in mind. 3 Do nothing out of rivalry or empty conceit; instead, in humility count others as better than yourselves. 4 Each of you should keep an eye not just on what concerns yourself, but on what concerns others as well. 5 Let this mind be in you that was also in Christ Jesus:[b]

6 Though he was in the form of God,[c] he did not regard being equal with God
  as something to be grasped,[d] 7 but he emptied himself,[e]
  taking the form of a slave,
  being made in human likeness.
  And when he was found in human shape,
8 he humbled himself
  and became obedient as far as death,
  even death on a cross.
9 For this reason God raised him to the very highest and graciously gave him that name which is above all names, 10 so that at Jesus' name
  every knee may bow,
  of those in heaven, on earth, and beneath the earth, 11 and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.[f]
12 So, my dear friends, just as you have always obeyed, not only when I was present but much more now that I am absent, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling, 13 God is the one working in you, both the willing and the doing, for the sake of what pleases him. 14 Do everything without grumbling or arguing, 15 so that you may be faultless and pure, God's children without defect among a warped and crooked generation,[g] in which you shine like stars in the universe,[h] 16 holding fast[i] the word of life, so that I may have reason to boast on the day of Christ that I did not run in vain or toil in vain.[j] 17 Even if my life is being poured out like a drink offering[k] on the sacrifice and service that come from your faith, I am glad and I celebrate with every one of you. 18 You also should be glad, and celebrate with me.

19 I hope in the Lord Jesus to send Timothy to you soon, so that I also may be cheered by news of you. 20 I have no one else like him, who will care with genuine concern for your welfare. 21 Everyone else is seeking what is his own, not what is Jesus Christ's. 22 You know how he has proved himself: like a child alongside his father, he has slaved with me for the good news. 23 So he is the one I hope to send, the moment I can see what will happen to me. 24 and I trust in the Lord that I myself will also come soon.

25 I have thought it necessary, though, to send back to you Epaphroditus,[l] my brother, fellow worker, and fellow soldier, whom you sent as your messenger[m] to minister to my needs. 26 He has been homesick for you all, and upset that word of his sickness reached you. 27 He really was sick, almost dying. But God showed mercy to him, and not only to him but to me, so that I would be spared one sorrow after another.
28 I am the more eager to send him, therefore, so that when you see him again you may rejoice, and I may be less anxious. 29 So welcome him in the Lord with all joy, and hold people like him in honor, 30 for he nearly died for Christ's work,[n] gambling with his life to complete the service you yourselves could not give me.

Notes

- a (2:1) Fellowship in the Spirit: or "fellowship with the Spirit," "a share in the Spirit."
- b (2:5) Let this mind be in you ...: or "Think among yourselves in the way that is fitting for those who are in Christ Jesus." The Greek is compressed and can be read either way. Verses 6–11 are widely thought to be an early Christian hymn, either composed by Paul or quoted by him.
- c (2:6) Form: Greek morphē, the outward shape that expresses what something truly is; also in verse 7.
- d (2:6) Something to be grasped: Greek harpagmos, a rare word meaning either something seized or something to be clung to or exploited for one's own advantage. Scholars are divided.
- e (2:7) Emptied himself: Greek ekenōsen, "made himself empty" or "poured himself out"; the following phrases explain how.
- f (2:11) Verses 10–11: Isa 45:23, where in the Hebrew it is Yahweh who says, "To me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear." Here the homage due to Yahweh is given to Jesus, and the name above every name (verse 9) is probably Lord (kyrios), the Greek Old Testament's rendering of the divine name. Under the earth: the realm of the dead.
- g (2:15) A crooked and twisted generation: from Deut 32:5 in the Greek Old Testament, where the phrase describes Israel in the wilderness, whose grumbling (verse 14) is a theme of the Exodus story.

- h (2:15) Stars: Greek phōstēres, “lights,” “luminaries,” the word used of the sun, moon and stars in Gen 1:14–16 and of the wise in Dan 12:3 in the Greek Old Testament.
- i (2:16) Holding fast: or “holding out”; Greek epechō can mean either.
- j (2:16) Compare Isa 49:4; 65:23.
- k (2:17) Poured out as a drink offering: Greek spendomai, used of wine poured out over or beside a sacrifice (Num 28:7); Paul speaks of his possible death.
- l (2:25) Epaphroditus: Greek, “charming” or “belonging to Aphrodite,” a common name. He is probably not the same person as Epaphras of Colossae (Col 1:7).
- m (2:25) Messenger: Greek apostolos, “one sent,” here an envoy of the church, not an apostle in the narrower sense.
- n (2:30) Christ’s work: so the Westcott–Hort text, with Vaticanus; other manuscripts read “of the Lord,” and some have neither.

Chapter 3

1 Finally, my brothers, rejoice in the Lord. To write the same things to you is no trouble for me, and for you it is a safeguard.
2 Beware the dogs! Beware the workers of evil! Beware the cutters![a] 3 We are the true circumcision, we who serve by God’s Spirit,[b] take pride in Christ Jesus, and place no trust in human credentials, 4 I could put confidence in the flesh myself, if I chose. Does someone else imagine he has reason to rely on the flesh? I have more: 5 I was circumcised when eight days old; I am an Israelite by race, a Benjaminite by tribe,[c] a Hebrew of Hebrew parents; regarding the law I was a Pharisee; 6 regarding zeal, I persecuted the church; regarding the righteousness that the law requires, I was faultless. 7 Yet all that was profit to me, I have reckoned as loss for Christ’s sake. 8 Indeed, I reckon everything a loss, compared with the supreme value of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord. For him I have lost everything, and I think of it all as garbage,[d] if only I may gain Christ 9 and be found in him, without any righteousness of my own based on the law, but having the righteousness that is through faith in Christ,[e] a righteousness from God, resting on faith. 10 I want to know him and the power of his resurrection and the sharing of his sufferings, being shaped to share his death, 11 in hope that I may somehow arrive at the resurrection from among the dead.

12 I am not claiming that I have already obtained this or have already been made perfect; but I press on, hoping to grasp the purpose for which Christ Jesus grasped me. 13 Brothers, I do not reckon that I have yet laid hold of it. Only this: I forget what is behind, I stretch out toward what is in front, 14 I press on toward the goal for the prize of the upward call of God in Christ Jesus.[f] 15 All of us who are mature should take this view; and if on any point you see things differently, God will make that clear to you as well. 16 Only let us keep in line with what we have already attained.[g] 17 Brothers, join together in imitating me, and keep your eyes on those who live by the example you have in us. 18 For many, as I have often told you before and now tell you weeping, walk as enemies of Christ's cross. 19 Destruction is where they will end. Their stomach is their god; they glory in what should shame them; earthly things fill their thoughts. 20 But our citizenship[h] is in heaven, and from there we are eagerly awaiting a Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. 21 By the power with which he can make all things subject to himself, he will change the body of our humiliation and conform it to the body of his glory.

Notes

- a (3:2) Dogs ... cutters: harsh terms for those who insisted that Gentile believers be circumcised. Dogs was an insult some Jews used of Gentiles, here turned back on them; cutters (Greek katatomē, "mutilation," "cutting up") is a bitter play on peritomē, "circumcision" (verse 3).
- b (3:3) By the Spirit of God: some manuscripts, including P46 as reported, read "worship God in the Spirit."
- c (3:5) Benjamin: Hebrew, "son of the right hand" (Gen 35:18), the tribe of King Saul, after whom Paul was named. Pharisee: probably "separated one," a member of the lay movement devoted to strict observance of the Law and its traditions.
- d (3:8) Garbage: Greek skybala, refuse or dung.
- e (3:9) Faith in Christ: or "the faithfulness of Christ."
- f (3:14) Prize: Greek brabeion, the award given to the winner in the athletic games. Upward call: or "heavenly call."
- g (3:16) Later manuscripts add "Let us be of the same mind" and similar words.
- h (3:20) Citizenship: Greek politeuma, the commonwealth or state to which one belongs; compare 1:27.

Chapter 4

1 So then, my brothers, beloved and longed for, you who are my joy and my crown,[a] stand firm like this in the Lord, dear friends.
2 I appeal to Euodia and I appeal to Syntyche[b] to agree with each other in the Lord. 3 Yes, and I ask you too, my true companion,[c] help these women, for they have contended side by side with me in the work of the good news, together with Clement[d] and the rest of my fellow workers, whose names are in the book of life.
4 Rejoice in the Lord always. Again I will say it: rejoice. 5 Make your gentleness known to all people. The Lord is close at hand.[e] 6 Stop worrying about anything; in every situation, through prayer and requests with thanksgiving, bring your needs to God. 7 And the peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus.
8 Finally, brothers, whatever things are true, worthy of respect, right, pure, lovable, well spoken of — if there is any virtue, any praise — let your thoughts dwell on these. 9 Put into practice the things you learned from me and received, the things you heard from me and saw in me; and the God of peace will be with you.
10 It gave me great joy in the Lord that your care for me has blossomed again at last. You were caring all along, of course, but you lacked the chance. 11 I do not say this out of want; I have learned to be self-sufficient,[f] whatever my situation. 12 I know what it is to be brought low, and I know what it is to have more than enough. In each and every case I have been initiated into the secret of being full and of being hungry, of abundance and of want. 13 I can do all things through him who gives me strength.[g] 14 Yet you did well to share in my distress.
15 And you Philippians know yourselves that in the early days of the good news, when I set out from Macedonia, no church shared with me in the matter of giving and receiving except you alone. 16 for even when I was in Thessalonica[h] you sent me something for my need, once and then again. 17 Not that I seek the gift, but I seek the profit that increases to your credit.[i] 18 I now have everything, and more than enough. I am amply provided for, having received from Epaphroditus what you sent: a fragrant aroma,[j] a sacrifice that God accepts and finds pleasing. [19] And my God will supply every need of yours according to his riches in glory in Christ Jesus. [20] To our God and Father be the glory for ever and ever. Amen.

[21] Greet every holy one in Christ Jesus. The brothers who are with me greet you. [22] All the holy ones greet you, especially those of Caesar's household.[k]

[23] The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit.[l]

Notes

- a (4:1) Crown: Greek stephanos, the wreath given to a victor in the games or to an honored guest at a feast.
- b (4:2) Euodia: Greek, "a good journey" or "fragrance." Syntyche: Greek, "good fortune" or "companion." Both were women who had worked with Paul (verse 3).
- c (4:3) True companion: Greek gnēsie syzyge, "genuine yokefellow." Some take Syzygus as a personal name, which would then mean "true to your name."
- d (4:3) Clement: Latin Clemens, "merciful," "gentle."
- e (4:5) The Lord is close at hand: or "the Lord is near," perhaps an echo of Ps 145:18 (144:18 in the Greek Old Testament), where "the Lord" is Yahweh in the Hebrew. The words may refer to the Lord's nearness in place or to his coming in time.
- f (4:11) Self-sufficient: Greek autarkēs, "content," "self-sufficient," a key term of Stoic philosophy; Paul's sufficiency comes from the one who strengthens him (verse 13).
- g (4:13) Him: later manuscripts read "Christ."
- h (4:16) Thessalonica: the capital of the province of Macedonia, about 90 miles (150 km) west of Philippi (Acts 17:1–9).
- i (4:17) Profit … to your credit: the language of bookkeeping, used throughout verses 15–18.
- j (4:18) A fragrant aroma: literally "an odor of fragrance," the Greek Old Testament phrase for a sacrifice acceptable to God (Gen 8:21; Exod 29:18).
- k (4:22) Caesar's household: the slaves and freedmen in the service of the emperor, who worked in Rome and throughout the empire.
- l (4:23) Later manuscripts add "Amen."

Colossians

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 From Paul,[a] an apostle[b] of Christ Jesus[c] through God's will, and from Timothy[d] our brother, 2 to the holy and faithful brothers[e] in Christ at Colossae: grace to you and peace from God our Father.[f]
3 Whenever we pray for you, we give thanks to God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, 4 since word has reached us of your faith in Christ Jesus and of the love you hold for all God's holy people.[g] 5 This springs from the hope stored up for you in heaven. You heard of it before, in the message of truth, the good news[h] 6 that has come to you. All over the world that good news is bearing fruit and spreading, just as it has done among you since the day you heard it and came to know God's grace as it truly is. 7 You learned it from Epaphras,[i] our dear fellow slave, who serves Christ faithfully on our behalf.[j] 8 It was he who told us of your love in the Spirit.
9 For this reason, from the day we heard, we have not ceased praying for you. We ask that you may be filled with the knowledge of what God wills, with all the wisdom and understanding the Spirit gives, 10 so that you may walk worthily of the Lord, pleasing him in all respects, fruitful in good work of every kind, and growing in your knowledge of God; 11 made strong with all strength, as his glorious might supplies, so that you may endure everything and be patient, with joy; 12 and thanking the Father, who has made you fit[k] to share the lot of the holy ones in the light.[l] 13 He rescued us from the dominion of darkness and moved us into the kingdom of the Son he loves.[m] 14 It is in him that we are redeemed and our sins are forgiven.[n] 15 He is the image of the invisible God, firstborn before all creation,[o] 16 since in him all things were created, in the heavens and on the earth, what can be seen and what cannot, whether thrones or lordships or rulers or authorities.[p] Everything has been created through him and for him. 17 He exists before everything, and in him everything holds together. 18 He is also the head of the body, the church. He is the beginning, firstborn from among the dead, so that in all things he himself might come to hold first place. 19 For in him all the fullness was pleased to dwell,[q] 20 and through him to bring everything back into harmony with himself, establishing peace by the blood shed on his cross[r] — everything on earth and everything in heaven.

21 You were once estranged from God and his enemies in your thinking, as shown by the wicked things you did; 22 he has now reconciled[s] in his body of flesh through his death, so as to bring you into his presence holy, spotless and free from any charge, 23 provided you continue in the faith, grounded and steady and not shifted from the hope held out in the good news you heard. That good news has been proclaimed to every creature under heaven, and I, Paul, became its servant.[t]
24 I am glad now to suffer for you. In my own flesh I am completing what remains of Christ's afflictions,[u] for the sake of his body, the church. 25 I became the church's servant by the commission[v] God gave me for your benefit: to bring God's word to its full completion, 26 the secret[w] that was kept hidden through ages and generations but has now been revealed to his holy ones. 27 To them God chose to make known how rich and glorious this secret is among the Gentiles:[x] it is Christ in you, the hope of glory. 28 He is the one we announce. We warn and instruct everyone, with all the wisdom we have, so that we may present[y] each one mature in Christ. 29 To this end I toil and strive, with all the energy he so powerfully works in me.

Notes

- a (1:1) Paul: Latin Paulus, "small." Paul also had the Jewish name Saul (Acts 13:9), after the first king of Israel ("asked for").
- b (1:1) Apostle: Greek apostolos, "one who is sent," a messenger with the authority of the sender.
- c (1:1) Jesus: the Greek form of Hebrew Yeshua (Joshua), "Yahweh saves." Christ: Greek Christos, "Anointed One," equivalent to Hebrew mashiach, "Messiah."
- d (1:1) Timothy: Greek Timotheos, "one who honors God."

- e (1:2) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, the usual term for fellow believers, including both men and women; so throughout.
- f (1:2) God our Father: later manuscripts add “and the Lord Jesus Christ.”
- g (1:4) God’s holy people: Greek hagioi, “holy ones,” traditionally “saints”; so throughout.
- h (1:5) Good news: Greek euangelion, traditionally “gospel”; so throughout.
- i (1:7) Epaphras: a short form of Epaphroditus, “charming.” He was a native of Colossae (4:12) who evidently founded the church there; he was later in prison with Paul (Phlm 23).
- j (1:7) On our behalf: so the Westcott–Hort text, with P46, Sinaiticus and Vaticanus as reported; many manuscripts read “on your behalf.”
- k (1:12) You: some manuscripts read “us.”
- l (1:12) The lot: Greek klēros, a portion assigned by lot, as Canaan was shared out among the tribes of Israel (Josh 14:1–2).
- m (1:13) The Son he loves: literally “the Son of his love.”
- n (1:14) Later manuscripts add “through his blood,” from Eph 1:7.
- o (1:15) Firstborn: Greek prōtotokos, a title of rank and preeminence as well as of priority in time (compare Ps 89:27). Verses 15–20 are widely thought to be an early Christian hymn.
- p (1:16) Thrones … authorities: ranks of spiritual powers, as in Eph 1:21.
- q (1:19) All the fullness was pleased: or “God was pleased that all the fullness should dwell”; compare 2:9.
- r (1:20) Of his cross: the Westcott–Hort text adds “through him” in brackets.
- s (1:22) He has now reconciled: Vaticanus and P46 as reported read “you have now been reconciled.”
- t (1:23) Servant: Greek diakonos, “servant” or “minister”; also in verse 25.
- u (1:24) What remains of Christ’s afflictions: literally “what is lacking of the afflictions of Christ”; not a deficiency in Christ’s saving death, but probably the sufferings that Christ’s people must bear, in which Christ shares (compare Acts 9:4), or the trials expected before the end.
- v (1:25) Commission: Greek oikonomia, “stewardship,” the task given to a household manager.
- w (1:26) Secret: Greek mystērion, traditionally “mystery,” not a puzzle but God’s purpose once hidden and now disclosed; so throughout.
- x (1:27) Gentiles: Greek ethnē, “nations,” the non-Jewish peoples.
- y (1:28) Present: that is, present before God.

Chapter 2

1 I want you to know how hard I struggle for you, for those at Laodicea,[a] and for everyone who has not seen me face to face.[b] 2 My goal is that their hearts will be comforted and held together in love, and that they will gain the full wealth of confident understanding and recognize God's mystery, which is Christ.[c] 3 In him lie hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. 4 I say this so that no one may mislead you with persuasive talk. 5 For though I am absent in body, I am with you in spirit, and I am delighted to see how orderly you are and how firm your faith in Christ is.[d]

6 Therefore, as you received Christ Jesus the Lord, so go on living in him,[e] 7 rooted in him and built up in him, made firm in the faith as you were taught, and brimming over with thanksgiving. 8 See to it that no one carries you off as plunder by means of philosophy, by hollow deception that follows the traditions of men and the elemental forces of the world,[f] and does not follow Christ. 9 For in him the whole fullness of deity lives in bodily form, 10 and it is in him, the head of every ruler and power, that you have been made full. 11 In him you were also circumcised, with a circumcision not done by hands, by stripping off the body of the flesh,[g] in the circumcision of Christ. 12 You were buried with him in baptism, and with him you were also raised through faith in the working of God, who raised him from the dead. 13 And when you were dead in your wrongdoings and in the uncircumcision of your flesh, God made you alive together with him. He forgave us all our wrongdoings,[h] 14 He wiped out the bond that was written against us, with its decrees that opposed us.[i] He has taken it out of the way, fastening it with nails to the cross. 15 He stripped the rulers and authorities,[j] put them on open display, and led them along in his triumphal procession by means of the cross.

16 So do not let anyone pass judgment on you over food or drink, or in the matter of a festival or new moon or sabbath. 17 They are only a shadow of things that were coming; the body that casts it is Christ's.[k] 18 Let no one disqualify you,[l] insisting on self-abasement and the worship of angels,[m] going on about what he has seen,[n] puffed up without reason by his fleshly mind, 19 and not holding fast to the head. From him the whole body, supported and held together by its joints and ligaments, grows with a growth that comes from God. 20 If with Christ you died to the elemental forces of the world, why do you submit to regulations as though you still lived in the world: 21 "Hands off! Taste nothing! Touch nothing!” 22 All these things perish as they are used.

They are based on human commands and teachings.[o] 23 These rules do appear wise, with their invented religion, their humility, their harsh handling of the body; but they are worth nothing at all in checking the indulgence of the flesh.[p]

Notes

- a (2:1) Laodicea: a prosperous city about 10 miles (16 km) west of Colossae (compare Rev 3:14–22).
- b (2:1) Face to face: literally “my face in the flesh.”
- c (2:2) God’s secret, which is Christ: so the Westcott–Hort text (literally “the secret of God, Christ”), reported for P46 and Vaticanus. Few passages have so many variant readings; others include “of God,” “of Christ,” “of God, which is Christ,” “of God the Father of Christ,” and “of God and of the Father and of Christ.” The many forms probably arose as scribes tried to clarify the short reading.
- d (2:5) Orderly … firm: military terms, taxis (“ranks,” “order”) and stereōma (“solid front”).
- e (2:6) Living: literally “walking,” a Hebrew idiom for one’s conduct; so throughout.
- f (2:8) Elemental forces: Greek stoicheia, the basic elements or principles; also in verse 20 (see the note on Gal 4:3).
- g (2:11) Later manuscripts add “of sins.”
- h (2:13) Us: some manuscripts read “you.”
- i (2:14) Bond: Greek cheirographon, a handwritten certificate of debt signed by the debtor.
- j (2:15) Stripped: or “disarmed.” Triumphal procession: as a victorious Roman general paraded his captives through the city. By means of the cross: literally “in it”; or “in him.”
- k (2:17) The body that casts it: literally “the body,” the reality in contrast to the shadow.
- l (2:18) Disqualify: Greek katabrabeuō, to rule against someone, as an umpire might deny an athlete the prize.
- m (2:18) Worship of angels: either worship offered to angels, or the worship angels offer, which some claimed to share in visions.
- n (2:18) Going on about what he has seen: the Greek is obscure. Embateuō may mean “enter into,” perhaps a term from initiation rites. Later manuscripts read “what he has not seen.”
- o (2:22) Compare Isa 29:13.
- p (2:23) The Greek of this verse is difficult, and its last clause can also be understood as “they serve only to indulge the flesh.”

Chapter 3

1 Since, then, you were raised together with Christ, aim for what is above, where Christ sits at God's right hand.[a] 2 Set your minds on things above, not on earthly things. 3 For you have died, and your life is hidden with Christ in God. 4 When Christ appears, he who is our life,[b] you too will appear with him, in glory.
5 So put to death whatever in you belongs to the earth:[c] sexual immorality, impurity, passion, evil desire, and greed, which is idolatry. 6 Because of these things the wrath of God is coming.[d] 7 You too once followed these ways, when you lived among them. 8 But now you must put all of them away: anger, rage, malice, slander, and foul language from your mouths. 9 Stop lying to each other. You have taken off the old self[e] and its ways of acting, 10 and clothed yourselves with the new, which is constantly made new, so as to know God fully, after the likeness of the one who created it.[f] 11 In this new life it makes no difference whether one is Greek or Jew, circumcised or not, barbarian or Scythian,[g] slave or free. Christ is everything, and he is in everyone.
12 So then, since God has chosen you, made you holy, and loved you, put on heartfelt compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness, and patience as your clothing. 13 Put up with each other; and if one of you has reason to blame another, be gracious and forgive. The Lord[h] has forgiven you; you must do likewise. 14 Over all these clothe yourselves with love, the bond that holds all perfection together.[i] 15 Let the peace of Christ rule[j] in your hearts, since you were called to it as members of one body. And be thankful. 16 Let Christ's message live among you in all its fullness. Teach and counsel each other with all wisdom, and with thankful hearts sing psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs to God.
17 And whatever you do, in word or deed, do it all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God the Father through him.
18 Wives, be subject to your husbands, as is fitting in the Lord. 19 Husbands, love your wives, and never treat them bitterly. 20 Children, obey your parents in all things, for in the Lord this is pleasing. 21 Fathers, do not exasperate your children, so that they do not become discouraged. 22 Slaves,[k] obey your earthly masters[l] in everything, not only when they are watching, as people-pleasers, but with sincerity of heart, fearing the Lord. 23 Whatever you do, work at it wholeheartedly, as for the Lord and not for people, 24 since you know that you will receive the inheritance from the Lord as your reward. You are serving the Lord Christ. 25 Whoever does wrong will get back the wrong he did, and no partiality will be shown.[m]

Notes

- a (3:1) Sits at God's right hand: an echo of Ps 110:1 (109:1 in the Greek Old Testament).
- b (3:4) Our: some manuscripts read "your."
- c (3:5) Whatever in you belongs to the earth: literally "the members that are on the earth."
- d (3:6) Many manuscripts add "on the children of disobedience," from Eph 5:6; the Westcott–Hort text, with P46 and Vaticanus as reported, lacks it.
- e (3:9) Self: literally "man" (Greek anthrōpos, "human being").
- f (3:10) Compare Gen 1:26–27.
- g (3:11) Barbarian: one who did not speak Greek. Scythian: a people north of the Black Sea, regarded by Greeks as the most uncivilized of barbarians.
- h (3:13) The Lord: some manuscripts read "Christ," others "God."
- i (3:14) The bond that holds all perfection together: literally "the bond of perfection," or "of completeness."
- j (3:15) Rule: Greek brabeuō, to act as umpire.
- k (3:22) Slaves: Greek douloi, slaves or bond-servants. Slavery was widespread in the Roman world, and many members of the early churches were slaves; compare Philemon.
- l (3:22) Masters: Greek kyrioi, "lords," the same word as "Lord" throughout verses 22–24; earthly is literally "according to the flesh."
- m (3:25) Partiality: literally "receiving of faces," a Hebrew idiom for partiality.

Chapter 4

1 Masters, give your slaves what is right and fair; remember that you also have a Master in heaven.

2 Keep at prayer, staying alert in it with thanksgiving. 3 And pray for us at the same time, asking God to open up a door for the word, that we may speak of Christ's secret, the reason I am bound, 4 and that I may make it clear, as I ought to speak. 5 Walk in wisdom toward outsiders, making the most of the time.[a] 6 Your words should always be full of grace and flavored with salt, so that you will know what answer to give to each one.

7 Tychicus[b] will tell you all about my affairs. He is a dear brother, a faithful servant and a fellow slave in the Lord. 8 That is the very reason
I have sent him to you: to let you know our situation,[c] and to bring comfort to your hearts. 9 He comes with Onesimus,[d] our faithful and dear brother, who is one of you. They will tell you about everything here.
10 Greetings from Aristarchus,[e] who is in prison with me, and from Mark, Barnabas's cousin.[f] You have had orders concerning Mark:
make him welcome if he comes to you. 11 Greetings, too, from Jesus called Justus.[g] Of the circumcised, these three alone are working with me for God's kingdom, and they have proved a great comfort to me. 12
Epaphras, who is one of you, a slave of Christ Jesus, sends greetings.
He is always wrestling in his prayers on your behalf, that you may stand mature and fully assured in all the will of God. 13 For I testify that he has worked hard for you and for those in Laodicea and in Hierapolis.[h] 14 Luke,[i] the beloved physician, greets you, and so does Demas.[j] 15 Greet the brothers at Laodicea, and also Nympha, with the church that meets in her house.[k] 16 And when this letter has been read among you, see that it is also read in the church of the Laodiceans, and that you in turn read the letter from Laodicea.[l] 17 And tell Archippus,[m]
"See that you complete the ministry you have received in the Lord." 18 I, Paul, write this greeting with my own hand.[n] Remember my chains. Grace be with you.[o]

Notes

- a (4:5) Making the most of the time: literally "buying up the opportunity."
- b (4:7) Tychicus: from Greek tychē, "fortune," "fortunate." He was from the province of Asia (Acts 20:4; Eph 6:21–22).
- c (4:8) Our situation: literally "the things concerning us"; so the Westcott–Hort text; many manuscripts read "that he may know your situation."
- d (4:9) Onesimus: Greek, "useful," a common name for slaves. He is the runaway slave of the letter to Philemon (Phlm 10).
- e (4:10) Aristarchus: Greek, "best ruler." He was from Thessalonica and traveled with Paul (Acts 19:29; 20:4; 27:2).
- f (4:10) Mark: Latin Marcus, a common Roman name; the John Mark of Acts 12:12, 25; 15:37–39. Barnabas: interpreted in Acts 4:36 as "son of encouragement."
- g (4:11) Jesus: a common Jewish name, the Greek form of Joshua. Justus: Latin, "just," "righteous," a name often taken by Jews.

- h (4:13) Hierapolis: a city about 6 miles (10 km) north of Laodicea, famous for its hot springs.
- i (4:14) Luke: Latin Lucas, perhaps short for Lucanus or Lucius. By tradition he is the author of the Gospel of Luke and Acts.
- j (4:14) Demas: probably a short form of Demetrius, "belonging to Demeter." He later deserted Paul (2 Tim 4:10).
- k (4:15) Nympha: Greek, "bride," a woman's name. Some manuscripts read the man's name Nymphas and "his house"; others read "their house."
- l (4:16) The letter from Laodicea: a letter otherwise unknown, unless it is the letter now called Ephesians (see the note on Eph 1:1) or Philemon. A later forged "Letter to the Laodiceans" survives in Latin.
- m (4:17) Archippus: Greek, "master of horses." He is also greeted in Phlm 2.
- n (4:18) Paul usually dictated his letters to a scribe and added a closing in his own handwriting (2 Thess 3:17).
- o (4:18) Later manuscripts add "Amen."

1 Thessalonians

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 Paul,[a] Silvanus[b] and Timothy,[c] to the church of the Thessalonians[d] in God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ:[e] grace to you, and peace.[f]
2 At all times we thank God for every one of you, and mention you in our prayers. 3 Without ceasing we call to mind, before our God and Father, how your faith is at work, how your love labors, and how your hope in our Lord Jesus Christ holds steady.[g] 4 For we know, brothers[h] whom God loves, that he has chosen you, 5 for our gospel message[i] reached you not merely as words but with power, with the Holy Spirit, and with full assurance. You remember how we conducted ourselves among you, for your benefit. 6 And you became imitators of us and of the Lord; in spite of great affliction you welcomed the message with the joy the Holy Spirit gives. 7 As a result you became an example to every believer in Macedonia and Achaia.[j] 8 The Lord's word has sounded forth from you like a trumpet, and not in Macedonia and Achaia only; in every place the news of your faith toward God has spread abroad, so we need say nothing about it. 9 People themselves report what kind of welcome we had among you, and how you turned to God from idols, to serve a God who is living and true, 10 and to wait for his Son from heaven, Jesus, whom he raised from the dead, who rescues us from the wrath that is coming.

Notes

- a (1:1) Paul: Latin Paulus, "small." Paul also had the Jewish name Saul (Acts 13:9), after the first king of Israel ("asked for").
- b (1:1) Silvanus: Latin, "of the forest," the Roman form of the name Silas (Acts 15:40; 17:4), probably from Aramaic She'ila, "asked for."
- c (1:1) Timothy: Greek Timotheos, "one who honors God."
- d (1:1) Thessalonians: the people of Thessalonica, the capital of the Roman province of Macedonia, a major port on the Egnatian Way, the road that crossed northern Greece.

- e (1:1) Jesus: the Greek form of Hebrew Yeshua (Joshua), “Yahweh saves.” Christ: Greek Christos, “Anointed One,” equivalent to Hebrew mashiach, “Messiah.”
- f (1:1) Later manuscripts add “from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.”
- g (1:3) Holds steady: literally “the endurance of hope.”
- h (1:4) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, the usual term for fellow believers, including both men and women; so throughout.
- i (1:5) Good news: Greek euangelion, traditionally “gospel”; so throughout.
- j (1:7) Macedonia … Achaia: the two Roman provinces of northern and southern Greece.

Chapter 2

1 You yourselves know, brothers, that our visit to you was not in vain.
2 As you know, we had already suffered and been shamefully treated at Philippi,[a] yet with our God’s help we found the courage to tell you God’s good news in the face of great opposition. 3 For our appeal did not spring from error or impure motives, nor did it use trickery.
4 Rather, just as God has tested us and entrusted us with the good news, so we speak, not to please human beings, but to please God, who tests our hearts. 5 As you know, we never came with flattering words, nor with a pretext for greed — God is our witness — 6 We did not look for praise from people, whether from you or anyone else, though as apostles[b] of Christ we might have insisted on our importance.[c] 7 Instead we became like little children among you.[d] As a nurse cherishes her own children, 8 In the same way, because we cared so much for you, we were delighted to give you not just God’s gospel but our own selves, since you had grown so precious to us. 9
You remember, brothers and sisters, our hard work and exhaustion:
we labored night and day so that we would not be a burden to any of you while we announced God’s gospel to you. 10 You can testify, and so can God, how holy, upright and beyond reproach our conduct was among you who believe. 11 You know how, like a father with his own children, we treated each one of you, encouraging and comforting you 12 and pleading with you to walk[e] in a manner that befits the God who is calling you to his own kingdom and glory.
13 This is another reason we give thanks to God unceasingly: when the word of God reached you through our preaching, you took it in,

not as the word of mere humans, but as what it really is, God's word, now active in you who believe. 14 For you, brothers, have followed the pattern of the churches of God in Judea that are in Christ Jesus. You have suffered from your own fellow citizens just as they did from the Judeans,[f] 15 who killed both the Lord Jesus and the prophets, and drove us out. They displease God and oppose all people, 16 who try to stop us speaking to the Gentiles[g] for their salvation. In this way they are always filling up their sins to the brim. But the wrath has overtaken them at last.[h]

17 But we, brothers, when we were torn away from you for a short time,[i] in person but not in heart, longed all the more eagerly to see you face to face. 18 We wanted to visit you — I, Paul, again and again[j] — but Satan[k] stood in our way. 19 For who is our hope, our joy, the crown we will boast of in the presence of our Lord Jesus when he comes?[l] Who, if not you? 20 Yes, you are our glory and our joy.

Notes

- a (2:2) Philippi: see Acts 16:19–40.
- b (2:6) Apostles: Greek apostoloi, "those who are sent," messengers with the authority of the sender.
- c (2:6) Made our weight felt: or "been a burden to you" (compare 2:9); the Greek en barei can mean either weight of authority or financial burden. In some editions these words begin verse 7.
- d (2:7) Like little children: Greek nēpioi, "infants," the reading of the Westcott–Hort text and of the earliest manuscripts, including P65, the original hand of Sinaiticus, and Vaticanus as reported. Many manuscripts read ēpioi, "gentle," which differs by a single letter; the preceding word ends in n, so either could have arisen from the other by a slip of the eye. Many modern translations prefer "gentle" as better suited to the context.
- e (2:12) Walk: a Hebrew idiom for one's conduct; so throughout.
- f (2:14) The Judeans: Greek Ioudaioi, here probably the people of Judea who opposed the churches there, not the Jewish people as a whole; Paul himself and the Judean churches were Jewish.
- g (2:16) Gentiles: Greek ethnē, "nations," the non-Jewish peoples.
- h (2:16) At last: or "completely," "to the end." Because of the harshness of verses 14–16 and the apparent reference to a past disaster, some scholars think they were added after the destruction of Jerusalem in AD 70; no manuscript lacks them, and most scholars regard them as Paul's.
- i (2:17) A short time: literally "a season of an hour," an idiom for a brief time.
- j (2:18) More than once: literally "both once and twice," an idiom.

- k (2:18) Satan: Hebrew, “adversary,” “accuser.”
- l (2:19) When he comes: literally “at his coming,” Greek parousia, “presence,” “arrival,” used of the visit of a ruler; so throughout. Crown: the victor’s wreath.

Chapter 3

1 So, since we could stand it no longer, we thought it best to stay behind in Athens[a] by ourselves, 2 and we sent Timothy, our brother and God’s servant[b] in the good news of Christ, to make you firm and to encourage you for the sake of your faith, 3 so that none of you would be unsettled by these troubles. You know well that we are appointed for them. 4 In fact, when we were with you, we kept telling you beforehand that we were going to suffer affliction, and so it has turned out, as you know. 5 So I too, unable to stand it any longer, sent to learn how your faith was holding up. I feared that the tempter might somehow have tempted you, and that all our work would come to nothing. 6 Timothy, however, has come back to us from you just now, bringing good news of your faith and your love. He tells us that your memories of us are always warm, and that you long to see us, as we long to see you. 7 That is why, brothers, your faith has comforted us concerning you, in the midst of all our hardship and trouble. 8 For now we live, if you stand firm in the Lord. 9 What thanks can we ever give back to God for you, for all the joy with which we rejoice over you in our God’s presence? 10 Night and day we beg him, with the utmost urgency, to let us see your faces and make good whatever your faith still lacks.
11 Now may our God and Father himself, and our Lord Jesus, direct our way to you. 12 And as for you, may the Lord cause your love to grow and overflow, toward each other and toward everyone, just as ours does toward you, 13 so that he may strengthen your hearts to be blameless in holiness before our God and Father at the coming of our Lord Jesus with all his holy ones.[c]

Notes

- a (3:1) Athens: see Acts 17:15–34.
- b (3:2) God’s servant: so the Westcott–Hort text, with Sinaiticus and Alexandrinus as reported. Some manuscripts, reportedly including Vaticanus, read “God’s coworker”; others read “our coworker,” and many combine the two.

- c (3:13) With all his holy ones: echoing Zech 14:5, “Yahweh my God will come, and all the holy ones with him.” The holy ones may be angels or God’s people, or both. Some manuscripts add “Amen.”

Chapter 4

1 Finally, brothers and sisters, we beg and encourage you in the Lord Jesus: you received instruction from us about the way you must live to please God (and you do live that way); now excel even more. 2 For you know what instructions we gave you through the Lord Jesus. 3
For this is the will of God, your sanctification:[a] that you abstain from sexual immorality; 4 that each of you learn to master his own body[b] in a holy and respectful way, 5 not with lustful passion as the Gentiles have, who know nothing of God; 6 and that no one transgress against and wrong his brother in this matter, because the Lord is an avenger in all these things,[c] as we told you before and solemnly warned you. 7
God called us not for uncleanness but to be holy. 8 So whoever rejects this rejects not a human being but God, who gives his Holy Spirit to you.[d]

9 As for love among believers, there is no need for anyone to write to you, since you have been taught by God himself to love each other.
10 And you are in fact doing so toward all the brothers in the whole of Macedonia. Still, brothers, we urge you to excel in it even more, 11 and to aim at a quiet life, attending to your own business and earning your living by the work of your own hands, just as we told you, 12 so that your conduct will win the respect of outsiders and you will lack nothing.

13 Friends, we do not want you to be uninformed about those who have fallen asleep in death,[e] so that you will not grieve like everyone else, who has no hope. 14 For since we believe that Jesus died and rose again, so too through Jesus God will bring with him those who have fallen asleep.[f] 15 For this we declare to you by a word of the Lord:
we who are alive, who are left until the coming of the Lord, will by no means go ahead of those who have fallen asleep. 16 The Lord himself will descend from heaven with a shout of command, with an archangel’s voice, and with God’s trumpet, and those who died in Christ will rise first.[g] 17 Then we who are alive, who are left, will be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so we will always be with the Lord.[h] 18 So encourage one another with these words.

Notes

- a (4:3) Sanctification: Greek hagiasmos, being made holy; also in verses 4 and 7.
- b (4:4) Gain control over his own body: literally "acquire his own vessel." Vessel may mean one's own body, or, as some interpret it, a wife ("take a wife for himself").
- c (4:6) The Lord is an avenger: an echo of Ps 94:1 (93:1 in the Greek Old Testament), "God of vengeance, Yahweh," and of Deut 32:35. Here Lord probably refers to Jesus as judge.
- d (4:8) Gives his Holy Spirit to you: an echo of Ezek 36:27; 37:14 in the Greek Old Testament.
- e (4:13) Asleep in death: literally "sleeping," a common euphemism for death; so also "fallen asleep" in verses 14–15.
- f (4:14) Through Jesus: these words may go with "fallen asleep" ("those who have fallen asleep through Jesus," that is, as believers) or, as here, with "bring."
- g (4:16) Trumpet: in the Old Testament the trumpet announces the coming of God and the gathering of his people (Exod 19:16; Isa 27:13; Joel 2:1; Zech 9:14).
- h (4:17) To meet: Greek eis apantēsin, used of a delegation going out from a city to welcome an arriving dignitary and escort him back.

Chapter 5

1 Now concerning the times and the seasons, brothers, you have no need for anything to be written to you. 2 You know perfectly well yourselves that the day of the Lord[a] is coming the way a thief comes by night. 3 When they are saying, "All is peaceful and secure,"[b] ruin will come on them all at once, like birth pains on a woman with child, and there will be no escape for them. 4 You, though, brothers, are not living in the dark, so that the day should catch you unawares as daylight catches thieves.[c] 5 Every one of you is a child of light and a child of the day.[d] We are not of the night, nor of the darkness. 6 So we must not sleep like everyone else, but stay alert and keep our heads clear. 7 Sleepers sleep by night, and drinkers get drunk by night. 8 But because we belong to the day, let us keep clear heads, protected by the breastplate of faith and love and wearing the hope of salvation as a helmet.[e] 9 God did not appoint us to suffer wrath; he appointed us to win salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ. 10 He died for us so that, awake or asleep, we may live together with him. 11 So comfort each other and strengthen each other, as indeed you already do.

12 We ask you, brothers, to respect those who labor among you, who lead you in the Lord and admonish you, 13 and to esteem them very highly in love because of their work. Be at peace among yourselves. 14
We appeal to you, brothers: warn those who are out of line,[f] cheer up the discouraged, hold on to the weak, and be patient toward everyone.
15 See to it that no one returns harm for harm; rather, always aim at what is good, for one another and for all. 16 Rejoice always, 17 pray without ceasing, 18 whatever happens, give thanks; this is what God wills for you in Christ Jesus. 19 Do not quench the Spirit. 20 Do not despise prophecies, 21 but test everything; hold fast what is good. 22 Abstain from every form of evil.
23 Now may the God of peace himself sanctify you completely, and may your spirit and soul and body be kept whole and blameless at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. 24 The one calling you can be trusted, and he will do it.
25 Brothers, pray for us also. 26 Greet all the brothers with a holy kiss.
27 By the Lord I charge you to have this letter read aloud to every brother and sister.[g] 28 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.[h]

Notes

- a (5:2) The day of the Lord: in the Old Testament, the day of Yahweh, when God comes to judge and to save (Amos 5:18–20; Joel 2:31; Zeph 1:14–18); here applied to the coming of the Lord Jesus.
- b (5:3) All is peaceful and secure: literally “peace and security,” perhaps a slogan of Roman imperial propaganda (Latin pax et securitas); compare also Jer 6:14.
- c (5:4) As daylight catches thieves: literally “like thieves,” the reading of the Westcott–Hort text, with Alexandrinus and Vaticanus as reported. Many manuscripts read “like a thief,” as in verse 2.
- d (5:5) Child: literally “son,” a Hebrew idiom for one marked by something.
- e (5:8) Compare Isa 59:17.
- f (5:14) Out of line: Greek ataktoi, “disorderly,” traditionally “idle,” perhaps those who had stopped working (compare 4:11; 2 Thess 3:6–12).
- g (5:27) Every brother and sister: literally “all the brothers”; later manuscripts read “all the holy brothers.”
- h (5:28) Later manuscripts add “Amen.”

2 Thessalonians

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 Paul,[a] Silvanus[b] and Timothy,[c] to the Thessalonians' church,[d] which is in God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ:[e] 2 grace and peace be yours from God the Father[f] and the Lord Jesus Christ.
3 We are bound to thank God for you at all times, brothers,[g] and rightly so, because your faith is growing beyond measure, and the love that every one of you has for one another keeps on increasing. 4 So we ourselves boast about you among God's churches, telling of your endurance and faith through all the persecutions and troubles you are bearing. 5 This is evidence of God's just judgment, and its purpose is that you should be counted worthy of God's kingdom, for which you are indeed suffering. 6 For it is surely just in God's eyes to repay with trouble those who are troubling you, 7 and to grant rest to you who are afflicted, and to us too, at the revealing of the Lord Jesus from heaven with his powerful angels 8 in a blaze of fire,[h] dealing out vengeance to those who have no knowledge of God and to those who will not heed the good news[i] of our Lord Jesus. 9 These will pay the penalty of everlasting ruin, shut out from the face of the Lord and from the glory of his might,[j] 10 on that day when he comes to be glorified in his holy ones and to be marveled at among all who have believed; and you are among them, because you believed our testimony.[k] 11 With this in view we pray for you constantly, asking our God to make you worthy of his calling and by his power to bring to completion every desire you have for goodness and every work that faith produces, 12 so that our Lord Jesus' name will be honored through you, and you through him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.[l]

Notes

- a (1:1) Paul: Latin Paulus, “small.” Paul also had the Jewish name Saul (Acts 13:9), after the first king of Israel (“asked for”).
- b (1:1) Silvanus: Latin, “of the forest,” the Roman form of the name Silas (Acts 15:40; 17:4).
- c (1:1) Timothy: Greek Timotheos, “one who honors God.”
- d (1:1) Thessalonians: the people of Thessalonica, the capital of the Roman province of Macedonia (see 1 Thess 1:1).
- e (1:1) Jesus: the Greek form of Hebrew Yeshua (Joshua), “Yahweh saves.” Christ: Greek Christos, “Anointed One,” equivalent to Hebrew mashiach, “Messiah.”
- f (1:2) God the Father: some manuscripts read “God our Father.”
- g (1:3) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, the usual term for fellow believers, including both men and women; so throughout.
- h (1:8) In a blaze of fire: literally “in a fire of flame,” echoing Isa 66:15 and Exod 3:2. Some manuscripts read “in flaming fire.”
- i (1:8) Good news: Greek euangelion, traditionally “gospel”; so throughout.
- j (1:9) From the face of the Lord and from the glory of his might: words from Isa 2:10, 19, 21 in the Greek Old Testament, where the Hebrew has “from before the terror of Yahweh and from the splendor of his majesty.”
- k (1:10) Glorified in his holy ones … that day: echoing Ps 89:7 (88:8 in the Greek Old Testament) and Isa 2:11, 17, where the glory and the day belong to Yahweh.
- l (1:12) So that the name … may be glorified: echoing Isa 66:5 in the Greek Old Testament. Our God and the Lord Jesus Christ: or “our God and Lord, Jesus Christ.” Because “Lord” lacks the article in Greek, a few interpreters take both titles to refer to Jesus (compare Titus 2:13); but “Lord Jesus Christ” often occurs without the article, and most take the phrase to name God and Jesus separately.

Chapter 2

1 Now, brothers, concerning the coming[a] of our Lord Jesus Christ and our being gathered together to him, we ask you 2 not to be quickly shaken in your thinking or alarmed, whether by a spirit, or by a spoken word, or by a letter supposed to be from us, claiming that the day of the Lord has already arrived.[b] 3 Do not let anyone lead you astray in any way. That day will not come unless the rebellion[c] happens first, and the man of lawlessness is revealed, the one destined for destruction.[d] 4 He is the adversary who lifts himself up over everything that people call a god or venerate, until he goes so far as to sit down in God’s temple and display himself as being God.[e] 5 Do you not remember that I kept telling you these things when I was still with you? 6 And you know what is holding him back now, so that he will be revealed at his proper time. 7 For the secret[f] of lawlessness is already at work; only the one who now holds it back will do so until he is taken out of the way.[g] 8 Then the lawless one will be exposed, and the Lord[h] will destroy him by the breath from his mouth and put an end to him at the brightness of his arrival.[i] 9 The coming of the lawless one is by the working of Satan,[j] with all power and with signs and wonders that serve the lie, 10 and with every kind of unrighteous trickery aimed at the perishing, who would not welcome a love for the truth that would have saved them. 11 For this reason God sends them a power that leads them astray, so that they believe what is false, 12 in order that all who have not believed the truth but have delighted in wickedness may be condemned.

13 But we are bound to thank God for you always, brothers loved by the Lord, because God chose you from the beginning[k] to be saved, through the Spirit's work of making you holy and through your faith in the truth. 14 To this he called you through our good news, so that you might obtain the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ. 15 So then, brothers, stand firm and hold on to the traditions that you were taught by us, whether by word of mouth or by our letter.
16 Now may our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God our Father, who loved us and by grace gave us eternal encouragement and good hope, 17 encourage your hearts and strengthen them in every good work and word.

Notes

- a (2:1) Coming: Greek parousia, "presence," "arrival," used of the visit of a ruler; also in verses 8 and 9.
- b (2:2) The day of the Lord: in the Old Testament, the day of Yahweh, when God comes to judge and to save (Amos 5:18–20; Joel 2:31); here applied to the coming of the Lord Jesus. Later manuscripts read "the day of Christ." By a spirit: that is, by a prophetic utterance.
- c (2:3) Rebellion: Greek apostasia, "revolt," "falling away."
- d (2:3) Man of lawlessness: many manuscripts read "man of sin." The one destined for destruction: literally "the son of destruction," a Hebrew idiom.
- e (2:4) Compare Dan 11:36; Ezek 28:2.
- f (2:7) Secret: Greek mystērion, traditionally "mystery," here the hidden working of lawlessness.

- g (2:7) The one who now holds it back: Greek ho katechōn (masculine), following to katechon (neuter), "what is holding him back," in verse 6. Paul's readers knew what he meant (verse 5), but it is unknown today. Suggestions include the Roman empire and its emperor, the preaching of the good news and Paul himself, an angel, or God's own restraint.
- h (2:8) The Lord: the Westcott–Hort text adds "Jesus" in brackets, with Sinaiticus and Alexandrinus as reported.
- i (2:8) Slay with the breath of his mouth: from Isa 11:4, where the shoot of Jesse "will kill the wicked with the breath of his lips." Some manuscripts read "consume" for "slay." Splendor: Greek epiphaneia, "appearing," "manifestation."
- j (2:9) Satan: Hebrew, "adversary," "accuser."
- k (2:13) From the beginning: some manuscripts, reportedly including Vaticanus, read aparchēn, "as firstfruits," instead of ap' archēs, "from the beginning."

Chapter 3

1 Finally, brothers, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may spread swiftly and be honored, as it was among you,[a] 2 and that we will be delivered from twisted and wicked people, since not everyone has faith. 3 Yet the Lord keeps faith: he will make you firm and protect you from the evil one.[b] 4 Our trust in the Lord concerning you is that you are carrying out our instructions now and will keep carrying them out. 5 May the Lord direct your hearts to the love of God and to the endurance of Christ.

6 We command you, brothers and sisters, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, to stay away from any believer who lives in idleness[c] and not by the teaching they received from us.[d] 7 You know well enough how to follow our example: there was nothing idle in our conduct while we lived among you. 8 We did not take free meals from anybody; we toiled and labored, working night and day, so that we would be a burden to none of you. 9 Not that we lack the right to support; we wanted to make ourselves a pattern for you to copy. 10 Even while we were with you, we gave you this rule: anyone unwilling to work should not eat.
11 For we hear that some among you are living in idleness, not busy at work but busybodies.[e] 12 Such people we instruct and appeal to in the Lord Jesus Christ: let them settle down to their work quietly and eat bread they have earned.[f] 13 But you, brothers, must never tire of doing what is right. 14 Should anyone refuse to heed our word in this letter, mark him out and keep apart from him, so that he will feel shame. 15

Yet do not treat him as a foe; admonish him as you would a brother.
16 Now may the Lord of peace himself give you peace at all times and in every way. The Lord be with you all.
17 This greeting is in my own handwriting: Paul. It is the sign of genuineness in all my letters; this is my hand.[g] 18 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.[h]

Notes

- a (3:1) Spread swiftly: literally "run"; compare Ps 147:15 (147:4 in the Greek Old Testament).
- b (3:3) The evil one: or "evil."
- c (3:6) In idleness: Greek ataktōs, "in a disorderly way," "out of line"; also in verses 7 and 11. The context shows that the disorder was a refusal to work.
- d (3:6) They received: some manuscripts read "you received."
- e (3:11) Not busy … busybodies: a wordplay in Greek, mēden ergazomenous alla periergazomenous.
- f (3:12) Eat bread they have earned: literally "eat their own bread."
- g (3:17) Paul usually dictated his letters to a scribe and added a closing in his own handwriting (1 Cor 16:21; Gal 6:11; Col 4:18).
- h (3:18) Later manuscripts add "Amen."

1 Timothy

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 Paul,[a] apostle[b] of Christ Jesus under orders from God our Savior and from Christ Jesus, who is our hope,[c] 2 to Timothy,[d] his true son in the faith: grace, mercy, peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.
3 As I was leaving for Macedonia,[e] I asked you to remain in Ephesus[f]
so you could instruct certain individuals to quit teaching a different doctrine 4 and to stop occupying themselves with myths and with genealogies that go on without end. These breed speculation rather than God's ordering of things,[g] which is known by faith. 5 The aim of that charge is love, springing from a clean heart, a good conscience and faith without pretense. 6 Some have missed the mark here and wandered off into empty talk. 7 They want to be teachers of the law, yet they have no understanding either of the words they use or of the matters they insist on so confidently.
8 Now we know that the law is a fine thing, provided it is used lawfully, 9 with this understanding: law is not laid down for an upright person but for those who flout law and will not be ruled, for the godless and sinful, for the unholy and profane, for those who strike their fathers or mothers, for murderers, 10 the sexually immoral, men who lie with males,[h] kidnappers,[i] liars, perjurers, and whatever else stands opposed to healthy teaching, 11 in keeping with the glorious good news[j] of the blessed God, which was entrusted to me.
12 I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who has empowered me, because he considered me faithful and placed me in his service, 13 though in time past I was a blasphemer, a persecutor and a man of violence. But I was shown mercy, because I acted in ignorance, in unbelief, 14 and the grace of our Lord overflowed beyond measure, together with the faith and love that are in Christ Jesus. 15 Here is a saying to be trusted and worthy of complete acceptance:[k] Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. And of these I am the foremost. 16 Yet this is exactly why mercy was shown me: Christ Jesus meant to make me, the chief of sinners, the first showcase of all his patience, a pattern for those who would later put their trust in him and gain life everlasting. 17 To the eternal King, the immortal, unseen, only God,[l] be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen.

18 This charge I commit to you, Timothy my son, in line with the prophecies once spoken about you, so that by their help you may fight the good fight,[m] 19 holding on to faith and a good conscience. By thrusting conscience aside, some have made shipwreck of their faith.
20 Hymenaeus and Alexander[n] are among them, and I have turned them over to Satan[o] so that discipline will teach them not to slander God.

Notes

- a (1:1) Paul: Latin Paulus, "small." Paul also had the Jewish name Saul (Acts 13:9), after the first king of Israel ("asked for").
- b (1:1) Apostle: Greek apostolos, "one sent," a messenger or envoy.
- c (1:1) Jesus: the Greek form of Hebrew Yeshua (Joshua), "Yahweh saves." Christ: Greek Christos, "Anointed One," equivalent to Hebrew mashiach, "Messiah."
- d (1:2) Timothy: Greek Timotheos, "one who honors God."
- e (1:3) Macedonia: the Roman province in northern Greece.
- f (1:3) Ephesus: the chief city of the Roman province of Asia, on the western coast of modern Turkey.
- g (1:4) God's ordering of things: Greek oikonomia theou, "God's household management," that is, his plan or arrangement; some manuscripts read oikodomēn, "God's building up."
- h (1:10) Men who lie with males: Greek arsenokoitai, a rare compound of "male" and "bed," apparently drawn from Lev 18:22 and 20:13 in the Greek Old Testament; compare 1 Cor 6:9. Its precise range of meaning is debated.
- i (1:10) Kidnappers: or "slave traders," those who seize people to sell them.
- j (1:11) Good news: Greek euangelion, traditionally "gospel"; so throughout.
- k (1:15) A saying to be trusted: literally "faithful is the word," a formula found in these letters (3:1; 4:9; 2 Tim 2:11; Titus 3:8) to introduce or confirm a saying.
- l (1:17) The only God: later manuscripts read "the only wise God."
- m (1:18) Fight the good fight: literally "wage the good warfare."
- n (1:20) Hymenaeus: Greek, named after Hymen, the god of weddings; compare 2 Tim 2:17. Alexander: Greek, "defender of men"; perhaps the man of 2 Tim 4:14.

- o (1:20) Satan: Hebrew, “adversary,” “accuser.” Handed over to Satan: compare 1 Cor 5:5; probably exclusion from the church’s fellowship.

Chapter 2

1 My first request, then, is this: let petitions, prayers, pleas and thanksgivings be made for everyone, 2 for kings and all who hold high positions, so that we may lead a peaceful and quiet life in all godliness and dignity.
3 This is good, and pleasing in the sight of God our Savior,
4 whose will is that all people be saved and come to know the truth.
5 For there is one God,
and one mediator also between God and humankind,
the man Christ Jesus,
6 who offered himself as a ransom on behalf of all,
the witness borne at the right moment.[a] 7 For this I was appointed a herald and an apostle (I speak the truth,
I am not lying),[b] a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and truth.
8 So I want the men everywhere to pray, raising holy hands, without anger or quarreling. 9 Likewise the women should adorn themselves in fitting dress, with modesty and good sense, not with braided hair and gold or pearls[c] or costly clothes, 10 but with what suits women who profess reverence for God, namely good works. 11 A woman should learn in quietness, in full submission. 12 I do not permit a woman to teach or to domineer over a man;[d] she is to remain quiet. 13 For Adam was formed first, and Eve after him.[e] 14 And Adam was not the one deceived; the woman was deceived and became a transgressor.[f] 15 Yet she will be saved through childbearing, if they continue in faith and love and holiness, with good sense.[g]

Notes

- a (2:6) The testimony given at the proper time: literally “the testimony in its own times.” Verses 5–6 may quote an early confession; the setting as verse here is editorial.
- b (2:7) I speak the truth: later manuscripts add “in Christ.”
- c (2:9) Pearls: in the ancient world among the costliest of gems.
- d (2:12) Domineer over: Greek authentein, found only here in the New Testament. Its sense is debated: “have authority over,” “assume authority over,” or “dominate.”

A woman ... a man: or “a wife ... her husband”; the same Greek words serve for both.

- e (2:13) Adam: Hebrew, “human being,” related to adamah, “ground” (Gen 2:7). Eve: Hebrew Chawwah, “living” (Gen 3:20).
- f (2:14) Compare Gen 3:13.
- g (2:15) Saved through childbearing: the meaning is much debated. Proposals include being kept safe in childbirth; being saved through the birth of the Messiah (compare Gen 3:15); or being saved while fulfilling an ordinary role as wife and mother. They: probably women generally, or the women and their children.

Chapter 3

1 Here is a trustworthy saying:[a] whoever sets his heart on being an overseer[b] is longing for a fine task. 2 An overseer, then, must be above reproach, the husband of one wife,[c] clear-headed, self-controlled, orderly, hospitable, able to teach, 3 not a heavy drinker,[d] not a brawler but gentle, not quarrelsome, free from the love of money. 4 He should govern his own home well and have children who obey him with all proper respect. 5 If someone cannot govern his own home, how can he look after the church of God? 6 He should not be newly converted,[e] in case pride goes to his head and he falls into the condemnation that came on the devil.[f] 7 He must also be well thought of by outsiders, so that he does not fall into disgrace and into the devil’s trap.
8 Deacons[g] likewise must be worthy of respect, not double-tongued, not addicted to much wine, not out for shameful gain. 9 They must hold the secret[h] of the faith with a clear conscience. 10 And they too should first be tested; then, if no charge can be brought against them, let them serve as deacons. 11 Women, likewise,[i] must be worthy of respect, not slanderers, clear-headed, faithful in everything. 12 Each deacon is to be the husband of one wife and to govern his children and his home well. 13 Those who serve well in this office win for themselves an honorable rank and much confidence in the faith that rests in Christ Jesus.
14 Though I expect to be with you soon, I am sending you these instructions
15 so that, should I be held up, you may know what conduct befits those in God’s house, the church of the living God, which upholds the truth as a pillar and a base.

16 And beyond all question great is the secret of our godliness:
He who was made visible in the flesh,[j]
was vindicated in the Spirit,[k]
was seen by angels,
was proclaimed among the nations,
was believed in throughout the world,
was taken up in glory.

Notes

- a (3:1) A trustworthy saying: some manuscripts read "a human saying," perhaps meaning "a common saying."
- b (3:1) Overseer: Greek episkopos, "one who watches over," traditionally "bishop." In these letters the overseers appear to be the same as the elders (compare Titus 1:5–7).
- c (3:2) The husband of one wife: literally "a man of one woman." This may forbid polygamy, remarriage after divorce or after a spouse's death, or unfaithfulness; the precise sense is debated. So also in verse 12.
- d (3:3) Not a heavy drinker: literally "not given to wine."
- e (3:6) Newly converted: Greek neophytos, "newly planted."
- f (3:6) The devil: Greek diabolos, "slanderer"; so also in verse 7. The condemnation that came on the devil: or "the condemnation the devil brings."
- g (3:8) Deacons: Greek diakonoi, "servants," "ministers"; here church officers.
- h (3:9) Secret: Greek mystērion, traditionally "mystery"; so also in verse 16.
- i (3:11) Women: or "wives," that is, the deacons' wives; or women who serve as deacons (compare Rom 16:1).
- j (3:16) He who: so the earliest manuscripts, reportedly including Sinaiticus before correction, Alexandrinus and Ephraemi before correction (Greek hos). Some manuscripts read "which" (ho), agreeing with "secret." Later manuscripts read "God" (theos), a change easily made in Greek manuscripts, where hos (ΟΣ) and the abbreviation for theos (ΘΣ) differ by two small strokes. The lines that follow are widely thought to quote an early hymn; the setting as verse is editorial.
- k (3:16) Vindicated in the Spirit: or "justified by the Spirit," or "shown to be righteous in spirit."

Chapter 4

1 Now the Spirit says in plain words that in later times some will desert the faith, giving heed to spirits that lead astray and to teachings that come from demons, 2 through the hypocrisy of liars whose consciences have been seared as with a branding iron. 3 They prohibit marrying and insist that people keep away from foods, which God made to be shared with thanks by those who have faith and have come to know the truth. 4 For all that God made is good, and nothing should be refused when it is accepted with thanks, 5 since God's word and prayer consecrate it.

6 By pointing out these things to the believers,[a] you will be an excellent servant of Christ Jesus, fed on the message of the faith and the sound teaching you have followed closely. 7 But have nothing to do with profane myths fit only for old women. Train yourself for godliness instead.[b] 8 Bodily training has some little value; godliness has value in every way, holding promise for the present life and for the life to come. 9 This saying is to be trusted and worthy of complete acceptance. 10 That is why we toil and struggle,[c] because we have set our hope on the living God, who is the Savior of all people, especially of those who believe.
11 Give these instructions and teach them. 12 Do not let anyone think little of you because you are young.[d] Instead, be a pattern for the faithful in what you say and how you live, in love, faith and purity.
13 Till I arrive, give your attention to reading Scripture aloud,[e] to exhorting and to teaching. 14 Do not neglect the gift that is in you, which was given to you through prophecy when the council of elders[f] laid their hands on you. 15 Make these things your care and your whole occupation, so that your advance is evident to everyone. 16 Keep a close watch on yourself and on your teaching; persist in these things, for by doing so you will save both yourself and those who listen to you.

Notes

- a (4:6) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, the usual term for fellow believers, including both men and women.
- b (4:7) Train: Greek gymnaze, from the word for athletic exercise; so also "training" in verse 8.
- c (4:10) Struggle: some manuscripts read "suffer reproach."
- d (4:12) Young: in Greek usage the term for youth could cover adults up to about forty.
- e (4:13) Reading Scripture aloud: literally "the reading," that is, reading aloud in the assembly.
- f (4:14) Council of elders: Greek presbyterion, the body of elders (presbyteroi).

Chapter 5

1 Never harshly criticize an older man, but urge him as though he were your father. Treat younger men like brothers, 2 elderly women as you would mothers, and young women as sisters, with complete purity.
3 Honor widows who are truly in need.[a] 4 But if a widow has children or grandchildren, they should first learn to practice their religion at home and to repay their parents, since this pleases God.[b] 5 A real widow, one left on her own, has put her hope in God and continues day and night in petitions and prayers. 6 But a widow who gives herself to luxury is dead though she is alive. 7 Give these instructions too, so that they may be beyond reproach. 8 Anyone who does not provide for his own relatives, and especially for members of his household, has denied the faith and is worse than an unbeliever.
9 Let a widow be put on the list only if she is not under sixty years of age and has been the wife of one husband,[c] 10 and is known for good works: if she has brought up children, if she has shown hospitality, if she has washed the feet of God's people,[d] if she has helped the afflicted, if she has devoted herself to every kind of good work. 11 But refuse to enroll younger widows, for when their desires draw them away from Christ, they want to marry, 12 and so they incur condemnation for having set aside their first pledge.[e] 13 They also pick up the habit of being idle and wandering from house to house; and they become not merely idle but also gossips and meddlers, who say things they should not. 14 So I would have younger widows marry, bear children, manage their homes, and give the adversary no opening for abuse. 15 For some have already turned aside to follow Satan. 16 If any believing woman has widows in her family,[f] she should assist them, and the church should not be burdened, so that it can assist those who are truly widows in need.
17 Elders who lead well should be considered worthy of a double honor,[g] especially those who labor in preaching and teaching. 18 Scripture says, "Do not muzzle an ox as it threshes,"[h] and, "The laborer has earned his pay."[i] 19 Do not entertain a charge brought against an elder unless two or three witnesses bear it out.[j] 20 Any who keep on sinning you should reprove publicly, so that the others will be afraid.

21 I solemnly charge you before God and Christ Jesus and the chosen angels to keep these rules without prejudging anyone, doing nothing out of partiality. 22 Do not rush to ordain anyone,[k] and do not take part in the sins of others. Keep yourself pure. 23 Stop drinking water alone; use a little wine because of your stomach and the illnesses you so often have. 24 Some people's sins are plain to see, going ahead of them to judgment, but the sins of others follow after them. 25 So too good works are plain to see, and those that are not cannot remain hidden.

Notes

- a (5:3) Honor: the word may include financial support; so also "honor" in verse 17.
- b (5:4) Pleasing: later manuscripts read "good and pleasing."
- c (5:9) The wife of one husband: literally "a woman of one man"; compare 3:2.
- d (5:10) God's people: literally "the holy ones," traditionally "the saints." Washing the feet of guests was a menial act of hospitality (John 13:14).
- e (5:12) First pledge: literally "first faith," probably a pledge to remain unmarried in the service of Christ.
- f (5:16) Believing woman: later manuscripts read "believing man or woman."
- g (5:17) Elders: Greek presbyteroi, the leaders of the congregation; in verse 1 the same word means simply "older man." Double honor: probably including payment; compare verse 18.
- h (5:18) Do not muzzle an ox as it threshes: Deut 25:4; compare 1 Cor 9:9. Oxen were driven over the harvested grain to loosen the kernels.
- i (5:18) The laborer has earned his pay: a saying of Jesus, found in Luke 10:7 and in a slightly different form in Matt 10:10. Here it is cited alongside Scripture.
- j (5:19) Compare Deut 19:15.
- k (5:22) Laying hands on: that is, appointing someone to office (4:14), or possibly restoring someone who has sinned.

Chapter 6

1 Let all who are under the yoke as slaves regard their own masters as deserving all honor, so that the name of God and the teaching may not be spoken against. 2 Those who have believing masters must not think less of them because they are brothers; rather, they should serve them all the better, since those who benefit from their good service are believers and dear to God.[a] Teach and urge these things. 3
If anyone teaches a different doctrine and does not hold to the healthy words of our Lord Jesus Christ and to the teaching that accords with godliness, 4 he is swollen with conceit and understands nothing. He has a sick craving for controversies and quarrels about words, from which come envy, strife, slander, evil suspicions, 5 and constant friction among people who are corrupted in mind and robbed of the truth, who imagine that godliness is a means of gain.[b] 6 There is indeed great gain in godliness combined with contentment. 7 For we brought nothing into the world, and so we can take nothing out of it.[c] 8 Having food and clothing,[d] we will be satisfied with that. 9 People who want to be rich, however, tumble into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful cravings that drag them down into ruin and destruction. 10 For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil,[e] and some, in reaching for it, have wandered from the faith and pierced themselves through with many pangs.

11 But you, man of God, flee from these things. Pursue righteousness, godliness, faith, love, endurance, gentleness. 12 Fight the good fight[f] of the faith; take hold of the eternal life to which you were called when you made the good confession in the presence of many witnesses. 13 I charge you in the sight of God, who gives life to all things, and of Christ Jesus, who made the good confession in his testimony before Pontius Pilate,[g] 14 to keep the commandment spotless and blameless until the appearing[h] of our Lord Jesus Christ, 15 This he will make manifest in his own good time, he the blessed and sole Ruler, the King of kings and Lord of lords,[i] 16 who alone is immortal, living in light no one can approach, whom no human eye has ever seen or is able to see. His be the honor and the everlasting power. Amen.

17 Those who are rich in this present world you must instruct not to think too highly of themselves and not to pin their hopes on wealth, which is so uncertain, but on God, who gives us all things in abundance for our enjoyment. 18 Tell them to do good, to grow rich in fine deeds, to give freely and share with others, 19 and so lay up treasure for themselves as a sound foundation for what is to come, in order to grasp the life that is real life.

20 Timothy, guard what has been entrusted to you. Turn away from godless chatter and the contradictions of what is falsely called knowledge,[j] 21 which some have professed and so have missed the mark concerning the faith. Grace be with you all.[k]

Notes

- a (6:2) Those who benefit from their good service: or “those who devote themselves to good service,” referring to the masters. Dear to God: literally “beloved.”
- b (6:5) Later manuscripts add “From such people withdraw.”
- c (6:7) And so: the Greek is awkward, literally “that.” Later manuscripts read “and it is clear that.” Compare Job 1:21; Eccl 5:15.
- d (6:8) Clothing: or “shelter”; the Greek word means “coverings.”
- e (6:10) A root of all kinds of evil: or “the root of all evils.”
- f (6:12) Fight the good fight: literally “contend in the good contest,” an image from athletic competition.
- g (6:13) Pontius Pilate: the Roman governor of Judea, AD 26–36, under whom Jesus was crucified. Pilate: Latin Pilatus, perhaps “armed with a javelin.”
- h (6:14) Appearing: Greek epiphaneia, “appearance,” “manifestation.”
- i (6:15) King of kings and Lord of lords: literally “the King of those who reign and Lord of those who rule”; compare Deut 10:17; Rev 17:14; 19:16.
- j (6:20) Knowledge: Greek gnōsis. Later groups claiming special knowledge were called “Gnostics,” but whether such teaching is in view here is uncertain.
- k (6:21) With you all: the “you” is plural. Later manuscripts read “with you” (singular) and add “Amen.”

2 Timothy

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 Paul,[a] by God's will an apostle[b] of Christ Jesus, sent to make known the promise of the life that is in Christ Jesus,[c] 2 to Timothy,[d] my dearly loved son: grace, mercy, peace from God the Father and Christ Jesus
our Lord.
3 I give thanks to God, whom I serve with a clean conscience as my forebears did, as I keep you in mind without ceasing in my prayers by night and by day. 4 I remember the tears you shed, and I yearn to see you again, so that my joy may be complete. 5 I am reminded of the unfeigned faith that is in you, a faith that lived first in your grandmother Lois and your mother Eunice,[e] and that I am convinced lives in you as well. 6 For this reason I urge you to rekindle the gift of God that came to you when I placed my hands on you. 7 For the spirit God gave us is not one of cowardice; it is a spirit of power, of love and of self-discipline.[f] 8 So never be ashamed of bearing witness to our Lord, nor of me his prisoner. Instead, take your share of hardship for the good news,[g] relying on the power of God, 9 who rescued us and called us with a holy calling, not on the basis of anything we had done, but because of his own purpose and the grace he bestowed on us in Christ Jesus before time began,[h] 10 and now it has been made plain by the appearing[i] of Christ Jesus our Savior, who has put an end to death's power and, by the good news, shed light on life and immortality. 11 for which I have been appointed herald, apostle and teacher.[j] 12 That is why I endure these sufferings. But I feel no shame, because I know whom I have trusted, and I am persuaded that what I have placed in his keeping he can guard until that day.[k] 13 Hold to the wholesome words you heard from me as a model, living in the faith and love that are ours in Christ Jesus. 14 Through the Holy Spirit, who dwells in us, keep safe the fine treasure committed to your care.

15 You know that all the believers in Asia[l] have abandoned me, including Phygelus and Hermogenes.[m] 16 May the Lord show mercy to the household of Onesiphorus,[n] for he often refreshed me and was not ashamed of my chains. 17 On the contrary, when he arrived in Rome, he searched hard for me and found me. 18 The Lord grant that he finds mercy with the Lord on that day! How much he did for me in Ephesus you already know better than anyone.

Notes

- a (1:1) Paul: Latin Paulus, “small.” Paul also had the Jewish name Saul (Acts 13:9), after the first king of Israel (“asked for”).
- b (1:1) Apostle: Greek apostolos, “one sent,” a messenger or envoy.
- c (1:1) Jesus: the Greek form of Hebrew Yeshua (Joshua), “Yahweh saves.” Christ: Greek Christos, “Anointed One,” equivalent to Hebrew mashiach, “Messiah.”
- d (1:2) Timothy: Greek Timotheos, “one who honors God.”
- e (1:5) Lois: Greek, perhaps “more desirable.” Eunice: Greek Eunikē, “good victory.” Compare Acts 16:1.
- f (1:7) The spirit God gave us: or “God did not give us a spirit of cowardice, but of power …”; the reference may be to the Holy Spirit or to a disposition he imparts. Self-discipline: or “sound judgment.”
- g (1:8) Good news: Greek euangelion, traditionally “gospel”; so throughout.
- h (1:9) Before time began: literally “before eternal times.”
- i (1:10) Appearing: Greek epiphaneia, “appearance,” “manifestation”; also in 4:1 and 4:8.
- j (1:11) Teacher: later manuscripts add “of the Gentiles.”
- k (1:12) What I have placed in his keeping: or “what he has placed in my keeping”; literally “my deposit.” Compare verse 14.
- l (1:15) Asia: the Roman province in the west of modern Turkey, with Ephesus its chief city.
- m (1:15) Phygelus: Greek, perhaps “fugitive.” Hermogenes: Greek, “born of Hermes.”
- n (1:16) Onesiphorus: Greek, “bringer of benefit.”

Chapter 2

1 You, then, my son, draw your strength from the grace that is in Christ Jesus. 2 What you heard from me in the presence of many witnesses, pass on to reliable people who will be competent to teach others as well. 3 Take your share of hardship[a] like a good soldier of Christ Jesus. 4 No soldier on active duty gets entangled in the business of civilian life; his aim is to please the officer who enlisted him. 5

Likewise an athlete is not crowned unless he competes by the rules.
6 The farmer who toils should be the first to eat from the harvest. 7 Think about what I am saying, for the Lord will give you insight into everything.
8 Keep in mind Jesus Christ, raised from the dead, a descendant of David,[b] as proclaimed in my good news, 9 It is for this good news that I suffer hardship, even to the point of wearing chains like a wrongdoer. Yet the word of God is not in chains.
10 That is why I endure all things for the sake of God's chosen ones, so that they also may gain the salvation found in Christ Jesus, along with eternal glory.
11 Here is a saying to be trusted:[c]

If we have died with him, we shall also live with him;
12 if we endure, we shall also reign with him;
if we deny him, he also will deny us;
13 if we are faithless, he remains faithful,
for he cannot deny himself.

14 Keep reminding them of these things, and charge them in the sight of God[d] not to wrangle over words, which does no good and only brings ruin on those who listen. 15 Do your utmost to present yourself to God as one approved, a worker with no cause for shame, cutting a straight path with the word of truth.[e] 16 But steer clear of godless chatter, for those who indulge in it will advance further and further into ungodliness, 17 and their talk will eat its way like gangrene.
Hymenaeus and Philetus[f] are among them; 18 they have strayed from the truth, claiming that the resurrection has already happened, and they are overturning the faith of some. 19 Nevertheless God's firm foundation stands, bearing this seal: "The Lord knows those who are his,"[g] and, "Let everyone who names the name of the Lord turn away from wickedness."[h] 20 In a great house there are utensils of gold and silver, and also of wood and clay, some meant for special occasions and others for ordinary use. 21 Anyone, then, who keeps himself clean of these will be a vessel for noble use, consecrated, of service to the owner, fit for any good task. 22 Flee the passions of youth, and pursue righteousness, faith, love and peace, together with those who call on the Lord from a pure heart. 23 Refuse to be drawn into stupid and uninstructed debates;

you know that they give birth to fights. 24 And a servant[i] of the Lord must not be quarrelsome but kind toward all, able to teach, patient when wronged, 25 gently instructing those who resist him. It may be that God will give them a change of heart, so that they come to know the truth, 26 and they may come to their senses and escape the devil's snare, having been held captive by him to do his will.[j]

Notes

- a (2:3) Take your share of hardship: later manuscripts read "so endure hardship."
- b (2:8) A descendant of David: literally "from the seed of David." David: Hebrew, "beloved."
- c (2:11) A saying to be trusted: literally "faithful is the word"; compare 1 Tim 1:15. The lines that follow are widely thought to quote an early hymn or confession; the setting as verse is editorial.
- d (2:14) In the sight of God: some manuscripts read "in the sight of the Lord."
- e (2:15) Cutting a straight path with: Greek orthotomounta, literally "cutting straight," perhaps an image from road-building or plowing; that is, handling the word rightly.
- f (2:17) Hymenaeus: Greek, named after Hymen, the god of weddings; compare 1 Tim 1:20. Philetus: Greek, "beloved."
- g (2:19) The Lord knows those who are his: from Num 16:5 in the Greek Old Testament, where "the Lord" renders the divine name, Yahweh.
- h (2:19) Names the name of the Lord: echoing Isa 26:13 and the call to separate from the wicked in Num 16:26; in these passages "the Lord" stands for Yahweh.
- i (2:24) Servant: Greek doulos, "slave."
- j (2:26) The devil: Greek diabolos, "slanderer." Held captive by him to do his will: or "held captive by the devil, so as to do God's will"; the Greek pronouns are ambiguous.

Chapter 3

1 Understand this: in the last days hard times will come. 2 For people will be lovers of themselves, lovers of money, boastful, arrogant, abusive, disobedient to their parents, ungrateful, unholy, 3 heartless, unforgiving, slanderers, without self-control, brutal, haters of what is good, [4] traitors, reckless, swollen with conceit, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, [5] keeping up an outward form of godliness but denying its power. Turn away from such people. [6] Some of these slip into people's homes and make captives of foolish women who are loaded down with sins and driven by various passions, [7] women who are forever learning yet can never reach a real understanding of the truth. [8] Just as Jannes and Jambres[a] opposed Moses, so these people oppose the truth, men corrupted in mind and disqualified in regard to the faith. [9] But they will not get much further, for their folly will be plain to everyone, as the folly of those two also became plain. [10] But you have closely followed what I taught, how I lived, what I aimed at, my faith, my patience, my love, my endurance, [11] my persecutions and sufferings, the things that happened to me at Antioch, at Iconium and at Lystra,[b] the persecutions I endured. Yet from all of them the Lord rescued me. [12] Indeed, everyone who sets out to live a devout life in Christ Jesus will meet persecution, [13] and evil people and swindlers will advance into worse and worse, leading others astray and being led astray themselves. [14] But as for you, hold on to what you have learned and become convinced of, knowing from whom you learned it,[c] [15] and that from childhood you have known the sacred writings, which can make you wise for salvation through faith in Christ Jesus. [16] All Scripture is breathed out by God and useful for teaching, for reproof, for correction and for training in righteousness,[d] [17] so that the person who belongs to God may be complete, equipped for every good work.

Notes

- a (3:8) Jannes and Jambres: names given in Jewish tradition to Pharaoh's magicians who opposed Moses (Exod 7:11, 22). Moses: Hebrew Mosheh, explained in Exod 2:10 as "drawn out."
- b (3:11) Antioch … Iconium … Lystra: cities in southern Asia Minor where Paul was persecuted (Acts 13:50; 14:5–6, 19). This Antioch, named after the Seleucid king Antiochus, lay near Pisidia; Lystra was Timothy's home town (Acts 16:1).
- c (3:14) From whom: the Greek is plural, "from which people," perhaps including Timothy's mother and grandmother (1:5). Later manuscripts read the singular.
- d (3:16) All Scripture is breathed out by God and useful: or "Every scripture breathed out by God is also useful." Breathed out by God: Greek theopneustos, "God-breathed," traditionally "inspired by God."

Chapter 4

1 I give you this solemn charge before God and Christ Jesus, who will judge the living and the dead, and in view of his appearing and his kingdom: 2 proclaim the word; be ready in season and out of season; convince, rebuke and encourage, with unfailing patience and teaching. 3 For a time is coming when people will not put up with healthy teaching, but, with ears itching for something new, they will heap up teachers for themselves to suit their own desires, 4 they will stop listening to the truth and turn aside to fables instead. 5 But you, keep your head in all circumstances, endure hardship, do the work of an evangelist,[a] carry out your ministry to the full.
6 For my part, my life is already being poured out like a drink offering,[b] and the moment of my departure is at hand. 7 I have fought the good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith. 8 From now on a crown of righteousness is waiting for me, which the Lord, the righteous judge, will give me on that day, and not to me alone but to everyone who has longed for his appearing.
9 Do your best to come to me soon. 10 Demas has abandoned me; he loved the present age, and he has gone off to Thessalonica. Crescens is away in Galatia,[c] Titus in Dalmatia.[d] 11 Only Luke is with me. Fetch Mark and bring him along, because he is very useful to me for the work.[e] 12 Tychicus I have sent to Ephesus.[f] 13 Bring with you, when you come, the cloak I left in Troas at the house of Carpus,[g] and the books too, especially the parchments.[h] 14 That coppersmith Alexander treated me very badly; the Lord will requite him as his deeds deserve.[i] 15 You too should be on guard against him, for he strongly opposed our message. 16 When I first defended myself, nobody came to my support; all abandoned me. May it not be held against them! 17 But the Lord stood beside me and made me strong, so that through me the message would be preached in full and all the nations would hear it. So I was snatched from the lion's mouth.[j] 18 The Lord will deliver me from every wicked scheme and bring me safely to his heavenly kingdom. Glory to him forever and ever. Amen.
19 Greet Prisca and Aquila,[k] and the household of Onesiphorus. 20
Erastus stayed in Corinth, and Trophimus I left ill at Miletus.[l] 21 Do your best to come before winter.[m] Eubulus sends you greetings, as do Pudens, Linus, Claudia and all the brothers.[n]

22 The Lord be with your spirit.[o] Grace be with you all.[p]

Notes

- a (4:5) Evangelist: Greek euangelistēs, "one who brings good news."
- b (4:6) Drink offering: wine poured out as a sacrifice (Num 15:1–10; 28:7); compare Phil 2:17.
- c (4:10) Demas: Greek, probably short for Demetrios, "belonging to Demeter"; compare Col 4:14; Phlm 24. Crescens: Latin, "growing." Galatia: some manuscripts read "Gaul."
- d (4:10) Titus: Latin, of uncertain meaning. Dalmatia: a region on the eastern coast of the Adriatic Sea, in modern Croatia and its neighbors.
- e (4:11) Luke: Greek Loukas, probably from Latin Lucius, "light." Mark: Latin Marcus, perhaps from Mars, the Roman god of war; compare Acts 15:37–39; Col 4:10.
- f (4:12) Tychicus: Greek, "fortunate."
- g (4:13) Carpus: Greek, "fruit." Troas: a port in northwestern Asia Minor near ancient Troy.
- h (4:13) Books ... parchments: the books were probably papyrus scrolls; the parchments, writings on prepared animal skin, perhaps notebooks or copies of Scripture.
- i (4:14) Alexander: Greek, "defender of men"; compare 1 Tim 1:20. The Lord will requite him as his deeds deserve: echoing Ps 62:12 (61:13 in the Greek Old Testament) and Prov 24:12, where it is God, Yahweh, who repays each according to his deeds. Later manuscripts read "may the Lord requite him."
- j (4:17) The lion's mouth: a figure for deadly danger, echoing Ps 22:21 (21:22 in the Greek Old Testament); compare Dan 6:20–22.
- k (4:19) Prisca: Latin, "ancient," "venerable"; called Priscilla in Acts 18:2. Aquila: Latin, "eagle."
- l (4:20) Erastus: Greek, "beloved"; compare Acts 19:22; Rom 16:23. Trophimus: Greek, "nourishing"; compare Acts 20:4; 21:29. Miletus: a port on the coast of Asia, south of Ephesus.
- m (4:21) Before winter: sea travel on the Mediterranean largely stopped from about mid-November to March.
- n (4:21) Eubulus: Greek, "well-advised." Pudens: Latin, "modest." Linus: Greek, the name of a legendary singer; later tradition names a Linus as an early leader of the church in Rome. Claudia: Latin, feminine of Claudius. Brothers: Greek adelphoi, fellow believers, including both men and women. All: the Westcott–Hort text has "all" in brackets.
- o (4:22) The Lord: later manuscripts read "The Lord Jesus Christ."
- p (4:22) With you all: the "you" is plural. Later manuscripts add "Amen."

Titus

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 Paul,[a] a servant[b] of God and an apostle[c] of Jesus Christ, sent to further the faith of God's chosen ones and their grasp of the truth that leads to godliness,[d] 2 resting on the hope of eternal life, which God, who never lies, pledged before time began,[e] 3 and at the right moment he made his message visible in the preaching entrusted to me by command of God our Savior, 4 to Titus,[f] my genuine child in our shared faith: grace and peace[g] from God the Father and from Christ Jesus our Savior.
5 The reason I left you behind in Crete[h] was so that you would set in order what still needed doing and appoint elders[i] in each town, as I instructed you. 6 An elder must be blameless, the husband of one wife,[j] with children who are believers[k] and are not open to the charge of wild living or disobedience. 7 For an overseer,[l] as God's steward, has to be beyond reproach: not headstrong, not hot-tempered, not a drunkard, not violent, not grasping for gain, 8 but hospitable, a lover of goodness, sensible, just, devout and self-controlled. 9 He must hold firmly to the trustworthy message as it was taught, so that he can both encourage others with healthy teaching and refute those who speak against it.
10 For there are many who will not submit to authority, empty talkers and deceivers, especially those of the circumcision party.[m] 11
They have to be silenced, for they are turning whole families upside down by teaching for the sake of dishonest profit what they have no business teaching. 12 One of them, a prophet of their own, has said, "Cretans are liars forever, savage beasts, idle bellies."[n] 13 That testimony is true. So reprove them sharply, so that they may be healthy in the faith, 14 paying no attention to Jewish myths or to the commands of people who reject the truth. 15 To the pure all things are pure, but to the defiled and unbelieving nothing is pure; their very minds and consciences are defiled. 16 They profess to know God, yet their conduct disowns him; they are abhorrent and rebellious, and worthless for anything good.

Notes

- a (1:1) Paul: Latin Paulus, “small.” Paul also had the Jewish name Saul (Acts 13:9), after the first king of Israel (“asked for”).
- b (1:1) Servant: Greek doulos, “slave.”
- c (1:1) Apostle: Greek apostolos, “one sent,” a messenger or envoy.
- d (1:1) Jesus: the Greek form of Hebrew Yeshua (Joshua), “Yahweh saves.” Christ: Greek Christos, “Anointed One,” equivalent to Hebrew mashiach, “Messiah.”
- e (1:2) Before time began: literally “before eternal times.”
- f (1:4) Titus: Latin, of uncertain meaning. Titus was a Greek convert who worked closely with Paul (Gal 2:1–3; 2 Cor 8:23).
- g (1:4) Grace and peace: later manuscripts read “grace, mercy and peace.”
- h (1:5) Crete: the large island south of Greece in the Mediterranean Sea.
- i (1:5) Elders: Greek presbyteroi, the leaders of a congregation; in verse 7 the same people are called “overseers.”
- j (1:6) The husband of one wife: literally “a man of one woman”; compare 1 Tim 3:2. The precise sense is debated.
- k (1:6) Who are believers: or “who are faithful,” that is, trustworthy.
- l (1:7) Overseer: Greek episkopos, “one who watches over,” traditionally “bishop.”
- m (1:10) Those of the circumcision party: literally “those of the circumcision,” probably Jewish believers who insisted that Gentile converts be circumcised and keep the law.
- n (1:12) Cretans are liars forever …: a line traditionally attributed to the Cretan poet and seer Epimenides (about 600 BC). The first words, “Cretans always lie,” also appear in a hymn of Callimachus (3rd century BC).

Chapter 2

1 But as for you, speak what fits healthy teaching. 2 Older men are to be sober-minded, dignified, sensible, sound in faith, in love and in endurance. 3 In the same way, the older women should behave as befits the holy, not spreading slander and not in bondage to drink. They should be teachers of what is right, 4 and so train the young women to love their husbands and their children, 5 to be sensible, chaste, good managers of their homes,[a] kind, and submissive to their own husbands, so that the word of God may not be maligned. 6

Urge the younger men, too, to be sensible. 7 In every respect show yourself a model of good works; in your teaching show integrity and seriousness, 8 and sound words beyond criticism, so that whoever stands against us may be put to shame for lack of anything evil to say of us.[b] 9 Slaves are to be submissive to their own masters in everything, to give satisfaction, not talking back, 10 not pilfering, but showing complete and genuine reliability, so that in every way they may adorn the teaching about God our Savior.
11 For the grace of God has appeared, bringing salvation to all people, 12 It schools us to say no to impiety and to the cravings of this world, and to live with self-control, justice and devotion in the age that now is, 13 as we wait for the blessed hope, the appearing of the glory of our great God and Savior, Christ Jesus.[c] 14 He gave himself for us to set us free from all lawlessness and to cleanse for himself a people who would be his own treasure, eager to do good works.[d] 15 Speak about these things; urge and correct with full authority. Let no one disregard you.

Notes

- a (2:5) Good managers of their homes: Greek oikourgous, “workers at home”; later manuscripts read oikourous, “keepers at home.”
- b (2:8) Us: later manuscripts read “you.”
- c (2:13) Our great God and Savior, Christ Jesus: or “the great God and our Savior Christ Jesus.” In Greek a single article governs both nouns (“the great God and Savior of us”), and by the rule known as Granville Sharp’s (after the English scholar who described it in 1798), two singular personal nouns joined by “and” under one article refer to the same person. On that reading Jesus is here called “God.” Others take the phrase to name two persons, God and Jesus, or render “the appearing of the glory of our great God and Savior, which is Christ Jesus.” Appearing: Greek epiphaneia, “appearance,” “manifestation.”
- d (2:14) To set us free … his own treasure: echoing Ps 130:8 and Ezek 37:23, and the phrase “a people for his own possession” in Exod 19:5 and Deut 7:6; 14:2 in the Greek Old Testament.

Chapter 3

1 Remind them to be subject to rulers and authorities, to be obedient, to be ready for every good work, 2 to slander no one, to avoid quarrels, to be gentle, and to show every courtesy to all people. 3

For we too were once foolish, disobedient and led astray, slaves to all sorts of passions and pleasures, spending our days in malice and envy, hateful and hating one another. 4 But when the kindness and the love for humankind[a] of God our Savior appeared, 5 he rescued us, not on the basis of any righteous acts we had performed, but because of his own compassion, by means of the bath of new birth and the renewing work of the Holy Spirit,[b] 6 whom he poured out on us richly through Jesus Christ our Savior, 7 so that, made righteous by his grace, we might become heirs with the hope of eternal life. 8
Here is a trustworthy saying.[c] On these matters I want you to speak with confidence, so that those who have put their trust in God may be intent on devoting themselves to good works.[d] These things are excellent and of benefit to everyone. 9 But avoid foolish controversies and genealogies, dissensions and quarrels about the law, for they are unprofitable and futile. 10 Give one warning, then a second, to anyone who stirs up division,[e] and after that have no more to do with him; 11 you may be sure that a man like that has turned aside and goes on sinning, condemned by his own verdict.
12 As soon as I send Artemas to you, or Tychicus,[f] make every effort to join me at Nicopolis,[g] since that is where I have resolved to pass the winter. 13 Do all you can to help Zenas the lawyer and Apollos on their way, and see that they lack nothing.[h] 14 Our people must also learn to commit themselves to doing good, so as to supply urgent needs and not be unproductive.
15 All who are with me send you greetings. Greet those who love us in the faith. Grace be with you all.[i]

Notes

- a (3:4) Love for humankind: Greek philanthrōpia, from which English "philanthropy" comes.
- b (3:5) Rebirth: Greek palingenesia, "new beginning," "regeneration." Washing of rebirth and renewal by the Holy Spirit: or "the washing of rebirth, and renewal by the Holy Spirit."
- c (3:8) Here is a trustworthy saying: literally "faithful is the word"; compare 1 Tim 1:15. It probably refers to verses 4–7.
- d (3:8) Devoting themselves to good works: or "taking the lead in honest occupations"; so also in verse 14.

- e (3:10) Stirs up division: Greek hairetikos, “factious,” from which English “heretic” comes.
- f (3:12) Artemas: Greek, short for Artemidoros, “gift of Artemis.” Tychicus: Greek, “fortunate”; compare 2 Tim 4:12.
- g (3:12) Nicopolis: Greek, “city of victory”; probably the city of that name in Epirus, on the western coast of Greece.
- h (3:13) Zenas: Greek, short for Zenodoros, “gift of Zeus.” Lawyer: either an expert in the Jewish law or a Roman jurist. Apollos: Greek, short for Apollonios, “belonging to Apollo”; compare Acts 18:24; 1 Cor 3:6.
- i (3:15) With you all: the “you” is plural. Later manuscripts add “Amen.”

Philemon

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 Paul,[a] a prisoner of Christ Jesus, and Timothy[b] our brother, to Philemon,[c] our dear friend and fellow worker, 2 and to Apphia[d] our sister, and to Archippus[e] our fellow soldier, and to the church that meets in your house. 3 Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.
4 I always give thanks to my God when I remember you in my prayers,
5 because I keep hearing about your love and the faithfulness you show toward the Lord Jesus and all God's holy people.[f] 6 My prayer is that the sharing that springs from your faith may prove active and powerful, through a full knowledge of all the good that is ours in Christ.[g] 7 For I have had much joy and encouragement from your love, because the hearts[h] of the holy people have been refreshed through you, brother.
8 For this reason, though in Christ I have every right to be bold and to order you to do what is fitting, 9 yet for love's sake I prefer to make a request. Being who I am, Paul, an old man,[i] and at present a prisoner of Christ Jesus as well, 10 appeal to you for my child, whom I fathered in my chains: Onesimus.[j] 11 Once he was useless to you, but now he is truly useful,[k] both to you and to me. 12 I am sending him back to you, and in sending him I am sending my very heart. 13 I wanted to keep him here with me, so that he might serve me on your behalf while I am in chains for the good news.[l] 14 But I chose to do nothing without your agreement, so that your goodness would not come from compulsion but from your own free will. 15 Maybe this is why he was away from you for a time,[m] so that you might receive him back for good, 16 no longer merely as a slave but as something better than a slave, a beloved brother. He is especially precious to me, and still more to you, both as a person[n] and in the Lord. 17 So if you count me as your partner, welcome him as you would welcome me. 18 And if he has done you any wrong, or is in debt to you at all, put it down to me.

19 I, Paul, am writing this with my own hand: I will repay it. I need not mention to you that you owe me your very self. 20 Yes, brother, let me have some benefit[o] from you in the Lord. Refresh my heart in Christ.
21 I am writing to you confident of your obedience, knowing that you will do even more than I say. 22 And one more thing: prepare a guest room for me, because I hope that through your prayers I will be given back to you.[p]
23 Epaphras,[q] my fellow prisoner in Christ Jesus, sends you greetings, 24 and so do Mark, Aristarchus, Demas, and Luke, my fellow workers.[r]
25 The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit.[s]

Notes

- a (1:1) Paul: Latin Paulus, "small." Paul also had the Jewish name Saul (Acts 13:9), after the first king of Israel ("asked for").
- b (1:1) Timothy: Greek Timotheos, "one who honors God." He was Paul's long-time coworker (Acts 16:1–3).
- c (1:1) Philemon: Greek, "affectionate" or "one who loves." He was evidently a believer of some means in Colossae (compare Col 4:9, 17), in whose house the church met.
- d (1:2) Apphia: a name known from inscriptions in Phrygia; its meaning is uncertain. She is often thought to be Philemon's wife, but the letter does not say so.
- e (1:2) Archippus: Greek, "master of horses" (compare Col 4:17).
- f (1:5) God's holy people: Greek hagioi, "holy ones," traditionally "saints," the believers as set apart for God; also in verse 7.
- g (1:6) The Greek of this verse is compressed and has been understood in several ways. Fellowship (koinōnia) may mean the sharing that comes from faith, or Philemon's generous sharing with others. Ours: literally "in us"; some manuscripts read "in you." In Christ: literally "into Christ," which may mean "for the sake of Christ," "bringing us closer to Christ," or "to the glory of Christ."
- h (1:7) Hearts: Greek splanchna, literally "inward parts," the seat of the affections; also in verses 12 and 20.
- i (1:9) An old man: Greek presbytēs. Some scholars suggest emending it to presbeutēs, "ambassador" (compare Eph 6:20), but no manuscript is known to read this, and the text is kept.
- j (1:10) Onesimus: Greek, "useful" or "profitable," a name common among slaves. Paul plays on its meaning in verse 11 and again in verse 20. Fathered: that is, Paul led him to faith while in prison.

- k (1:11) Useless ... useful: Greek achrēstos ... euchrēstos, a play on the name Onesimus. The words may also echo Christos, which was pronounced much like chrēstos, "useful" or "kind."
- l (1:13) Good news: Greek euangelion, traditionally "gospel."
- m (1:15) A short time: literally "for an hour," an idiom for a brief period, not a clock time.
- n (1:16) As a man: literally "in the flesh," that is, in ordinary human relationships, including his place in Philemon's household.
- o (1:20) Have some benefit: Greek onaimēn, from the same root as Onesimus, another play on the name.
- p (1:22) Your prayers ... to you: here "you" is plural, addressing the whole church, as also in verses 3 and 25.
- q (1:23) Epaphras: a shortened form of Epaphroditus, "charming" or "belonging to Aphrodite." He was from Colossae and founded the church there (Col 1:7; 4:12). He is probably a different person from the Epaphroditus of Philippians.
- r (1:24) Mark: Latin Marcus, probably "of Mars"; he is John Mark (Acts 12:12; Col 4:10). Aristarchus: Greek, "best ruler," from Thessalonica (Acts 19:29; 27:2). Demas: probably short for Demetrius, "belonging to Demeter" (compare 2 Tim 4:10). Luke: Greek Loukas, a Latin name probably meaning "from Lucania" (Col 4:14).
- s (1:25) Some later manuscripts add "Amen."

Hebrews

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 In many portions and in many ways God spoke long ago to our ancestors through the prophets,[a] 2 but in these final days he has addressed us through a Son, whom he designated heir of everything and through whom he also created the universe.[b] 3 He is the radiance of God's glory and the exact imprint of his very being, and he bears up all things by his mighty word. After he had made purification for sins, he took his seat at the right hand of the Majesty on high,[c] 4 So he has come to rank as far above the angels as the name he has received as his inheritance surpasses theirs.
5 To which of the angels, then, did God ever say,
"My Son you are;
this day I have fathered you"?[d]
Or again,
"I myself will be Father to him, and he for his part will be Son to me"?[e] 6 And when, again, he leads the firstborn into the inhabited world, he declares,
"All the angels of God must bow down before him."[f]
7 Of the angels he says,
"He makes his angels winds, and his ministers a flame of fire."[g]
8 But of the Son he says,
"Your throne, O God, is forever and ever,
and the scepter of uprightness is the scepter of his kingdom.[h] 9 You have loved justice and hated lawlessness;
therefore God, your God, has anointed you with the oil of gladness beyond your companions."

10 And,
"You, Lord, set the earth's foundations at the start,
and the skies are made by your hands.[i] 11 These will come to ruin, but you continue;
like clothing, every one of them will grow old.
12 You will fold them up like a robe,
and like clothing they will be replaced.
But you remain the same,
and your years will never run out."[j]
13 To which of the angels has he at any time said,
"Take your seat at my right hand
while I lay your foes beneath your feet as a footstool"?[k] 14 Are they not all spirits in holy service, sent out to serve for the sake of those who are going to inherit salvation?[l]

Notes

- a (1:1) Our ancestors: literally "the fathers."
- b (1:2) In these last days: literally "at the end of these days." The ages: or "the universe," "the worlds."
- c (1:3) Radiance: or "reflection." Exact imprint: Greek charaktēr, the mark stamped on a coin or seal. Purification for sins: later manuscripts read "purification for our sins by himself." Took his seat … at the right hand: echoing Ps 110:1.
- d (1:5) Ps 2:7. I have become your Father: literally "I have begotten you."
- e (1:5) 2 Sam 7:14; 1 Chr 17:13.
- f (1:6) Deut 32:43 in the Greek Old Testament (not in the standard Hebrew text, but compare a Hebrew copy among the Dead Sea Scrolls); compare Ps 97:7. Again, when he brings: or "when he again brings."
- g (1:7) Ps 104:4 in the Greek Old Testament. Winds: or "spirits"; the same Greek word means both.
- h (1:8) Ps 45:6–7. Your throne, O God, is: or "God is your throne." Forever and ever: Westcott and Hort bracket "and ever." His kingdom: so the Westcott–Hort text, following P46, Sinaiticus and Vaticanus as reported; most manuscripts read "your kingdom."
- i (1:10) Ps 102:25–27 in the Greek Old Testament. Lord: the Greek Old Testament adds this word; in the Hebrew psalm the one addressed is Yahweh (verses 12, 19).
- j (1:12) Like a garment: these words are not in the psalm; P46, Sinaiticus, Alexandrinus and Vaticanus as reported include them here, while later manuscripts omit them.
- k (1:13) Ps 110:1.
- l (1:14) Spirits in holy service: literally "ministering spirits."

Chapter 2

1 For this reason it is all the more necessary for us to hold on to the things we have heard, or we may be carried off course. 2 For if the message spoken through angels proved valid, and every violation and disobedience received its just penalty,[a] 3 how can we avoid punishment if we ignore such a great salvation? The Lord first announced it, and those who listened to him confirmed it for us, 4 while God corroborated it with signs, wonders, and a variety of miracles, and by distributing gifts of the Holy Spirit according to his will.
5 It was not to angels, after all, that he made subject the coming world we are speaking about.
6 Somewhere a witness declares,

"What is a human being, that you give him a thought,
or a mortal, that you look after him?[b]
7 For a brief time you ranked him beneath the angels;
you wreathed him with glory and honor;[c]
8 all things you have placed beneath his feet."

In subjecting all things to him, he has left nothing outside his rule.
Yet at present we do not see all things made subject to him.
9 What we do see is Jesus, made for a short time lower than the angels, and now, on account of the death he suffered, wearing a crown of glory and honor, so that by God's grace he might taste death on behalf of every one.[d]
10 It was right that God, the one for whose sake and by whose agency everything exists, should bring the founder of their salvation to completion through sufferings, as he leads many sons into glory.[e] 11 For the one who makes holy and those who are made holy all have one origin. That is why he is not ashamed to call them brothers,[f] 12 when he says,

"I will make your name known to my brothers;
among the gathered congregation I will sing hymns to you."[g] 13 And again,
"I will put my trust in him."[h]

And again,

"Here I am, and the children God has given me."[i]

14 Because the children share flesh and blood, he likewise shared in these, so that by dying he might destroy the one who has the power of death, namely the devil,[j] 15 and set free all those who through fear of death were held in slavery all their lives. 16 For surely it is not angels he takes hold of to help, but he takes hold of the descendants of Abraham.[k] 17 So it was necessary for him to become like his brothers in all things, in order to be a high priest merciful and faithful in what concerns God, making atonement for the people's sins.[l] 18 Because he himself suffered when he was tested, he is able to help those who are being tested.[m]

Notes

- a (2:2) The message spoken through angels: Jewish tradition held that angels took part in the giving of the law at Sinai; compare Deut 33:2 in the Greek Old Testament; Acts 7:53; Gal 3:19.
- b (2:6) Ps 8:4–6 in the Greek Old Testament. Man … son of man: a human being, humankind. In verses 8–9 the writer applies the psalm to Jesus.
- c (2:7) For a little while: or "a little." The Hebrew of Ps 8:5 reads "a little lower than God" (or "than divine beings"). Honor: later manuscripts add "and set him over the works of your hands"; Westcott and Hort bracket these words.
- d (2:9) Jesus: the Greek form of Hebrew Yeshua (Joshua), "Yahweh saves." By the grace of God: so nearly all manuscripts. A few manuscripts, and some writers known to Origen in the 3rd century, read chōris theou, "apart from God," instead of chariti theou, "by the grace of God." The rarer reading is defended by some scholars as the harder one; most editors follow the reading in the text.
- e (2:10) Sons: including daughters; the Greek uses the masculine plural for a mixed group. Founder: Greek archēgos, "leader," "pioneer," "trailblazer." Bring … to completion: or "make perfect."
- f (2:11) One origin: literally "are all from one," that is, from one Father, or from one family. Brothers: Greek adelphoi, which includes sisters when used of a group; so throughout.
- g (2:12) Ps 22:22. Assembly: Greek ekklēsia, the word usually rendered "church."
- h (2:13) Isa 8:17 in the Greek Old Testament; compare 2 Sam 22:3.
- i (2:13) Isa 8:18.
- j (2:14) The devil: Greek diabolos, "slanderer."
- k (2:16) Takes hold of: or "gives help to." Descendants: literally "seed." Abraham: Hebrew, explained in Gen 17:5 as "father of a multitude."
- l (2:17) Making atonement for: or "making propitiation for," "wipe away."

• m (2:18) Tested: or “tempted”; the same Greek word covers both.

Chapter 3

1 So then, holy brothers, who share in a heavenly calling, fix your thoughts on Jesus, the apostle and high priest of the faith we confess.[a] 2 He has been faithful to the one who appointed him, as Moses too was faithful in all his house.[b] 3 But Jesus has been counted worthy of greater glory than Moses, in the way that the one who builds a house is held in higher honor than the house. 4 Every house has its builder, and the one who built all things is God. 5 Moses indeed was faithful in all God’s house, as an attendant, bearing witness to the things that were going to be spoken,[c] 6 but Christ is faithful as a Son set over God’s house; and that house is ourselves, provided we keep firm hold of our boldness and of the hope that is our boast.[d]
7 Therefore, as the Holy Spirit says, “Today, if you hear his voice,
8 do not make your hearts hard as they did at the Provocation,
at the time of the Testing in the desert,[e] 9 where your ancestors put me to the test by trying me, though they saw my works for forty years.
10 That is why I was angry with that generation,
and I said, ‘Their hearts always go astray;
they have not known my ways.’
11 So in my wrath I swore an oath:
‘Into my rest they shall not come.’ ”[f]
12 Take care, brothers, that none of you has an evil, unbelieving heart that turns away from the living God.
13 Rather, keep urging one another on, day by day, for as long as there is a “today,” so that sin’s deceit may harden none of you.
14 For we have come to share in Christ, provided that we keep the confidence we had at the start unshaken to the last.[g]
15 In the words of Scripture,
“Today, if you should hear his voice,
do not make your hearts hard as they did at the Provocation.”

16 Who were they who heard and yet rebelled? Was it not all those who came out of Egypt led by Moses?
17 And with whom was God angry for forty years? Was it not with those who sinned, whose bodies fell in the wilderness?[h]
18 To whom did he swear that they would never come into his rest? Was it not to those who refused to obey?
19 And we see that unbelief kept them from coming in.

Notes

- a (3:1) Apostle: Greek apostolos, "one sent." Jesus: later manuscripts read "Christ Jesus." Christ: Greek Christos, "Anointed One," equivalent to Hebrew mashiach, "Messiah."
- b (3:2) Moses: Hebrew Mosheh, explained in Exod 2:10 as "drawn out"; it may come from an Egyptian word for "son." In all God's house: Num 12:7 in the Greek Old Testament; literally "in all his house." Westcott and Hort bracket "all"; P13, P46 and Vaticanus as reported omit it.
- c (3:5) Attendant: Greek therapōn, an attendant, from Num 12:7.
- d (3:6) Hope that is our boast: later manuscripts add "firm to the end"; Westcott and Hort bracket these words, which P13, P46 and Vaticanus as reported omit (compare verse 14).
- e (3:8) Ps 95:7–11 in the Greek Old Testament. The rebellion … testing: in Hebrew these are the place names Meribah, "quarreling," and Massah, "testing" (Exod 17:7; Num 20:13).
- f (3:11) They shall not come: literally "if they shall enter," a Hebrew form of oath meaning "they shall not enter."
- g (3:14) Come to share in Christ: or "become partners of Christ." Confidence: Greek hypostasis, "assurance," "resolve"; compare 1:3; 11:1.
- h (3:17) Whose bodies fell: compare Num 14:29, 32.

Chapter 4

1 Since, then, the promise of entering his rest still stands, let us be wary that none of you should seem to have fallen short of it.
2 For good news has been brought to us as well as to them. Yet the word they heard was of no benefit to them, because they were not joined in faith with those who truly listened.[a]
3 For we who trust do enter that rest, as he said,

"So I vowed in my anger,
'They will never come into my rest,' "
even though his work was done from the creation of the world.[b]

4 For in one place he speaks of the seventh day like this: “God rested from all his works on the seventh day.”[c]
5 And again in this passage he says, “They shall never enter my rest.”
6 It still remains, then, that some are to come into it, and since those to whom the good news came first did not come in, because they would not obey,
7 God fixes another day, a “today,” speaking through David a long time later in the words already cited,

“Today, if you should hear his voice,
do not make your hearts hard.”[d]

8 Had Joshua given them rest, God would not afterward have spoken of a further day.[e]
9 So then, a sabbath rest remains for the people of God;[f]
10 for anyone who has come into God’s rest has ceased from his labors, just as God ceased from his own.
11 So let us be earnest to come into that rest, so that none of us falls through the same kind of disobedience they showed.
12 For God’s word is alive and powerful, cutting more sharply than any double-edged sword, slicing through to the place where soul and spirit, joints and marrow meet, and able to assess the heart’s thoughts and motives. 13 No creature is hidden from his sight, but all things are bare and laid open to the eyes of the one to whom we must give account.[g]
14 Since, then, we have a great high priest who has passed through the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast the faith we confess. 15 Ours is not a high priest who cannot feel for us in our frailties; he has been put to the test in all things just as we are, yet without sinning.
16 Let us then approach the throne of grace boldly, to receive mercy and discover grace that helps when we need it.

Notes

- a (4:2) Because they were not united in faith with those who listened: so the Westcott–Hort text, with most early manuscripts as reported. Some manuscripts read “because it was not combined with faith in those who heard it.”
- b (4:3) Ps 95:11.
- c (4:4) Gen 2:2.

- d (4:7) David: Hebrew, probably “beloved.” The Greek Old Testament gives Psalm 95 a heading naming David.
- e (4:8) Joshua: Hebrew Yehoshua, “Yahweh saves”; the Greek name is Iēsous, the same as “Jesus.”
- f (4:9) Sabbath rest: Greek sabbatismos, “sabbath-keeping”; sabbath is Hebrew for “ceasing,” “rest.”
- g (4:13) Laid open: literally “with the neck bent back,” exposed. To whom we must give account: or “with whom we have to do.”

Chapter 5

1 Every high priest is chosen from among men and appointed to act on their behalf in matters relating to God, to offer gifts and sacrifices for sins. 2 He is able to deal gently with the ignorant and the wayward, since he himself is beset by weakness. 3 and for that reason he has to bring an offering for sins on his own account as well as on behalf of the people. 4 And no one takes this honor on himself; he must be called by God, just as Aaron was.[a] 5 So also Christ did not glorify himself by becoming a high priest; it was given him by the one who said to him,

“You are my Son;
today I have become your Father.”[b]

6 As he also says in another place,

“You are a priest forever,
in the order of Melchizedek.”[c]

7 During his life in the flesh he offered prayers and earnest requests, with a loud outcry and with tears, to the one who had power to rescue him from death, and he was heard because of his devotion.[d] 8 Son though he was, he learned obedience from the things he suffered.[e]
9 And once made complete, he became for all who obey him the cause of salvation that lasts forever,
10 since God designated him a high priest in the order of Melchizedek.
11 On this subject we have a great deal to say, and it is difficult to make clear, because you have grown dull of hearing. 12 By now you should be teaching others, yet you need someone to teach you once more the basic rudiments of the sayings of God. You have come to need milk rather than solid food.[f] 13 For everyone who lives on milk is unacquainted with the message of righteousness, being still an infant.

14 But solid food belongs to the mature, to those whose faculties have been trained by practice to tell good from evil.

Notes

- a (5:4) Aaron: Hebrew, of uncertain meaning; Moses' brother and the first high priest (Exod 28:1).
- b (5:5) Ps 2:7.
- c (5:6) Ps 110:4. Melchizedek: Hebrew, "my king is righteousness" or "king of righteousness" (7:2); the king and priest of Salem who blessed Abraham (Gen 14:18–20). In the order of: or "after the manner of."
- d (5:7) Because of his devotion: or "because of his reverent fear"; others render "and was delivered from his fear."
- e (5:8) He learned … he suffered: Greek emathen … epathen, a play on words.
- f (5:12) Basic rudiments: or "first principles," literally "the elements of the beginning."

Chapter 6

1 So let us leave behind the elementary teaching about Christ and press on to maturity, not laying again a foundation of repentance from dead works and of faith in God,[a] 2 teaching about washings and the laying on of hands, about the raising of the dead and the judgment that lasts forever.[b] 3 And this we will do, if God permits. 4 There is no way, when people have once received the light, have tasted the gift from heaven, have come to share in the Holy Spirit, 5 who have experienced how good God's word is, and the powers of the coming age, 6 and then have fallen away, to bring them back to repentance again; for they are crucifying the Son of God afresh to their own ruin, and making a public mockery of him.[c] 7 Ground that soaks up the rain falling on it time after time, and brings forth plants of use to those for whom it is worked, has a share in God's blessing. 8 But land that yields thorns and thistles is worthless and close to a curse, and in the end it is burned.[d]

9 Even though we speak this way, dear friends, we are confident of better things in your case, things that go with salvation. 10 For God is not unjust; he will not forget your work and the love you showed for his name in serving the saints, as you still serve them.[e] 11 And we long for each one of you to show the same eagerness for the full assurance of hope until the end, 12 so that you may not become sluggish, but imitate those who through faith and patience inherit the promises.

13 When God gave his promise to Abraham, he swore by himself, because there was no one greater for him to swear by, 14 saying,
"Surely I will bless you and multiply you."[f] 15 And so Abraham, having waited with patience, received what was promised. 16 People swear by someone greater than themselves, and for them an oath serves as confirmation and puts an end to every dispute. 17 In the same way, God, wanting to show the heirs of the promise even more plainly that his purpose could not change, guaranteed it with an oath, 18 so that through two things that cannot change, in which God cannot possibly lie, we who have taken refuge might be strongly encouraged to lay hold of the hope that lies before us. 19 This hope we hold as the soul's anchor, firm and secure, and it goes in to the inner place beyond the curtain,[g] 20 where Jesus has entered for us as a forerunner, having become a high priest forever in the order of Melchizedek.

Notes

- a (6:1) The elementary teaching about Christ: literally "the word of the beginning of the Christ." Maturity: or "perfection," "completion."
- b (6:2) Teaching about washings: so the Westcott–Hort text, following Vaticanus as reported ("a foundation … teaching"); most manuscripts read "of teaching about washings." Washings: Greek baptismoi, "baptisms," "ritual washings."
- c (6:6) For they are crucifying: or "while they are crucifying." Afresh: or "for themselves"; the Greek anastaurountas can mean either.
- d (6:8) Thorns and thistles: compare Gen 3:17–18.
- e (6:10) Saints: literally "holy ones," that is, God's people.
- f (6:14) Gen 22:17. Surely I will bless you and multiply you: literally "blessing I will bless you and multiplying I will multiply you."
- g (6:19) The inner place beyond the curtain: the inmost room of the sanctuary, the Most Holy Place (Lev 16:2, 12).

Chapter 7

1 For this Melchizedek, king of Salem and priest of God Most High, went out to meet Abraham when he came back from the slaughter of the kings, and he blessed him;[a] 2 and Abraham gave him a tenth of everything. His name means first "king of righteousness," and then he is also king of Salem, that is, "king of peace." [3] He is without father, without mother, without genealogy, having neither beginning of days nor end of life; but, made like the Son of God, he remains a priest for all time.[b]

[4] Notice how great this man was, to whom the patriarch Abraham gave one tenth of the plunder. [5] The descendants of Levi who receive the priesthood are ordered by the law to collect a tenth from the people, from their own relatives, although they too are Abraham's descendants.[c] [6] But this man, whose ancestry is not traced from them, took tithes from Abraham and gave a blessing to the man who held the promises. [7] Beyond any dispute, the lesser is blessed by the greater.
[8] In the first case, tenths are collected by mortals; in the second, by someone who is declared to be alive. [9] One might even say that Levi, who receives tithes, paid tithes through Abraham, [10] for he was still in the body of his ancestor when Melchizedek met him.[d] [11] If, then, the Levitical priesthood could have brought about perfection, for it was in connection with it that the people were given the law, why was there still need for a different priest to arise in the line of Melchizedek, and not one designated in the line of Aaron?
[12] For when the priesthood is changed, a change of law necessarily follows as well.
[13] The one these things are spoken of belonged to another tribe, from which no one has ever served at the altar.
[14] For it is evident that our Lord arose from Judah, and Moses said nothing about priests in connection with that tribe.[e] [15] And this becomes still more evident when another priest arises who resembles Melchizedek, [16] one who has become priest, not by virtue of a rule about bodily descent, but by virtue of the power of a life that cannot be destroyed.[f] [17] For the testimony is,

"A priest you are forever,
in the line of Melchizedek."

[18] On the one side, a previous commandment is canceled because it was feeble and ineffective,

19 for the law brought nothing to completion. In its place a better hope is brought in, and by it we come near to God.
20 And it did not happen without an oath. Others became priests without an oath,
21 but this one became priest on oath, when God declared to him,
"The Lord has taken an oath
and will not go back on it:
'A priest you are forever.' "[g] 22 To that same degree Jesus has become the guarantee of a better covenant.
23 Furthermore, the former priests were many in number, because death prevented them from continuing in office; 24 He, however, because he lives on forever, holds a priesthood that does not pass to another.
25 That is why he can save for all time those who come to God by him;
he is always alive to plead on their behalf.[h]
26 It was fitting that we should have such a high priest: holy, innocent, undefiled, separated from sinners, and exalted above the heavens. 27
He has no need, as those high priests do, to offer sacrifices day after day, first for his own sins and then for those of the people; for he did this once for all when he offered up himself. 28 For the law appoints as high priests men who are subject to weakness, but the word of the oath, which came after the law, appoints a Son who has been made perfect forever.

Notes

- a (7:1) Salem: Hebrew, "peace"; usually identified with Jerusalem (Ps 76:2). God Most High: Hebrew El Elyon. See Gen 14:17–20.
- b (7:3) Without father … genealogy: Genesis records no parents, ancestry, birth or death for him.
- c (7:5) Levi: Hebrew, explained in Gen 29:34 as "attached." Descended from: literally "have come out of the loins of."
- d (7:10) In the body of his ancestor: literally "in the loins of his father."
- e (7:14) Judah: Hebrew, explained in Gen 29:35 as "praise." Arose: the Greek verb is used of the rising of a star or the springing up of a plant; compare Isa 11:1; Jer 23:5.
- f (7:16) A rule about bodily descent: literally "a law of a fleshly commandment."

- g (7:21) Ps 110:4. The Lord: the Hebrew text has Yahweh. Forever: later manuscripts add “in the order of Melchizedek.”
- h (7:25) For all time: or “completely.”

Chapter 8

1 The chief point of what we are saying is this: we have a high priest of this kind, who sat down at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in heaven, 2 a minister in the sanctuary and in the true tent, which the Lord set up, not any human being.[a] 3 For every high priest is appointed to offer gifts and sacrifices, so it is necessary for this one too to have something to offer. 4 Now if he were on earth, he would not be a priest at all, since there are already priests who offer the gifts according to the law. 5 They minister in a sketch and shadow of what is in heaven, just as Moses was cautioned when he was about to build the tent: “Be sure to make everything after the model you were shown on the mountain.”[b] 6 As it is, however, the ministry Christ has received is far more excellent, to the same degree that the covenant of which he is mediator is better, resting as it does on better promises.
7 If that first covenant had been flawless, a second would never have been sought.

8 For he faults them when he says, “Behold, days are coming, declares the Lord,
when I will make a new covenant
with Israel’s house and Judah’s house.[c] 9 It will not be like the covenant that I made with their ancestors on the day when I took them by the hand
to lead them out of the land of Egypt;
because they did not continue in my covenant,
I too disregarded them, says the Lord.[d]
10 For this is the covenant I will make with the house of Israel
when those days are over, says the Lord:
I will place my laws in their understanding,
and inscribe them upon their hearts;
I will be God to them,
and they will be a people to me.

11 No longer will each one teach his fellow townsman, or each one his brother, saying, 'Know the Lord.'
For all of them will know me,
from the smallest to the greatest.[e]
12 For I will be merciful toward their wrongdoings, and I will remember their sins no more."[f]
13 When he says "new," he has made the first covenant old; and what is growing old and aging will soon disappear.

Notes

- a (8:2) The sanctuary: literally "the holy things" or "the holy places." Tent: or "tabernacle," the portable sanctuary of Israel in the wilderness; compare Num 24:6 in the Greek Old Testament.
- b (8:5) Exod 25:40.
- c (8:8) Jer 31:31–34 (38:31–34 in the Greek Old Testament). The Lord: the Hebrew text has Yahweh; so also in verses 9–10. Israel: Hebrew, explained in Gen 32:28 as "he struggles with God."
- d (8:9) I too disregarded them: so the Greek Old Testament; the Hebrew reads "though I was a husband to them."
- e (8:11) Know the Lord: the Hebrew text has Yahweh.
- f (8:12) Their sins: later manuscripts add "and their lawless deeds," as in 10:17.

Chapter 9

1 The first covenant, for its part, had rules for worship and a sanctuary belonging to this world.[a] 2 A tent was set up, the outer section, which held the lampstand, the table, and the loaves set out before God; this is called the Holy Place.[b] 3 Behind the second curtain was the room called the Most Holy Place,[c] 4 It contained the golden incense altar and the covenant chest, plated all over with gold. Inside the chest were the golden jar of manna, Aaron's rod that had budded, and the stone tablets of the covenant.[d] 5 and over it the cherubim of the Glory cast their shadow over the mercy seat. We cannot speak about these things one by one at present.[e]

6 With these things arranged in this way, the priests go regularly into the first room in performing their duties, 7 Into the second room, however, the high priest alone goes, only once a year, and always with blood, which he brings as an offering for himself and for the sins of the people done in ignorance.[f] 8 The Holy Spirit is making it plain

by this that the way into the sanctuary has not yet been opened as long as the first tent still has its standing. 9 This is a figure pointing to the present time. Under it gifts and sacrifices are brought that have no power to make the worshiper perfect in conscience,[g] 10 dealing only with foods and drinks and different kinds of washing. These are outward rules for the body, in force until the time comes to set things straight.
11 But when Christ appeared as a high priest of the good things that have now come, then through the greater and more perfect tent, not made with hands, that is, not of this creation,[h] 12 he entered the sanctuary once and for all, not with the blood of goats and calves but with his own blood, and secured an everlasting redemption. 13 For if the blood of goats and bulls and the sprinkled ashes of a heifer sanctify those who are defiled, so that their flesh is made clean,[i] 14 how much more will the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit presented himself to God without fault, cleanse our consciences of dead works so that we may serve the living God![j] 15 For this reason he mediates a new covenant, so that the called may receive the promised everlasting inheritance, now that a death has occurred to redeem them from the offenses committed under the first covenant. 16 In the case of a will, it is necessary to establish that the one who made it has died.[k] 17 A will is valid only once someone has died; it has no force as long as the one who made it is still living. 18
That is why not even the first covenant was put into effect without blood. 19 For when every command of the law had been spoken by Moses to all the people, he took the blood of calves and goats, with water and scarlet wool and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book itself and all the people,[l] 20 saying, "This is the blood of the covenant that God has commanded for you."[m] 21 Likewise he sprinkled blood on the tent and on every vessel used in the ministry. 22 In fact, under the law nearly everything is made clean with blood, and apart from the pouring out of blood there is no forgiveness.
23 It was necessary, then, for the copies of the things in heaven to be cleansed by such means, but the heavenly things themselves needed better sacrifices than these. 24 For Christ did not enter a sanctuary built by human hands, a mere image of the true one, but heaven itself, now to stand before God for our sake. 25 Nor was it to offer himself many times over, as the high priest goes into the holy place each year with blood that is not his own; 26 if that were so, he would have needed to suffer many times since the world was founded. Instead he has been revealed once, at the end of the ages, to do away with sin by sacrificing himself. 27 And just as it is appointed for human beings to die once, and after that comes judgment, 28 so also Christ, having been offered once to bear the sins of many, will appear a second time, not to deal with sin, but to bring salvation to those who are eagerly waiting for him.[n]

Notes

- a (9:1) For its part: Westcott and Hort bracket the word “also” (or “even”) here. A sanctuary belonging to this world: or “an earthly sanctuary.”
- b (9:2) The bread of the presence: literally “the setting out of the loaves” (Exod 25:30; Lev 24:5–9).
- c (9:3) The Most Holy Place: literally “the holy of holies.”
- d (9:4) Altar of incense: or “censer”; the Greek thymiatērion can mean either. In Exodus the incense altar stood in front of the curtain (Exod 30:6). Manna: Hebrew, explained in Exod 16:15, 31 from the question “What is it?” See Exod 16:33; Num 17:8–10; Deut 10:1–5.
- e (9:5) Cherubim: Hebrew plural of cherub, winged heavenly beings. Mercy seat: Greek hilastērion, the gold lid of the ark, “place of atonement” (Exod 25:17–22).
- f (9:7) Once a year: on the Day of Atonement (Lev 16), in the seventh month (September–October), on its tenth day.
- g (9:9) Figure: Greek parabolē, “parable,” “figure.”
- h (9:11) That have now come: so the Westcott–Hort text, with P46 and Vaticanus as reported; many manuscripts read “that are to come.”
- i (9:13) Ashes of a heifer: see Num 19:1–10, 17–19.
- j (9:14) Our conscience: so the Westcott–Hort text; many manuscripts read “your conscience.” The eternal Spirit: or “an eternal spirit.”
- k (9:16) Will: the Greek diathēkē means both “covenant” and “will” (“testament”), and the writer plays on both senses in verses 15–18.
- l (9:19) Hyssop: a small aromatic plant used for sprinkling. Compare Exod 24:3–8. Calves and goats: some manuscripts read only “calves.”
- m (9:20) Exod 24:8.
- n (9:28) To bear the sins of many: echoing Isa 53:12.

Chapter 10

1 The law holds only a shadow of the good things that were to come, not the very form of those realities. So by the same sacrifices, offered without end year by year, it can never make perfect those who come forward to worship.[a] 2 If they could, would the offering of them not have come to an end, since those who worship, once made clean, would have no further awareness of sins? 3 Instead, these sacrifices bring sins to mind again every year, 4 since the blood of bulls and goats cannot possibly take sins away.
5 That is why, as he comes into the world, Christ says,
"Sacrifice and offering you did not want,
but a body you have made ready for me;[b] 6 in offerings burned whole and in offerings for sin
you found no pleasure.
7 Then I said, 'See, I have come;
in the scroll of the book it is written about me,
to do your will, God.' "
8 First he says, "Sacrifices and offerings, whole burnt offerings and sin offerings you did not want and took no pleasure in," though these are offered according to the law.
9 Then he adds, "Here I am; I have come to do your will." He sets aside the first in order to establish the second.
10 By that will we have been made holy, through the sacrifice of Jesus Christ's body, offered one time for all.
11 Every priest, moreover, stands daily performing his ministry, presenting over and over the identical sacrifices, which are never able to remove sins.[c]
12 But this one, having offered for all time a single sacrifice for sins, sat down at God's right hand,[d] 13 and from then on he waits until his enemies are made a footstool for his feet.[e]
14 For by a single offering he has made perfect for all time those who are being made holy.
15 And the Holy Spirit testifies to us as well. For after he has said,

16 “This is the covenant I will make with them
when those days are over, says the Lord:
I will place my laws on their hearts,
and inscribe them upon their minds,”[f] 17 he goes on,
“Their sins and their lawless acts
I will call to mind no more.”
18 Where these have been forgiven, there is no longer any offering for sin.
19 So then, brothers, since by Jesus’ blood we have boldness to go into the holy place, 20 by a way newly made and living, which he has opened up for us through the curtain, which is his flesh, 21 and since we have a great priest over the house of God, 22 let us come near with a true heart, in the full assurance that faith gives, our hearts sprinkled clean from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water.
23 Let us keep hold of the hope we confess without wavering, for the one who gave the promise can be trusted. 24 And let us take thought for one another, how to stir each other up to love and good works, 25 not giving up meeting together, as is the custom of some, but urging each other on, and doing so the more as you see the Day drawing near.[g]
26 If we keep on sinning willfully once we have come to know the truth, no sacrifice for sins remains any longer, 27 but only a terrifying expectation of judgment, and a raging fire that will consume the adversaries.[h] 28 Whoever rejected the law of Moses was put to death without pity, when two or three witnesses gave evidence.[i] 29 Imagine how much worse a punishment is deserved by someone who has trampled on the Son of God, treated as common the covenant blood that made him holy, and insulted the Spirit of grace.[j] 30 We know who it is that said, “Retribution belongs to me; I will pay back,” and again, “The Lord will judge his people.”[k] 31 It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.
32 Remember the earlier days, when after being enlightened you endured a great struggle of suffering.
33 At times you were publicly exposed to insults and afflictions; at other times you stood alongside those who were treated in that way.

34 For you shared the sufferings of the prisoners, and you accepted with joy the seizure of your possessions, knowing that you yourselves had a better possession, and a lasting one.[l]
35 So do not throw away your confidence, which carries a great reward.
36 For you need to persevere, so that, having done what God wills, you may receive the promise.
37 For,

"In just a little while,
the one who is coming will come and will not delay;[m] 38 but my righteous one will live by faith,
and if he shrinks back,
my soul takes no delight in him."[n]

39 We, however, are not people who draw back to their ruin, but people of faith who hold on to their souls.[o]

Notes

- a (10:1) The very form: literally "the image itself."
- b (10:5) Ps 40:6–8 in the Greek Old Testament. A body you have made ready for me: so the Greek Old Testament; the Hebrew reads "ears you have dug for me," that is, "you have opened my ears."
- c (10:11) Every priest: some manuscripts read "every high priest."
- d (10:12) For all time: or, taken with what follows, "sat down for all time."
- e (10:13) Ps 110:1.
- f (10:16) Jer 31:33–34. The Lord: the Hebrew text has Yahweh.
- g (10:25) The Day: the day of the Lord's coming and judgment.
- h (10:27) Raging fire: literally "zeal of fire"; compare Isa 26:11.
- i (10:28) Compare Deut 17:6.
- j (10:29) Counted as unclean: or "treated as common." Compare Exod 24:8.
- k (10:30) Deut 32:35–36. The Lord: the Hebrew text has Yahweh. I will repay: later manuscripts add "says the Lord."
- l (10:34) The prisoners: so the Westcott–Hort text, with Alexandrinus as reported; later manuscripts read "my chains." You yourselves had: later manuscripts add "in heaven."
- m (10:37) In just a little while: literally "a little, how very little," from Isa 26:20. The rest of verses 37–38 is from Hab 2:3–4 in the Greek Old Testament.
- n (10:38) My righteous one: Westcott and Hort bracket "my"; some manuscripts place it after "faith" ("will live by my faith"), and later manuscripts omit it.
- o (10:39) Hold on to their souls: or "gain their lives."

Chapter 11

1 Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the proof of things not seen.[a] 2 For it was for this that the elders of long ago were commended.[b] 3 By faith we grasp that the universe was formed by God's word, so that the visible was not made from what is seen.[c]
4 By faith Abel presented to God a better sacrifice than Cain did.
Through it he was declared righteous, with God commending his offerings; and through faith he still speaks, though he died.[d] 5 By faith Enoch was transferred so that he would not experience death, and "he could not be found, because God had transferred him." For before the transfer he was commended as having pleased God.[e] 6 And without faith it is impossible to please him, for whoever draws near to God must believe that he exists and that he rewards those who seek him.
7 By faith Noah, when he had been divinely warned about things as yet unseen, reverently prepared an ark for the rescue of his family.
Through his faith he passed sentence on the world, and he became heir to the righteousness that accords with faith.[f]
8 By faith Abraham obeyed when he was called to go out to a place he was going to receive as an inheritance, and he went out without knowing where he was going. 9 By faith he lived as a foreigner in the land of promise, as in a land not his own, living in tents with Isaac and Jacob, fellow heirs of the same promise.[g] 10 He was awaiting the city with firm foundations, whose architect and maker is God. 11 By faith Sarah herself, too, received power to conceive offspring, even beyond the age for it, since she judged the one who had promised to be faithful.[h] 12 And so from one man, and he as good as dead, there came descendants as many as the stars of heaven and as countless as the grains of sand on the seashore.[i] 13 These all died in faith without having received the promises, but they saw them and greeted them from afar, and they confessed that they were strangers and exiles on the earth.[j] 14 Those who talk like this show plainly that they are searching for a homeland. 15 If they had been thinking of the land they had left behind, they would have had opportunity to return. 16 But as it is, they long for a better country, a heavenly one. That is why God is not ashamed to be called their God, for he has prepared a city for them.

17 By faith Abraham, when tested, offered Isaac as a sacrifice. The man who had welcomed the promises was offering up his one and only son,[k] 18 the one of whom it had been said, "Through Isaac your descendants will be named."[l] 19 He reckoned that God was able even to raise people from the dead; and figuratively speaking, he did receive Isaac back from the dead.[m] 20 By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau with regard to things still to come.[n] 21 By faith Jacob, as he lay dying, blessed each of Joseph's sons, and leaning on the top of his staff he worshiped.[o] 22 By faith Joseph, as his end drew near, spoke of the exodus of the Israelites and gave instructions about his bones.[p] 23 By faith, when Moses was born, his parents kept him hidden three months, for they saw what a fine child he was, and they did not fear the decree of the king.[q] 24 By faith Moses, when he had grown up, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter,[r] 25 choosing rather to share ill-treatment with the people of God than to enjoy the passing pleasures of sin. 26 He considered the reproach of the Christ greater wealth than the treasures of Egypt, for he was looking ahead to the reward.[s] 27 By faith he left Egypt, not fearing the king's anger, for he persevered as one who sees him who is invisible. 28 By faith he kept the Passover and the sprinkling of the blood, so that the destroyer of the firstborn would not touch them.[t] 29 By faith they passed through the Red Sea as though on dry land, but when the Egyptians tried to do the same, they drowned.[u] 30 By faith Jericho's walls collapsed after the people had marched around them for seven days.[v] 31 By faith Rahab the prostitute did not die with the disobedient, because she had given the spies a peaceful welcome.[w]
32 And what more shall I say? For time would fail me to tell of Gideon, Barak, Samson and Jephthah, of David and Samuel and the prophets,[x] 33 Through faith they overcame kingdoms, carried out justice, gained what was promised, closed the jaws of lions, 34 put out raging fire, got away from the sword's edge, found strength in weakness, grew powerful in battle, routed the armies of foreigners. 35 Women had their dead given back to them, raised to life. Others were tortured to death, turning down release so as to gain a better resurrection.[y] [36] Others again had to face jeers and whips, as well as chains and prison. [37] Some were stoned; some were tested; some were sawn apart; some died by the sword. They roamed about clothed in the skins of sheep and goats, in need, in distress, ill-treated,[z] [38] the world did not deserve them; they roamed through deserts, mountains, caves, and holes in the ground.

[39] Yet none of these, though they won approval through their faith, received the promise, [40] because God had in view something better for us, that they should not be brought to perfection without us.

Notes

- a (11:1) Assurance: Greek hypostasis, "substance," "firm ground," "title deed"; compare 1:3; 3:14. Proof: or "conviction."
- b (11:2) Commended: literally "testified to," that is, by God; so also in verses 4–5, 39.
- c (11:3) The ages: or "the universe"; compare 1:2.
- d (11:4) Abel: Hebrew Hevel, "breath," "vapor." Cain: Hebrew Qayin, explained in Gen 4:1 by the word for "acquired." See Gen 4:3–10.
- e (11:5) Enoch: Hebrew Hanokh, perhaps "dedicated." Gen 5:24 in the Greek Old Testament.
- f (11:7) Noah: Hebrew Noach, related in Gen 5:29 to a word for "comfort" or "rest." Took heed: or "in reverent fear."
- g (11:9) Isaac: Hebrew Yitschaq, "he laughs" (Gen 17:17–19; 21:6). Jacob: Hebrew Yaʿaqov, explained in Gen 25:26; 27:36 as "heel-grabber," "supplanter."
- h (11:11) Sarah: Hebrew, "princess" (Gen 17:15). Sarah herself … received power to conceive: or, as many interpreters read the Greek, "by faith he (Abraham), together with Sarah herself, received power to beget offspring." Some manuscripts add that Sarah was barren; later manuscripts add "gave birth."
- i (11:12) Compare Gen 22:17; 32:12.
- j (11:13) Strangers and exiles: compare Gen 23:4; 1 Chr 29:15; Ps 39:12.
- k (11:17) Only son: Greek monogenēs, "one and only." See Gen 22:1–14.
- l (11:18) Gen 21:12. Descendants: literally "seed."
- m (11:19) Figuratively speaking: literally "in a parable."
- n (11:20) Esau: Hebrew, perhaps "hairy" (Gen 25:25). See Gen 27:27–40.
- o (11:21) Joseph: Hebrew Yosef, explained in Gen 30:23–24 as "may he add." Leaning on the top of his staff: Gen 47:31 in the Greek Old Testament; the Hebrew vowels as traditionally read give "at the head of his bed." See also Gen 48:8–20.
- p (11:22) See Gen 50:24–25; Exod 13:19. The Israelites: literally "the sons of Israel."

- q (11:23) What a fine child: literally "that the child was beautiful" or "well pleasing"; compare Exod 2:2; Acts 7:20. Edict: compare Exod 1:22. Some later manuscripts add here a sentence about Moses killing the Egyptian.
- r (11:24) Pharaoh: Egyptian, "great house," the title of the king of Egypt.
- s (11:26) The reproach of the Christ: or "the reproach of the Anointed One"; compare Ps 89:50–51.
- t (11:28) Passover: Greek pascha, from Hebrew pesach (Exod 12:11–13, 21–23).
- u (11:29) Red Sea: so the Greek Old Testament; the Hebrew has Yam Suph, "Sea of Reeds" (Exod 14:21–29).
- v (11:30) Jericho: Hebrew, perhaps related to the word for "moon" or "fragrance." See Josh 6:12–21.
- w (11:31) Rahab: Hebrew, "broad," "wide." See Josh 2:1–21; 6:22–25.
- x (11:32) Gideon: Hebrew, "hewer." Barak: Hebrew, "lightning." Samson: Hebrew Shimshon, from the word for "sun." Jephthah: Hebrew Yiftach, "he opens." Samuel: Hebrew Shemuel, explained in 1 Sam 1:20 by the words "asked of God," more probably "name of God."
- y (11:35) Compare 1 Kgs 17:17–24; 2 Kgs 4:18–37. Tortured: probably on the rack or drum; compare 2 Macc 6:18–7:42.
- z (11:37) Some were tested: Greek epeirasthēsan. Some manuscripts omit it, and some scholars suspect an early copying error for eprēsthēsan, "they were burned." Sawn in two: a Jewish tradition tells of Isaiah being sawn in two.

Chapter 12

1 With so vast a cloud of witnesses around us, then, let us too throw off every burden and the sin that entangles so easily, and let us run with perseverance the course laid out for us,[a] 2 keeping our gaze on Jesus, who leads the way in faith and brings it to completion. For the sake of the joy that lay ahead of him he bore the cross, scorning the shame, and he is seated at the right of God's throne.[b] 3 Consider him who endured such hostility from sinners against themselves, so that you do not grow weary and lose heart.[c]

4 You have not yet, in your contest with sin, stood firm to the point of bloodshed.

5 And you have forgotten the word of encouragement which speaks to you as to sons:

"My son, do not treat lightly the discipline of the Lord,
nor give up when he rebukes you;[d]

6 because the Lord disciplines those he loves,
and chastises every child he accepts."[e]

7 Endure it as discipline. God is dealing with you as his children. For what child is not disciplined by a father?
8 If you are without the discipline that all have received, you are not true sons but illegitimate.
9 Again, we had human fathers who corrected us, and we treated them with respect. Should we not be far more ready to submit to the Father of spirits, and so live?[f]
10 Our fathers corrected us for a brief time as they judged fit, but God does it for our benefit, that we may have a share in his holiness.
11 No discipline, while it lasts, seems a matter for joy; it is painful.
Afterward, though, those who have been schooled by it reap from it a harvest of righteousness and peace.
12 So strengthen the hands that hang limp and the knees that give way,[g] 13 and make level tracks for your feet, so that the limb that is lame may not be dislocated, but may instead be healed.[h] 14 Strive for peace with all people, and for holiness, for apart from holiness none will see the Lord. 15 Watch that no one falls short of God's grace, and that no "bitter root sprouts up to cause trouble," poisoning many through it;[i] 16 that no one is sexually immoral or godless like Esau, who sold his birthright for a single meal.[j] 17 You know that later on,
when he wished to receive the blessing as heir, he was turned away;
he found no room for a change of mind, though he sought the blessing with tears.[k]
18 You have not come to what can be touched by the hand, to fire that burns, to darkness, deep gloom and storm,[l] 19 and a trumpet blast and a voice speaking words, so that the listeners pleaded that nothing more be said to them. 20 They could not endure the order that was given: "Even an animal that touches the mountain must be stoned."[m] 21 Indeed, so terrifying was the sight that Moses said, "I am terrified and trembling."[n] 22 But you have come to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to myriads of angels in festal gathering,[o] 23 and to the assembly of the firstborn who are enrolled in heaven, and to God, the judge of all, and to the spirits of the righteous made perfect, 24 and to Jesus, who mediates a new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, which speaks better things than Abel's blood.[p]

25 Take care not to reject the one who speaks. If those who rejected him when he gave warning on earth did not get away, much less will we, if we turn our backs on the one who warns us from heaven. 26 His voice shook the earth then, but now he has promised, "Once more I will shake not just the earth but the heavens too."[q] 27 The words "Yet once more" point to the removing of things that are shaken, as things that have been made, so that the things not shaken may endure. 28 Therefore, since we are receiving a kingdom that cannot be shaken, let us be grateful, and so offer to God worship that pleases him, with reverence and awe;[r] 29 for our God is a consuming fire.[s]

Notes

- a (12:1) Witnesses: Greek martyres, people who testify; here those whose faith is attested in chapter 11. Clings so closely: the meaning of the rare Greek word euperistatos is uncertain; perhaps "easily distracting." One early papyrus, P46 as reported, reads "easily distracting."
- b (12:2) Leads the way: Greek archēgos, "pioneer," "founder"; see 2:10. For the sake of the joy: or "instead of the joy."
- c (12:3) Against themselves: so the Westcott–Hort text, following Sinaiticus and other early witnesses as reported; most manuscripts read "against himself."
- d (12:5) Prov 3:11–12 in the Greek Old Testament. The Lord: the Hebrew text has Yahweh; so also in verse 6.
- e (12:6) Punishes … receives: so the Greek Old Testament; the Hebrew reads "as a father the son in whom he delights." Son: so throughout this passage the Greek speaks of sons, but the teaching applies to all God's children.
- f (12:9) Human fathers: literally "fathers of our flesh."
- g (12:12) Isa 35:3.
- h (12:13) Prov 4:26 in the Greek Old Testament.
- i (12:15) Deut 29:18 in the Greek Old Testament.
- j (12:16) See Gen 25:29–34.
- k (12:17) Room for a change of mind: literally "place of repentance," perhaps meaning no way to change his father's decision. Sought the blessing: or "sought repentance"; the Greek pronoun could refer to either. See Gen 27:30–40.
- l (12:18) What can be touched: later manuscripts read "a mountain that can be touched." See Exod 19:16–22; Deut 4:11; 5:22–26.
- m (12:20) Exod 19:12–13.
- n (12:21) Deut 9:19.

- o (12:22) Zion: Hebrew, perhaps “fortress”; the hill of Jerusalem. Jerusalem: Hebrew Yerushalayim, perhaps “foundation of Shalem” or “foundation of peace.” Myriads: literally “tens of thousands.” Of angels in festal gathering: or “of angels, to the festal gathering and assembly of the firstborn.”
- p (12:24) Compare Gen 4:10.
- q (12:26) Hag 2:6.
- r (12:28) Let us be grateful: or “let us hold on to grace.”
- s (12:29) Deut 4:24; 9:3.

1 Let love for one another as brothers continue.[a] 2 Do not forget to welcome strangers, for in doing so some have had angels as their guests without realizing it.[b] 3 Keep in mind those in prison, as if you shared their chains, and those who are ill-treated, since you too have bodies of your own.
4 Let marriage be honorable in everyone’s eyes, and the bed of marriage undefiled; God will bring judgment on the sexually immoral and on adulterers.
5 Keep your manner of life clear of greed for money, and be satisfied with what is at hand. For he has said, “I will never let you go, nor will I ever desert you.”[c]
6 So we may boldly say,

“The Lord is my help; I will have no fear.
What can mortals do to me?”[d]

7 Remember those who led you, who told you God’s word. Look at how their lives turned out, and follow the example of their faith. 8 Jesus Christ is the same yesterday and today and forever. 9 Do not be swept aside by teachings that are various and foreign. It is a fine thing for the heart to be made firm by grace, rather than by foods, which have brought no benefit to those who live by them.[e] 10 We possess an altar, but the ones who serve at the tent are not allowed to eat from
it. 11 For the bodies of those animals whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the high priest as an offering for sin are burned outside the camp.[f] 12 Therefore Jesus also suffered outside the city gate, to sanctify the people with his own blood. 13 Let us, then, go out to him outside the camp, bearing the reproach he bore. 14 We have here no city that endures; we are searching for the one still to come. 15 Through him let us continually offer up a sacrifice of praise to God, that is, the fruit of lips that confess his name.[g] 16 And do not forget kindness and sharing, for these are the sacrifices in which God delights.

17 Be obedient to your leaders and defer to them, since they keep watch over your souls, knowing they must render an account. Let them do it gladly and not with sighs, for that would bring you no profit. 18 Keep praying for us. We are persuaded that our conscience is good, since we wish to conduct ourselves well in every way. 19 I especially ask you to pray, so that I may be given back to you more quickly.
20 Now may the God of peace, who brought up from the dead the great shepherd of the sheep by the blood of the eternal covenant, our Lord Jesus,[h] 21 fit you with all that is good for doing his will, producing in us what delights him, through Jesus Christ; glory be his forever and ever. Amen.[i] 22 I urge you, brothers, bear with my word of exhortation, for I have written to you briefly. 23 You should know that our brother Timothy has been set free, and if he comes soon, I will see you with him.[j] 24 Give our greetings to all who lead you and to all the saints. Those from Italy greet you.[k] 25 Grace be with all of you.[l]

Notes

- a (13:1) Love ... as brothers: Greek philadelphia.
- b (13:2) Compare Gen 18:1–8; 19:1–3.
- c (13:5) Deut 31:6, 8; Josh 1:5.
- d (13:6) Ps 118:6 (117:6 in the Greek Old Testament). The Lord: the Hebrew text has Yahweh.
- e (13:9) Foods: probably rules about clean and unclean foods or sacrificial meals.
- f (13:11) Lev 16:27.
- g (13:15) Through him: some manuscripts add “then.” The fruit of lips: compare Hos 14:2 in the Greek Old Testament.
- h (13:20) Compare Isa 63:11; Zech 9:11.
- i (13:21) In us: some manuscripts read “in you.”
- j (13:23) Timothy: Greek Timotheos, “honoring God.” Set free: or “has set out.”
- k (13:24) Those from Italy: either people in Italy or Italians living elsewhere; the phrase does not settle where the letter was written.
- l (13:25) With all of you: later manuscripts add “Amen.”

James

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 James,[a] a slave of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes living scattered abroad: greetings.[b] 2 Count it nothing but joy, my brothers,[c] whenever you run into trials of many kinds, 3 since you know that the testing of your faith produces staying power. 4 Let staying power finish its work, so that you may be mature and whole, lacking in nothing.[d] 5 If any of you is short of wisdom, let him ask God, who gives to everyone freely and without reproach, and it will be given him. 6 But let him ask in faith, with no doubting, for the doubter is like a wave of the sea, blown and tossed by the wind. 7 Such a person must not suppose that he will get anything from the Lord; 8 he is a man of two minds, unsteady in all his ways.[e] 9 Let the brother of low standing take pride in being raised up, 10 and the rich in being brought low, because like a flower of the grass he will pass away. 11 For the sun comes up with its scorching heat and withers the grass; its flower drops, and the beauty of its look is lost.
So too the rich man will fade away in the middle of his pursuits.[f] 12 Happy the man who holds out under trial, because once he has stood the test he will receive the crown of life, which he promised to those who love him.[g] 13 Let no one say when tempted, "God is tempting me."
For God cannot be tempted by evil, and he himself tempts no one.[h] 14 Each person is tempted by being dragged off and lured by his own desire. 15 Then desire, having conceived, gives birth to sin, and sin, once full grown, brings forth death.
16 Do not be misled, my dear brothers. 17 Every good gift and every perfect present is from above, coming down from the Father of lights, in whom there is no variation or shadow cast by turning.[i] 18 By his own choice he brought us to birth through the word of truth, so that we should be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures.

19 Know this, my dear brothers: everyone should be swift to hear, unhurried to speak, unhurried to grow angry;[j] 20 for human anger does not accomplish the justice that God requires. 21 Therefore put away all filth and the excess of malice, and with gentleness accept the word planted in you, which is able to save your souls.

22 Be people who do the word, and not only hearers who deceive themselves. 23 For anyone who hears the word and does not do it is like a man who looks at the face he was born with in a mirror; 24 he takes a look at himself, walks off, and straightaway forgets what sort of man he was. 25 But the one who has looked closely into the perfect law, the law of freedom, and stays with it, proving to be no forgetful hearer but a doer who acts, will be happy in what he does.

26 If anyone thinks he is religious and does not put a bridle on his tongue, but deceives his own heart, his religion is worthless. 27 Religion that is pure and unstained before God the Father is this: to look after orphans and widows in their trouble, and to keep oneself unspotted by the world.

Notes

- a (1:1) James: Greek Iakōbos, from the Hebrew Yaʿaqov (Jacob), traditionally explained as "he takes the heel" or "he supplants" (Gen 25:26; 27:36).
- b (1:1) Slave: Greek doulos, "slave," "servant." Living scattered abroad: literally "in the dispersion" (Greek diaspora), the term for Jews living outside the land of Israel, here applied to believers.
- c (1:2) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, which includes sisters; so throughout the letter.
- d (1:4) Mature: Greek teleios, "complete," "perfect."
- e (1:8) Of two minds: Greek dipsychos, literally "double-souled."
- f (1:11) Scorching heat: or "the scorching wind" (Greek kausōn). Compare Isa 40:6–8.
- g (1:12) Happy: or "blessed." He promised: later manuscripts read "the Lord promised."
- h (1:13) Tempted: the same Greek word as "trial" in verse 12; it means both testing and temptation.
- i (1:17) Father of lights: that is, the Creator of the heavenly lights. Shadow cast by turning: the image is of the shifting shadows of the heavenly bodies.
- j (1:19) Know this: or "You know this." Later manuscripts read "So then."

Chapter 2

1 My brothers, do not hold the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, while showing favoritism.[a] 2 Suppose a man comes into your assembly wearing gold rings and splendid clothes, and a poor man also comes in, in shabby clothes,[b] 3 and you pay attention to the one in the splendid clothes and say, "Sit here in this good place," while to the poor man you say, "You stand there," or, "Sit down on the floor by my footstool." 4 Have you not made distinctions among yourselves and become judges with evil reasoning?
5 Listen, my dear brothers. Has not God chosen those who are poor in the world's eyes to be rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom he promised to those who love him? 6 But you have treated the poor man with contempt. Are the rich not the ones who lord it over you, and the very ones who drag you before the courts? 7 Is it not they who slander the honorable name that was called over you?[c] 8 If indeed you carry out the royal law according to the scripture, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself," you are doing well.[d] 9 But if you show favoritism, you commit sin, and the law convicts you as transgressors.
10 For whoever keeps the whole law but stumbles on a single point has become guilty of all of it. 11 The one who said, "Do not commit adultery," also said, "Do not murder." If you avoid adultery but commit murder, you have broken the law.[e] 12 Speak and act as people who are going to be judged by the law of freedom. 13 For judgment is merciless to the one who has shown no mercy; mercy triumphs over judgment.
14 What good is it, my brothers, if someone claims to have faith but has no deeds? Can that faith save him?[f] 15 If a brother or sister is without clothes and short of daily food, 16 and one of you says to them, "Go in peace; keep warm and eat well," without giving them what the body requires, what good is that? 17 So it is with faith: on its own, without deeds, it is a dead thing.
18 But someone will say, "You have faith, and I have deeds." Show me your faith apart from deeds, and I will show you my faith by my deeds.[g] 19 You believe that God is one; good for you. Even the demons believe that, and they shudder.[h] 20 Do you want to be shown, you empty fellow, that faith without deeds is useless?[i] 21 Was not Abraham our father declared righteous by deeds, when he offered his son Isaac on the altar?[j] 22 You see that faith was working along with his deeds, and by the deeds faith was brought to completion, 23 and the scripture was fulfilled which says, “Abraham trusted God, and this was reckoned to him as righteousness”; and he came to be called the friend of God.[k] 24 You see that a person is declared righteous by deeds and not by faith alone. 25 And in the same way, was not Rahab the prostitute also declared righteous by deeds, when she took in the messengers and sent them off by a different road?[l] 26 For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without deeds is dead.

Notes

- a (2:1) The Lord of glory: literally “our Lord Jesus Christ of glory”; or “our glorious Lord Jesus Christ.” The Greek may also be read as a question.
- b (2:2) Assembly: Greek synagōgē, “gathering,” “synagogue.”
- c (2:7) The honorable name that was called over you: that is, the name of Christ, invoked over believers, perhaps at baptism.
- d (2:8) Lev 19:18.
- e (2:11) Exod 20:13–14; Deut 5:17–18.
- f (2:14) Deeds: Greek erga, “works”; so throughout this passage.
- g (2:18) The extent of the objector’s words is uncertain; the quotation may continue further.
- h (2:19) God is one: compare Deut 6:4. Some manuscripts read “there is one God.”
- i (2:20) Useless: Greek argē, “idle,” “unproductive.” Later manuscripts read “dead.”
- j (2:21) Gen 22:9–12. Abraham: “father of a multitude” (Gen 17:5). Isaac: “he laughs.”
- k (2:23) Gen 15:6; compare Isa 41:8; 2 Chr 20:7.
- l (2:25) Josh 2:1–21. Rahab: “broad,” “wide.”

Chapter 3

1 Do not let many of you become teachers, my brothers; you are aware that those of us who teach will face a stricter judgment. 2 Every one of us trips up in many respects. Whoever never trips up in speech is a mature man, one able to keep the whole body in check as well.
3 When we put bits into horses’ mouths to make them obey us, we steer their whole body too.[a] 4 Look at ships as well: large as they are,
and driven by strong winds, they are steered by a very small rudder wherever the pilot’s impulse wants to go. 5 Just so the tongue is a little member, yet its boasts are grand. 6 The tongue too is a fire, a whole world of evil placed among our body parts; it contaminates the entire person, sets the course of life ablaze, and is itself ignited by Gehenna.[b]

7 Every species of wild animal and bird, of reptile and sea creature, is tamed and has been tamed by humankind, 8 but no human being can tame the tongue. It is a restless evil, full of deadly poison.[c] 9 With the tongue we praise the Lord and Father, and with it we curse people who were created in God's likeness.[d] 10 From the same mouth come blessing and curse. My brothers, it should not be this way. 11 Does a spring gush both fresh and bitter water from the same opening? 12 Can a fig tree, my brothers, yield olives, or a vine yield figs? Neither can salt water give fresh.[e]
13 Who among you is wise and understanding? Let him show his deeds by a good way of life, in the gentleness that comes from wisdom. 14 But if you have bitter jealousy and selfish ambition in your hearts, do not boast and lie against the truth. 15 Such wisdom does not descend from above; it belongs to the earth, to the merely natural, to demons.[f]
16 For where jealousy and selfish ambition are, there you find disorder and every vile practice. 17 The wisdom that comes from above, on the other hand, is pure first and foremost, then peace-loving, considerate, willing to yield, brimming with mercy and with good fruit, free of partiality and of pretense. 18 And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace by those who make peace.

Notes

- a (3:3) When: later manuscripts read "Look."
- b (3:6) World of wrongdoing: the Greek of this verse is difficult and its punctuation uncertain. Wheel of existence: or "the course of life," literally "the wheel of birth." Gehenna: the Valley of Hinnom outside Jerusalem, used as a name for the place of final punishment.
- c (3:8) Restless: some manuscripts read "uncontrollable."
- d (3:9) Gen 1:26–27.
- e (3:12) Neither can salt water give fresh: later manuscripts read "So no spring yields both salt water and fresh."
- f (3:15) Merely natural: Greek psychikē, "natural," "belonging to the soul" as opposed to the Spirit.

Chapter 4

1 Where do the fights and quarrels among you come from? Do they not come from your pleasures that wage war in your members?[a] 2 You crave and go without, so you commit murder. You burn with envy and cannot get what you want, so you battle and wrangle. You go without because you do not ask.[b] 3 You ask and do not receive, because you ask with wrong motives, to spend it on your pleasures.
4 Adulteresses! Do you not know that friendship with the world is hostility toward God? So whoever chooses to be a friend of the world makes himself God's enemy.[c] 5 Or do you think the scripture speaks to no purpose? Does the spirit
he made to dwell in us long with envy?[d] 6 But he gives greater grace. That is why it says,

"God opposes the proud,
but gives grace to the humble."[e]

7 So submit yourselves to God. Stand against the devil, and he will flee from you. 8 Draw near to God, and he will draw near to you. Wash your hands, you sinners; purify your hearts, you divided in mind.
9 Be wretched, mourn and weep. Let your laughter be turned into mourning and your joy into gloom. 10 Humble yourselves before the Lord, and he will lift you up.
11 Do not speak against one another, brothers. Whoever speaks against a brother or judges his brother speaks against the law and judges the law. And if you judge the law, you are not a doer of the law but its judge. 12 There is one lawgiver and judge, the one able to save and to destroy. But you, who are you to judge your neighbor?[f] 13 Come now, you who say, "Today or tomorrow we will go into such and such a city, spend a year there, do business and make money," 14 when you have no idea what tomorrow holds. What is your life?
You are a vapor that appears briefly and then disappears.[g] 15 Instead you ought to say, "If the Lord wills, we will live and do this or that." 16 But now you take pride in your boastful schemes. All boasting of that kind is wicked. 17 Anyone, then, who knows what is good and does not do it is guilty of sin.

Notes

- a (4:1) Pleasures: Greek hēdonai, "desires for pleasure"; so in verse 3.
- b (4:2) Commit murder: some propose the reading "you are jealous" (Greek phthoneite for phoneuete), but no manuscript is reported to have it.
- c (4:4) Adulteresses: the image is of unfaithfulness to God as unfaithfulness in marriage, as in the prophets. Later manuscripts read "Adulterers and adulteresses."
- d (4:5) The Greek of this verse is difficult, and no Old Testament passage matches it. Other possible renderings: "The spirit that he made to dwell in us yearns jealously," or "He yearns jealously for the spirit that he made to dwell in us."
- e (4:6) Prov 3:34 in the Greek Old Testament.
- f (4:12) One lawgiver and judge: later manuscripts lack "and judge."
- g (4:14) What tomorrow will bring: the Greek is variously read and punctuated in the manuscripts. You are a mist: later manuscripts read "It is a mist."

Chapter 5

1 Come now, you rich, weep and howl over the miseries that are coming upon you. 2 Your wealth has rotted, and your clothes have become moth-eaten. 3 Your gold and silver are rusted, and the rust will testify against you and consume your flesh like fire. You have stored up wealth in the final days. 4 Listen! The pay you cheated from the workers who harvested your fields cries out against you, and the shouts of the reapers have come to the ears of the Lord of Armies.[a] 5 You have lived soft lives on earth and indulged yourselves; you have fattened your hearts for the day of slaughter. 6 You have condemned and murdered the righteous one; he does not resist you.[b]

7 Be patient, then, brothers, until the coming of the Lord. See how the farmer waits for the precious crop from the ground, being patient over it until it receives the early and the late rains.[c] 8 You also be patient. Make your hearts firm, for the coming of the Lord is near. 9 Brothers, do not complain about one another, or you may be judged. The judge stands at the door already! 10 Brothers, for a pattern of patient endurance under hardship, look to the prophets who spoke in the Lord's name. 11 We call those who held out happy. You have heard of the endurance of Job, and you have seen the outcome the Lord brought about: the Lord is full of compassion and mercy.[d]

12 Above all, my brothers, do not swear oaths, either by heaven or by the earth or with any other oath. Let your "yes" be yes and your "no"
be no, so that you do not fall under judgment.[e] 13 Is one of you in trouble? Let him pray. Is one in good spirits? Let him sing songs of praise. 14 Is someone among you ill? Let that person summon the church's elders, who should pray over him and anoint him with oil in the Lord's name.[f] 15 And the prayer offered in faith will rescue the sick person, and the Lord will raise him up; and if he has committed sins, he will be forgiven. 16 Confess your sins to each other and pray for each other, so that you may be healed. A righteous person's prayer is powerful and effective.[g] 17 Elijah was a human being with feelings like ours, and he prayed earnestly that it would not rain, and it did not rain on the land for three years and six months.[h] 18 Then he prayed again, and the sky gave rain and the land produced its crop.[i] 19 My brothers, if any one of you wanders from the truth and someone turns him back, 20 let him know that whoever turns a sinner back from the error of his way will save his soul from death and will cover a multitude of sins.[j]

Notes

- a (5:4) Lord of Armies: Greek kyrios sabaōth, from the Hebrew Yahweh tsevaʾot, "Yahweh of Armies" (traditionally "Lord of hosts"); compare Isa 5:9. The wages were due at the end of each working day (Deut 24:14–15).
- b (5:6) He does not resist you: or, as a question, "Does he not resist you?"
- c (5:7) The early and the late rains: in the land of Israel, the autumn rains after sowing and the spring rains before harvest (Deut 11:14). Westcott and Hort have only "the early and the late"; later manuscripts add "rain," and some add "fruit."
- d (5:11) Happy: or "blessed." Job: the meaning of the name is uncertain; it has been explained as "where is the father?" Full of compassion and mercy: compare Ps 103:8; Exod 34:6, where the Hebrew has Yahweh.
- e (5:12) Compare Matt 5:34–37. Under judgment: later manuscripts read "into hypocrisy."
- f (5:14) Of the Lord: Westcott and Hort bracket these words; Vaticanus is reported to lack "the Lord."
- g (5:16) As it does its work: or "when it is set in motion."
- h (5:17) 1 Kgs 17:1; 18:1; compare Luke 4:25. Elijah: "my God is Yahweh."
- i (5:18) 1 Kgs 18:41–45.

- j (5:20) Let him know: some manuscripts read “know” (plural). His soul: that is, probably the sinner’s soul; Westcott and Hort place “his” in the margin, and some manuscripts lack it. Compare Prov 10:12.

1 Peter

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 Peter,[a] an apostle of Jesus Christ, to God's chosen ones living as foreigners scattered through Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia,[b] 2 whom God the Father chose as he knew beforehand, set apart by the Spirit to obey Jesus Christ and to be sprinkled with his blood. Grace and peace be multiplied to you.[c] 3 Praise be to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ! Because of his abundant mercy he has given us a new birth into a living hope through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, 4 to an inheritance that cannot decay or be defiled or fade, kept safe in the heavens for you, 5 you who are protected by God's power through faith until the arrival of salvation, prepared to be revealed when time comes to its close. 6 In this you are overjoyed, even though now for a little while, if it must be, you have been grieved by trials of various kinds, 7 Their purpose is that your faith, once proven genuine, a thing of greater value than gold (which perishes, though fire tests it), may bring praise and glory and honor at the unveiling of Jesus Christ. 8 You have not seen him, yet you love him; and though you do not see him now, you trust him and are overjoyed with a joy beyond words and filled with glory,[d] 9 as you receive the goal of your faith, the salvation of your souls.
10 Concerning this salvation the prophets who spoke beforehand of the grace meant for you searched and inquired with care, 11 They probed what person or what period the Spirit of Christ in them meant, when it bore witness ahead of time to the sufferings Christ would undergo and the glories that would come after them. 12 To them it was disclosed that their ministry was not for their own benefit but for yours, in those matters now reported to you by the ones who preached the gospel to you through the Holy Spirit sent from heaven;

into these things angels yearn to peer.
13 So gird up the loins of your mind, keep sober, and set your hope fully on the grace that is being brought to you when Jesus Christ is unveiled.[e] 14 As obedient children, do not shape yourselves to the desires you once had in your ignorance. 15 Rather, as the one who called you is holy, become holy yourselves in all your conduct, 16 since it is written, "You shall be holy, because I am holy."[f] 17 And if you call on him as Father who judges each person's work impartially, live out the time of your stay as foreigners in reverent fear, 18 knowing that it was not with perishable things like silver or gold that you were ransomed from the empty way of life handed down from your ancestors, 19 but with precious blood, as of a lamb without blemish or spot, the blood of Christ. 20 He was chosen before the world was founded but appeared in the final period of time for your benefit, 21 who through him trust in God, who raised him from the dead and gave him glory, so that your faith and hope are in God.
22 Now that you have purified your souls by obeying the truth, so as to have a sincere love for the brothers, love one another earnestly from the heart,[g]
23 You have been begotten again from seed that does not perish rather than seed that does, by means of God's word, which lives and abides.
24 For

"all humankind is grass,
and all its splendor like a wildflower.
The grass dries up,
and the flower falls,
25 but what the Lord has spoken stands for all time."

That spoken word is the gospel which was preached to you.[h]

Notes

- a (1:1) Peter: Greek Petros, "rock," "stone," the name Jesus gave to Simon (John 1:42), the Greek equivalent of Aramaic Kēphas.
- b (1:1) Living as foreigners scattered: literally "sojourners of the dispersion" (Greek diaspora). The places named are Roman provinces in what is now Turkey.
- c (1:2) Sprinkled with his blood: compare Exod 24:7–8.

- d (1:8) Not seen him: later manuscripts read “not known him.”
- e (1:13) Gird up the loins of your mind: the image is of tucking up a long robe to be ready for action.
- f (1:16) Lev 11:44–45; 19:2. Westcott and Hort bracket the Greek word introducing the quotation.
- g (1:22) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, here in the compound philadelphia, “love of brothers,” which includes sisters. From the heart: some manuscripts read “from a pure heart.” Later manuscripts add “through the Spirit” after “the truth.”
- h (1:25) Isa 40:6–8 in the Greek Old Testament, where the Hebrew reads “the word of our God.”

Chapter 2

1 So put away all malice and all deceit, hypocrisy, envy and all slander.
2 As babies just born crave milk, crave the unadulterated milk of the word, so that you may be nourished by it and grow toward salvation,[a] 3 if indeed you have tasted that the Lord is good.[b] 4 Come to him, a living stone rejected by people but chosen and precious in God’s sight,
5 and you yourselves, like living stones, are being built up as a spiritual house, to be a holy priesthood, offering spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ.
6 For scripture contains this:

> “See, I set down in Zion a stone,
> a cornerstone, chosen, of great worth;
> whoever puts his trust in him will never be disgraced.”[c]

7 So for you who believe, he is precious; but for those who refuse to believe,

> “the stone the builders threw away
> has become the cornerstone,”[d]

8 and

> “a stone over which they stumble,
> a rock that makes them fall.”

They stumble by refusing to obey the word, and to this end they were appointed.[e]
9 But you are a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people God has made his own, so that you may declare the excellencies of the one who called you out of darkness into his marvelous light.[f] 10

You were once "not a people," and now you are the people of God;
you were "shown no mercy," and now mercy has been shown you.[g] 11 Dear friends, I appeal to you as foreigners and exiles to keep away from the desires of the flesh, which wage war against the soul. 12 Let your way of life among the nations be honorable, so that in the very matter in which they accuse you of evildoing they may observe your fine actions and give glory to God on the day of his coming.[h] 13 For the Lord's sake submit to every human institution, whether to the emperor as supreme,[i] 14 or to governors as sent by him to punish wrongdoers and to praise those who do good. 15 It is God's purpose that by your good conduct you muzzle the ignorant talk of senseless people. 16 Live as free people, yet not using your freedom as a cover for evil, but as slaves of God. 17 Show honor to all. Love the brotherhood.
Revere God. Give the emperor his due honor.[j] 18 Slaves, accept the authority of your masters with complete respect, whether they are gentle and fair or harsh.[k] 19 For it is a mark of grace when someone, because he is conscious of God, endures pain while suffering unjustly.
20 What credit is there if you endure a beating for doing wrong? But if you endure suffering when you do good, this is grace in God's sight.
21 For it was to this that you were called, since Christ also suffered for you, leaving you an example so that you should follow in his footsteps.[l] 22 "No sin did he commit,
nor was any lie detected on his lips."[m] 23 Reviled, he hurled back no abuse; suffering, he made no threats;
instead he left his cause with the one whose judgment is just.
24 In his own body he bore our sins up onto the tree, so that we, having parted from sins, might live to righteousness. By his bruises you have been made whole.[n] 25 For you were straying like sheep, but now you have returned to the shepherd and guardian of your souls.[o]

Notes

- a (2:2) Of the word: or "spiritual" (Greek logikon). Into salvation: later manuscripts omit these words.

- b (2:3) Ps 34:8 (Greek Old Testament 33:9), where the Hebrew has Yahweh.
- c (2:6) Isa 28:16 in the Greek Old Testament.
- d (2:7) Ps 118:22 (Greek Old Testament 117:22). There is honor: or “he is precious.”
- e (2:8) Isa 8:14.
- f (2:9) Exod 19:5–6; Isa 43:20–21. Excellencies: or “praises,” “mighty deeds.”
- g (2:10) Compare Hos 1:6, 9; 2:23.
- h (2:12) Nations: or “Gentiles,” here meaning those who do not know God. The day of his coming: literally “the day of visitation.”
- i (2:13) Emperor: Greek basileus, “king,” the usual title for the Roman emperor in the Greek-speaking east.
- j (2:17) Brotherhood: Greek adelphotēs, the community of believers.
- k (2:18) Household servants: Greek oiketai, slaves in a household.
- l (2:21) Suffered: some manuscripts read “died.”
- m (2:22) Isa 53:9.
- n (2:24) Isa 53:4–5, 12. Tree: that is, the cross.
- o (2:25) Isa 53:6. Guardian: Greek episkopos, “overseer.”

Chapter 3

1 Wives, likewise, be subject to your husbands, so that if any of them refuse to believe the message, they may be won without words through the way their wives live, 2 when they see your pure and reverent conduct. 3 Do not let your beauty be the outward kind, braided hair and gold ornaments and fine clothing, 4 Let it rather be the inner self hidden in the heart, adorned with the lasting beauty of a meek and tranquil spirit, which God counts as costly. 5 For this is how the holy women of old who hoped in God used to adorn themselves, submitting to their own husbands, 6 as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord. You have become her daughters if you do good and do not give way to fear.[a] 7 In the same way, husbands, live with your wives considerately, honoring the woman as the more delicate partner, because they too are co-heirs of the gift of life, so that nothing will block your prayers.
8 Finally, all of you, be of one mind, sympathetic, loving as brothers, tenderhearted and humble.
9 Do not repay evil for evil or insult for insult, but bless instead, because it was for this that you were called, so that you may inherit a blessing.

10 For
"whoever wants to love life
and see good days
must keep his tongue from evil
and his lips from speaking deceit;
11 let him shun evil and do right;
let him look for peace and go after it.
12 For the eyes of the Lord are on the righteous,
and his ears are open to their prayer;
but the face of the Lord is against those who do evil."[b] 13 And who will do you harm if you are zealous for the good? 14 Yet even if you have to suffer because you do right, you are happy. "Have no fear of them, and do not be shaken,"[c] 15 but in your hearts revere Christ as holy, as Lord, and be prepared at all times to make a defense to anyone who asks you to account for your hope,[d] 16 yet doing it with gentleness and reverence, keeping a good conscience, so that when you are slandered, those who abuse your good conduct in Christ may be put to shame. 17 It is better, should God so will, to suffer for doing right than to suffer for doing wrong. 18 Christ also suffered for sins once and for all, an upright person for the unrighteous, in order to lead you to God. He was killed in the body but brought to life by the spirit,[e] 19 in which he went also to the spirits held in prison and preached to them,[f] 20 who refused to obey long ago, while God waited patiently in Noah's time as the ark was under construction. Only a few, eight people, were rescued through the water.[g] 21 And baptism, which corresponds to this, now saves you also, not as a removal of dirt from the flesh but as the pledge of a good conscience toward God, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ,[h] 22 He has passed into heaven and sits at God's right hand, and angels and authorities and powers have been placed under him.

Notes

- a (3:6) Gen 18:12. Sarah: "princess." Abraham: "father of a multitude." Give way to fear: compare Prov 3:25.
- b (3:12) Ps 34:12–16 (Greek Old Testament 33:13–17), where the Hebrew has Yahweh.

- c (3:14) Isa 8:12. Have no fear of them: literally “do not fear their fear,” that is, either what they fear or the fear they cause. Happy: or “blessed.”
- d (3:15) Isa 8:13, where the Hebrew has Yahweh. Later manuscripts read “the Lord God” in place of “Christ as Lord.”
- e (3:18) Died: Westcott and Hort read apethanen, “died,” with Sinaiticus and Alexandrinus as reported; many manuscripts read epathen, “suffered.” You: some manuscripts read “us.” In the spirit: or “by the Spirit.”
- f (3:19) In which: or “in whom,” that is, in the spirit. The passage is much debated. The spirits have been understood as the fallen angels of Gen 6:1–4 (compare 2 Pet 2:4; Jude 6 and the book of 1 Enoch), as the dead of Noah’s generation, or as those to whom Christ spoke through Noah; the proclamation as either a message of victory or the good news (compare 4:6).
- g (3:20) Gen 6–8. Noah: “rest.”
- h (3:21) Corresponds to this: Greek antitypon, “antitype,” “counterpart.” Pledge: or “appeal” (Greek eperōtēma).

Chapter 4

1 So, since Christ has suffered in the flesh, you too must arm yourselves with that same resolve, because the one who has suffered in the flesh has broken with sin,[a] 2 so as to live the rest of his time in the flesh no longer for human desires but for the will of God. 3 For the time already past is enough for doing what the Gentiles want to do, living in debauchery, lusts, drunkenness, wild parties, drinking bouts and lawless idolatry. 4 They are surprised that you do not plunge with them into the same flood of reckless living, and they abuse you; 5 but they will answer to the one prepared to judge both the living and the dead. 6 For this is why the good news was proclaimed even to the dead, that though they had been judged in the flesh as human beings are, they might live in the spirit as God does.
7 The end of all things has drawn near. So be sensible and sober for the sake of your prayers. 8 Above all, keep your love for one another constant, since love covers a multitude of sins.[b] 9 Be hospitable to one another without grumbling. 10 Each of you has received a gift; employ it to serve one another, like faithful managers of God’s many-sided grace: 11 if you speak, speak as if delivering God’s own words; if you serve, serve with the strength God provides, so that God may receive honor in all you do through Jesus Christ. Glory and might are his forever and ever. Amen.

12 Dear friends, do not be bewildered by the blaze of trial that has come among you to test you, as if something unheard of were befalling you.
13 But to the extent that you share the sufferings of Christ, rejoice, so that you may also rejoice and be overjoyed when his glory is revealed.
14 If you are insulted for the name of Christ, you are blessed, because the Spirit of glory, the Spirit of God, rests on you.[c] 15 But let none of you suffer as a murderer or thief or evildoer or as a meddler.
16 But if anyone suffers as a Christian, he should not be ashamed but should glorify God in that name.[d] 17 For it is time for the judgment to start with God's own household; and if it starts with us, how will it end for those who refuse to obey God's good news?[e]
18 And

> "if it is hard for the righteous to be saved,
> where will the godless and the sinner appear?"[f]

19 Let those, then, who suffer as God wills commit their souls to the Creator, who is faithful, and go on doing good.

Notes

- a (4:1) In the flesh: later manuscripts add "for us" after "suffered."
- b (4:8) Prov 10:12.
- c (4:14) Compare Isa 11:2. Later manuscripts add "and of power" after "glory," and some add "On their part he is blasphemed, but on your part he is glorified."
- d (4:16) Christian: Greek Christianos, "follower of Christ"; compare Acts 11:26; 26:28. In that name: later manuscripts read "in this respect."
- e (4:17) It is time: Westcott and Hort bracket the Greek article before "time."
- f (4:18) Prov 11:31 in the Greek Old Testament.

Chapter 5

1 To the elders among you, then, I make my appeal, as one who is an elder with you, who witnessed Christ's sufferings and will share also in the glory soon to be disclosed: 2 shepherd the flock of God among you, watching over it not under compulsion but willingly, as God would have it, not for shameful gain but eagerly,[a] 3 not domineering over the portions allotted to you, but setting a pattern for the flock.

4 Then when the head shepherd is made manifest, you will win the crown of glory that never withers.
5 Likewise, you younger ones, be subject to those who are older. All of you, tie on humility like an apron in dealing with each other, for
"God sets himself against the arrogant,
but to the lowly he gives grace."[b] 6 So bow down beneath God's powerful hand, so that at the right moment he may raise you up,
7 casting all your anxiety on him, because he cares for you.[c]
8 Stay sober and alert. The devil, your opponent, roams about like a lion roaring in search of someone to swallow.
9 Resist him, firm in the faith, knowing that the same kinds of suffering are being laid on your family of believers throughout the world.[d] 10 And after you have suffered a little while, the God of all grace, who called you to his eternal glory in Christ, will himself restore, establish, strengthen and settle you.
11 To him be the power forever. Amen.
12 With the help of Silvanus, whom I consider a trustworthy brother,
I have written you this short letter to encourage you and to affirm that this is God's true grace. Hold your ground in it.[e] 13 She who is in Babylon, chosen together with you, sends you greetings, and so does Mark my son.[f] 14 Greet one another with a kiss of love. Peace to all of you who are in Christ.[g]

Notes

- a (5:2) Watching over it: some manuscripts lack these words. As God would have it: some manuscripts lack these words.
- b (5:5) Prov 3:34 in the Greek Old Testament.
- c (5:7) Compare Ps 55:22 (Greek Old Testament 54:23).
- d (5:9) Family of believers: Greek adelphotēs, "brotherhood."
- e (5:12) Silvanus: a Latin name, perhaps from silva, "forest"; probably the Silas of Acts 15:22–40. Through Silvanus: that is, either as secretary or as bearer of the letter.
- f (5:13) She who is in Babylon: probably the church in Rome, called by the name of the ancient capital of exile; compare Rev 17:5. Mark: Latin Marcus, perhaps "of Mars"; compare Acts 12:12.
- g (5:14) Later manuscripts add "Jesus. Amen."

2 Peter

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 Simon Peter, a servant and apostle of Jesus Christ, to those who have received a faith as precious as ours through the fairness of our God and Savior Jesus Christ:[a] 2 grace and peace be multiplied to you in the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord.
3 His divine power has granted us all that we need for life and devotion, through knowing the one who summoned us by his own splendor and moral excellence.[b] 4 By these means he has given us promises of great value and greatness, so that by them you might become partakers of the divine nature, having fled the decay that lust has spread through the world. 5 For this very reason, make every effort to add excellence to your faith, and knowledge to excellence, 6 and self-control to knowledge, and endurance to self-control, and godliness to endurance, 7 and affection for the brothers to godliness, and love to affection for the brothers.[c] 8 If these qualities are yours and keep increasing, they keep you from being idle or fruitless in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. 9 Whoever lacks them is blind, shortsighted, having forgotten that he was cleansed from his past sins. 10 So, brothers and sisters, work even harder to make your calling and choice certain; if you do these things, you will never fall. 11 For in this way entry into the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ will be richly furnished for you.
12 That is why I mean to keep reminding you of these things, though you know them and are established in the truth you now have. 13 I think it right, as long as I am in this tent, to stir you up by way of reminder,[d] 14 since I know that the putting off of my tent will come soon, as our Lord Jesus Christ also made clear to me.[e] 15 And I will be diligent to make sure that, once I have gone, you can call these things to mind whenever you need.[f]

16 For it was not cleverly invented myths that we followed when we made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ;
we were eyewitnesses of his majesty. 17 He received honor and glory from God the Father when the Majestic Glory spoke to him: "This is my beloved Son, with whom I am delighted."[g] 18 We ourselves heard this voice carried from heaven when we were with him on the holy mountain. 19 And we have the prophetic word made more certain, and you do well to pay attention to it as to a lamp shining in a dark place, until the day dawns and the morning star rises in your hearts.[h] 20 Know this first of all, that no prophecy of scripture comes from one's own interpretation. 21 No prophecy ever came about because a human being willed it; rather, borne along by the Holy Spirit, human beings spoke as messengers from God.[i]

Notes

- a (1:1) Simon: Greek form of the Hebrew Shimʿon, "he has heard." Some manuscripts read Symeōn, "Simeon," the form closer to the Hebrew. Peter: "rock." Our God and Savior Jesus Christ: or "our God and the Savior Jesus Christ."
- b (1:3) By his own glory and excellence: some manuscripts read "to glory and excellence." Excellence: Greek aretē, "virtue," "moral excellence."
- c (1:7) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, here in the compound philadelphia, which includes sisters.
- d (1:13) Tent: that is, the body; compare 2 Cor 5:1, 4.
- e (1:14) Compare John 21:18–19.
- f (1:15) Gone: Greek exodos, "departure," "exodus," here meaning death.
- g (1:17) Compare Matt 17:5; Mark 9:7; Luke 9:35. Majestic Glory: a reverent way of referring to God.
- h (1:19) Morning star: Greek phōsphoros, "light-bringer," the planet Venus seen before dawn.
- i (1:21) Human beings spoke as messengers from God: some manuscripts read "holy people of God spoke."

Chapter 2

1 But false prophets also appeared among the people, and likewise false teachers will arise among you. They will quietly introduce destructive heresies, even denying the Master who bought them, bringing swift destruction on themselves.[a] 2 Many will take up their licentious ways, and through them the way of the truth will be brought into disrepute. 3 In their greed they will exploit you with fabricated words. Their condemnation, pronounced long ago, is not idle, and their destruction is not asleep.

4 For if God did not spare angels when they sinned, but cast them into Tartarus and committed them to pits of gloom to be kept until the judgment;[b] 5 if he did not hold back from punishing the world of old, but kept Noah safe, a preacher of righteousness, together with seven others, when he let loose the flood upon a godless world;[c] 6 if by reducing the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah to ashes he condemned them, making them an example of what is coming for the ungodly;[d] 7 and if he rescued righteous Lot, who was worn down by the debauched conduct of lawless people[e] 8 (that good man, dwelling in their midst, was in anguish of soul from day to day at the lawless acts he witnessed and heard of), 9 then the Lord is well able to deliver the devout out of testing and to hold the wicked in custody for punishment on the day of judgment, 10 and above all those who chase after the flesh with polluted craving and treat lordship with contempt.
¶Insolent and headstrong, they have no fear in reviling the glorious ones,[f] 11 whereas angels, though greater in strength and power, do not bring a blasphemous judgment against them before the Lord.[g] 12 These people, though, are like brute beasts, mere creatures of nature, born to be trapped and killed; they rail at what they know nothing about, and like those beasts they will perish in their corruption, 13 being wronged as the reward of their own wrong. Indulgence in broad daylight is their idea of pleasure. They are spots and disgraces, luxuriating in their deceits even as they share your table.[h] 14 Their eyes are full of an adulteress and never stop sinning. They lure the unsteady. Their hearts are well practiced in greed. Children under a curse! 15 They have left the straight path and wandered off, following the path of Balaam son of Beor, who loved payment for wickedness,[i] 16 but he was taken to task for his offense: a dumb beast of burden spoke in a man's voice and checked the prophet's folly.
17 These people are dried-up springs and clouds blown by a gale. The deepest darkness is kept in store for them.[j] 18 For, uttering loud boasts of folly, they entice by sensual desires of the flesh those who are barely escaping from people who live in error. 19 Freedom is what they offer, while they are themselves in bondage to decay; for a person is the slave of whatever has mastered him. 20 For if they have escaped the world's corruptions by knowing our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and then become entangled in them again and are defeated, their final condition is worse than their first.[k] 21 Better for them never to have come to know the road of righteousness than to know it and then turn their backs on the holy command handed down to them. 22 In them the true proverb has come to pass: "The dog has gone back to what it threw up," and, "The washed pig has gone back to roll in the mud."[l]

Notes

- a (2:1) Heresies: or "factions." Master: Greek despotēs.
- b (2:4) Tartarus: in Greek myth, the deepest part of the underworld, where rebellious powers were confined; compare 1 Enoch 10:4–6; 20:2. Pits: Westcott and Hort read sirois, "pits," with Sinaiticus, Alexandrinus and Vaticanus as reported; other manuscripts read seirais, "chains."
- c (2:5) Gen 6–8. Noah: "rest." With seven others: literally "as the eighth."
- d (2:6) Gen 19:24–28. Sodom and Gomorrah: the meanings of the names are uncertain. Of what is coming for the ungodly: some manuscripts read "to those who would live ungodly lives."
- e (2:7) Lot: perhaps "covering."
- f (2:10) Glorious ones: Greek doxai, "glories," probably angelic beings.
- g (2:11) Before the Lord: Westcott and Hort bracket these words; some manuscripts lack them. Compare Jude 9.
- h (2:13) Being wronged: Westcott and Hort read adikoumenoi with P72 and Vaticanus as reported; many manuscripts read komioumenoi, "receiving." Deceptions: some manuscripts read "love feasts," as in Jude 12.
- i (2:15) Num 22–24. Balaam: of uncertain meaning, perhaps "devourer." Beor: perhaps "burning." Some manuscripts read Bosor.
- j (2:17) Later manuscripts add "forever."
- k (2:20) Compare Matt 12:45; Luke 11:26.
- l (2:22) Prov 26:11. The second saying is not from the Old Testament; a similar proverb appears in the story of Ahiqar.

Chapter 3

1 Dear friends, this is already my second letter to you, and in each I aim to rouse your pure minds by reminding you,[a] 2 so that you will recall what the holy prophets said long ago and the command of the Lord and Savior delivered by your apostles. 3 Above all, understand this: in the final days mockers will come, ridiculing and following their own desires, [4] and saying, “Where is the promise of his coming? Since the fathers fell asleep, everything goes on as it has since the beginning of creation.”[b] [5] For they deliberately overlook this fact, that long ago the heavens existed and the earth was formed out of water and through water by the word of God,[c] [6] and that through these the world of that time was flooded with water and perished. [7] But by the same word the present heavens and earth are being stored up for fire, kept until the day of judgment and destruction of the ungodly.

[8] Dear friends, do not let this one thing escape your notice: with the Lord a single day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as a single day.[d] [9] The Lord is not slow to keep his promise, as some reckon slowness. He is patient toward you, not wanting anyone to be lost, but wanting all to find their way to repentance.[e] [10] But the day of the Lord will come like a thief, and on it the heavens will pass away with a roar, and the elements will be dissolved with burning heat, and the earth and the works in it will be found.[f]

[11] Seeing that all these things are thus to be broken up, what kind of people must you be, living holy and godly lives,[g] [12] as you look for the day of God and speed its coming! On account of that day the heavens will be destroyed by fire, and the elements will melt away in the blaze.[h] [13] But according to his promise we are waiting for new heavens and a new earth, in which righteousness is at home.[i]

[14] So, dear friends, since you are waiting for these things, be eager to be found by him without spot or blemish, at peace. [15] Regard our Lord’s patience as your opportunity for salvation, as Paul too, our dear brother, has written to you with the wisdom granted to him,[j] [16] speaking of these matters as he does in every one of his letters. Some points in them are difficult to grasp, and untaught and unsteady people distort them, as they distort the rest of the scriptures, to their own ruin. [17] Since you have been forewarned, then, dear friends, watch yourselves, lest you be swept off by the error of the lawless and fall from your own secure position. [18] But grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. To him be the glory both now and to the day of eternity.[k]

Notes

- a (3:1) Second letter: perhaps referring to 1 Peter.
- b (3:4) The fathers: perhaps the ancestors of Israel, or the first generation of believers. Fell asleep: that is, died.
- c (3:5) Gen 1:2, 6–9.
- d (3:8) Ps 90:4 (Greek Old Testament 89:4).
- e (3:9) Toward you: some manuscripts read “for your sake,” and later manuscripts “toward us.”
- f (3:10) Like a thief: compare Matt 24:43; 1 Thess 5:2. Will be found: Westcott and Hort read heurethēsetai with Sinaiticus and Vaticanus as reported, perhaps meaning “will be laid bare” before God’s judgment; they suspected an early error. Later manuscripts read “will be burned up”; others have “will not be found” or “will vanish.”
- g (3:11) You: Westcott and Hort bracket this word.
- h (3:12) Speed its coming: or “earnestly desire its coming.”
- i (3:13) Isa 65:17; 66:22.
- j (3:15) Paul: Latin Paulus, “small.”
- k (3:18) Later manuscripts add “Amen.”

1 John

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 What existed from the beginning, what we have heard, what our own eyes have seen, what we gazed on and our hands handled, concerning the word of life:[a] 2 The life was disclosed; we have seen it, we testify to it, and we report to you that eternal life which was in the Father's presence and was disclosed to us. 3 We announce to you also what we have seen and heard, so that you too may have a common life with us; and our common life is with the Father and with his Son
Jesus Christ.[b] 4 We write this so that the joy we share may be full.[c]
5 This is the message we have heard from him and pass on to you:
God is light, and in him there is no darkness whatever. 6 If we claim to have fellowship with him while we walk in the darkness, we are lying and are not living out the truth. 7 But if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship with one another, and the blood of Jesus his Son cleanses us from all sin.[d] 8 If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and there is no truth within us. 9 If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just, so that he forgives us our sins and cleanses us from all wrongdoing. 10 If we say we have never sinned, we make him out to be a liar, and his message is not in us.

Notes

- a (1:1) Word of life: Greek logos, "word," "message"; compare John 1:1–4.
- b (1:3) Fellowship: Greek koinōnia, "sharing," "partnership."
- c (1:4) The joy we share: literally "our joy"; many manuscripts read "your joy." We write: later manuscripts read "we write to you."
- d (1:7) Jesus: later manuscripts read "Jesus Christ."

Chapter 2

1 My little children, I am writing these things to you so that you may not sin. But if anyone does sin, we have an advocate with the Father,

Jesus Christ the righteous one.[a] 2 He himself is the atoning sacrifice for our sins, and not for ours alone but also for those of the whole world.[b] 3 And by this we can be sure that we have come to know him: if we keep his commandments. 4 Anyone who claims, "I know him," yet ignores what he commands is lying, and the truth has no place in such a person. 5 Whoever keeps to his word, though, is someone in whom God's love has truly reached its goal. This is how we can tell we are in him: 6 whoever says he remains in him ought himself to walk as that one walked.[c] 7 Dear friends, it is no new commandment I am writing to you, but an old commandment, which you have had from the beginning. The old commandment is the word you have heard.[d] 8 Yet I am writing to you a new commandment, which is true in him and in you, because the darkness is passing away and the true light is already shining. 9 Whoever says he is in the light but hates his brother is still in the darkness.[e] 10 Whoever loves his brother remains in the light, and there is nothing in him to make him stumble. 11 But whoever hates his brother is in the darkness and walks in the darkness, and does not know where he is going, because the darkness has blinded his eyes.
12 I am writing to you, little children,
because your sins have been forgiven for his name's sake.
13 I am writing to you, fathers,
because you know him who is from the beginning.
I am writing to you, young men,
because you have overcome the evil one.
I have written to you, children,
because you know the Father.[f] 14 I have written to you, fathers,
because you know him who is from the beginning.
I have written to you, young men,
because you are strong,
and the word of God remains in you,
and you have overcome the evil one.[g] 15 Do not love the world or the things in the world. If anyone loves the world, the love of the Father is not in him. 16 For everything in the world, the craving of the flesh and the craving of the eyes and the arrogance of life, is not from the Father but from the world.[h] 17 And the world is passing away, and its craving, but whoever does the will of God remains forever.[i]

18 Children, it is the last hour; and as you heard that antichrist is coming, so now many antichrists have arisen. That is how we know that it is the last hour.[j] 19 They went out from us, but they did not belong to us; for if they had belonged to us, they would have stayed with us. But they went out so that it might be made plain that none of them belong to us. 20 But you have an anointing from the Holy One, and you all know.[k] 21 My reason for writing is not that the truth is unknown to you, but that you know it, and that no falsehood has its source in the truth. 22 Who is a liar if not the one who says Jesus is not the Christ? Such a person, disowning both Father and Son, is the antichrist. 23 No one who denies the Son has the Father either; whoever confesses the Son has the Father too.[l] 24 Let the message you heard from the beginning stay in you. If it stays in you, you also will stay in the Son and in the Father.[m] 25 And the promise he has given us is this: life eternal.

26 What I have written here concerns those who would mislead you. 27 But you have the anointing you received from him remaining in you, and so you need no one to instruct you. His anointing instructs you in all things; it is genuine and no falsehood. So, as it has instructed you, remain in him.[n]

28 And now, my little ones, remain in him, so that when he is revealed we may stand unafraid and not turn from him ashamed when he comes.[o] 29 Since you know that he is just, be sure of this too: every person who practices justice is his offspring.

Notes

- a (2:1) Advocate: Greek paraklētos, “one called alongside,” “helper,” the word used of the Spirit in John 14:16.
- b (2:2) Atoning sacrifice: Greek hilasmos, “means of atonement,” “propitiation,” “expiation.”
- c (2:6) Remains: Greek menein, “remain,” “remain,” “dwell,” a key word of this letter.

- d (2:7) Dear friends: literally “beloved ones.” Later manuscripts read “Brothers.” You have heard: later manuscripts add “from the beginning.”
- e (2:9) Brother: that is, a fellow believer, whether brother or sister; so throughout the letter.
- f (2:13) I have written: some manuscripts read “I am writing.” In verses 13–14 the verb changes from present to past tense, perhaps for variety, perhaps referring to this letter or an earlier one.
- g (2:14) Of God: Westcott and Hort bracket these words.
- h (2:16) Arrogance of life: or “pride in possessions”; Greek bios can mean “life” or “livelihood.”
- i (2:17) Its craving: Westcott and Hort bracket “its.”
- j (2:18) Antichrist: Greek antichristos, “opponent of Christ” or “one in place of Christ”; in the New Testament the word occurs only in 1 and 2 John.
- k (2:20) You all know: many manuscripts read “you know all things.” Anointing: Greek chrisma, related to Christos, “anointed one.”
- l (2:23) Whoever confesses the Son has the Father too: later manuscripts omit this sentence.
- m (2:24) In the Father: Westcott and Hort bracket “in.”
- n (2:27) Remain in him: or “you remain in him.”
- o (2:28) Comes: Greek parousia, “arrival,” “presence.”

Chapter 3

1 Look how great a love the Father has lavished on us, that we are named God’s children; and that is what we are! The world fails to recognize us for this reason: it failed to recognize him.[a] 2 Beloved, we are God’s children now, and what we will become has not yet been made clear. We do know that when he is revealed we will be like him, because we will see him just as he is.[b] 3 And everyone who has this hope set on him purifies himself, as he is pure.

4 Everyone who commits sin also commits lawlessness; sin is lawlessness. 5 You know that he appeared in order to take away sins, and in him there is no sin.[c] 6 Whoever remains in him does not go on in sin; whoever goes on in sin has neither seen nor known him. 7 Little children, let no one lead you astray. Whoever does what is right is righteous, just as he is righteous. 8 The one who keeps on sinning belongs to the devil, since the devil has sinned from the start. The Son of God appeared for this reason: to demolish the devil’s work.[d] 9 A person begotten by God does not practice sin, since God’s seed remains in him; indeed he is unable to go on sinning, since God is his father.[e] 10 Here is what shows who are God's children and who are the devil's: anyone who fails to practice justice is not God's, and the same is true of anyone who fails to love his brother.

11 For this is the message you have heard from the beginning, that we should love one another, 12 Do not be like Cain, who came from the evil one and cut his brother's throat. Why did he kill him? Because what he did was wicked, while what his brother did was upright.[f] 13 Do not be surprised, brothers, if the world hates you.[g] 14 We know that we have passed out of death into life, because we love the brothers. Whoever does not love remains in death.[h] 15 Everyone who hates his brother is a murderer, and you know that no murderer has eternal life remaining in him. 16 By this we have come to know love, that he laid down his life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brothers. 17 Whoever has this world's means of life and notices a brother in want, yet shuts off his compassion from him, how can God's love be remaining in such a one?[i] 18 Little children, let us love not in word or with the tongue but in deed and in truth.
19 This is how we will know that we belong to the truth, and we will set our hearts at rest in his presence[j] 20 whenever our heart condemns us, because God is greater than our heart, and he knows everything.
21 Dear friends, if our heart does not condemn us, we have confidence before God, 22 and whatever we ask we receive from him, because we keep his commandments and do what pleases him. 23 And this is his commandment, that we should believe in the name of his Son Jesus Christ and love one another, just as he commanded us. 24 The one who obeys what God commands remains in God, and God in that person. And here is how we know he remains in us: by the Spirit he gave us.

Notes

- a (3:1) That is what we are: later manuscripts omit these words.
- b (3:2) When he appears: or "when it is revealed."
- c (3:5) Sins: later manuscripts read "our sins."
- d (3:8) Devil: Greek diabolos, "slanderer."
- e (3:9) God's seed: literally "his seed"; perhaps God's nature or his word.
- f (3:12) Gen 4:1–16. Cain: perhaps "acquired" (Gen 4:1), or "smith."
- g (3:13) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, which includes sisters.

- h (3:14) Whoever does not love: later manuscripts add “his brother.”
- i (3:17) Compassion: literally “inward parts.”
- j (3:19) Reassure: or “persuade.” Our hearts: literally “our heart”; so in verses 20–21.

Chapter 4

1 Dear friends, do not trust every spirit; put the spirits to the test, whether they come from God, since many false prophets have gone forth into the world. 2 By this you know the Spirit of God: every spirit that confesses Jesus Christ as having come in the flesh is from God, 3
But any spirit that refuses to confess Jesus does not come from God.
That spirit belongs to the antichrist; you were told it was on its way, and already it is here in the world.[a] 4 You, little ones, come from God, and you have defeated them, since the one in you is mightier than the one in the world. 5 Those people belong to the world, so the world is the source of their talk, and the world gives them a hearing. 6 We come from God. Anyone who knows God gives us a hearing; anyone not from God gives us none. That is how we tell the Spirit of truth from the spirit of deception.
7 Beloved, let us love each other, for love comes from God, and all who love are God’s children and know God. 8 Whoever does not love has not known God, because God is love. 9 God’s love became visible among us like this: God sent his only Son into the world so that we could have life through him.[b] 10 Love consists in this: not that we have loved God, but that he loved us and sent his Son as the sacrifice that covers our sins.[c] 11 Dear friends, if God so loved us, we also ought to love one another. 12 God no one has ever beheld; yet if we love one another, God remains in us and his love has reached its goal in us.
13 By this we know that we remain in him and he in us, because he has given us of his Spirit. 14 And we have seen and testify that the Father has sent the Son as Savior of the world. 15 Whoever confesses that Jesus is the Son of God, God remains in him, and he in God.[d] 16
And we ourselves have come to know the love God has for us, and we have put our trust in it. God is love; whoever remains in love remains in God, and God remains in that person.[e] 17 By this love is brought to completion with us, so that we may have confidence on the day of judgment, because as he is, so also are we in this world. 18 Fear has no place in love; rather, love that is complete drives fear out, for fear has to do with punishment, and one who is afraid has not yet been made complete in love. 19 We love, because he first loved us.[f] 20 If anyone says, "I love God," and hates his brother, he is a liar; for whoever does not love his brother whom he has seen cannot love God whom he has not seen.[g] 21 And this commandment we have from him: whoever loves God must love his brother also.

Notes

- a (4:3) Refuses to confess Jesus: later manuscripts read "does not confess that Jesus Christ has come in the flesh." Some early witnesses, as reported, read "sets Jesus aside" or "dissolves Jesus" (Greek lyei).
- b (4:9) Unique: Greek monogenēs, "one and only," "only."
- c (4:10) Atoning sacrifice: Greek hilasmos; see 2:2.
- d (4:15) Jesus: Westcott and Hort bracket "Christ" after "Jesus."
- e (4:16) For us: literally "in us." Remains in that person: Westcott and Hort bracket the second "remains."
- f (4:19) We love: later manuscripts read "We love him."
- g (4:20) Cannot: some manuscripts read "how can he?"

Chapter 5

1 All who believe Jesus to be the Christ are God's offspring, and everyone who loves the father loves his child as well. 2 By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and carry out his commandments.[a] 3 For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not burdensome. 4 For everything born of God overcomes the world, and this is the victory that has overcome the world: our faith. 5 Who conquers the world?
Only the person who believes Jesus is God's Son.[b] 6 This is the one who came by water and blood, Jesus Christ; not by water alone, but by water and by blood. And the Spirit is the witness, because the Spirit is truth.[c] 7 For there are three that testify:[d] 8 the Spirit, the water and the blood; and the three are in agreement.[e] 9 If we accept human testimony, the testimony of God is greater; for this is the testimony of God, that he has testified concerning his Son. 10
Those who believe in God's Son carry the witness within themselves.
Those who refuse to believe God have called him a liar, since they have not trusted the witness God has given about his Son.[f] 11 And this is the witness: God gave us eternal life, and that life is found in his Son. 12 To have the Son is to have life; not to have God's Son is to be without life.

13 I have written these things to you so that you may know that you have eternal life, you who believe in the name of the Son of God.[g] 14 We have this boldness in approaching him: whenever we ask for anything in line with his will, he listens to us. 15 And if we know that he hears us in whatever we ask, we know that we have the requests
we have asked of him. 16 If anyone sees his brother committing a sin not leading to death, he shall ask, and God will give him life, for those who sin not to death. There is sin that leads to death; I do not say that one should pray about that. 17 Every wrong is sin, but not all sin is deadly.
18 We know that everyone born of God does not keep on sinning, but the one born of God guards him, and the evil one does not touch him.[h] 19 We know that we are of God, and the whole world lies in the power of the evil one. 20 We know too that the Son of God has come and given us insight to know the true one; and we are in the true one, in his Son Jesus Christ. He is the true God and eternal life.[i] 21 Little children, keep yourselves from idols.[j]

Notes

- a (5:2) Carry out: later manuscripts read "keep."
- b (5:5) Who is it: Westcott and Hort bracket a Greek particle, "and" or "but," after "who."
- c (5:6) Water and blood: perhaps Jesus' baptism and death; compare John 19:34. Some manuscripts read "water and spirit," or "water and blood and spirit."
- d (5:7) Later Latin manuscripts and a few late Greek manuscripts add, in verses 7–8, "in heaven, the Father, the Word and the Holy Spirit, and these three are one; and there are three that testify on earth." This addition, the "Johannine Comma," appears in no Greek manuscript before the 14th century except as a later marginal note, as reported in the standard editions; it entered printed Greek texts in Erasmus's third edition (1522) and so passed into the King James Version. It is not part of the text followed here.
- e (5:8) Are in agreement: literally "are into the one."
- f (5:10) In himself: some manuscripts read "in him." Believe God: some manuscripts read "believe the Son."

- g (5:13) Later manuscripts add “and that you may believe in the name of the Son of God.”
- h (5:18) The one born of God: that is, the Son of God. Guards him: many manuscripts read “guards himself.”
- i (5:20) He is the true God: “He” may refer to the Father or to Jesus Christ.
- j (5:21) Later manuscripts add “Amen.”

2 John

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 From the elder to the chosen lady and her children, whom I truly love, and not only I but everyone who knows the truth,[a] 2 because of the truth which lives on in us and will stay with us for all time:
3 Grace, mercy and peace will be with us from God the Father and from Jesus Christ, the Father's Son, in truth and love.[b] 4 I was delighted to meet some of your children walking in the truth, just as the Father commanded us.[c] 5 And now, lady, I am asking you, not as if I were giving you some new command, but the one we have had from the start: let us love one another. 6 Love means walking according to his commands. This is the command you heard from the start, and you are to walk in it. 7 Many deceivers have gone out into the world, people who deny that Jesus Christ came as a human being. Anyone like that is the deceiver and the antichrist.[d] 8 Look to yourselves, that you may not throw away the fruit of our labor but may be paid your wages in full.[e] 9 Anyone who runs ahead and does not stay with the teaching about Christ does not have God. The one who stays with that teaching has both the Father and the Son.[f] 10 Should anyone come to you who does not carry this teaching, do not welcome him under your roof or bid him good day;[g] 11 for whoever greets him shares in his evil works.
12 There is a great deal I could write to you, but I prefer not to use paper and ink. I am hoping rather to visit you and speak with you in person, so that our joy may be made full.[h] 13 The children of your chosen sister greet you.[i]

Notes

- a (1:1) Elder: Greek presbyteros, "older man," "church leader." The chosen lady: probably a church and its members, personified; compare verse 13. Some take Kyria ("lady") as a personal name.

- b (1:3) From Jesus Christ: later manuscripts read “from the Lord Jesus Christ.”
- c (1:4) Living: literally “walking”; so in verse 6.
- d (1:7) Antichrist: Greek antichristos, “opponent of Christ”; compare 1 John 2:18–22.
- e (1:8) The fruit of our labor: some manuscripts read “the fruit of your labor.”
- f (1:9) Goes on ahead: later manuscripts read “transgresses.” Remains in the teaching: later manuscripts add “of Christ.”
- g (1:10) Under your roof: perhaps the house where the church met.
- h (1:12) In person: literally “mouth to mouth.” Our joy: some manuscripts read “your joy.”
- i (1:13) Later manuscripts add “Amen.”

3 John

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 The elder, to my dear Gaius, whom I love in truth.[a]
2 Dear friend, I pray that all is well with you and that you are in health, just as it is well with your soul. 3 For I was overjoyed when brothers came and spoke of your truth, how you are living in the truth.[b] 4 I have no greater joy than this, to hear that my children are living in the truth.[c]
5 Dear friend, it is a faithful thing you do in all your service to the brothers, and to visitors from elsewhere at that. 6 They have spoken of your love before the church. You will do well to send them on their way in a manner worthy of God.[d] 7 It was for the Name that they went out, taking no help from unbelievers.[e] 8 So we ought to support people like these, so that we may become fellow workers for the truth.
9 I wrote something to the church, but Diotrephes, who likes to be first among them, does not acknowledge us.[f] 10 So when I arrive, I will bring up what he is doing, slandering us with wicked talk. Not satisfied with that, he refuses to welcome the brothers himself, hinders those who want to, and expels them from the congregation.
11 Dear friend, copy not evil but good. One who does good belongs to God; one who does evil has never seen God. 12 Demetrius has a good report from everyone, and from the truth itself. We add our testimony too, and you know that our testimony is true.[g] 13 I had much to write to you, but I do not want to write it to you with pen and ink. 14 I expect to see you before long, and then we can speak in person.[h] 15 Peace be with you. The friends greet you. Greet the friends by name.

Notes

- a (1:1) Gaius: a common Latin name, perhaps from gaudere, “to rejoice”; several men of this name appear in the New Testament (Acts 19:29; 20:4; Rom 16:23; 1 Cor 1:14).
- b (1:3) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, fellow believers, which includes sisters; so throughout the letter.
- c (1:4) Greater joy: some manuscripts read “greater grace.”
- d (1:6) Send them on their way: that is, provide what they need for the journey.
- e (1:7) The Name: that is, the name of Christ. Unbelievers: Greek ethnikoi, “Gentiles,” here meaning those outside the faith.
- f (1:9) Diotrephes: “nurtured by Zeus.” I wrote something: later manuscripts read “I would have written.”
- g (1:12) Demetrius: “belonging to Demeter,” the Greek goddess of grain.
- h (1:14) In person: literally “mouth to mouth.”

Jude

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 Jude, a slave of Jesus Christ and brother of James, to those who are called, loved by God the Father and kept for Jesus Christ:[a] 2 Mercy, peace and love be yours in fullest measure.
3 Dear friends, though I was fully intent on writing to you about the salvation we hold in common, I found I must write instead to urge you to fight hard for the faith that was entrusted once and for all to God's holy people. 4 Some people have crept in among you unnoticed, individuals long ago marked out for this judgment, godless persons who twist the grace of our God into an excuse for immorality and deny our only Master and Lord, Jesus Christ.[b] 5 Although you already know all of this, I want to remind you that the Lord rescued a people from Egypt, but later destroyed those who did not trust him.[c] 6 And the angels who failed to hold on to their own domain and deserted the home that was theirs he is holding in everlasting bonds, beneath the gloom, until the judgment of the great day.[d] 7 In the same way Sodom and Gomorrah and the cities around them, which like these indulged in sexual immorality and went after other flesh, are set before us as an example in undergoing the penalty of eternal fire.[e]
8 In just the same way these people, lost in their dreams, pollute the flesh, set lordship aside and heap abuse on the glorious ones.[f] 9
But when Michael the archangel was contending with the devil and arguing over the body of Moses, he did not presume to pronounce a slanderous judgment on him, but said, "The Lord rebuke you!"[g] 10
But these people slander whatever they do not understand, and by the things they know by instinct, like irrational animals, they are destroyed. 11 How terrible for them! They have followed Cain's path, abandoned themselves for gain to Balaam's error, and been destroyed in Korah's revolt.[h] 12 These people are hidden reefs in your love feasts, eating with you and fearing nothing, tending none but themselves;

clouds with no water, carried off by the winds; trees in late autumn with no fruit, dead twice over, torn up by the roots;[i] 13 wild waves of the sea, foaming up their own shameful deeds; wandering stars, for whom the gloom of darkness has been kept forever.[j] 14 It was about these also that Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied, saying, "See, the Lord came with his holy myriads,[k] 15 to carry out judgment against everyone, and to convict every godless person of all the godless acts they have performed, and of all the harsh words that godless sinners have said against him."[l] 16 These people are grumblers, complainers, living by their own desires; their mouths speak arrogant words, and they flatter people for the sake of gain.
17 But you, beloved, remember what the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ predicted. 18 They told you, "In the last time there will be scoffers, living by their own ungodly desires." 19 It is they who split
you apart; they live on a merely natural level, without the Spirit.[m] 20 But you, dear friends, building yourselves up on your most holy faith and praying in the Holy Spirit, 21 keep yourselves in the love of God, as you wait for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ that leads to eternal life. 22 Some, who are wavering, you must pity;[n] 23 save them, snatching them out of the fire; and others you must pity with fear, hating even the garment stained by the flesh.
24 Now to him who is able to keep you from stumbling and to set you blameless and rejoicing before his glorious presence, 25 to the one and only God our Savior, through Jesus Christ our Lord, belong glory and greatness, might and authority, before every age, now, and through all the ages. Amen.[o]

Notes

- a (1:1) Jude: Greek Ioudas, from Hebrew Yehudah (Judah), "praised" (Gen 29:35). James: Greek Iakōbos, Jacob. Loved: later manuscripts read "sanctified." Kept for Jesus Christ: or "kept by Jesus Christ."
- b (1:4) Whose sentence was written down long ago: or "who were long ago marked out for this condemnation." Master: Greek despotēs. Later manuscripts read "the only Master, God, and our Lord Jesus Christ."

- c (1:5) The Lord: so Westcott and Hort in the text, with Sinaiticus as reported, while giving “Jesus” in the margin. “Jesus” is reported for Alexandrinus and Vaticanus and is printed in the Nestle–Aland edition; other manuscripts read “God,” and P72 is reported to read “God Christ.” Known all this once for all: some manuscripts place “once” with “saved.” Compare Num 14:26–35.
- d (1:6) Domain: Greek archē, “rule,” “position of authority.” Compare Gen 6:1–4 and 1 Enoch 10:4–6, 12.
- e (1:7) Gen 19. Went after other flesh: perhaps referring to the attempt on the angels in Gen 19:4–11.
- f (1:8) Glorious ones: Greek doxai, “glories,” probably angelic beings.
- g (1:9) Michael: “who is like God?” (compare Dan 10:13; 12:1). The story is reported by early writers from the Assumption of Moses, a Jewish work of which only part survives. The Lord rebuke you: compare Zech 3:2, where the Hebrew has Yahweh.
- h (1:11) Cain: Gen 4:1–16. Balaam: Num 22–24; 31:16. Korah: “bald”; Num 16:1–35.
- i (1:12) Hidden reefs: or “stains” (Greek spilades). Love feasts: Greek agapai, communal meals of the early church.
- j (1:13) Compare Isa 57:20. Wandering stars: compare 1 Enoch 18:13–16; 21:1–6.
- k (1:14) Enoch: perhaps “dedicated” (Gen 5:18–24). Seventh from Adam: counting Adam as the first (Gen 5:1–24; compare 1 Enoch 60:8). The quotation in verses 14–15 is from 1 Enoch 1:9, a Jewish work preserved complete only in Ethiopic, with Greek and Aramaic fragments. Myriads: tens of thousands.
- l (1:15) To convict all the ungodly: some manuscripts read “to convict every soul.”
- m (1:19) Merely natural: Greek psychikoi, “natural,” “unspiritual.”
- n (1:22) Verses 22–23 are textually uncertain. Westcott and Hort print a text that names two groups, and they suspected an early corruption. Other manuscripts name three groups, with wording to the effect of “Have mercy on some who waver; rescue others by pulling them from the fire; and show mercy mixed with fear to still others.” Still others read “Rebuke some who waver.”
- o (1:25) Through Jesus Christ our Lord: later manuscripts omit these words. Before every age: later manuscripts omit these words.

Revelation

New Testament

Chapter 1

1 The unveiling of Jesus Christ, which God gave him in order to show his slaves what must happen before long. Jesus signified it by dispatching his angel to his slave John,[a] 2 He has testified to God's word and to what Jesus Christ attested, all that he saw. 3 Blessed is the person who reads this prophecy aloud, and blessed are the ones who listen to it and hold fast to the things written here, because the appointed time is close.[b] 4 John, to the seven churches in Asia: favor and peace to you from him who is, and was, and is on his way, and from the seven spirits that stand before his throne,[c]
5 and from Jesus Christ, the witness who keeps faith, first of the dead to be born to life, ruler over earth's kings. ¶To him who loves us, who
by his own blood has freed us from our sins,[d] 6 and made us a royal house, priests for God, his Father. To him belong glory and dominion through the ages of ages. Amen.[e] 7 Behold, he comes among the clouds,
and every eye will look on him,
even the ones who stabbed him,
and all the peoples of the land will beat their breasts for him.
Yes, truly. Amen.[f]
8 "I am the Alpha and the Omega," says the Lord God, who is, and was,
and is on his way, the Almighty.[g]
9 I am John, your brother and your companion in the tribulation, the kingdom, and the perseverance that belong to Jesus. I came to be on the island named Patmos on account of God's word and the witness of Jesus.[h] 10 In the Spirit I came to be, on the Lord's day, and behind me I heard a great voice, resounding like a trumpet,[i] 11 and it said, "Whatever you see, write it in a scroll and transmit it to the seven churches—Ephesus and Smyrna and Pergamum and Thyatira and Sardis and Philadelphia and Laodicea."[j]

12 So I wheeled around to look at the voice that was speaking to me. On wheeling, I observed seven lampstands made of gold, 13 and in the midst of the lampstands a figure like a son of man, wearing a garment that reached to his feet and a golden band across his breast.[k] 14 His head and hair shone with a whiteness like wool or fresh snow, and his eyes blazed like fire;[l] 15 his feet resembled bronze glowing hot in a kiln, and his voice rang out like a roar of many waters.[m] 16 His right hand held seven stars. A sharp sword with two edges projected from his mouth. His face shone as the sun does at midday.

17 On seeing him, I fell at his feet like one who was dead. Then he rested his right hand upon me, saying, "Fear not. I am the first and the last,[n] 18 as well as the one who lives. I died, and see, I am alive for all the ages, and I hold the keys of Death and of Hades.[o] 19 So write what you have seen, both what is now and what is to happen after this. 20 This is the secret of the seven stars that you saw at my right hand, and of the seven golden lampstands: the seven stars are the angels of the seven churches, and the seven lampstands are the seven churches themselves.[p]

Notes

- a (1:1) Revelation: Greek apokalypsis, "unveiling." Jesus: Greek form of the Hebrew Yeshuaʿ, "Yahweh saves." John: from the Hebrew Yoḥanan, "Yahweh is gracious." Slaves: Greek douloi, "slaves," "servants."
- b (1:3) Happy: or "blessed"; so in the other six beatitudes of the book (22:14, 22:7, 20:6, 19:9, 16:15 and 14:13). Reads aloud: that is, in the assembly.
- c (1:4) Asia: the Roman province in the west of what is now Turkey. The one who is: compare Exod 3:14 in the Greek Old Testament, where God names himself. Seven spirits: perhaps the Holy Spirit in his fullness (compare Isa 11:2; Zech 4:2–10), or seven angelic beings.
- d (1:5) Ps 89:27, 37 (Greek Old Testament 88:28, 38). Set us free: later manuscripts read "washed." Our sins: Westcott and Hort bracket "our."
- e (1:6) Exod 19:6. Forever and ever: literally "to the ages of the ages"; so throughout.
- f (1:7) Dan 7:13; Zech 12:10–14.
- g (1:8) Alpha … Omega: the opening and closing letters of the Greek alphabet; compare 21:6; 22:13. Later manuscripts add "the beginning and the end." The Lord God … the Almighty: in the Greek Old Testament kyrios ho theos ho pantokratōr renders Hebrew Yahweh ʾElohe tsevaʾot, “Yahweh, God of Armies” (for example Amos 3:13; 4:13).

- h (1:9) Brother: Greek adelphos; the plural adelphoi in this book includes sisters. Patmos: a small Aegean island lying roughly 37 miles (60 km) southwest of Miletus.
- i (1:10) In the Spirit: or “in spirit,” that is, in a prophetic trance. The Lord’s day: Greek kyriakē hēmera, probably Sunday.
- j (1:11) The seven cities lie on a circular road in the province of Asia. Ephesus: perhaps “desirable.” Smyrna: “myrrh.” Pergamum: perhaps “citadel.” Thyatira: of uncertain meaning. Sardis: of uncertain meaning. Philadelphia: “brotherly love,” named after King Attalus II Philadelphus. Laodicea: “justice of the people,” named after Laodice, a Seleucid queen. Later manuscripts add at the start of the verse “I am the Alpha and the Omega, the first and the last.”
- k (1:13) Son of man: compare Dan 7:13; 10:5–6.
- l (1:14) Compare Dan 7:9.
- m (1:15) Fine bronze: Greek chalkolibanon, a word not found before this book, apparently a fine alloy of bronze. Compare Ezek 1:24; 43:2.
- n (1:17) Compare Isa 44:6; 48:12.
- o (1:18) Hades: the Greek name for the realm of the dead. Later manuscripts add “Amen.”
- p (1:20) Angels: or “messengers”; the Greek word angelos means both.

Chapter 2

1 “To the angel of the church in Ephesus, write: ¶‘These are the words of him who grips the seven stars in his right hand and walks about among the seven golden lampstands: 2 I know your works—how hard you labor and how you persevere—and that you cannot endure bad people. You tested those who claim to be apostles though they are not, and you discovered that they were liars. 3 You are enduring, and for my name’s sake you have borne hardships without growing weary. 4
But I hold this against you, that you have left the love you had at first.
5 Call to mind, then, the height you fell from; turn back, and act as you did in the beginning. Otherwise I am coming to you, and unless you turn back I will take your lampstand away from where it stands.
6 But you have this to your credit: you detest what the Nicolaitans do, as I do too.[a] 7 Anyone who has an ear, let him pay attention to the Spirit’s message for the churches. I will give the conqueror a share of the tree of life, which grows in the paradise of God.’[b]

8 “To the angel of the Smyrna church write: ¶‘Thus speaks the first and the last, who became dead and came alive again: 9 I am aware of your tribulation and poverty—yet you are rich—and of the blasphemy against you by people claiming to be Jews who are not, but are Satan’s synagogue.[c] 10 Do not be afraid of what you will soon suffer. Notice:
the devil is going to put some of you in prison as a test, and you will endure tribulation for ten days. Prove faithful to the point of dying, and I will present you with the crown of life.[d] 11 Anyone who has an ear, let him pay attention to the Spirit’s message for the churches.
The one who conquers will suffer no injury from the second death.’ 12 “To the angel of the church in Pergamum, write: ¶‘These are the words of him who holds the sharp, double-edged sword: 13 I am aware of where you dwell, where Satan’s throne stands. You keep a firm hold on my name, and you never abandoned your faith in me, even during the days when Antipas, my faithful witness, was killed in your midst, where Satan dwells.[e] 14 But a few matters count against you. There are people with you who maintain the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balak to lay a trap before the people of Israel: to eat idol sacrifices and to fornicate.[f] 15 In the same way you also have some who adhere to the teaching of the Nicolaitans. 16 Repent, then. If not, I am coming against you swiftly, and I will fight them with the sword of my mouth.
17 Anyone who has an ear, let him pay attention to the Spirit’s message for the churches. I will give the conqueror a portion of the concealed manna. I will give him a white pebble as well, and engraved on the pebble is a new name, which nobody recognizes except its recipient.’[g] 18 “To the angel of the Thyatira church write: ¶‘Thus speaks the Son of God, the one with eyes like a blaze of fire and with feet like burnished bronze:[h] 19 I am aware of your works—your love, faith, ministry, and perseverance—and that your recent works exceed the earlier ones. 20 Yet this is my complaint against you: you put up with Jezebel, that woman who declares herself a prophetess; she instructs my slaves and misleads them into fornicating and eating idol sacrifices.[i] 21 Time to repent was given to her, but she is unwilling to turn back from her fornication. 22 Watch: I will cast her on a bed, and her fellow adulterers into severe tribulation, if they do not repent of her deeds.[j]

23 Her children I will strike with death, and every church will come to know that I am he who probes the inner self and the heart, and that I will repay each one of you as your deeds deserve.[k] 24 But to the remaining ones in Thyatira—as many as lack this teaching, such as have not known the so-called "deep things of Satan"—I tell you: I am not loading any other burden on you;[l] 25 just keep a firm grip on what you have until I arrive. 26 To the conqueror, who guards my works right to the end, I will grant authority over the nations, 27 and he will shepherd them with an iron rod, as clay vessels are smashed to pieces, just as I too have received it from my Father;[m] 28 and I will hand him the morning star. 29 Anyone who has an ear, let him pay attention to the Spirit's message for the churches.'

Notes

- a (2:6) Nicolaitans: a group otherwise known only from later reports; the name may mean "conqueror of the people." Compare verse 15.
- b (2:7) Gen 2:9; 3:22. Paradise: a Persian word for a walled garden or park, used in the Greek Old Testament for the garden of Eden.
- c (2:9) Satan: Hebrew satan, "adversary," "accuser." Later manuscripts add "your works" after "I know."
- d (2:10) Devil: Greek diabolos, "slanderer."
- e (2:13) Antipas: "in place of the father," a shortened form of Antipater; nothing more is known of him. My faithful one: Westcott and Hort bracket the second "my." Satan's throne: perhaps the great altar of Zeus, the temple of Augustus, or the city as a center of the imperial cult.
- f (2:14) Num 25:1–3; 31:16. Balaam: perhaps "devourer." Balak: "devastator." Israel: "God strives" or "he strives with God" (Gen 32:28).
- g (2:17) Manna: Exod 16:31–35. Pebble: Greek psēphos, a small smooth stone. Its meaning here is uncertain; white pebbles were used in antiquity as tokens of acquittal, admission or membership.
- h (2:18) Eyes: Westcott and Hort bracket "his" before "eyes."
- i (2:20) Jezebel: the name of King Ahab's wife (1 Kgs 16:31; 21:25–26; 2 Kgs 9:22), used here of a prophetess in Thyatira; perhaps "where is the prince?" The woman: many manuscripts read "your wife."
- j (2:22) Her works: some manuscripts read "their works."
- k (2:23) Strike with death: literally "kill with death," perhaps "with plague." Minds: literally "kidneys," regarded as the seat of the feelings. Compare Jer 17:10.
- l (2:24) Compare Acts 15:28.
- m (2:27) Ps 2:8–9 in the Greek Old Testament. Shepherd: or "rule."

Chapter 3

1 “To the angel of the Sardis church write: ¶‘Thus speaks he who possesses the seven spirits of God and the seven stars: I am aware of your works—that you bear a name saying you live, though you are dead. 2 Wake up! Shore up what is left, for it is on the point of dying.
I have not found what you have done to be complete before my God.
3 Call to mind, therefore, what you received and heard; guard it, and repent. If you do not rouse yourself, I will arrive like a thief, and you will not learn at which hour I will reach you. 4 Still, there are a few people in Sardis whose clothing is unstained; they will walk at my side dressed in white, for they deserve it.[a] 5 Thus will the conqueror be clothed in white clothes; and his name I will never blot out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father and before his angels. 6 Anyone who has an ear, let him pay attention to the Spirit’s message for the churches.’
7 “To the angel of the Philadelphia church write: ¶‘Thus speaks the holy one, the genuine one, who holds the key of David; what he opens, none will close, and what he closes, none opens:[b] 8 I am aware of your works. Observe: I have placed before you a doorway, opened, that nobody has power to close. You possess little strength; still, you kept my word and did not deny my name. 9 Observe, I am handing over some from Satan’s synagogue, who call themselves Jews and are not, but are liars. I will cause them to arrive and kneel at your feet, and to learn that I have loved you.[c] 10 Since you guarded my message of patient endurance, I in turn will guard you from the hour of testing that is about to come upon the entire inhabited world, to try the people living on earth. 11 I am coming quickly. Keep a firm grip on what you have, so that nobody robs you of your crown. 12 The victor I will make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he will go out from it no more. I will write on him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God—the new Jerusalem that comes down out of heaven from my God—and also my own new name.[d] 13 Anyone who has an ear, let him pay attention to the Spirit’s message for the churches.’
14 “To the angel of the Laodicea church write: ¶‘Thus speaks the Amen, the reliable and genuine witness, the source of God’s creation:[e]

15 I am aware of your works, that you are not cold and not hot. I would prefer you to be either cold or hot. 16 Thus, because you are warm and neither hot nor cold, I intend to spit you out of my mouth.[f] 17 You keep saying, "I am rich; I have grown wealthy; there is nothing I lack." You do not realize that it is you who are miserable and pitiful, poor and blind and naked.[g] 18 I advise you to acquire from me gold fired and purified, to make you wealthy; also white garments for you to wear, so that your disgraceful nudity is concealed; and ointment to put on your eyes, that you may see.[h] 19 I correct and train everyone I love.
Be zealous, then, and change your ways.[i] 20 Look at me, standing at the door and knocking! Should anyone hear my voice and open the door, I will enter and dine with that person, and he with me. 21 To the one who prevails I will grant a place beside me on my throne, as I too prevailed and sat down with my Father on his throne. 22 Anyone who has an ear, let him pay attention to the Spirit's message for the churches.'"

Notes

- a (3:4) People: literally "names."
- b (3:7) Isa 22:22. David: "beloved."
- c (3:9) Compare Isa 45:14; 49:23; 60:14; 43:4.
- d (3:12) Jerusalem: perhaps "foundation of peace."
- e (3:14) Amen: a Hebrew word meaning "firm," "true"; compare Isa 65:16. Beginning: or "origin," "ruler." True: Westcott and Hort bracket the article before this word.
- f (3:16) Laodicea's water was piped in from a distance and arrived tepid, unlike the hot springs of nearby Hierapolis and the cold water of Colossae.
- g (3:17) Compare Hos 12:8.
- h (3:18) Laodicea was a banking center, known for its black wool and for a medical school associated with an eye remedy.
- i (3:19) Compare Prov 3:12.

Chapter 4

1 After this I looked, and an open door appeared in heaven. The first voice, the one I had heard like a trumpet speaking with me, now said,
"Climb up here, and I will let you see what must occur after these events."

2 At once I was in the Spirit. There in heaven stood a throne, with someone seated on the throne.
3 The one seated there looked like jasper and carnelian in appearance, and around the throne was a rainbow resembling an emerald.[a] 4 Encircling the throne stood twenty-four other thrones, and on them sat twenty-four elders dressed in white, wearing crowns of gold.
5 Out of the throne burst lightning, rumbling and thunder, while in front of it seven fiery torches were burning, the seven spirits of God;[b] 6 and in front of the throne lay what seemed a glass sea like crystal.
¶In the center, around the throne, stood four living beings with eyes covering them, front and back.[c] 7 The first being resembled a lion, the second a young bull, the third had a human-looking face, and the fourth resembled an eagle in flight.[d]
8 Each of the four living creatures has six wings and is covered with eyes, round about and underneath, and without rest, by day or by night, they keep saying,

"Holy, holy, holy,
Lord God Almighty,
who was and who is and who is coming!"[e]

9 Whenever the living beings render glory, honor, and thanks to the occupant of the throne, who lives to the ages of ages, 10 the twenty-four elders will prostrate themselves in front of the occupant of the throne and will worship the one who lives to the ages of ages. They will throw their crowns before the throne and say:
11 "Deserving are you, our Lord and our God,
of taking the glory, the honor, and the power;
for you made all things,
and it is by your desire that they existed and were created."[f]

Notes

- a (4:3) Jasper: in antiquity the name covered several precious stones, perhaps here a clear, bright stone (compare 21:11). Carnelian: Greek sardion, a red stone named after Sardis.
- b (4:5) Rumbling: literally "voices." Compare Exod 19:16.

- c (4:6) In the center, around the throne: the meaning of the Greek is uncertain; perhaps "in the middle of each side of the throne." Compare Ezek 1:5–25; 10:12.
- d (4:7) Compare Ezek 1:10.
- e (4:8) Isa 6:2–3, where the Hebrew has "Yahweh of Armies."
- f (4:11) Our Lord and God: a title also claimed by the emperor Domitian, according to Suetonius.

Chapter 5

1 In the right hand of him who sat on the throne I then saw a scroll with writing inside and on the reverse, sealed up with seven seals.[a] 2 I also saw a powerful angel announcing in a booming voice, "Who deserves to open the scroll and undo its seals?" 3 Yet nobody in the heavens, nor on the land, nor beneath the ground had the ability to unroll the scroll or peer into it. 4 I began to weep bitterly, because no one had been found who deserved to open the scroll or look inside it.[b] 5 But one of the elders told me, "Stop weeping. See, the lion from Judah's tribe, David's root, has won the victory; he can open the scroll with its seven seals."[c] 6 Then, in the very center—with the throne and its four living creatures on one side and the elders on the other—I saw a Lamb standing, bearing the marks of slaughter. He had seven horns and seven eyes, and these are the seven spirits of God, commissioned to go out over all the earth.[d]
7 The Lamb came and took the scroll out of the right hand of him who sat on the throne.
8 As he took the scroll, the four living creatures and the twenty-four elders prostrated themselves before the Lamb. Every one of them held a harp and golden bowls full of incense—the prayers of God's holy people.
9 They sing a new song:

"You deserve to take the scroll and open its seals, since you were slaughtered, and with your blood you bought for God people out of every tribe, language, nation, and people,[e]

10 and you made them into a kingdom, priests serving our God, and they reign over the earth."[f] 11 And I looked and heard a sound: many angels in a ring around the throne, around the living creatures, and around the elders. Their number was myriads upon myriads and thousands upon thousands,[g] 12 calling out in a great voice,
"The slaughtered Lamb deserves
to receive might and wealth, wisdom and strength, honor and glory and praise!"
13 I heard, too, every creature that is in heaven, on the land, beneath the ground, and on the sea—everything in them—saying,
"Praise, honor, glory, and might belong to him who sits on the throne, and to the Lamb,
for ever and ever!"[h] 14 And the four living creatures said, "Amen!" And the elders fell down and worshiped.[i]

Notes

- a (5:1) Compare Ezek 2:9–10; Isa 29:11.
- b (5:4) I: Westcott and Hort bracket the emphatic pronoun.
- c (5:5) Gen 49:9–10; Isa 11:1, 10. Judah: "praised" (Gen 29:35).
- d (5:6) Seven spirits: Westcott and Hort bracket "seven." Compare Isa 53:7; Zech 4:10.
- e (5:9) Purchased for God: some manuscripts read "purchased us for God," and Alexandrinus as reported lacks "for God." Those of every tribe: literally "from every tribe."
- f (5:10) They reign: some manuscripts read "they will reign." Later manuscripts read "made us … and we will reign."
- g (5:11) Myriads of myriads: literally "ten thousands of ten thousands"; compare Dan 7:10.
- h (5:13) On the sea: Westcott and Hort bracket a Greek verb after these words.
- i (5:14) Later manuscripts add "twenty-four" before "elders" and "him who lives forever and ever" after "worshiped."

Chapter 6

1 Then I watched as the Lamb opened one of the seven seals, and I heard one of the four living creatures speak in a thunderous voice:
"Come!"[a] 2 And I looked: a white horse, and its rider holding a bow!

A crown was given him, and he rode forth as a conqueror, bent on conquest.
3 When he opened the second seal, I heard the second living creature say, "Come!" 4 Then another horse came out, red as fire, and its rider was given leave to take away peace from the earth and make people butcher one another; a huge sword was handed to him.[b] 5 When the third seal was opened by the Lamb, I heard the third living creature cry, "Come!" And what I saw was a black horse, and the rider on it held a pair of balances in his hand. 6 And I heard what sounded like a voice amid the four living beings, saying, "Wheat is a quart for a day's wage, and barley is three quarts for a day's wage; do not injure the oil and wine."[c]
7 When he opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth living creature saying, "Come!" 8 And there before me was a pale green horse, and the name of its rider was Death, and Hades came behind him. Authority was given to them over one quarter of the earth, to kill with the sword, with famine, with deadly disease, and through the wild beasts of the earth.[d] 9 When he opened the fifth seal, I saw beneath the altar the souls of people who had been put to death because of God's word and because of the witness they maintained. 10 They shouted in a great voice:
"Holy and true Master, how long until you give judgment and take vengeance for our blood upon the inhabitants of the earth?"[e] 11 Each of them received a white robe, and word came to them to take rest for a little time yet, until the count was complete of their fellow slaves and their brothers, those soon to be put to death, as they had been.[f] 12 Then he opened the sixth seal, and I watched. A great earthquake struck, the sun turned black like a sack woven of hair, and the full moon turned red as blood,[g] 13 Down to the earth fell the stars of heaven, like unripe figs flung from a fig tree when a strong wind shakes it.[h] 14 The sky was torn away like a scroll being rolled up, and every mountain and island was shifted from its place. 15 Earth's kings, its great men and its commanders, the wealthy and the mighty, every slave and every free person hid in caves and among mountain crags,[i] 16 and they call to the mountains and to the rocks: "Fall upon us and hide us from the face of the one seated on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb,[j] 17 for the great day of their anger has arrived, and who can remain standing?"[k]

Notes

- a (6:1) Come: later manuscripts read "Come and see"; so also in verses 3, 5 and 7.
- b (6:4) Was given leave: Westcott and Hort bracket "to him" here and "from" before "the earth."
- c (6:6) Quart: Greek choinix, a dry measure of about 1 liter (just over a quart), roughly one person's daily ration of grain. A day's wage: Greek dēnarion, a Roman silver coin, the usual daily wage of a laborer (Matt 20:2). The prices are many times the normal rate, signifying famine.
- d (6:8) The color of a corpse: Greek chlōros, "pale green." Pestilence: literally "death." Compare Ezek 14:21. Westcott and Hort bracket "it" after "its rider" and the article before "Death."
- e (6:10) Master: Greek despotēs.
- f (6:11) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, which includes sisters. Until the number was complete: or "until their fellow slaves and brothers had completed their course."
- g (6:12) Compare Joel 2:10, 31; Isa 50:3.
- h (6:13) Compare Isa 34:4.
- i (6:15) Commanders: Greek chiliarchoi, "commanders of a thousand," military tribunes.
- j (6:16) Hos 10:8; compare Luke 23:30.
- k (6:17) Their wrath: some manuscripts read "his wrath." Compare Joel 2:11; Mal 3:2.

Chapter 7

1 After this I saw four angels standing on the earth's four corners, holding back its four winds so that no wind would blow upon land, upon sea, or upon any tree. 2 And I saw a different angel ascending from the sunrise, carrying the living God's seal; he called out in a great voice to the four angels who had received permission to injure earth and sea, 3 "Harm neither the earth nor the sea nor the trees, until we have sealed the foreheads of our God's slaves."[a] 4 And I heard how many were sealed: one hundred forty-four thousand, sealed out of every tribe of Israel's descendants: 5 Out of Judah's tribe twelve thousand sealed; out of Reuben's, twelve thousand; out of Gad's, twelve thousand;[b] 6 out of Asher's, twelve thousand; out of Naphtali's, twelve thousand; out of Manasseh's, twelve thousand;[c] 7

out of Simeon's, twelve thousand; out of Levi's, twelve thousand; out of Issachar's, twelve thousand;[d] [8] out of Zebulun's, twelve thousand; out of Joseph's, twelve thousand; out of Benjamin's, twelve thousand sealed.[e]

[9] After this I looked, and behold, a vast crowd that nobody could count, drawn from every nation, tribe, people, and language, stood in front of the throne and also before the Lamb. They were dressed in white robes, with palm branches in their hands,

[10] And with a great shout they cry,

"Salvation is the gift of our God,
who sits upon the throne,
and of the Lamb!"

[11] All the angels were standing in a circle about the throne, the elders and the four living creatures; and before the throne they fell face down and worshiped God,

[12] and said,

"Amen! Praise and glory and wisdom,
thanks and honor,
might and strength,
belong to our God for ever and ever! Amen."[f]

[13] And one of the elders began to question me: "These who are wearing the white robes—who are they, and from where did they come?"

[14] I replied, "My lord, you know." He answered me, "These are the ones who are coming out of the great affliction. They have washed their robes and made them white in the Lamb's blood.[g]

[15] For this reason they are before God's throne and serve him by day and by night in his sanctuary;
the one seated on the throne will spread a shelter over them.[h]

[16] Never again will they be hungry, never again thirsty;
no sun will beat down on them,
no burning heat,[i]

[17] for the Lamb who is at the throne's center will be their shepherd;
he will guide them to fountains of life-giving water,
and every tear God will wipe from their eyes."[j]

Notes

- a (7:3) Compare Ezek 9:4.
- b (7:5) Reuben: "see, a son" (Gen 29:32). Gad: "fortune" (Gen 30:11). The list differs from the Old Testament lists of the tribes: Dan is missing, and Joseph and his son Manasseh both appear.
- c (7:6) Asher: "happy" (Gen 30:13). Naphtali: "my wrestling" (Gen 30:8). Manasseh: "making to forget" (Gen 41:51).
- d (7:7) Simeon: "he has heard" (Gen 29:33). Levi: "joined" (Gen 29:34). Issachar: "there is reward" (Gen 30:18).
- e (7:8) Zebulun: "honor" or "dwelling" (Gen 30:20). Joseph: "may he add" (Gen 30:24). Benjamin: "son of the right hand" (Gen 35:18).
- f (7:12) Amen: Westcott and Hort bracket the final "Amen."
- g (7:14) Compare Dan 12:1.
- h (7:15) Spread his tent over them: that is, shelter them with his presence.
- i (7:16) Isa 49:10.
- j (7:17) Ps 23:1–2; Isa 25:8. Life-giving water: literally "waters of life."

Chapter 8

1 When he opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven for about half an hour.[a] 2 And I saw the seven angels who stand before God, and seven trumpets were given to them. 3 And another angel came and stood by the altar with a gold incense pan. He was given a great amount of incense, in order to present it with the prayers of all the holy people at the golden altar before the throne. 4 And the smoke of the incense rose from the angel's hand before God, along with the prayers of the holy people. 5 Then the angel picked up the censer, put into it some fire from the altar, and cast it down upon the land. Thunder rumbled, voices sounded, lightning flashed, and the ground shook.[b]
6 The seven angels with the seven trumpets now got ready to blow. 7
The first angel sounded his trumpet; hail and fire mingled with blood came down and was flung to the earth. One third of the earth burned up, one third of the trees burned up, and every blade of green grass burned up.[c] 8 The second angel sounded his trumpet, and what looked like a great burning mountain was thrown into the sea; one third of the sea became blood, 9 one third of the creatures in the sea that had life died, and one third of the ships were destroyed. 10 The third angel sounded, and down from heaven fell a huge star, flaming like a torch;

it fell upon a third of the rivers and upon the springs. 11 The star is called Wormwood. A third of the water turned to wormwood, and many people died of the water, since it had turned bitter.[d] 12 The fourth angel sounded his trumpet. One third of the sun was struck, and one third of the moon, and one third of the stars, so that one third of them was darkened and the day lost one third of its light, and the night likewise.

13 Then, as I looked, I heard an eagle flying in midheaven call out in a great voice: "Woe! Woe! Woe to the earth's inhabitants, on account of the other trumpet blasts about to be sounded by the three remaining angels!"[e]

Notes

- a (8:1) About half an hour: Greek hōs hēmiōrion, "about a half-hour." The ancient hour was a twelfth of the daylight or of the night, and so varied in length with the season.
- b (8:5) Compare Ezek 10:2. Censer: a pan for carrying burning coals and incense.
- c (8:7) Compare Exod 9:23–25. A third of the earth was burned up: later manuscripts omit these words.
- d (8:11) Wormwood: a plant with a very bitter taste (Greek apsinthos); compare Jer 9:15.
- e (8:13) Eagle: later manuscripts read "angel."

Chapter 9

1 The fifth angel sounded his trumpet, and I saw a star that had dropped from heaven to the earth. To the star was given the key of the pit of the abyss.[a] 2 It unlocked the shaft of the abyss, and up from the shaft billowed smoke like smoke from a huge furnace, and the sun and the air grew dark with the smoke from the shaft. 3 Locusts came down out of the smoke to the earth, and they were granted the kind of power that scorpions of the earth have.[b] 4 They were told to do no damage to the grass of the earth, or to any green plant or tree, but only to those people who lack God's seal on their foreheads. 5 They were allowed not to kill them but to torment them five months, and their torment is like the torment of a scorpion when it strikes a person.[c] 6 In those days people will search for death but will not discover it; they will yearn to die, and death will flee from them. 7 In appearance the locusts resembled horses made ready for war. They wore on their heads something like golden crowns, and they had faces like human faces.[d] 8 They had hair like women's hair, and their teeth were like those of lions.[e] 9 Their chests were like breastplates of iron, and the sound of their wings was like the thunder of many chariots with horses rushing into war. 10 Their tails are like those of scorpions, with stings, and the power to injure people for five months lies in their tails. 11 They have a king over them, the angel of the abyss; his name in Hebrew is Abaddon, but in Greek he has the name Apollyon.[f] 12 The first woe is past; two more woes are still to come after this.

13 The sixth angel sounded his trumpet, and I heard one voice coming from the corners of the golden altar that is in God's presence,[g] 14 It said to the sixth angel, the trumpet holder: "Release the four angels who are held bound at the great river, the Euphrates."[h] 15 And the four angels were let loose, who stood ready for that precise hour and day and month and year, to kill one third of humanity.[i] 16 The number of the mounted troops was two hundred million; I heard what their number was.[j] 17 This is how the horses and their riders looked in my vision: the riders wore breastplates of fiery red, deep blue, and brimstone yellow. The horses had heads like lions' heads, and fire, smoke, and brimstone streamed from their mouths.[k] 18 These three plagues, the fire and smoke and sulfur pouring from the horses' mouths, killed a third of humankind. 19 The horses' power lies in their mouths and in their tails as well, for their tails look like serpents and have heads, and by means of them they inflict injury.
20 The people who remained, who had not been killed in these plagues, nevertheless did not repent of what their hands had made, nor stop worshiping the demons and the golden, silver, bronze, stone and wooden idols, which have no power to see, to hear or to walk.[l] 21 Nor did they turn away from their murders, their sorceries, their sexual immorality or their thefts.[m]

Notes

- a (9:1) Abyss: Greek abyssos, "bottomless," the deep underworld prison of hostile spirits.
- b (9:3) Compare Exod 10:12–15; Joel 1–2.

- c (9:5) Five months: roughly the life span of a locust.
- d (9:7) Compare Joel 2:4–5.
- e (9:8) Compare Joel 1:6.
- f (9:11) Abaddon: Hebrew for “destruction,” a name for the realm of the dead (Job 26:6; Prov 15:11). Apollyon: Greek for “destroyer,” perhaps also a play on the name of the god Apollo.
- g (9:13) Four horns: Westcott and Hort read only “the horns”; many manuscripts add “four.”
- h (9:14) Euphrates: the great river of Mesopotamia, the eastern frontier of the Roman world; the name perhaps means “fruitful.”
- i (9:15) That hour: not a time of day but the appointed moment; Greek eis tēn hōran, “for the hour.” The single article governs all four nouns, pointing to one fixed time.
- j (9:16) Two hundred million: Greek dismyriades myriadōn, “twice ten thousand times ten thousand.”
- k (9:17) Dark blue: Greek hyakinthinos, the color of the hyacinth, a deep blue or violet. Sulfur: Greek theion, traditionally “brimstone.”
- l (9:20) Compare Dan 5:23; Ps 135:15–17; 115:4–7.
- m (9:21) Sorceries: Greek pharmaka, “drugs,” “potions,” “spells.”

Chapter 10

1 Then I saw another mighty angel descending from heaven. A cloud was wrapped around him, a rainbow crowned his head, his face was like the sun, and his legs were like pillars of fire.[a] 2 He had a small scroll in his hand, unrolled. Then he placed his right foot on the sea and his left on the land, 3 and cried out with a great voice, as a lion roars. And when he cried out, the seven thunders uttered their voices.
4 When the seven thunders spoke, I was on the point of writing, but I heard a voice out of heaven saying, “Put a seal on what the seven thunders said; do not write it down.”[b] 5 Then the angel I had seen standing upon the sea and upon the land lifted up his right hand to heaven 6 and took an oath by the One who lives to the ages of the ages, the maker of heaven and all it holds, of the earth and all it holds, and of the sea and all it holds: “Time is up; there will be no more waiting.[c] 7 but in the days of the seventh angel’s voice, when he is about to sound his trumpet, the hidden purpose of God will be completed, just as he announced to his slaves the prophets.”[d]

8 The voice I had heard out of heaven was speaking to me once more, and it said, "Go and take the scroll that lies unrolled on the hand of the angel who is standing on the sea and on the land." 9 And I went to that angel and asked him for the little scroll. "Here, take it and eat it," he replied. "It will embitter your belly, yet in your mouth it will be as sweet as honey."[e] 10 I took the small scroll from the angel's hand and ate it up. In my mouth it tasted sweet as honey, yet once I had eaten it, my stomach turned bitter. 11 Then I was told, "Once more you have to prophesy, concerning many peoples, nations, languages and kings."[f]

Notes

- a (10:1) Legs: literally "feet."
- b (10:4) Compare Dan 8:26; 12:4, 9.
- c (10:6) Dan 12:7; compare Deut 32:40. Of the sea and all it holds: Westcott and Hort bracket these words. No more waiting: literally "time will no longer be."
- d (10:7) Compare Amos 3:7.
- e (10:9) Ezek 2:8–3:3.
- f (10:11) Concerning: or "against."

Chapter 11

1 I was given a measuring rod like a staff, and told, "Rise, and measure
God's temple and the altar, and count the people who worship in it.[a]
2 But the outer court of the temple, leave it out and do not measure it, since it was given over to the nations, who will trample down the holy city for forty-two months.[b] 3 I will empower my two witnesses, and clothed in sackcloth they will prophesy during one thousand two hundred sixty days."[c] 4 These are the two olive trees and the two lamp-stands that stand before the Lord of the earth.[d] 5 Should any enemy try to injure them, flames stream out of their mouths and devour the foes;
in just that way every would-be attacker is doomed to die.[e] 6 These two possess the power to close up heaven, so that during the span of their prophesying no showers come down; they also command the waters, changing them to blood, and can afflict the land with plagues of every sort as often as they like.[f] 7 When their witnessing is finished, the beast coming up from the bottomless pit will battle them, defeat them, and put them to death.[g] 8 And their corpses will lie in the broad street of the great city, which is called, in a spiritual sense, Sodom and

Egypt, where their Lord also was crucified.[h] 9 For three and a half days people from every people, tribe, language and nation gaze at their corpses and refuse to let them be laid in a tomb. 10 Those who live on the earth gloat over them and celebrate and exchange gifts, because these two prophets had tormented the inhabitants of the earth. 11 After three and a half days, however, life-giving breath from God entered them. They rose upright, and terror gripped the people looking on.[i] 12
And they heard a mighty voice out of heaven say to them, "Come up here!" And in a cloud they went up into heaven, while their enemies looked on.[j] 13 In that same hour a great earthquake struck, and a tenth of the city collapsed; the earthquake killed seven thousand persons.
The rest were filled with fear and gave glory to the God of heaven.[k]
14 The second woe is past; look, the third woe is coming quickly.
15 The seventh angel sounded the trumpet. Loud voices were heard in heaven, declaring,

"The kingdom of the world has become the possession of our Lord and of his Christ,
and he shall be king through all the ages."[l]

16 And the twenty-four elders, who sit on their thrones before God, prostrated themselves, faces to the ground, and worshiped God,[m] 17 saying,

"We give you thanks, Lord God Almighty,
the one who is and who was,
because you have taken up your great power
and have begun your reign.[n] 18 Furious were the nations,
and now your anger has arrived,
the moment for judging the dead,
for paying their reward to your slaves the prophets,
to the saints, and to all who revere your name,
the lowly and the great alike,
and for ruining the ruiners of the earth."[o]

19 Then the temple of God in heaven was thrown open, and inside it the ark of his covenant came into view, and there came lightning and rumbling and thunder, an earthquake and a great hailstorm.

Notes

- a (11:1) Reed: a measuring rod; compare Ezek 40:3; Zech 2:1–2. Was told: literally "saying."
- b (11:2) Forty-two months: this equals three and a half years, the span named in Dan 7:25; 12:7; compare verse 3 and 12:6, 14; 13:5. Westcott and Hort bracket "and" in the Greek number. Omit: literally "cast out outside." The nations: or "the Gentiles."
- c (11:3) Twelve hundred and sixty days: the same span as forty-two months, counting thirty days to a month.
- d (11:4) Zech 4:3, 11–14, where the Hebrew has ʾadon, "lord," not the divine name.
- e (11:5) Compare Jer 5:14; 2 Kgs 1:10–12.
- f (11:6) Compare 1 Kgs 17:1; Exod 7:17–20.
- g (11:7) Compare Dan 7:3, 7, 21.
- h (11:8) In prophetic language: literally "spiritually." Sodom: perhaps "burning." Egypt: from the Greek Aigyptos; the Hebrew name is Mitsrayim.
- i (11:11) Ezek 37:5, 10. Westcott and Hort bracket "the" before "three" and "into" before "them."
- j (11:12) Compare 2 Kgs 2:11.
- k (11:13) At that very hour: not a clock time but "at that moment." Seven thousand people: literally "names of people, seven thousand."
- l (11:15) Ps 2:2. Christ: Greek Christos, "anointed one," translating the Hebrew mashiaḥ, "Messiah."
- m (11:16) Who sit: Westcott and Hort bracket the article before "before God."
- n (11:17) Who are and who were: later manuscripts add "and who are coming." Lord God Almighty: see the note on 1:8.
- o (11:18) Ps 2:1; 115:13.

Chapter 12

1 A great sign was seen in heaven: a woman wrapped in the sun, with the moon under her feet and a crown of twelve stars on her head. 2
She was pregnant, and she was crying out in labor, in anguish to give birth. 3 Another sign was seen in heaven as well: a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and wearing seven royal crowns on its heads.[a] 4 Its tail dragged down a third of heaven's stars and flung them onto the earth. The dragon took its stand before the woman who was about to give birth, in order to swallow her child as soon as it was born.[b] 5 And she bore a child, a son, who is destined to govern every nation with a rod of iron. Her child, though, was caught up to God and to his throne.[c] 6 The woman herself fled into the wilderness, to a spot God had prepared for her, where she would be fed for twelve hundred sixty days.

7 A battle then broke out in heaven. Michael and his angels waged war against the dragon, and the dragon with his angels fought back,[d] 8 but they lost the battle, and heaven had room for them no longer.
9 and the great dragon was cast out: that primeval serpent, called the Devil and Satan, who leads the whole world astray. It was cast down to the earth, and its angels were cast down with it.[e] 10 Then a loud voice in heaven said,

"Salvation and strength have come at last,
along with the kingdom of our God and the authority of his Christ;
for the prosecutor of our brothers and sisters,
who charged them before our God both day and night,
has been hurled down.[f]
11 They overcame him by the Lamb's blood and by the word of their testimony,
and did not love their lives, even when facing death.
12 So be glad, you heavens,
and all who make your home in them!
But woe to the earth and to the sea,
because the devil has descended to you
in great fury, aware that his time is short!"[g]

13 On seeing that it had been cast down to the earth, the dragon went in pursuit of the woman, the one who had borne the male child. 14
Yet the woman received the two wings of the great eagle, to fly away into the wilderness, to the place prepared for her, where she is fed for a season, two seasons, and half a season, out of the serpent's sight.[h] 15 And from its mouth the serpent poured out water after the woman, like a river, to sweep her away with the flood. 16 The earth, however, rescued the woman. It opened its mouth and gulped down the river that the dragon had spouted from its own mouth. 17 Furious at the woman, the dragon went away to wage war against the others among her children, those who obey the commands of God and bear
the witness of Jesus.[i]

Notes

- a (12:3) Diadems: royal crowns, as distinct from the victor's wreath (Greek stephanos). Compare Dan 7:7.
- b (12:4) Compare Dan 8:10.
- c (12:5) Ps 2:9; Isa 66:7.
- d (12:7) Michael: Hebrew "who is like God?"; the angelic prince of Dan 10:13, 21; 12:1.
- e (12:9) Ancient serpent: compare Gen 3:1–15.
- f (12:10) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, which includes sisters. Accuser: compare Job 1:6–11; Zech 3:1.
- g (12:12) Compare Isa 44:23; 49:13.
- h (12:14) Dan 7:25; 12:7; that is, three and a half years. Two times: literally "times." Compare Exod 19:4.
- i (12:17) Children: literally "seed."

Chapter 13

1 And it took its stand on the sand of the seashore. ¶Out of the sea
I saw a beast emerging; it had ten horns and seven heads, a diadem on each of its ten horns, and names of blasphemy on its heads.[a] 2 The creature I saw looked like a leopard, with paws like a bear's and a mouth like a lion's. The dragon gave it his own power and throne, along with extensive authority.[b] 3 One of its heads looked as if it had been slaughtered to death, but its deadly wound was healed, and the whole earth went after the beast in amazement.[c] 4 They worshiped the dragon because it had given the authority to the beast, and they worshiped the beast as well, asking, "Who is like the beast, and who can wage war against it?"[d] 5 It received a mouth that spoke arrogant words and blasphemy, and it received authority to act for forty-two months.[e] 6 It opened its mouth to speak slanders against God, to curse his name and his tent, those who live in heaven.[f] 7 Leave was given it, too, to make war on the saints and defeat them, and to hold power over every tribe, people, tongue and nation.[g] 8 Every inhabitant of the earth will worship it, all those whose names were not recorded, from the world's founding, in the book of life belonging to the slaughtered Lamb.[h]
9 If anyone has an ear, let him listen:

10 Whoever is meant for captivity
will go to captivity;
whoever kills by the sword
must be killed by the sword.

Here is the call for the endurance and faithfulness of God's holy people.[i]

11 Then I saw a second beast ascending from the earth, with two horns like those of a lamb, yet it spoke like a dragon. 12 It wields all the authority of the first beast, acting before its eyes, and it causes the earth and those living on it to worship the first beast, the one whose deadly wound had been healed.[j] 13 It performs great signs, even bringing fire down out of heaven onto the earth in full view of everyone.[k] 14 Through the signs it was permitted to do before the beast, it misleads those living on the earth, instructing them to fashion an image of the beast who had received the sword stroke and yet lived. 15 It was also permitted to impart a spirit to the beast's statue, so that the statue itself would talk and would bring about the execution of all who would not bow before it.[l] 16 Everyone, the lowly and the mighty, the wealthy and the needy, the free and the enslaved, it compels to receive a mark on the right hand or the forehead,[m] 17 so that nobody can buy or sell without having the mark—the name of the beast or the number that stands for its name.[n] 18 Here is wisdom: whoever has insight should calculate the beast's number, for it stands for a person; its number is 666.[o]

Notes

- a (13:1) And it took its stand on the sand of the seashore: many modern editions number these words 12:18. It is the dragon; later manuscripts read "I stood," attaching the words to John's vision. Names of blasphemy: some manuscripts read "a name of blasphemy." Compare Dan 7:2–7.
- b (13:2) Compare Dan 7:4–6.
- c (13:3) Slaughtered to death: the same Greek word that is used of the Lamb in 5:6.
- d (13:4) Compare Exod 15:11.
- e (13:5) Compare Dan 7:8, 11, 20, 25. Westcott and Hort bracket "and" in the Greek number.
- f (13:6) His tent: that is, his dwelling place. Later manuscripts read "his tent and those who live in heaven."

- g (13:7) Leave was given it, too, to make war on the saints and defeat them: Westcott and Hort bracket these words, which P47, Alexandrinus and Ephraemi omit. Compare Dan 7:21.
- h (13:8) Since the founding of the world: these words may instead go with "slain," "the Lamb slain since the founding of the world"; compare 17:8. Everyone whose name: literally "whose name," in the singular.
- i (13:10) Jer 15:2; 43:11. Kills: Westcott and Hort read "will kill"; Alexandrinus, as reported, reads "is to be killed," which would yield the sense that anyone fated to be slain by the sword is slain by it. Here the saints are called to: literally "here is the endurance and the faith of the saints."
- j (13:12) On its behalf: literally "before it," "in its presence."
- k (13:13) Compare 1 Kgs 18:38.
- l (13:15) Breath: or "spirit." Westcott and Hort bracket the Greek conjunction before "everyone." Compare Dan 3:5–6.
- m (13:16) Mark: Greek charagma, a brand or stamp; the word was also used of the impression on coins and official seals.
- n (13:17) So that: Westcott and Hort bracket "and" before these words.
- o (13:18) Work out: literally "count," "reckon," using the ancient practice of giving each letter a numerical value (gematria). A human number: or "the number of a person." Six hundred and sixty-six: so Westcott and Hort and most manuscripts. P115 (3rd–4th century), Codex Ephraemi and some others read "six hundred and sixteen," and Irenaeus (about AD 180) knew of copies with that number. Both totals can be obtained from the Hebrew letters of "Nero Caesar" in different spellings, though many other solutions have been proposed.

Chapter 14

1 I looked, and the Lamb was there, standing on Mount Zion! Along with him, 144,000 people bore on their foreheads his name and the name of his Father.[a] 2 And out of heaven I heard a sound like the rushing of great waters and like loud thunder rolling; the voice that I heard was like that of harpists accompanying themselves on their harps. 3 They sing what seems a new song before the throne and before the four living creatures and the elders. And none was able to learn the song except for those 144,000 who have been bought out of the earth. 4 They are the ones who kept themselves unsoiled by women, being virgins; they are the followers of the Lamb, going wherever he leads. They were bought out of humanity as firstfruits offered to God and to the Lamb,[b] 5 and in their speech no lie was found;
they are without blemish.[c]

6 Next I saw another angel in flight high overhead, bringing an everlasting gospel to announce to earth's inhabitants, to every nation, tribe, tongue and people.[d] 7 With a loud voice he said, "Fear God and give him glory, for the hour of his judgment has arrived. Worship the maker of heaven and earth, of the sea and the springs of water."[e]
8 Another angel, a second, followed and said, "She has fallen! Fallen is Babylon the great, who gave all the nations a drink of the wine of her raging immorality!"[f]
9 Next, a third angel came after them, saying in a mighty voice, "If anyone worships the beast and its statue, and gets a mark on his forehead or on his hand, 10 he too will drink the wine of God's anger, mixed full strength in the cup of his wrath. He will be tortured in fire and brimstone before the holy angels and before the Lamb.[g] 11 The smoke of their torment goes up forever and ever. Day and night there is no rest for those who worship the beast and its image, or for anyone who takes the mark of its name."[h] 12 Here is the call for endurance on the part of the holy people, who keep God's commandments and the faith of Jesus.[i]
13 And I heard a voice speak from heaven: "Write: Blessed from this moment are the dead who die in the Lord." "Yes," the Spirit says, "let them find relief from their labors, for their deeds accompany them."[j]
14 As I watched, a white cloud appeared, and on it sat someone resembling a son of man; on his head was a crown of gold, and in his hand a keen-edged sickle.[k] 15 And a different angel emerged from the temple, shouting with a powerful voice to the one who sat upon the cloud: "Send out your sickle and harvest, for the hour to harvest has come, because the earth's crop has dried out."[l] 16 He who sat on the cloud cast his sickle onto the earth, and the earth's harvest was gathered in.
17 Out of the heavenly temple came yet another angel, and he as well held a keen-edged sickle. 18 And from the altar there came out yet another angel, who has charge over the fire. He called out with a strong voice to the holder of the sharp sickle, "Send out your sharp sickle and collect the clusters of grapes on the earth's vine, for its grapes have reached full ripeness."[m] 19 The angel cast his sickle onto the earth and harvested its grapes, flinging them into the vast winepress of God's fury. [20] Outside the city the grapes were trampled in the press, and out of it poured blood, rising to the horses' bridles, across a distance of about 180 miles.[n]

Notes

- a (14:1) Zion: the hill of Jerusalem's temple, and a name for the city; perhaps "fortress." His name and: later manuscripts omit these words.
- b (14:4) Virgins: Greek parthenoi, here masculine, perhaps picturing holy-war purity (compare Deut 23:9–10; 1 Sam 21:5) or faithfulness to God in contrast with spiritual prostitution.
- c (14:5) Compare Zeph 3:13; Isa 53:9. Later manuscripts add "before the throne of God."
- d (14:6) Gospel: Greek euangelion, "good news." Another: some manuscripts omit this word.
- e (14:7) The hour: the appointed time, not a time of day. Compare Exod 20:11; Ps 146:6.
- f (14:8) Isa 21:9; Jer 51:7–8. Babylon: the Greek form of the Hebrew Bavel; the Akkadian Bab-ili means "gate of god," while Gen 11:9 links it with Hebrew balal, "confuse." Here it is a code name for a great city, probably Rome (compare 1 Pet 5:13). Passionate immorality: literally "the wine of the passion of her immorality"; the Greek thymos can mean both "passion" and "wrath." A second angel: Westcott and Hort bracket "angel."
- g (14:10) Compare Isa 51:17; Jer 25:15; Gen 19:24.
- h (14:11) Compare Isa 34:10.
- i (14:12) The faith of Jesus: or "their faith in Jesus," or "faithfulness to Jesus."
- j (14:13) From now on: the Greek ap' arti may instead go with what follows: "From now on, yes, says the Spirit."
- k (14:14) Dan 7:13.
- l (14:15) Ripe: literally "dried," that is, fully ripe. Compare Joel 3:13.
- m (14:18) Came: Westcott and Hort bracket this verb and the article before "who has authority." Authority over the fire: compare 8:3–5.
- n (14:20) About 180 miles: Greek "1,600 stadia," about 300 km; a stadion was about 607 feet (185 m). The number may be symbolic (40 × 40, or 4 × 4 × 100). Compare Isa 63:1–6; Joel 3:13.

Chapter 15

[1] And I saw another portent in heaven, large and astonishing: seven angels holding the seven final plagues, since by them God's wrath is completed.

2 I also saw what looked like a glassy sea mingled with fire, and the victors over the beast, over its likeness, and over its name's number stood beside the glassy sea, holding God's harps.[a] 3 They are chanting the song of Moses, God's slave, and the song of the Lamb:
"Mighty and astonishing are the things you do,
O Lord God, Ruler over all!
Upright and true are your paths,
King of the ages![b]
4 Lord, who will fail to fear you and give glory to your name?
You alone are holy.
Every nation will come
and bow low before you,
for your judgments stand revealed."[c] 5 After these things I saw it: the sanctuary of the tent of testimony in heaven was opened,[d] 6 and the seven angels holding the seven plagues emerged from it, clothed in stone, pure and shining, and wearing gold sashes about their breasts.[e] 7 Then one of the four living creatures gave the seven angels seven golden bowls full of the wrath of God, who lives forever and ever. 8 And the temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God and from his power, and no one could enter the temple until the seven plagues of the seven angels were completed.[f]

Notes

- a (15:2) Beside: or "on." Harps of God: that is, harps given by God, or harps for the worship of God.
- b (15:3) Exod 15:1–18; Deut 32:4; Ps 111:2; 139:14. Moses: explained in Exod 2:10 by Hebrew mashah, "draw out." Lord God Almighty: see the note on 1:8. King of the ages: so Westcott and Hort, with P47 and Sinaiticus as first written; Alexandrinus and many others read "King of the nations," and later manuscripts "King of the saints."
- c (15:4) Jer 10:7; Ps 86:9; Mal 1:11. In Jer 10:7 the Hebrew has no divine name; in Ps 86:9 it has 'Adonay, "Lord."
- d (15:5) Tent of testimony: the tabernacle (Exod 38:21; 40:34–35 in the Greek Old Testament).
- e (15:6) Clothed in stone: so Westcott and Hort, following Alexandrinus and Ephraemi, perhaps picturing robes set with precious stones (compare Ezek 28:13).

Many manuscripts read linon, “linen,” for lithon, “stone.” Westcott and Hort bracket the article before “with the seven plagues.”

- f (15:8) Compare Exod 40:34–35; 1 Kgs 8:10–11; Isa 6:4.

Chapter 16

1 A loud voice from the temple then called to the seven angels, “Go, empty the seven bowls of God’s fury onto the earth.”
2 The first angel went off and emptied his bowl onto the land, and ugly, festering sores appeared on those who wore the beast’s mark and bowed down to its image.[a] 3 Then the second angel emptied his bowl into the sea, and the water turned into blood like a dead man’s, and every living creature in the sea perished.[b]
4 Then the third emptied his bowl into the rivers and the water sources, and these turned into blood.
5 And I heard the angel who presides over the waters declaring,
“You are righteous—who are and who were, the Holy One—because you have rendered this verdict;[c] 6 they shed the blood of the holy and of the prophets, and blood you have given them to drink;
they have earned it!”
7 And I heard the altar answer,
“Yes, O Lord God, the Almighty,
your verdicts are true and righteous!”[d] 8 The fourth emptied his bowl onto the sun, and the sun was permitted to burn people with its fire. 9 People were seared by tremendous heat, and they cursed God’s name—the God who holds power over these plagues—and refused to repent and to glorify him.
10 Then the fifth emptied his bowl onto the throne of the beast, and its realm was darkened. People chewed their tongues in anguish[e] 11 and reviled the God of heaven for their sufferings and sores, yet they did not repent of their works.
12 Then the sixth emptied his bowl onto the great Euphrates River. Its water dried up, so that a road lay ready for the kings from the east.[f] 13 And from the dragon’s mouth, from the mouth of the beast, and from the mouth of the false prophet, I watched three unclean spirits emerge, which resembled frogs.[g] 14 These are spirits of demons that do signs; they travel out to the rulers of the entire world to gather them for the war of that great day belonging to God, the Almighty. 15 ("Notice, I come as a thief does! Happy is the one who stays alert and holds on to his clothing, so that he need not walk naked and have his shame seen.") 16 And they gathered the kings together at the place that is called Harmagedon in Hebrew.[h]

17 The seventh angel emptied his bowl upon the air, and from the sanctuary, from the throne, a great voice called, "It is finished!"[i] 18 Lightning flashed, there was rumbling and thunder, and a great earthquake struck, the like of which had not happened since humans first lived on the earth, so violent was the quake.[j] 19 The great city broke into three pieces, and the nations' cities collapsed. Babylon the great came to mind before God, and he made her drink the cup brimming with the wine of his fierce anger. 20 Every island vanished; the mountains were nowhere to be seen. 21 And great hailstones, weighing about a talent, fell from the sky upon people, and people blasphemed God because of the plague of hail; for that plague was extremely severe.[k]

Notes

- a (16:2) Compare Exod 9:9–11.
- b (16:3) Compare Exod 7:17–21.
- c (16:5) The Holy One: Westcott and Hort bracket the article. Later manuscripts read "and who will be."
- d (16:7) Lord God, the Almighty: see the note on 1:8. Compare Ps 19:9.
- e (16:10) Compare Exod 10:21–23.
- f (16:12) From the east: literally "from the rising of the sun." Westcott and Hort bracket the article before "Euphrates." Compare Isa 11:15; Jer 50:38.
- g (16:13) Compare Exod 8:2–7.
- h (16:16) Harmagedon: traditionally "Armageddon"; probably Hebrew har Megiddo, "mountain of Megiddo," the site of famous battles (Judg 5:19; 2 Kgs 23:29). Some manuscripts read "Mageddon."
- i (16:17) From the throne: later manuscripts read "of heaven, from the throne."
- j (16:18) Compare Dan 12:1.

- k (16:21) About seventy pounds: literally “about a talent’s weight”; the talent was the largest ancient unit of weight, about 30–35 kg (65–75 pounds), though its value varied. Compare Exod 9:23–25.

Chapter 17

1 Then there came one of the seven angels who had been carrying the seven bowls, and he told me, “Come along! I will let you see the condemnation of the notorious prostitute who sits beside the many waters,[a] 2 the one with whom earth’s kings have committed immorality, and with the wine of whose immorality the earth’s inhabitants have grown drunk.” 3 In the Spirit he took me away to a wilderness.
There I noticed a woman seated upon a scarlet beast that was covered with blasphemous names and had seven heads and ten horns. 4 The woman wore purple and scarlet, and was resplendent with gold, jewels, and pearls. A gold cup brimming with detestable things and with the foulness of her immorality was in her hand.[b] 5 Across her forehead a name was written, a mystery: “Babylon the great, mother of the prostitutes and of the abominations of the earth.”[c] 6 The woman, I noticed, was drunk with the blood of the holy people and with the blood of Jesus’s witnesses. And when I saw her, I wondered greatly.[d] 7 The angel said, “Why do you wonder? Let me explain the secret of the woman, and of the beast that bears her, which has seven heads and ten horns. 8 The beast that you saw existed once and exists no longer; it is going to rise from the abyss and then head for ruin.
Earth’s inhabitants whose names have not, since the world was founded, been entered in the book of life will marvel at the sight of the beast, because it existed once, exists no longer, and yet will appear.[e] 9 Here is something that calls for a mind with insight: the seven heads stand for seven hills, where the woman has her seat. They also stand for seven kings;[f] 10 five are fallen, one is living, and the last has still to come; and whenever he comes, he is to remain a little while. 11
As for the beast that once was and now is not, it is itself an eighth, but it springs from the seven, and it is heading for destruction. 12 The ten horns that you saw are ten kings. They have not yet received a kingdom, but for a single hour they receive authority as kings alongside the beast.[g] 13 They share a single purpose, and they surrender their might and their authority to the beast. 14 These will fight against the Lamb, yet the Lamb will triumph over them, because Lord of lords he is, and King of kings; and with him are the called, the chosen, and the faithful ones."[h] 15 He says to me: "Those waters that you saw, on which the prostitute is seated, stand for peoples and crowds and nations and languages. 16

And the ten horns you saw, along with the beast—they will hate the prostitute, strip her of everything and leave her naked, eat her flesh, and burn what remains of her with fire.[i] 17 It is God who has moved their hearts to accomplish his intention, to act with one accord and yield their royal power to the beast until what God has spoken comes to pass. 18 The woman you saw is the great city that holds sovereignty over the kings of the earth."

Notes

- a (17:1) Beside many waters: compare Jer 51:13, of Babylon on the Euphrates and its canals.
- b (17:4) Compare Jer 51:7.
- c (17:5) A mystery: or "a name of mystery," that is, a symbolic name.
- d (17:6) Witnesses: Greek martyres, the source of the English word "martyrs."
- e (17:8) Compare Dan 7:3.
- f (17:9) Mountains: Greek orē, "mountains" or "hills"; Rome was famous as the city of seven hills. They are also seven kings: in the Greek these words begin verse 10.
- g (17:12) For a single hour: that is, for a very short time. Compare Dan 7:24.
- h (17:14) Compare Deut 10:17; Dan 2:47.
- i (17:16) In fire: Westcott and Hort bracket the Greek preposition.

Chapter 18

1 After these things I saw a different angel coming down out of heaven. He possessed great authority, and the earth shone with his glory.[a] 2 He shouted in a mighty voice:

"Fallen, fallen is Babylon the great!
She has turned into a dwelling for demons,
a lockup for every unclean spirit,
a lockup for every unclean and loathsome bird,
and a lockup for every unclean and loathsome beast.[b]

3 For from the wine of her passionate immorality
all the nations have drunk,
and the kings of the earth fornicated with her,
and the merchants of the earth grew rich
from the power of her luxury."[c] 4 Another voice from heaven I heard, crying,
"My people, leave her,
so you take no part in her sins
and no portion of her plagues;[d] 5 For her sins have piled up to the sky,
and God has recalled her crimes.[e] 6 Give back to her what she has given,
and pay her twice over according to her deeds;
in the cup that she mixed for others, mix twice as much for her.[f]
7 Give her pain and mourning to match the glory she gave herself and her wanton luxury.
In her heart she boasts,
'Enthroned as a queen I sit;
widow I am not,
and mourning I shall never know.'[g]
8 Therefore, in a single day her plagues will arrive:
pestilence, mourning, and famine,
and she will be consumed by fire,
for strong is the Lord God who has judged her."[h]
9 The kings of the earth, who were immoral with her and shared her luxury, will weep and mourn over her as they see the smoke of her burning.
10 Keeping their distance for terror at her torment, they will cry,
"Alas, alas, great city,
Babylon, city of might!
In a single hour your doom has fallen!"[i]
11 And the merchants of the earth are weeping and mourning over her, because nobody buys their merchandise any longer:[j]

12 a cargo of gold, silver, jewels, and pearls; of fine linen, purple cloth, silk, and scarlet; of all kinds of citron wood and every article of ivory;
of every article of expensive wood, and of bronze, iron, and marble;[k] 13 and cinnamon, spices, incense, perfume, and frankincense; and wine, oil, fine flour, and grain; and cattle and sheep and horses and carriages; and bodies—that is, human souls.[l] 14 "The ripe fruit you craved with all your soul has left you,
and all your rich and dazzling things
are lost to you,
and never again will people find them."[m] 15 Those who traded in these goods and made their fortunes from her will keep their distance, terrified at her torment, crying and mourning,
16 saying,
"Alas, alas, that great city,
which wore fine linen, purple, and scarlet,
and was gilded with gold,
with precious stones and pearls![n] 17 In a single hour such great wealth was devastated!" ¶Every ship-master, everyone sailing to any destination, the sailors, and all who make their living from the sea remained at a distance[o] 18 and shouted, as they saw the smoke rising from her burning, "Which city was like this great city?"[p] 19 They flung dust on their heads, crying and mourning, and they shouted,
"Alas, alas, great city,
whose costly wealth made rich
all who owned ships at sea!
In a single hour she is ruined."[q]
20 "Rejoice over her, O heaven,
you holy people, apostles, and prophets,
because God has pronounced your sentence on her!"[r] 21 Then one mighty angel picked up a boulder like a huge millstone and flung it into the sea, with these words:

"Just so, in a violent plunge,
Babylon the great city will be hurled down,
and nobody will find her again.[s] 22 No more will the music of harp and song,
of pipe and trumpet,
be heard within you;
never again will any craftsman of any trade
be found within you;
never again will the grinding of the mill
be heard within you;[t]
23 No lamp will ever again give light in you;
never again will the voices of a bridegroom and a bride sound within you.
Your merchants were the world's great men,
and by your sorcery all the nations were led astray.[u] 24 In her the blood of prophets and of holy people was found, together with the blood of everyone slaughtered on earth."

Notes

- a (18:1) Compare Ezek 43:2.
- b (18:2) Isa 21:9; 13:21; 34:11–15; Jer 50:39. Prison: or "lair." And a prison for every foul and hated beast: so Alexandrinus and some other manuscripts; Westcott and Hort place these words in the margin and read "a prison for every foul and hated bird."
- c (18:3) Have fallen: so Westcott and Hort; many manuscripts read "have drunk." Wine: Westcott and Hort bracket "the wine."
- d (18:4) Jer 51:45; Isa 48:20; 52:11.
- e (18:5) Compare Jer 51:9.
- f (18:6) Jer 50:29; Ps 137:8. Westcott and Hort bracket the article before "double."
- g (18:7) Isa 47:7–8.
- h (18:8) Single day: compare Isa 47:9. The Lord God: Westcott and Hort bracket "Lord." Compare Jer 50:34, where the Hebrew has Yahweh.
- i (18:10) Alas: Greek ouai, translated "woe" elsewhere. In a single hour: that is, suddenly; not a clock time. So also verses 17 and 19.
- j (18:11) Compare Ezek 27:1–36, the lament over Tyre.
- k (18:12) Citron wood: a fragrant North African wood prized for luxury tables.
- l (18:13) Spice: Greek amōmon, an aromatic plant from India. Ointment: Greek myron, perfumed oil. Bodies: Greek sōmata, a common term for slaves in commercial documents. Even human lives: literally “and souls of people”; compare Ezek 27:13.

- m (18:14) No one will find them: literally “they will never find them.”
- n (18:16) With gold: Westcott and Hort bracket the Greek preposition.
- o (18:17) Everyone who sails anywhere: literally “everyone sailing to a place”; later manuscripts read “all the company on ships.”
- p (18:18) Compare Ezek 27:32.
- q (18:19) Compare Ezek 27:30.
- r (18:20) Has given judgment for you against her: literally “has judged your judgment from her.” Compare Deut 32:43.
- s (18:21) Compare Jer 51:63–64.
- t (18:22) Of any trade: Westcott and Hort bracket these words. Compare Ezek 26:13; Jer 25:10.
- u (18:23) Jer 7:34; 16:9; 25:10; Isa 23:8. Westcott and Hort bracket the article before “merchants.”

Chapter 19

1 After this I heard what seemed a great noise, the voice of an immense multitude in heaven, saying, “Hallelujah!
Salvation and glory and power are our God’s,[a]
2 because true and just are his judgments.
He condemned the great prostitute,
the one who corrupted the earth by her immorality,
and he has taken vengeance on her for the blood of his slaves.”[b] 3 And a second time they cried out, “Hallelujah!
Her smoke rises for ever and ever.”[c]
4 The twenty-four elders and the four living creatures fell prostrate and worshiped the God seated on the throne, saying, “Amen! Hallelujah!”[d]
5 A voice came out of the throne, and it said, “Give praise to our God,
all his slaves,
and those who fear him,
the small and the great.”[e]

6 Then I heard what seemed the voice of an immense multitude, like the sound of rushing water and like the rumble of loud thunder,
saying,
"Hallelujah!
Because the Lord our God,
the Almighty, has taken up his reign.[f]
7 Let us rejoice and exult,
and let us give the glory to him,
for the marriage of the Lamb has arrived,
and his bride has prepared herself.[g]
8 and she was given clothing of bright, clean fine linen to wear." (The fine linen, you see, stands for the righteous deeds of the holy people.)
9 Then he told me, "Write: Blessed are the people invited to the marriage banquet of the Lamb!" And he told me, "These words are God's own truth."[h] 10 I threw myself down in front of his feet to worship him. But he told me, "Never do that! I am only a slave like you and your brothers who maintain the testimony of Jesus. Worship God!
The testimony about Jesus is what inspires prophecy."[i] 11 Then I saw heaven standing open, and a white horse appeared.
Its rider is named Faithful and True, and he judges and wages war in righteousness.[j] 12 His eyes blaze like fire, and many diadems are on his head. A name is inscribed on him that no one understands but he himself.[k] 13 He is clothed in a robe sprinkled with blood, and his name is called the Word of God.[l] 14 Heaven's armies rode behind him on white horses, dressed in pure white linen. 15 A sharp sword extends from his mouth, so that with it he may strike the nations;
he will shepherd them with a rod of iron. And he himself treads the winepress that holds the fierce wrath of God the Almighty.[m] 16 The title "King of kings and Lord of lords" is inscribed upon his cloak, on his thigh.
17 Then I noticed an angel standing in the sun. He called out in a mighty voice to every bird that flies across midheaven: "Come, assemble for God's great banquet,[n] 18 so that you may eat the flesh

of kings, of generals, and of the strong; the flesh of horses and of those who sit on them; and the flesh of everyone, free and slave, small and great."[o]

19 I saw the beast as well, and earth's kings and their armies, mustered to do battle with the horse's rider and his army. 20 The beast was seized, and so was the false prophet who had done the signs in its presence, signs that had misled those who took the beast's mark and bowed down to its image. Both of them were flung alive into the fiery lake that blazes with sulfur. 21 All the others were slain by the sword that issues from the rider's mouth, and every bird ate its fill of their flesh.

Notes

- a (19:1) Hallelujah: Hebrew halelu-yah, "praise Yah," Yah being a short form of Yahweh. In the New Testament the word occurs only in this chapter (verses 1, 3, 4, 6).
- b (19:2) Deut 32:43; 2 Kgs 9:7. On her: literally "from her hand."
- c (19:3) Isa 34:10.
- d (19:4) Ps 106:48.
- e (19:5) Ps 115:13; 134:1; 135:1.
- f (19:6) Our God: Westcott and Hort bracket "our." The Lord our God, the Almighty: see the note on 1:8. Compare Ps 93:1; 97:1, where the Hebrew has Yahweh.
- g (19:7) Bride: literally "wife."
- h (19:9) The angel: Greek "he"; compare 17:1.
- i (19:10) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, which includes sisters. The testimony of Jesus: either the witness Jesus gave, or the witness borne to him.
- j (19:11) Is called: Westcott and Hort bracket this word. Compare Isa 11:4.
- k (19:12) Later manuscripts add "names written and" before "a name written."
- l (19:13) Sprinkled: so Westcott and Hort, following some manuscripts; Alexandrinus and most others read "dipped in." Compare Isa 63:1–3.
- m (19:15) Ps 2:9; Isa 11:4; 63:3. Later manuscripts read "two-edged sword."
- n (19:17) With a loud voice: Westcott and Hort bracket the Greek preposition.
- o (19:18) Ezek 39:17–20. Commanders: see the note on 6:15.

Chapter 20

1 And I saw an angel come down from heaven; in his hand he held the key of the abyss, together with a massive chain. 2 He seized the dragon, that ancient serpent, who is the devil and Satan, and bound him fast for a thousand years.[a] 3 He flung it into the abyss, closed it up, and set a seal over it, so that it could no longer mislead the nations until the thousand years should be completed. After that it must be let loose for a short while.

4 I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given to them. I saw too the souls of those beheaded for the testimony of Jesus and for the word of God, and of those who did not bow to the beast or to its image, and did not accept the mark upon their forehead and upon their hand. They lived and ruled with Christ a thousand years.[b] 5 The rest of the dead had no new life until the thousand years ended.
This is the first resurrection. 6 Blessed—and holy—are those who have a place in the first resurrection. Over them the second death holds no authority; instead they will be priests belonging to God and to Christ, and for those thousand years they will reign with him.[c] 7 When the thousand years have run their course, Satan will be released from his prison. 8 He will go out to mislead the nations at the earth's four corners, Gog and Magog, and to muster them for battle;
they are as countless as the sand along the sea.[d] 9 They advanced over the breadth of the earth and besieged the camp of the holy people, the city that he loves. Then fire fell from heaven and consumed them.[e] 10
As for the devil who had led them astray, he was cast into the lake of burning sulfur, in which the beast and the false prophet are also found; there they will be in torment by day and by night through all the ages.
11 Then I saw a great white throne, with the one seated upon it. Earth and heaven fled from his face, and no place could be found for them. 12
And I saw the dead, important and unimportant alike, standing before the throne. Scrolls were unrolled; then another scroll was unrolled—the scroll of life. By the contents of the scrolls the dead were judged, each according to his deeds.[f] 13 The sea yielded up the dead it held;
Death and Hades yielded up the dead they held; and each person was judged by what he had done. 14 Death and Hades were thrown into the lake of fire. This is the second death, the lake of fire.[g] 15 Whoever was not listed in the scroll of life was hurled into the pool of fire.

Notes

- a (20:2) A thousand years: Latin millennium; so also in verses 3–7.
- b (20:4) Beheaded: literally “executed with the axe.” Compare Dan 7:9, 22.
- c (20:6) For the thousand years: Westcott and Hort bracket “the.”
- d (20:8) Gog and Magog: compare Ezek 38–39, where Gog is a ruler “of the land of Magog”; the meaning of the names is uncertain. Here both stand for the hostile nations.
- e (20:9) Compare 2 Kgs 1:10–12; Ezek 38:22. Later manuscripts read “from God out of heaven.”
- f (20:12) Compare Dan 7:10; 12:1.
- g (20:14) The lake of fire: Westcott and Hort print these words at the end of the verse; some manuscripts omit them.

Chapter 21

1 Then I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth had vanished, and the sea is no more.[a] 2 I saw the holy city too—a new Jerusalem—descending from God out of heaven, adorned like a bride made ready for her husband.[b]
3 A loud voice from the throne declared:
“Look! God’s tent is among human beings.
He will pitch it among them,
and they will be his peoples,
with God himself present among them as their God.[c]
4 Every tear will be wiped by him from their eyes.
Death will be no more;
no more mourning, no more crying, no more suffering,
for the former things have gone.”[d] 5 Then the one seated on the throne declared, “Look, I make everything new!” And he said, “Write this down, because these words are faithful and true.”[e] 6 Then he said to me, “They have come to pass!
I am the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end. To the thirsty one I will give as a gift out of the spring of life-giving water.[f]
7 Whoever conquers will have this as an inheritance; I will be his God, and he will be my son.[g] 8 But for the cowards, the unbelieving, the vile, murderers, fornicators, sorcerers, idolaters, and all liars: the lake that blazes with fire and sulfur will be their portion—this is the second death.”[h]

9 And there approached me one of those seven angels, those having the seven bowls that were filled with the final seven plagues; he spoke with me and said, "Come here; I will point out to you the bride, the Lamb's wife." 10 And in the Spirit he carried me off to a mountain great and high, and he displayed to me the holy city Jerusalem as it came down out of heaven from God,[i] 11 shining with the glory of God. Its radiance was like a rare jewel, like jasper, crystal clear.[j] 12 It had a wall, great and high; it had twelve gates, and over the gates twelve angels, and engraved names, which are those of the twelve tribes of Israel's sons.[k] 13 There were three gates facing east, three facing north, three facing south, and three facing west. 14 The city's wall rested on twelve foundations, and written on them were twelve names: those of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.
15 The one speaking with me had a golden measuring rod, in order to measure the city, along with its gates and its wall.[l] 16 The city lies foursquare, with its length equal to its width. With the rod he measured the city: about 1,400 miles. Its length, width, and height are identical.[m] 17 Its wall he also measured, 216 feet, using a human unit of measure, which was the angel's.[n] 18 Its wall was constructed of jasper, and the city itself was pure gold, resembling clear glass. 19 The foundations of the city's wall were adorned with all kinds of precious stones: the first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, chalcedony; the fourth, emerald;[o] 20 the fifth sardonyx, the sixth carnelian, the seventh chrysolite, the eighth beryl, the ninth topaz, the tenth chrysoprase, the eleventh jacinth, the twelfth amethyst.[p] 21
And twelve pearls were the twelve gates—every gate fashioned from one single pearl. The city's broad street was pure gold, transparent as glass.[q]
22 No temple did I see in it, for the Lord God, the Almighty, is its temple, and so is the Lamb.[r] 23 The city requires neither sun nor moon to shine upon it, since God's glory gave it light, and it has the Lamb as its lamp.[s] 24 The nations will walk by means of its light, and the kings of the earth carry their glory into it.[t] 25 Its gates will not be closed by day—and night will not exist there.[u] 26 They will carry the glory and the honor of the nations into it. 27 Nothing profane will ever enter it, nor anyone who commits abomination and falsehood, only those whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life.[v]

Notes

- a (21:1) Isa 65:17; 66:22.
- b (21:2) Compare Isa 52:1; 61:10.
- c (21:3) Lev 26:11–12; Ezek 37:27; Zech 2:10–11. Dwelling: literally "tent." Peoples: so Westcott and Hort; many manuscripts read "people." Some manuscripts add "as their God" at the end.
- d (21:4) Isa 25:8; 35:10; 65:19.
- e (21:5) Compare Isa 43:19.
- f (21:6) Isa 55:1. They are accomplished: literally "they have come to be." Alpha … Omega: see the note on 1:8.
- g (21:7) Echoing Ps 89:26–27 and 2 Sam 7:14.
- h (21:8) The faithless: or "the unbelieving." Later manuscripts add "and sinners" after "cowards."
- i (21:10) Compare Ezek 40:2.
- j (21:11) Compare Isa 60:1–2, 19.
- k (21:12) Compare Ezek 48:30–35.
- l (21:15) Compare Ezek 40:3–5.
- m (21:16) About 1,400 miles: Greek "12,000 stadia," about 2,200 km; a stadion was about 607 feet (185 m). The number is symbolic (12 × 1,000). The city is a cube, like the inner sanctuary of Solomon's temple (1 Kgs 6:20).
- n (21:17) 216 feet: Greek "144 cubits," about 65 m; a cubit was about 18 inches (45 cm). The figure (12 × 12) may refer to the wall's height or its thickness. A human unit of measure, which was the angel's: literally "a measure of a man, which is of an angel."
- o (21:19) The identification of several of these stones with their modern namesakes is uncertain. Compare the stones of the high priest's breastpiece (Exod 28:17–20) and of Ezek 28:13. Sapphire: probably lapis lazuli.
- p (21:20) Carnelian: Greek sardion; see the note on 4:3. Chrysolite: literally "gold stone," perhaps a yellow topaz. Topaz: perhaps peridot. Jacinth: Greek hyakinthos, a blue or violet stone.
- q (21:21) Compare Isa 54:11–12.
- r (21:22) The Lord God, the Almighty: see the note on 1:8.
- s (21:23) Isa 60:19–20.
- t (21:24) Isa 60:3, 5, 11. Later manuscripts read "the nations of those who are saved."
- u (21:25) Isa 60:11; Zech 14:7.
- v (21:27) Isa 52:1. Anyone who commits: Westcott and Hort bracket the article.

Chapter 22

1 Then he showed me a river of water that gives life, as clear as crystal, issuing from the throne belonging to God and to the Lamb[a] 2 midway along the city's broad street; and on this bank and that of the river stood a tree of life, which yields twelve harvests, rendering its fruit month by month. The tree's leaves serve to heal the nations.[b] 3 No accursed thing will exist any longer. In the city will stand the throne of God and the Lamb, and his slaves will worship him;[c] 4 they will see his face, and his name will be on their foreheads.[d] 5 And night will exist no longer; nor will they need the light of a lamp or of the sun, for the Lord God will cast his light on them; and they will rule as kings for ever and ever.[e]

6 And the angel said to me, "These words are faithful and true. The Lord, the God of the spirits of the prophets, commissioned his angel to show his slaves the things that must soon take place."[f] 7 "Look, I am on my way soon! Blessed is whoever heeds the prophetic words of this book."

8 I, John, am the one who heard these things and saw them. After I had heard and seen, I prostrated myself in homage at the angel's feet
—the angel who was pointing these things out to me. 9 But he said to me, "Do not do that! I am a slave together with you, with your brothers the prophets, and with those who keep the words of this book. Worship God."[g]

10 And he told me, "Do not seal up the words of this book's prophecy, for the time is near.[h] 11 Let the one who does wrong go on doing wrong, and let the one who is filthy go on being filthy; let the righteous go on practicing righteousness, and let the holy go on being made holy."[i]

12 "Look, I am on my way soon, and my reward is with me, to give to each one as his work deserves.[j] 13 I am the Alpha and the Omega, the first and the last, the beginning and the end."

14 Blessed are those who wash their robes, so that the tree of life will be theirs by right, and they may enter the city through its gates.[k] 15 Outside are the dogs, the sorcerers, the sexually immoral, the murderers, the idolaters, and everyone who loves and practices falsehood.[l]

16 “I, Jesus, have sent my angel to testify these things to you about the churches. I am the descendant of David and the root from which he sprang, the bright star of the morning.”[m]
17 The Spirit and the bride are saying, “Come!” And whoever hears should also say, “Come!” Whoever is thirsty should come; whoever wishes should receive the water of life as a gift.[n]
18 I give this warning to everyone who hears the words of this book’s prophecy: should anyone add to them, God will lay on him the plagues described in this book;[o] 19 and if anyone cuts anything from the words of the book containing this prophecy, God will cut off his allotment, whether in the tree of life or in the holy city—things written about in this book.[p]
20 The one who gives these testimonies says, “Certainly, I am on my way soon.” Amen! Come, Lord Jesus![q]
21 The grace of the Lord Jesus be with the saints.[r]

Notes

- a (22:1) Ezek 47:1–12; Zech 14:8.
- b (22:2) Tree of life: Gen 2:9; compare Ezek 47:12. Down the middle of the city’s street: these words may instead go with what follows: “Between the street and the river, on either side, stood the tree of life.” Tree: the Greek may be collective, “trees.”
- c (22:3) Compare Zech 14:11.
- d (22:4) Compare Ps 17:15; Exod 33:20.
- e (22:5) Isa 60:19; Dan 7:18, 27. Give them light: Westcott and Hort bracket the Greek preposition “upon.”
- f (22:6) The God of the spirits of the prophets: compare Num 16:22; 27:16. Later manuscripts read “the God of the holy prophets.”
- g (22:9) Brothers: Greek adelphoi, which includes sisters.
- h (22:10) Contrast Dan 12:4, 9.
- i (22:11) Compare Dan 12:10.
- j (22:12) Isa 40:10; 62:11; Prov 24:12.
- k (22:14) Who wash their robes: so Westcott and Hort, with Sinaiticus and Alexandrinus; later manuscripts read “who do his commandments.”
- l (22:15) Dogs: a term of contempt for the impure; compare Deut 23:18; Phil 3:2.
- m (22:16) Isa 11:1, 10; Num 24:17. To you: the Greek is plural.
- n (22:17) Isa 55:1.
- o (22:18) Compare Deut 4:2; 12:32.

- p (22:19) Tree of life: so Westcott and Hort and the early Greek manuscripts. The King James Version's "book of life" goes back to Erasmus, whose single Greek manuscript lacked the last verses of the book; he translated them from the Latin Vulgate, whose text in many copies reads libro, "book," for ligno, "tree."
- q (22:20) Quickly: Greek tachy, also "soon," as in 22:7, 12.
- r (22:21) Lord Jesus: Westcott and Hort bracket "Christ" after "Jesus." With the saints: so Westcott and Hort, with Sinaiticus; Alexandrinus reads "with all," and later manuscripts "with you all" or "with all the saints." Later manuscripts add "Amen."

1 Enoch

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

The Book of the Watchers (chapters 1–36)

1 The words of blessing of Enoch,[a] with which he blessed the chosen[b] and the righteous who will be living in the day of distress, when all the wicked and the godless are to be removed.
2 He took up his discourse[c] and said: Enoch was a righteous man;
God opened his eyes, and he saw a vision of the Holy One in heaven, which the angels showed me. From them I heard everything, and from them I understood what I saw, not for this generation but for one far off that is yet to come.
3 Concerning the chosen I spoke, and I took up my discourse about
them:
The Great Holy One[d] will come out from his dwelling,
4 and the eternal God will tread upon the earth, on Mount Sinai.[e]
He will appear with his host,[f]
and appear in the strength of his might from the highest heaven.
5 All will be struck with fear,
and the Watchers[g] will tremble,
and great fear and shaking will seize them to the ends of the earth.
6 The high mountains will be shaken;
the lofty hills will be brought low
and will melt like wax before a flame.
7 The earth will be split wide apart,[h]
and everything on the earth will perish,
and there will be judgment upon all.
8 But with the righteous he will make peace;
he will guard the chosen,
and mercy will rest upon them.
They will all belong to God;

he will grant them his favor
and bless them all.
He will help them all;
light will shine upon them,
and he will make peace with them.
9 Look, he comes with myriads of his holy ones,[i]
to execute judgment upon all,
to destroy all the wicked,
and to convict all flesh
for all the works of their wickedness that they have wickedly done, and for all the proud and harsh words that wicked sinners have spoken against him.

Notes

- a (1:1) Enoch: Hebrew Ḥanokh, probably "dedicated" or "initiated." He is the son of Jared and the seventh from Adam, who "walked with God" and was taken by God (Gen 5:18–24).
- b (1:1) Chosen: Geʿez ḥeruyān, traditionally "the elect"; so throughout the book.
- c (1:2) Discourse: Geʿez messālē, Greek parabolē, Aramaic matla: a solemn oracle or figurative speech, traditionally "parable." So throughout.
- d (1:3) The Great Holy One: so the Greek; the Ethiopic has "the Holy and Great One." The Aramaic fragments reportedly use qaddisha rabba, "the Great Holy One," a favorite title for God in this book.
- e (1:4) Mount Sinai: compare Deut 33:2; Mic 1:3.
- f (1:4) He will appear with his host: so the Greek, "he will appear out of his camp"; Charles regarded the line as a doublet of the next.
- g (1:5) Watchers: Aramaic ʿirin, "wakeful ones," a class of angels (Dan 4:13, 17, 23). In this book the word usually refers to the angels who sinned (chapters 6–16).
- h (1:7) Split wide apart: so the Greek; the Ethiopic reads "sink."
- i (1:9) Myriads of his holy ones: literally "ten thousands." This verse is quoted in Jude 14–15. A fragment of the Aramaic (4QEn^{c}) reportedly preserves part of it.

Chapter 2

1 Consider everything that takes place in the sky: how the lights in the heavens do not change their paths, how each rises and sets in order at its own time and does not depart from its appointed law. 2 Look at the earth and pay attention to the things that happen on it from first to last: how steady they are, how nothing on earth changes, but all the works of God appear before you. 3 Consider summer and winter:

in them the whole earth is full of water, and cloud, dew, and rain lie over it.

Chapter 3

1 Observe and see how in winter every tree appears dried up, having dropped all its leaves, except fourteen trees that do not lose their foliage but keep the old leaves for two or three years until the new ones come.[a]

Notes

- a (3:1) Fourteen trees: so the Ethiopic; the Greek is lost here. The number may come from a list of evergreens in the Aramaic original, now lost.

Chapter 4

1 Observe again the days of summer, how the sun stands over the earth opposite it. You look for shade and shelter because of the heat of the sun, and the earth too burns with scorching heat, so that you cannot walk on the ground or on a rock because of its heat.

Chapter 5

1 Observe how the trees clothe themselves with green leaves and bear fruit. So pay attention and understand all his works, and recognize that he who lives forever made them this way.

2 All his works go on in this way from year to year forever, and all the tasks that they perform for him; their tasks do not change, but everything is done as God has ordained.

3 See how the sea and the rivers likewise perform their tasks and do not depart from his commands.

4 But you have not stood firm,
and you have not done the commandments of the Lord.
You have turned aside and spoken proud and harsh words
with your unclean mouths against his greatness.
You hard-hearted, you will find no peace!

5 Therefore you will curse your days,
and the years of your life will perish;
the years of your destruction will be multiplied in an everlasting curse,

and you will find no mercy.
6 In those days you will make your names an everlasting curse for all the righteous;
by you all who curse will curse,
and all the sinners and the godless will swear by you.
For you, the godless, there will be a curse.
But all the righteous will rejoice;[a]
there will be forgiveness of sins,
and every mercy and peace and kindness.
There will be salvation for them, a good light.
But for all of you sinners there will be no salvation;
a curse will rest upon you all.
7 For the chosen there will be light and grace and peace,
and they will inherit the earth.
8 Then wisdom will be given to the chosen,
and they will all live and never sin again,
neither through godlessness nor through pride;
but those who have wisdom will be humble.
9 They will not go wrong again,
nor will they sin all the days of their life,
nor will they die from anger or wrath,
but they will complete the number of the days of their life.
Their lives will grow long in peace,
and the years of their joy will be many,
in everlasting gladness and peace,
all the days of their life.

Notes

- a (5:6) The righteous: this word is missing in the Ethiopic, which leaves a gap here; it is supplied from the sense and the Greek.

Chapter 6

1 Now when the human race had multiplied, in those days beautiful and lovely daughters were born to them. 2 The angels, the sons of heaven,[a] saw them and desired them, and they said to one another,

"Come, let us choose wives for ourselves from the daughters of men and father children for ourselves." [3] Shemihazah,[b] who was their leader, said to them, "I fear that you will not really agree to do this deed, and I alone will have to pay the penalty for a great sin." [4] They all answered him, "Let us all swear an oath and bind ourselves by curses on one another not to give up this plan, but to carry it out." [5] Then they all swore together and bound themselves by curses on one another to it. [6] They numbered two hundred in all, and in the days of Jared they descended[c] onto the peak of Mount Hermon.[d] They named it Mount Hermon because on it they had taken the oath and put themselves under curses. [7] These are the names of their leaders: Shemihazah, their leader; Arteqoph,[e] Ramtel, Kokabel, Tamiel, Ramiel, Danel, Ziqiel, Baraqel, Asael, Armaros, Batriel, Ananel, Zeqiel, Shamshiel, Sahriel, Turiel, Yomiel, and Sariel. [8] These are their chiefs over tens.[f]

Notes

- a (6:2) Sons of heaven: the angels; compare "sons of God" in Gen 6:2. Chapters 6–11 retell Gen 6:1–4.
- b (6:3) Shemihazah: so the Aramaic and Greek; Ethiopic Semyāzā. The name probably means "the Name has seen" or "my name has seen."
- c (6:6) Jared: Hebrew Yered, "descent," the father of Enoch (Gen 5:15–18). The book plays on the name: in his days the angels "descended."
- d (6:6) Hermon: the mountain is named from a root meaning "ban" or "devote under oath" (ḥerem); hence the wordplay with the curse-oath that they swore there. Compare Jubilees 4:15.
- e (6:7) The names are given in the Aramaic forms where these are reported from the fragments, otherwise in the Greek or Ethiopic forms; the Ethiopic spellings are badly corrupted. Most are formed with -el, "God," and a word for a natural phenomenon or skill. Arteqoph (Ethiopic Arākiba): "earth of the mighty one" (uncertain). Ramtel (Ethiopic Rāmē'ēl): "burning ash of God." Kokabel: "star of God." Tamiel: "perfection of God" (uncertain). Ramiel: "thunder of God" or "exalted of God." Danel: "God has judged." Ziqiel (Ethiopic Ezeqeel): "lightning flash of God." Baraqel: "lightning of God." Asael: "God has made." Armaros: perhaps from Hermoni, "the one of Hermon." Batriel: "rain of God" (uncertain). Ananel: "cloud of God." Zeqiel (Ethiopic Zaqiel): "sparks of God." Shamshiel (Ethiopic Samsapeel): "sun of God." Sahriel (Ethiopic Satarel): "moon of God." Turiel: "mountain of God." Yomiel: "day of God." Sariel (Ethiopic) or Yehaddiel (reported Aramaic): meaning uncertain.
- f (6:8) Chiefs over tens: each of the twenty leaders (counting Shemihazah) commanded ten of the two hundred.

Chapter 7

1 These, and all the others with them, took wives for themselves; each chose one for himself, and they began to go in to them and to defile themselves with them. They taught them sorcery and spells, and the cutting of roots, and showed them plants.[a] 2 The women became pregnant and bore great giants, whose height was three thousand cubits.[b] 3 They consumed everything that people had produced, and when people could no longer support them, 4 the giants turned against them and devoured human beings. 5 They began to sin against the birds, the animals, the creeping things, and the fish, and to devour one another's flesh, and they drank the blood. 6 Then the earth brought an accusation against the lawless ones.

Notes

- a (7:1) Plants: that is, the use of herbs for magic and medicine.
- b (7:2) Three thousand cubits: about 4,500 feet (1,350 m), reckoning the cubit at 18 inches (45 cm). The Ethiopic has "ells" (cubits); some Greek witnesses, in Syncellus, add that the giants fathered Nephilim, and the Nephilim fathered the Eliud.

Chapter 8

1 Asael[a] taught people to make swords and knives, shields and breastplates. He showed them the metals of the earth and how to work them, and bracelets and ornaments, the use of antimony[b] and the painting of the eyelids, all kinds of precious stones, and all coloring dyes. 2 There was a great deal of godlessness; they committed sexual immorality, they were led astray, and they became corrupt in all their ways. 3 Shemihazah taught spells and the cutting of roots; Armaros, the undoing of spells; Baraqel, the reading of lightning; Kokabel, the signs of the stars; Ziqiel, the signs of the flashes; Arteqoph, the signs of the earth; Shamshiel, the signs of the sun; and Sahriel, the courses of the moon.[c] 4 As people were perishing, they cried out, and their cry went up to heaven.

Notes

- a (8:1) Asael: so the Aramaic, reportedly, and the Greek (Asaēl), one of the leaders listed at 6:7; the Ethiopic has Azazel here and elsewhere, the name of the figure in the Day of Atonement ritual (Lev 16:8–10), and the two figures were merged in the tradition. Asael means "God has made."

- b (8:1) Antimony: a black powder used as eye paint; compare 2 Kgs 9:30.
- c (8:3) The skills match the names of the angels (see the note at 6:7). The Ethiopic list is shorter and corrupt (it has "Baraqiyal taught astrology, Kokabel the constellations, Ezeqeel the knowledge of the clouds"); this rendering follows the Greek more closely.

Chapter 9

1 Then Michael, Sariel,[a] Raphael, and Gabriel looked down from heaven and saw a great deal of blood being shed on the earth and all the lawlessness being done on the earth. 2 They said to one another, "The earth, stripped of its inhabitants,[b] raises the sound of their cry to the gates of heaven. 3 Now the souls of humankind are pleading with you, the holy ones of heaven: 'Bring our case before the Most High.'" 4 They said to the Lord of the ages:[c] "You are Lord of lords, God of gods, King of kings, God of the ages! Your glorious throne stands for every generation of the ages, and your name is holy, glorious, and blessed for all the ages! 5 You made everything, and you have authority over everything. All things are bare and open before you; you see everything, and nothing can hide from you. 6 You see what Asael has done: he has taught all wrongdoing on the earth and revealed the eternal secrets that were kept in heaven, which human beings were striving to learn.[d] 7 And Shemihazah, to whom you gave authority to rule over those who are with him, has taught spells. 8 They have gone in to the daughters of men on the earth, lain with the women, defiled themselves, and revealed to them every kind of sin. 9 The women have borne giants,[e] and through this the whole earth has been filled with blood and wrongdoing. 10 And now, look: the souls of those who have died are crying out and making their appeal to the gates of heaven. Their groaning has gone up and cannot cease because of the lawless deeds done on the earth. 11 You know all things before they happen. You see these things and allow them, and you do not tell us what we ought to do to them about these things."

Notes

- a (9:1) Michael: "Who is like God?" Sariel: "prince of God"; so the Greek and, reportedly, the Aramaic. The Ethiopic has Uriel, "God is my light." Raphael: "God has healed." Gabriel: "God is my strength" or "man of God."

- b (9:2) Stripped of its inhabitants: or "laid waste." The Greek reads "The voice of their cry, as they are destroyed on the earth, reaches the gates of heaven."
- c (9:4) The Lord of the ages: so the Ethiopic; the Greek has "to the Lord, the King."
- d (9:6) Which human beings were striving to learn: so the Ethiopic; one Greek text reads "which the sons of men practice."
- e (9:9) Giants: the Greek of Syncellus adds "bastards."

Chapter 10

1 Then the Most High, the Great Holy One, spoke. He sent Sariel[a] to the son of Lamech,[b] 2 saying, "Go to Noah[c] and tell him in my name,
'Hide yourself!' Reveal to him the end that is coming: that the whole earth will be destroyed, and a flood is about to come upon the whole earth and destroy everything on it. 3 Now teach him so that he may escape and his offspring may be preserved for all the generations of the world."

4 To Raphael the Lord said, "Bind Asael hand and foot and throw him into the darkness. Make an opening in the desert that is in Dudael,[d] and throw him into it. 5 Lay rough and jagged rocks on him, cover him with darkness, and let him stay there forever. Cover his face so that he cannot see the light. 6 On the great day of judgment he will be thrown into the fire. 7 Heal the earth that the angels have ruined, and announce the healing of the earth, that I will heal the earth,[e] so that not all human beings will perish through all the secret things that the Watchers revealed and taught their sons. 8 The whole earth has been ruined by the teaching of the works of Asael; charge all sin to him."

9 To Gabriel the Lord said, "Go against the bastards and the outcasts, the children of fornication. Destroy the children of the Watchers from among human beings. Send them against one another, so that they destroy each other in battle, for they will not have length of days. 10
No request that their fathers make of you for them will be granted, for they hope to live an everlasting life, and that each of them will live five hundred years."

11 To Michael the Lord said, "Go, inform Shemihazah[f] and the others with him who have united themselves with women, so that they defiled themselves with them in all their uncleanness. 12 When their sons have killed one another and they have seen the destruction of their loved ones, bind them for seventy generations under the hills of the earth[g] until the day of their judgment and their end, until the judgment that is forever and ever is completed. 13 In those days they will be led away to the abyss of fire, to the torment, and to the prison where they will be shut up forever. 14 Whoever is condemned and destroyed will from then on be bound together with them until the end of all generations. 15 Wipe out every spirit of the outcasts[h] and of the Watchers' children, for they have done wrong to the human race. 16 Rid the face of the earth of all wrongdoing; put an end to every evil deed, and let the plant of righteousness and truth come into view. It will become a blessing: deeds of righteousness and truth will be planted in truth and joy forever.

17 Then all the righteous will escape,
and they will live until they father thousands,
and all the days of their youth and their old age
they will complete in peace.

18 Then the whole earth will be farmed in righteousness; it will all be planted with trees and be full of blessing.

19 All pleasant trees will be planted on it, and they will plant vines on it. The vine that they plant on it will yield wine in abundance, and of all the seed that is sown on it each measure will yield a thousand, and each measure of olives will yield ten presses of oil.

20 Cleanse the earth from all oppression, from all wrongdoing, from all sin and godlessness; remove from the earth all the uncleanness that is done on it.

21 All human beings will become righteous, and all the nations will worship me and bless me, and all will bow down to me.

22 The earth will be cleansed from all defilement and from all sin, from all punishment and all torment, and I will never again send these upon it, from generation to generation and forever.

Notes

- a (10:1) Sariel: so the Greek (Istraēl, a corruption); the Ethiopic has Arsyalalyur, an unexplained name. See the note at 9:1.
- b (10:1) Lamech: Hebrew Lemekh, meaning uncertain, perhaps "strong youth." His son is Noah (Gen 5:28–29).

- c (10:2) Noah: Hebrew Noaḥ, “rest,” linked in Gen 5:29 with naḥam, “to comfort.”
- d (10:4) Dudael: perhaps “cauldron of God” or “jagged ground of God”; the place cannot be identified. Compare the wilderness of the scapegoat in Lev 16:10, 22.
- e (10:7) That I will heal the earth: so the Greek; the Ethiopic reads “that they may heal the plague.”
- f (10:11) Inform: so the Greek; the Ethiopic has “bind.”
- g (10:12) Under the hills of the earth: so the Greek; the Ethiopic has “in the valleys of the earth.”
- h (10:15) The outcasts: or “the lustful,” the giants; the word is uncertain.

Chapter 11

1 “In those days I will open the storehouses of blessing that are in heaven, to send them down upon the earth, upon the work and labor of human beings. 2 Truth and peace will be joined together through all the days of the world and through all the generations of humankind.”

Chapter 12

1 Before these things Enoch was hidden,[a] and none of the human race knew where he was hidden, where he lived, or what had become of him. 2 He spent all his time with the Watchers, and his days were passed among the holy ones.[b]

3 While I, Enoch, stood blessing the great Lord, the King of the ages, the Watchers summoned me, Enoch the scribe, and told me, 4 “Enoch, scribe of righteousness, go and announce to the Watchers of heaven, who abandoned the high heaven and the holy, everlasting sanctuary, and have defiled themselves with women, and have done as human beings do, and have taken wives for themselves: ‘You have brought great destruction on the earth, 5 and you will have no peace or forgiveness of sin.’ Since they delight in their children, 6 they will see the slaughter of their loved ones and mourn over the destruction of their sons. They will plead forever, but they will obtain neither mercy nor peace.”

Notes

- a (12:1) Was hidden: or “was taken,” echoing Gen 5:24, “he was not, for God took him.”
- b (12:2) The Watchers… the holy ones: here the faithful angels of heaven.

Chapter 13

1 Enoch went and said to Asael, “You will have no peace. A severe sentence has gone out against you, to bind you. 2 You will have no relief and no request granted, because of the wrongdoing that you taught and because of all the works of godlessness, wrongdoing, and sin that you showed to human beings.”
3 Then I went and spoke to all of them together, and they were all afraid; fear and trembling seized them. 4 They begged me to write a petition for them, so that they might find forgiveness, and to read their petition aloud in the presence of the Lord of heaven.
5 For from that time on they could not speak with him or lift up their eyes to heaven, out of shame for their sins for which they had been condemned. 6 So I wrote out their petition and the prayer concerning their spirits and their deeds one by one, and concerning their requests, that they might have forgiveness and length of days.
7 I went off and sat down by the waters of Dan,[a] in the land of Dan, to the southwest of Hermon, and I read their petition aloud until I fell asleep. 8 And look, a dream came to me, and visions fell upon me.
I saw visions of punishment, and a voice came, telling me to speak to the sons of heaven and rebuke them. 9 When I woke up, I went to them. They were all sitting together weeping at Abel-main,[b] which is between Lebanon and Senir, with their faces covered. 10 I related to them every vision I had seen while asleep, and I began to speak words of righteousness and to rebuke the heavenly Watchers.

Notes

- a (13:7) Dan: “judge.” The waters of Dan are the springs of the Jordan at Tel Dan, at the foot of Mount Hermon.
- b (13:9) Abel-main: “meadow of waters,” probably Abel-beth-maacah near Dan (2 Sam 20:14–15); the Ethiopic has ’Ubelseyāel and the Greek Ebelsata, corruptions of the same name. Senir: the Amorite name of Hermon (Deut 3:9).

Chapter 14

1 This book is the word of righteousness and of the rebuke of the Watchers who are from eternity, according to the command of the Great Holy One in that vision. 2 In my sleep I saw what I now tell with a tongue of flesh and the breath of my mouth, which the Great One gave to humankind for speaking and for understanding in the heart. [3] As he created human beings and gave them the power to understand the word of knowledge, so he created me also and gave me the power to rebuke the Watchers, the sons of heaven. [4] I wrote out your petition, and in my vision it was shown to me that your petition will not be granted to you through all the days of eternity, and that judgment has been passed on you; your request will not be granted. [5] From now on you will not go up into heaven for all eternity. The decree has gone out to bind you in the earth for all the days of the world. [6] Before that, you will see the destruction of your beloved sons; you will have no pleasure in them, but they will fall before you by the sword. [7] Your plea for them will not be granted, nor your plea for yourselves, even if you weep and pray and recite every word of the document I wrote. [8] The vision was shown to me in this way. Look, in the vision clouds called me, and mist summoned me; the course of the stars and the lightning hurried me along and drove me on, and the winds in the vision made me fly, lifted me upward, and carried me into heaven. [9] I went in until I came near a wall built of hailstones[a] and surrounded by tongues of fire, and it began to frighten me. [10] I went into the tongues of fire and came near a great house built of hailstones. The walls of the house were like a mosaic floor of hailstones, and its floor was of snow.[b] [11] Its ceiling was like the path of the stars and the lightning, and among them were fiery cherubim,[c] and their sky was water. [12] Flaming fire surrounded the walls, and its doors blazed with fire. [13] I entered that house. It was hot as fire and cold as snow, and there was nothing of the pleasures of life in it. Fear covered me, and trembling took hold of me. [14] As I was shaking and trembling, I fell on my face. And I saw in the vision, [15] and look, there was a second house, greater than the first. Its whole doorway stood open before me, and it was built of tongues of fire. [16] In every respect it so surpassed the first in splendor, magnificence, and size that I cannot describe to you its splendor and its size. [17] Its floor was of fire; above it were lightning and the path of the stars, and its ceiling too was blazing fire. [18] I looked and saw in it a lofty throne. Its appearance was like frost,[d] and its wheels were like the shining sun, and there was the sound[e] of cherubim. [19]

From beneath the throne came out rivers of blazing fire, so that I could not look at it.[f] 20 The Great Glory was seated on it. His robe was brighter than the sun and whiter than any snow. 21 None of the angels could enter that house or look at his face because of its majesty and glory, and no flesh could look at him. 22 Flaming fire encircled him, a great fire burned in front of him, and no one around him could come near him. Myriads upon myriads stood in his presence, yet he needed no counselor.[g] 23 The holiest ones who were near him did not leave by night or depart from him. 24 All this while I had lain face down, trembling. Then the Lord himself called me, speaking with his own mouth: "Come here, Enoch, and hear my word." 25 One of the holy ones came to me and roused me; he made me get up and come to the door, and I bowed my face downward.

Notes

- a (14:9) Hailstones: so the Greek; the Ethiopic has "crystals."
- b (14:10) Its floor was of snow: so the Greek; the Ethiopic has "its foundation was of crystal."
- c (14:11) Cherubim: Hebrew plural of kerub, winged heavenly beings who guard God's throne (Exod 25:18–22; Ezek 1; 10).
- d (14:18) Frost: or "ice" (Greek krystallinon, "ice-like").
- e (14:18) The sound: so the Greek, reading phōnē, "voice"; the Ethiopic has "vision."
- f (14:19) Compare Dan 7:9–10; Ezek 1:26–28.
- g (14:22) He needed no counselor: so the Greek, "every word of his is deed"; the Ethiopic reads "and he needs no holy counsel."

Chapter 15

1 He answered and said to me, and I heard his voice, "Do not be afraid, Enoch, righteous man and scribe of righteousness. Come here and hear my voice. 2 Go and say to the Watchers of heaven who sent you to intercede for them: 'You ought to intercede for human beings, not human beings for you. 3 Why have you left the high, holy, and eternal heaven, lain with women, defiled yourselves with the daughters of men, taken wives for yourselves, and acted like the children of earth, and fathered giants as your sons? 4 Though you were holy and spiritual, living eternal life, you defiled yourselves with the blood of women; you fathered children with the blood of flesh, and like human beings you longed for flesh and blood, as those who die and perish do. 5 That is why I gave them wives, so that they might make them pregnant and have children by them, so that nothing would be lacking to them on the earth. 6 But you were formerly spiritual, living eternal life, immortal for all the generations of the world. 7 Therefore I did not appoint wives for you, for the spiritual beings of heaven have their dwelling in heaven.

8 But now the giants, who were born from spirit and flesh, will be called evil spirits on the earth, and their dwelling will be on the earth. 9 Evil spirits have come out of their bodies, because they were created from above;[a] their beginning and first origin is from the holy Watchers. They will be evil spirits on the earth, and they will be called evil spirits. 10 The spirits of heaven have their dwelling in heaven, but the spirits of the earth, which were born on the earth, will have their dwelling on the earth.[b] 11 The spirits of the giants oppress, destroy, attack, wage war, and crush on the earth, and they cause sorrow. They eat no food, yet they hunger and thirst, and they cause offenses.[c] 12 These spirits will rise up against human beings and against women, because they came out from them.

Notes

- a (15:9) Because they were created from above: so the Greek; the Ethiopic reads "because they were born from men."
- b (15:10) Charles regarded this verse as an addition, since it repeats verses 7–8.
- c (15:11) They hunger and thirst: so the Ethiopic. The Greek is obscure and is sometimes taken to mean that they do not hunger, but cause illnesses.

Chapter 16

1 "'From the day of the slaughter and destruction and death of the giants, the spirits that have gone out from their bodies[a] will destroy without facing judgment. In this way they will destroy until the day of the completion, the great judgment, in which the great age will be completed upon the Watchers and the godless; it will be wholly completed.' 2 And now say to the Watchers who sent you to intercede for them, who were formerly in heaven, 3 'You were in heaven, but not all the mysteries had been revealed to you. You knew a worthless mystery,[b] and in the hardness of your hearts you made it known to the women, and through this mystery women and men are doing much evil on the earth.' [4] So say to them, 'You have no peace.'"

Notes

- a (16:1) From their bodies: literally "from the souls of their flesh."
- b (16:3) A worthless mystery: so the Greek; the Ethiopic has "rejected mysteries."

Chapter 17

[1] They took me and brought me to a place where those who were there looked like blazing fire, and whenever they wished, they took on the appearance of men. [2] They led me to the place of storm[a] and to a mountain whose highest peak reached into heaven. [3] I saw the places of the lights, the storehouses of the stars and of the thunder, and in the farthest depths a bow of fire, arrows with their quiver, a sword of fire, and all the lightning flashes. [4] They brought me to the waters of life,[b] and to the fire of the west, where the sun goes down each evening. [5] I came to a river of fire whose fire flows like water and pours out into the great sea in the west. [6] I viewed the great rivers; I reached the great river and the great darkness and went on to where no living creature walks. [7] I saw the mountains of the winter darkness and the place from which the water of every abyss pours out. [8] Every river on earth, I saw where it emptied, and where the abyss opens.

Notes

- a (17:2) Storm: so the Greek (zophōdē, "gloomy, stormy"); the Ethiopic has "darkness."
- b (17:4) The waters of life: literally "living waters," that is, running water; here perhaps the waters at the edge of the world.

Chapter 18

[1] I saw the storerooms of all the winds, and I saw how with them he has adorned the whole creation, and the foundations of the earth. [2] I saw the cornerstone of the earth. I saw the four winds that hold up the earth and the vault of the sky. [3] I saw how the winds spread out the height of heaven and stand between heaven and earth; they are the pillars of the sky. [4] I saw the winds of heaven that turn and lead the circle of the sun and all the stars to their setting. [5] I saw the earthly winds bearing the clouds along, and the roads the angels travel, and, at the earth's edge, the sky's vault overhead.

6 I went on toward the south[a] and saw a place burning day and night, where there were seven mountains of precious stones, three toward the east and three toward the south. 7 Of those toward the east, one was of colored stone, one of pearl, and one of healing stone;[b] those toward the south were of red stone. 8 The middle one reached to heaven like the throne of God; it was of antimony,[c] and the top of the throne was of sapphire. 9 I saw a blazing fire. Beyond these mountains 10 lies a region where the great earth stops and the heavens are finished. 11 I saw a great chasm among pillars of heavenly fire, and I saw in it pillars of fire falling, beyond measure both in height and in depth. 12 Beyond that chasm I saw a place that had no vault of heaven above it and no solid ground beneath it. There was no water on it and no birds; it was a desolate and dreadful place. 13 Seven stars were there, like huge mountains on fire. When I inquired about them, 14 the angel told me, "Here heaven and earth come to their limit. This place now serves as a jail for the stars and the heavenly host. 15 The stars that roll over the fire are those that disobeyed the command of the Lord at the beginning of their rising, because they did not come out at their proper times. 16 He was angry with them and bound them until the time when their sin is completed, for ten thousand years."[d]

Notes

- a (18:6) Toward the south: so the Greek; the Ethiopic lacks the direction.
- b (18:7) Healing stone: so the Greek (iaseōs); the Ethiopic has "jacinth" or "antimony." The identification of these stones is uncertain.
- c (18:8) Antimony: so the Ethiopic; the Greek has phouka, perhaps a dark stone. Compare the sapphire of the divine throne in Exod 24:10 and Ezek 1:26.
- d (18:16) Ten thousand years: so the Greek; the Ethiopic has "in the year of the mystery."

Chapter 19

1 Sariel[a] said to me, "Here will stand the angels who mixed with women. Their spirits, taking many forms, defile humankind and lead people astray into sacrificing to demons as to gods. Here they will stand until the day of the great judgment, when they will be judged until they are finished. 2 Their women, the wives of the angels who went astray, will become sirens."[b] 3 I, Enoch, alone saw the sight, the ends of all things, and no human being will see what I have seen.

Notes

- a (19:1) Sariel: "prince of God"; so the Aramaic and Greek here, reportedly; the Ethiopic has Uriel. Compare 9:1.
- b (19:2) Sirens: so the Greek (seirēnas); in the Greek Old Testament the word renders desert creatures (Isa 13:21). The Ethiopic reads "will become peaceful," a misreading of the Greek.

Chapter 20

1 Here are the names of the holy angels who stand watch: 2 Uriel,[a] one of the holy angels, in charge of the world and of Tartarus.[b] 3 Raphael, a holy angel, in charge of human spirits. 4 Raguel, a holy angel, who brings punishment on the world of the lights. 5 Michael, a holy angel, placed in charge of the finest of humankind, the people.[c] 6 Saraqael, a holy angel, in charge of the spirits of those who sin in spirit. 7 Gabriel, a holy angel, in charge of Paradise, the serpents, and the cherubim. 8 Remiel, a holy angel, whom God put in charge of those who rise.[d]

Notes

- a (20:2) Uriel: "God is my light." For the other names see the note at 9:1. Raguel: "friend of God." Saraqael (Greek Sariēl): perhaps "God has struck" or "prince of God." Remiel: "God has raised up" or "mercy of God."
- b (20:2) Tartarus: in Greek thought the deepest part of the underworld, where rebel powers are imprisoned; compare 2 Pet 2:4. The Ethiopic has "thunder and trembling."
- c (20:5) Over the people: so the Greek; the Ethiopic has "over chaos." Michael is the guardian of Israel (Dan 10:21; 12:1).
- d (20:8) Verse 8 is found only in one Greek copy, which also gives the total as seven archangels.

Chapter 21

1 I traveled on to where there was nothing made.[a] 2 There I saw something dreadful: I saw neither a heaven above nor solid ground below, but a desolate and fearful place. 3 In it seven heavenly stars lay tied together, burning, as large as great mountains. 4 Then I asked, "For what sin have they been bound, and why have they been thrown here?" 5 Uriel, a holy angel who accompanied me and who led them, replied, “Enoch, what is your question for, and why are you so eager for the truth? 6 These are some of the stars of heaven that disobeyed the command of the Lord. They have been bound here until ten thousand years are completed, the time required by their sins.”

7 From there I went to another place, more dreadful than the first. I saw a terrible thing there: a great fire burning and blazing. The place had a cleft reaching down to the abyss, full of great columns of fire falling downward. I could not see its size or its extent, nor could I estimate it. 8 Then I said, “How frightening this place is, and how terrible to look at!” 9 Uriel, one of the holy angels who was with me, answered, “Enoch, why are you so afraid and terrified?” I answered, “Because of this frightening place and this sight of pain.” 10 He said to me, “This place is the prison of the angels. They will be held here forever.”

Notes

- a (21:1) Where there was nothing made: or “to the place of chaos”; literally “to the formless.”

Chapter 22

1 Next I traveled to another place, where he pointed out to me in the west a great, high mountain and a hard rock.[a] 2 In it were four hollow places, deep and very smooth: three of them were dark and one was bright, with a spring of water in the middle of it.[b] I said, “How smooth these hollows are, how deep and dark to look at!” 3 Raphael, a holy angel who accompanied me, replied, “These hollows were made for exactly this: that the spirits of the souls of the dead might gather in them. They were made so that all the souls of human beings might gather here. 4 These places were made to hold them until the day of their judgment and until their appointed time, until the great judgment comes upon them.”
5 I saw the spirit of a dead man pleading, and its voice went out to heaven, making its case.[c] 6 I asked Raphael, the angel who was with me, “Whose spirit is this, whose voice goes up to heaven making its plea?” 7 He answered me, “This is the spirit that came out of Abel,[d] whom his brother Cain killed. He goes on accusing him until his offspring is destroyed from the face of the earth and his descendants have disappeared from the descendants of humankind."

8 Then I asked about all the hollows: "Why is each one separated from the others?" 9 He answered me, "These three[e] were made to separate the spirits of the dead. This one has been set apart for the spirits of the righteous, where the bright spring of water is. 10 This one is for sinners who die and are laid in the ground without having been judged while they lived. 11 Here their spirits are kept apart in this great pain until the great day of judgment, of punishment, and of torment for those who curse forever, and of vengeance on their spirits. There he will bind them forever. 12 This one has been set apart for the spirits of those who make accusation, who disclose how they were destroyed, when they were murdered in the days of the sinners. 13 This one was made for the spirits of people who were not godly but sinners, complete in lawlessness, who will be companions of the lawless. Their spirits will not be punished on the day of judgment, nor will they be raised from here." 14 Then I blessed the Lord of glory and said, "Blessed are you, Lord, the righteous Judge, who rules forever."[f]

Notes

- a (22:1) A great, high mountain and a hard rock: so the Greek; the Ethiopic reads "a great and high mountain of hard rock."
- b (22:2) Three of them were dark… in the middle of it: so the Greek; the Ethiopic lacks these words. An Aramaic fragment (4QEn[e]) is reported to read "deep and wide."
- c (22:5) So the Greek; the Ethiopic reads "I saw the spirits of the sons of men who were dead."
- d (22:7) Abel: Hebrew Hevel, "breath" or "vapor." Cain: Hebrew Qayin, connected in Gen 4:1 with qanah, "to acquire." Compare Gen 4:10, "Your brother's blood cries out to me from the ground," and Heb 12:24.
- e (22:9) These three: some take this to mean "these"; four places are described in verses 9–13.
- f (22:14) So the Greek, approximately; the Ethiopic reads "Blessed be my Lord, the Lord of righteousness, who rules forever."

Chapter 23

1 From there I went to another place, to the west, at the ends of the earth. 2 I saw a fire blazing and running without rest; it did not stop its course day or night but kept on in the same way. 3 I asked, "What is this that never rests?" 4 Raguel, a holy angel who accompanied me, replied, "This running fire before you is the fire in the west that drives on all the lights of heaven."

Chapter 24

1 From there I went to another place on the earth, and he showed me a range of mountains of fire that burned day and night. 2 I went beyond it and saw seven splendid mountains, each different from the others. Their stones were precious and beautiful, the whole range splendid, glorious to look at and lovely in form: three toward the east, set firmly one on another, and three toward the south, one on another, with deep, winding ravines, none of which joined any other. 3 The seventh mountain stood in the middle of them and rose above them in height, like the seat of a throne, and fragrant trees surrounded the throne. 4 Among them was a tree whose like I had never smelled; neither among these nor among others was there one like it. It had a fragrance beyond every fragrance, and its leaves, its blossoms, and its wood never wither. Its fruit is beautiful and is like the clusters of a date palm. 5 Then I said, "What a beautiful tree this is, and how fragrant! Its leaves are lovely, and its blossoms are a delight to the eye." 6 Then Michael, one of the holy and honored angels, who was with me and was their leader, answered me.

Chapter 25

1 He said to me, "Enoch, why do you ask me about the fragrance of the tree, and why do you want to learn the truth?"

2 I replied, "I wish to understand all things, and this tree above all."

3 He replied, "This lofty mountain before you, whose peak resembles God's throne, really is his throne, where the Great Holy One, the Lord of glory, the King of eternity, will sit when he comes down to visit the earth with goodness.

4 As for this fragrant tree, no flesh has authority to touch it until the great judgment, when he will take vengeance on all and bring everything to its completion forever. Then it will be given to the righteous and the humble.

5 Its fruit will be food for the chosen. It will be moved to the holy place, to the house of the Lord, the King of eternity.[a]

6 Then they will rejoice greatly and be glad,
and they will enter the holy place.
Its fragrance will be in their bones,
and they will live a long life on the earth,
as your ancestors lived;
in their days no sorrow or pain,
no toil or affliction will touch them."

7 Then I blessed the God of glory, the King of eternity, who has prepared such things for the righteous, has created them, and has promised to give them to them.

Notes

- a (25:5) Moved to the holy place: probably Jerusalem, described in chapter 26. The tree recalls the tree of life (Gen 2:9; 3:22; Rev 22:2, 14).

Chapter 26

1 From there I went to the center of the earth and saw a blessed place with trees whose branches were alive and sprouting from a tree that had been cut down.[a] 2 There I saw a holy mountain,[b] and beneath the mountain, to its east, there was water,[c] and it flowed toward the south. 3 I saw toward the east another mountain higher than this one, and between them a deep, narrow ravine; a stream ran through it, at the foot of the mountain. 4 To the west of it was another mountain, lower than it and not high, and between them a deep, dry ravine; and another deep, dry ravine lay at the far end of the three mountains. 5 All the ravines were deep and narrow, of hard rock, and no trees were planted in them. 6 I was amazed at the rock, and amazed at the ravine; I was very much amazed.

Notes

- a (26:1) The center of the earth: Jerusalem (compare Ezek 38:12; Jubilees 8:19). The cut tree that sprouts may allude to Israel's restoration (compare Isa 11:1).
- b (26:2) A holy mountain: Mount Zion. The mountain to the east is the Mount of Olives; the stream is the spring of Gihon and the Kidron; the lower mountain to the west is perhaps the Hill of Evil Counsel or the western hill; the deep ravines are the Kidron and Hinnom valleys.

- c (26:2) Water: so the Greek; the Ethiopic has "a stream."

Chapter 27

1 Then I said, "Why is this land blessed and wholly filled with trees, while this ravine between is cursed?" 2 Then Sariel,[a] one of the holy angels who was with me, answered, "This cursed valley is for those who are cursed forever. Here all those will be gathered who speak improper words against the Lord with their mouths and say harsh things about his glory. Here they will be gathered, and here will be their place of judgment.[b] 3 In the last days there will be the spectacle of a righteous judgment upon them in the presence of the righteous forever. Here those who have found mercy will bless the Lord of glory, the King of eternity. 4 In the days of their judgment[c] they will bless him for the mercy he has shown them, for he has assigned them their lot." 5 Then I blessed the Lord of glory; I proclaimed his glory and praised him as befits his majesty.

Notes
- a (27:2) Sariel: so the Greek; the Ethiopic has Uriel. See the notes at 9:1 and 19:1.
- b (27:2) This cursed valley: the Valley of Hinnom (Gehenna), south of Jerusalem, a place of child sacrifice under the kings (Jer 7:31–32) and later an image of final punishment (Isa 66:24; Mark 9:43–48).
- c (27:4) Their judgment: the judgment of the wicked.

Chapter 28

1 From there I went eastward into the middle of the mountain range of the wilderness, and I saw desert land, lonely, but full of trees and plants.[a] 2 Water gushed out from above. 3 It streamed like an abundant watercourse flowing toward the northwest, and from every side it sent up water and dew.[b]

Notes
- a (28:1) But full of trees and plants: so the Greek; the Ethiopic places the trees after the water of verse 2.
- b (28:3) Water and dew: so the Greek; the Ethiopic has "clouds and dew."

Chapter 29

1 From there I went to another place in the wilderness, to the east of this mountain range, and came near it. 2 There I saw trees of judgment,[a] breathing out the fragrance of frankincense and myrrh,
and the trees were not like ordinary trees.[b]

Notes

- a (29:2) Trees of judgment: so the Ethiopic, perhaps a corruption; the Greek has "aromatic trees."
- b (29:2) Not like ordinary trees: so the Greek, approximately; the Ethiopic has "similar to the almond tree."

Chapter 30

1 Past these I journeyed a long way east and came upon another place, a well-watered valley, 2 with a tree in it the color of fragrant trees, like the mastic.[a] 3 Fragrant cinnamon grew along the valley slopes. Past them I continued east.

Notes

- a (30:2) Mastic: an aromatic resin from the mastic tree (Pistacia lentiscus). The Greek here is uncertain.

Chapter 31

1 I saw other mountains, and on them were trees from which flowed nectar called sarara and galbanum.[a] 2 Beyond these mountains I saw another mountain, and on it were aloe trees,[b] all full of stacte, like almond trees. 3 When one burns it, it smells sweeter than any perfume.

Notes

- a (31:1) Sarara: an aromatic not otherwise known, perhaps storax. Galbanum is a fragrant gum resin used in the incense of the tabernacle (Exod 30:34).
- b (31:2) Aloe trees: aloeswood, a fragrant wood; compare Ps 45:8; Prov 7:17. Stacte: a fragrant resin (Exod 30:34), perhaps from storax or myrrh.

Chapter 32

1 Leaving these fragrances behind, as I gazed northward[a] over the mountains, I saw seven mountains full of choice nard, fragrant trees, cinnamon, and pepper. 2 From there I passed over the summits of all those mountains, far to the east of the earth. I crossed above the Red Sea[b] and went far beyond it, and I passed over the darkness,[c] far from it. 3 I came to the Garden of Righteousness. From far off I saw trees more numerous and greater than these, of fine fragrance, very beautiful and glorious, and the tree of wisdom, whose fruit the holy ones eat and gain great wisdom. 4 That tree is as tall as a fir; its leaves are like those of the carob, and its fruit is like a cluster of grapes, very beautiful. Its fragrance spreads far beyond the tree. 5 Then I said, "How beautiful this tree is, and how pleasing to look at!" 6 Raphael, the holy angel accompanying me, replied, "That is the tree of wisdom. Your father and mother of old, who lived long before you, ate from it; they gained wisdom, their eyes were opened, they realized they were naked, and they were expelled from the garden."[d]

Notes

- a (32:1) Toward the north: the Greek has "toward the northeast."
- b (32:2) The Red Sea: so the Greek (Erythra thalassa), which in ancient usage included the Indian Ocean and the Persian Gulf.
- c (32:2) The darkness: so the Greek (zotiēl is read as a corruption of zophos, "darkness"); the Ethiopic reads "the angel Zotiel."
- d (32:6) Your aged father and your aged mother: Adam and Eve. Adam: Hebrew 'adam, "human being," connected with 'adamah, "ground" (Gen 2:7). Eve: Hebrew Ḥawwah, connected with ḥay, "living" (Gen 3:20). Compare Gen 3:6–7, 23–24.

Chapter 33

1 From there I went to the ends of the earth and saw great animals there, each different from the others, and also birds different in appearance, beauty, and voice, each from the other. 2 East of those animals I saw the ends of the earth on which heaven rests, and the gates of heaven open. 3 I watched the heavenly stars emerge; I counted the gates they emerge from and recorded every exit, star by star: how many, what each is called, its route, its station, its seasons, and its months, just as Uriel, the holy angel at my side, pointed them out. 4 He showed me everything and wrote it down for me. He also wrote down their names for me, and their laws and their functions.

Chapter 34

1 Then I traveled north to the earth's farthest reaches, and at the edge of the whole world I beheld a great and splendid marvel. 2 Three heavenly gates stood open in the sky there, and north winds issue from each; their blowing brings cold and hail, frost and snow, dew and rain. 3 Through one gate they blow to bring benefit; through the other two they blow violently and bring hardship on the earth.

Chapter 35

1 From there I went westward to the ends of the earth, and there I saw three gates of heaven open, just as I had seen in the east: the same number of gates and the same number of exits.

Chapter 36

1 From there I went southward to the ends of the earth, and there
I saw three open gates of heaven, from which come dew, rain, and wind. 2 From there I went eastward to the ends of heaven, and there I saw the three eastern gates of heaven open, with small gates above them. 3 Through each of these small gates the stars of heaven pass and run their course westward on the path that has been shown to them. 4 Each time I saw these things I praised the Lord of glory, and I keep praising the Lord of glory, who has worked great and glorious wonders so that angels, spirits, and mortals may behold how great his work is, may praise what he has made and all his creatures, may witness what his power does, may extol the mighty work of his hands, and may bless him forever.

Chapter 37

The Book of Discourses (Parables) (chapters 37–71)

1 The second vision that he saw, a vision of wisdom, which Enoch saw, son of Jared, son of Mahalalel, son of Kenan, son of Enosh, son of Seth, son of Adam.[a] 2 This is how the words of wisdom begin, which I raised my voice to speak and declare to those who live on the dry ground:
Listen, you people of former times, and look, you who come later, at the words of the Holy One that I will speak before the Lord of Spirits.[b] 3 It would have been fitting to tell these things to the ancients alone, but we will not keep the beginning of wisdom back from those who come after either. [4] Never until now has the Lord of Spirits granted such wisdom as I have received, in keeping with my understanding and by the will of the Lord of Spirits, who has given me a share in everlasting life. [5] Three discourses[c] were given to me, and I raised my voice and told them to those who live on the dry ground.

Notes

- a (37:1) Mahalalel: "praise of God." Kenan (Ethiopic Qāynān): perhaps "smith" or "possession." Enosh: "human being, mortal." Seth: "appointed" or "granted" (Gen 4:25). The genealogy follows Gen 5:3–18. "The second vision" counts the Book of the Watchers (chapters 1–36) as the first. This section, called "the Parables" or "Similitudes," survives only in Ge'ez; no Aramaic or Greek fragment of it has been found. Its date is debated, with most recent scholars placing it in the late first century BC or the first century AD.
- b (37:2) The Lord of Spirits: the standard title for God in chapters 37–71, used over a hundred times; compare "the God of the spirits of all flesh" in Num 16:22; 27:16, and "Yahweh of hosts" in the Hebrew Bible, which it may echo.
- c (37:5) Discourses: Ge'ez mesālē, like Hebrew mashal, "parable, proverb, figurative speech, oracle" (compare Num 23:7). The three are chapters 38–44, 45–57, and 58–69.

Chapter 38

[1] The first discourse.

When the community of the righteous appears,
and sinners are judged for their sins
and driven from the face of the dry ground;

[2] when the Righteous One[a] appears in the sight of the righteous, whose chosen deeds depend on the Lord of Spirits, and light shines on the righteous and the chosen who live on the dry ground—
where then will the sinners live, and where will those who denied the Lord of Spirits find rest?
It would have been better for them never to have been born.[b]

[3] When the secrets of the righteous are disclosed,
the sinners are judged,
and the wicked are driven out from the presence of the righteous and the chosen,

4 from then on those who hold the land will no longer be mighty and lofty;
they will not be able to look at the face of the holy ones, for the Lord of Spirits will have made his light appear on the faces of the holy, the righteous, and the chosen.
5 Then the kings and the powerful will perish, handed over to the righteous and the holy.
6 From then on no one will plead for mercy for them from the Lord of Spirits, for their life will be over.

Notes

- a (38:2) The Righteous One: one of four titles in the Parables for the heavenly figure who judges at the end: "the Righteous One," "the Chosen One," "the Anointed One" (48:10; 52:4), and "that Son of Man." Some manuscripts read "righteousness" here.
- b (38:2) Compare Matt 26:24; Mark 14:21.

Chapter 39

1 In those days chosen and holy children will come down from the high heaven, and their offspring will be joined with the children of humankind.[a]
2 In those days Enoch received books of jealous anger and fury, books of turmoil and banishment.
"No mercy will be granted to them," says the Lord of Spirits.
3 In those days a whirlwind[b] snatched me up from the earth and put me down at the far end of the heavens.
4 There I saw another vision:
the homes of the holy ones
and the resting places of the righteous.
5 There my eyes beheld their homes among his righteous angels,
their resting places among the holy ones.
They were petitioning, pleading, and praying for the children of humankind;
righteousness flowed before them like water,
and mercy like dew on the ground.
So it is among them forever and ever.

6 In those days[c] my eyes saw the Chosen One of righteousness and faithfulness.

Righteousness will prevail in his days,

and the righteous and chosen will be beyond number before him forever and ever.

7 I saw his home under the wings of the Lord of Spirits.

All the righteous and chosen before him will shine like flames of fire;

their mouths will be full of blessing,

their lips will praise the name of the Lord of Spirits,

and righteousness will never fail before him,

nor will truth fail in his presence.

8 There I longed to live;

my spirit yearned for that home.

That is where my share has been from the start,

for so it was settled for me before the Lord of Spirits.

9 In those days I praised and exalted the name of the Lord of Spirits with blessing and praise, for he has destined me for blessing and glory by the good pleasure of the Lord of Spirits.

10 For a long time my eyes gazed at that place, and I gave him blessing and praise: "Blessed be he! From the beginning and for all time to come may he be blessed!

11 In his presence nothing ends. He knew before the world was made what the age is and what will be from generation to generation.

12 Those who never sleep bless you. They stand before your glory and bless, praise, and exalt you, saying:

'Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of Spirits;

he fills the earth with spirits.' "[d]

13 There my eyes saw all who never sleep, standing before him and blessing him and saying, "Blessed are you, and blessed is the name of the Lord forever and ever."

14 My face was transformed, for I could no longer bear to look.

Notes

- a (39:1) Verses 1–2a seem to refer back to the Watchers (chapters 6–16), and some take them as an insertion.

- b (39:3) A whirlwind: or "a cloud and a storm." Compare Elijah in 2 Kgs 2:11.
- c (39:6) In those days: Charles transposes parts of verses 6 and 7; this translation keeps the order of the manuscripts.
- d (39:12) Compare Isa 6:3, "Holy, holy, holy is Yahweh of hosts; the whole earth is full of his glory." "Those who never sleep" are the Watchers (compare 14:23).

Chapter 40

1 After that I saw thousands upon thousands and myriads upon myriads, a throng past all counting and reckoning, standing before the Lord of Spirits.[a] 2 Around the Lord of Spirits, one on each of his four sides, stood four figures,[b] different from those who do not sleep, and I learned their names, since the angel accompanying me told me what they were called and showed me every hidden thing. 3 I heard the voices of those four figures as they spoke praises before the Lord of glory. 4 The first voice was blessing the Lord of Spirits forever and ever. 5 The second voice I heard blessing the Chosen One and the chosen ones who depend on the Lord of Spirits. 6 The third voice I heard praying and pleading for those who live on the dry ground and who call on the name of the Lord of Spirits. 7 The fourth voice I heard driving away the satans[c] and barring them from approaching the Lord of Spirits with accusations against those who live on the dry ground.

8 Then I put a question to the angel of peace, my companion, who had and showed me everything hidden, "Who are these four figures whom I have seen, whose words I have heard and written down?" 9 He told me, "The first is Michael, merciful and slow to anger. The second, who is set over every disease and every wound of humankind, is Raphael. The third, who is set over every power, is Gabriel. And the fourth, who is set over repentance and the hope of those who will inherit everlasting life, is named Phanuel."[d] 10 Those were the Lord of Spirits' four angels, and theirs were the four voices I heard in those days.

Notes

- a (40:1) Compare Dan 7:10.
- b (40:2) Figures: literally "faces" or "presences," the angels of the presence (compare Isa 63:9).

- c (40:7) Satans: “accusers, adversaries” (Hebrew satan), here a class of hostile angels who accuse human beings before God; compare Job 1:6–12; Zech 3:1; Rev 12:10.
- d (40:9) Michael: “Who is like God?” Raphael: “God heals.” Gabriel: “God is my strength” or “man of God.” Phanuel: “face of God” (compare Penuel, Gen 32:30). Phanuel takes the place of Uriel in the list of four at 9:1.

Chapter 41

1 After that I saw all the secrets of heaven, how the kingdom is divided up, and how human deeds are weighed on the scales. 2 There I saw the homes of the chosen and the homes of the holy ones. My eyes saw there all the sinners who deny the name of the Lord of Spirits being driven out and dragged away; they could not stay, because of the punishment that goes out from the Lord of Spirits.
3 There my eyes saw the secrets of the lightning and the thunder, the secrets of the winds, how they are portioned out to blow across the land, and what is hidden in cloud and dew. I saw there where they come from in that place, and from where they soak the dusty ground.
4 There I saw sealed storerooms from which the winds are portioned out: the storeroom of the hail, the storeroom of the mist, and the storeroom of the clouds, whose cloud has hovered over the earth since the world began.
5 I saw the chambers of the sun and the moon, from where they come out and where they return, their glorious going back, how one outranks the other, their majestic circuit, how they never leave their track, neither adding to it nor taking from it, and how they keep faith with each other by the oath that binds them.
6 First the sun goes out and travels its road at the command of the Lord of Spirits, whose name is mighty forever and ever.
7 Next I saw the moon’s path, both its hidden and its visible part. She completes the course of her path there by day and by night, each facing the other before the Lord of Spirits.

They give thanks and praise and never rest,
for their thanksgiving is their rest.

8 For the bright sun makes many turnings, for blessing or for curse,
and the course of the moon’s path brings light for the righteous and darkness for sinners, by the name of the Lord,

who separated light from darkness,
divided the spirits of humankind,
and strengthened the spirits of the just through his righteous name.
9 No angel can stand in the way, nor can any power prevent it; he appoints one to judge them all, and that judge tries them all in his presence.

Chapter 42

1 Wisdom found no place to live,
so a home was given her in the heavens.
2 Wisdom went out to make her home among human beings,
but found no home;
so Wisdom went back to her place
and took her seat among the angels.[a] 3 Then Wrongdoing came out of her storerooms;
she found those she was not looking for,
and she lived among them,
like rain in a desert,
like dew on a thirsty land.

Notes

- a (42:2) Compare Prov 1:20–33; 8; Sir 24:1–12, where Wisdom finds a home in Israel; and John 1:10–11.

Chapter 43

1 Then I saw more lightning and the heavenly stars; he summoned each of them by name, and they listened to him. 2 I saw how they are weighed on a just scale according to their brightness: the breadth of their spaces and the day they appear, how their circling produces lightning, how their circling matches the number of the angels, and how they stay loyal to each other. 3 I asked the angel who went with me and showed me what was hidden, "What are these?" 4 He said to me, "The Lord of Spirits has shown you their meaning in a figure:

these are the names of the holy ones who live on the dry ground and believe in the name of the Lord of Spirits forever and ever."

Chapter 44

1 I saw another thing concerning the lightning: how some of the stars rise and become lightning flashes and cannot give up their new form.

Chapter 45

1 This is the second discourse, concerning those who reject the name of the holy ones' dwelling and of the Lord of Spirits.

2 They will not go up into heaven,
nor will they come back upon the earth.
That is the fate awaiting sinners
who rejected the Lord of Spirits' name, held in this state for the day of suffering and distress.

3 On that day my Chosen One will sit on the throne of glory, and will choose among their deeds,[a]
and their resting places will be past counting;
their spirits will grow strong within them when they see my chosen ones and those who have called on my holy and glorious name.

4 Then I will make my Chosen One live among them;
I will transform heaven
and make it an everlasting blessing and light.

5 I will transform the dry ground and make it a blessing, and I will make my chosen ones live on it;
but sinners and evildoers will not set foot on it.[b]

6 For I have looked after my righteous ones and satisfied them with peace,
and placed them before me;
but for the sinners judgment waits with me,
to wipe them from the face of the earth.

Notes

- a (45:3) Choose among their deeds: or "test their deeds."
- b (45:5) Compare Isa 65:17; 66:22; 2 Pet 3:13; Rev 21:1.

Chapter 46

1 There I beheld one with a head of days,[a]
his head as white as wool,
and beside him a second, whose face had a human look,
and his face was full of grace, like one of the holy angels.
2 I questioned the angel accompanying me, who was revealing every secret to me, about that Son of Man:[b] who he was, where he came from, and why he was accompanying the Head of Days.
3 He answered me,
"This is the Son of Man who has righteousness,
with whom righteousness lives,
who will reveal all the treasures of what is hidden;
for the Lord of Spirits has chosen him, and his lot has prevailed before the Lord of Spirits in uprightness forever.
4 This Son of Man whom you have seen will rouse the kings and the powerful from their couches
and the strong from their thrones;
he will slacken the grip of the strong
and smash the teeth of sinners.
5 He will throw the kings down from their thrones and their kingdoms, because they do not exalt and praise him or humbly acknowledge where their kingship came from.
6 He will make the faces of the strong fall,
and shame will fill them.
Darkness will be their home,
and worms their bed;
they will have no hope of getting up from those beds,
since they refuse to exalt the name of the Lord of Spirits.
7 These are the ones who judge the stars of heaven,[c]
who raise their hands against the Most High,
who tread the dry ground and live on it.
All their deeds show wrongdoing,
and their deeds are wrongdoing;[d]

their strength rests on their wealth, and their trust is in the gods their own hands have made;
they deny the name of the Lord of Spirits.
8 They hound the houses where his people gather and the faithful who rely on the name of the Lord of Spirits.

Notes

- a (46:1) A head of days: that is, one who is very old; God, called "the Ancient of Days" in Dan 7:9, 13, 22. This chapter draws on Dan 7:9–14.
- b (46:2) That Son of Man: in Ge'ez walda sab'; elsewhere in the Parables also walda be'si and walda ʿegwala ʿemma-ḥeyāw, all meaning "son of a human being," that is, "a human figure," as in Dan 7:13. The demonstrative ("that," "this") points back to the figure first seen here. Compare the Gospels' use of "the Son of Man."
- c (46:7) Judge the stars of heaven: perhaps "attack the stars," that is, the holy ones; compare Dan 8:10. Some propose "raise their hands against the stars."
- d (46:7) Their deeds are wrongdoing: so some manuscripts; others read "their power rests on their wealth."

Chapter 47

1 In those days the prayer of the righteous will have gone up, and the righteous blood from the ground, into the presence of the Lord of Spirits.
2 In those days the holy ones who live in the heavens above will join with one voice to plead and pray, praise, give thanks, and bless the Lord of Spirits' name because of the blood of the righteous that has been shed, that the righteous may not have prayed in vain before the Lord of Spirits,
that justice may be done for them,
and that their waiting may not go on forever.[a] 3 In those days I watched the Head of Days sit down on his glorious throne;
the books of the living lay open before him, and his whole host in the heavens above and his council stood before him.[b]

4 The hearts of the holy ones were filled with joy, for the full number of the just had drawn near,[c]
the prayer of the just had been answered, and the blood of the just had been avenged before the Lord of Spirits.

Notes

- a (47:2) Compare Rev 6:9–11.
- b (47:3) Compare Dan 7:9–10; Rev 20:12.
- c (47:4) Had drawn near: or "had been reached" or "had been offered." Compare Rev 6:11.

Chapter 48

1 In that place I saw the spring of righteousness,
which never ran dry,
and around it were many springs of wisdom.
All the thirsty drank from them
and were filled with wisdom,
and their homes were with the righteous, the holy, and the chosen.
2 At that hour that Son of Man was given his name
before the Lord of Spirits,
his name spoken in the Head of Days' presence.
3 Even before the sun and the constellations were created,
before the stars of heaven were made,
his name was spoken before the Lord of Spirits.[a] 4 He will be a staff for the righteous, to lean on so that they do not fall;
he will be the light of the nations
and the hope of those who grieve in their hearts.[b] 5 All who live on the dry ground will fall down and worship before him, and will praise, bless, and sing to the Lord of Spirits.
6 For this reason he was chosen and hidden in his presence before the world was created, and forever.
7 The wisdom of the Lord of Spirits has revealed him to the holy and the righteous, for he guards the portion of the just,

since they loathed and spurned this world of wrongdoing
and detested all that is done in it and all its ways, in the Lord of Spirits' name.
By his name they find salvation,
and he is the one who will avenge their lives.[c]
8 In those days the kings of the earth will be downcast, and the strong who hold the dry ground, because of the deeds of their hands;
for on the day of their anguish and distress they will not save themselves.
9 "I will hand them over to my chosen ones;
like straw in a fire they will burn before the holy,
like lead in water they will sink before the righteous,
and no trace of them will ever be found.
10 On the day of their distress there will be rest on the earth.
They will fall before him and not get up again,
and there will be no one to take them by the hand and lift them, for they rejected the Lord of Spirits and his Anointed One."[d]
Blessed be the Lord of Spirits' name!

Notes

- a (48:3) Compare Ps 72:17, "May his name endure before the sun" (so the Greek and some Jewish interpretation).
- b (48:4) Compare Isa 42:6; 49:6; 61:1–2; Luke 2:32.
- c (48:7) He is the one who will avenge their lives: or "it is his will regarding their life."
- d (48:10) His Anointed One: Ge'ez masiḥ, "anointed," the word behind "Messiah" (Hebrew mashiaḥ) and "Christ" (Greek christos). Compare Ps 2:2. Here and at 52:4 the title is applied to the Son of Man.

Chapter 49

1 For wisdom is poured out like water,
and glory will never fail before him, forever and ever.
2 For he is mighty in all the secrets of righteousness,
and wrongdoing will pass away like a shadow
and will have no standing;

for the Chosen One has taken his stand before the Lord of Spirits,
and his glory is forever and ever,
and his power for all generations.
3 In him lives the spirit of wisdom,
the spirit that gives understanding,
the spirit of knowledge and power,
and the spirit of those who died in righteousness and sleep.[a] 4 He will judge hidden things, and no one will be able to speak an empty word in his presence;
for he is the Chosen One before the Lord of Spirits, as he wills.

Notes

- a (49:3) Compare Isa 11:2.

Chapter 50

1 In those days a change will come for the holy and the chosen:
the light of days will rest on them,
and glory and honor will return to the holy ones
2 on the day of distress, when evil has been stored up against the sinners.
The righteous will triumph in the name of the Lord of Spirits,
and he will let the others see it,
so that they may repent
and abandon the works of their hands.
3 Before the Lord of Spirits they will receive no honor,
yet by his name they will find salvation,
and the Lord of Spirits will pity them,
for his mercy is great.[a] 4 He is righteous in his judgment, and in the presence of his glory wrongdoing will not stand;
at his judgment whoever does not repent will perish before him.
5 "From then on I will show them no mercy," says the Lord of Spirits.

Notes

- a (50:3) Verses 2–3 envision a third group, "the others," who repent at the last moment and are saved without honor.

Chapter 51

1 In those days the earth will hand back what was entrusted to it, Sheol will hand back what it has received,
and destruction will repay what it owes.[a] 2 He will pick out the righteous and holy from among them, for the day of their salvation has come near.[b] 3 In those days the Chosen One will sit on my throne,[c]
and from his mouth will pour every secret of wisdom and counsel, for the Lord of Spirits has granted them to him and glorified him.
4 In those days the mountains will bound like rams, the hills will leap like lambs that have had their fill of milk,[d]
and the faces of all the angels in heaven will glow with joy.
5 For in those days the Chosen One will arise,
and the earth will rejoice;
the righteous will live on it,
and the chosen will go to and fro on it.

Notes

- a (51:1) Sheol: the Hebrew name for the realm of the dead. "Destruction" renders Ge'ez haguel, perhaps standing for Hebrew Abaddon (Job 26:6; Rev 9:11). The verse speaks of the resurrection of the dead; compare Dan 12:2; Rev 20:13.
- b (51:2) Verses 2 and 5a are given here in the manuscript order; Charles moves the line "For in those days the Chosen One will arise" to the start of verse 2.
- c (51:3) My throne: so most manuscripts; some read "his throne." God is the speaker.
- d (51:4) Compare Ps 114:4, 6.

Chapter 52

1 After those days, in the place where I had seen every vision of what is hidden—for a whirlwind had snatched me up and carried me westward—
2 my eyes saw there all the hidden things of heaven that are to come: a mountain of iron, a mountain of copper, a mountain of silver, a mountain of gold, a mountain of soft metal, and a mountain of lead.[a]
3 I asked the angel who went with me, "What are these hidden things I have seen?"
4 He told me, "Everything you have seen will serve the authority of his Anointed One, so that he may be strong and powerful on the earth."

5 That angel of peace replied, “Wait a little, and you will be shown every hidden thing that surrounds the Lord of Spirits.
6 These mountains your eyes have seen—
of iron and of copper and of silver,
of gold, of soft metal, and of lead—
all of them will be before the Chosen One like wax before fire,
like water pouring down from above onto those mountains;
they will grow weak under his feet.[b]
7 In those days no one will be saved
by gold or by silver,
and no one will be able to flee.
8 There will be no iron for battle,
no armor to put on;
bronze will be of no use,
tin will be worthless,
and lead will not be wanted.
9 All these will be wiped out from the face of the earth
when the Chosen One appears before the Lord of Spirits.”

Notes

- a (52:2) Soft metal: probably tin. The six mountains of metal may echo the metals of the statue in Dan 2:31–45, representing earthly empires and their wealth.
- b (52:6) Compare Mic 1:4; Ps 97:5.

Chapter 53

1 There my eyes saw a deep valley with gaping mouths. All who live on the land, the sea, and the islands will bring it gifts, presents, and tribute, but that deep valley will never be filled.
2 Their hands commit lawless acts;
whatever the righteous toil for, the sinners devour in their lawlessness.[a]
But the sinners will be destroyed before the Lord of Spirits, banished from his earth,
and they will perish forever and ever.

3 For I saw all the angels of punishment staying there, getting ready
all the instruments of Satan.[b] 4 I asked the angel of peace who went with me, "For whom are they getting these instruments ready?" 5 He told me, "They are preparing them for the kings and the powerful of this earth, so that they may be destroyed by them.
6 After this the Righteous and Chosen One will make the house of his congregation appear. From then on they will no longer be hindered, in the name of the Lord of Spirits.
7 These mountains will not stand firm like the earth before his righteousness;[c]
the hills will become like a spring of water;
and the righteous will have rest from the harassment of sinners."

Notes

- a (53:2) Whatever the righteous toil for: so some manuscripts; others read "the sinners devour all whom they oppress."
- b (53:3) Satan: here a single chief adversary; compare the plural "satans" at 40:7.
- c (53:7) Will not stand firm like the earth: the sense is uncertain; perhaps "will be like level ground."

Chapter 54

1 I looked and turned toward another part of the earth, and there I saw a deep valley burning with fire. 2 They were bringing the kings and the powerful and throwing them into that deep valley. 3 There my eyes watched them forging tools for it: chains of iron too heavy to weigh. 4 I asked my companion, the angel of peace, "Who are these chains being readied for?" 5 He told me, "They are being prepared for the armies of Azazel,[a] so that they may seize them and hurl them into the lowest part of the pit of damnation, and cover their jaws with jagged stones, as the Lord of Spirits has ordered. 6 Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and Phanuel will grab hold of them on that great day and throw them into the blazing furnace on that day, so that the Lord of Spirits may punish them for their wickedness, because they became servants of Satan and misled those who live on the dry ground." 7 In those days[b] punishment will go out from the Lord of Spirits. He will open all the storerooms of the waters above the heavens and the springs beneath the earth.[c] 8 All the waters will join together: the water above the heavens is the male, and the water beneath the earth is the female. 9 They will wipe out all who live on the dry ground and those who live under the ends of heaven. 10 Because of this they will come to recognize the wickedness they have done on the earth, and through these waters they will perish.

Notes

- a (54:5) Azazel: the Ethiopic form of the Aramaic Asael; see the note at 8:1. Compare Lev 16:8–10, 26.
- b (54:7) Verses 54:7–55:2 seem to belong to a separate "Book of Noah" tradition; compare 60:1–10, 24–25; 65–69:25; 106–107. They describe the first world judgment, the flood.
- c (54:7) Compare Gen 7:11.

Chapter 55

1 After that the Head of Days relented and said, "I have destroyed all who live on the dry ground for nothing." 2 He swore by his great name: "From now on I will not act this way toward all who live on the dry ground. I will put a sign in the sky, and it will be a pledge of good faith between me and them forever, as long as heaven stands above the earth.[a] This is in keeping with my command. 3 When I decide to seize them through the angels on the day of distress and pain, I will make my punishment and my anger rest on them," says God, the Lord of Spirits. 4 "You powerful kings who live on the dry ground, you will have to watch my Chosen One sit on the throne of glory and judge Azazel and all his companions and all his armies in the name of the Lord of Spirits."

Notes

- a (55:2) A sign in the sky: the rainbow (Gen 9:8–17). Compare Gen 8:21–22.

Chapter 56

1 There I saw troops of the angels of punishment marching, holding whips and chains of iron and bronze.

2 I asked my companion, the angel of peace, "Where are these whip-bearers headed?"

3 He told me, "Each to its own chosen and beloved ones,[a] so that they may be flung into the chasm, the depths of the valley.
4 Then that valley will be filled with their chosen and beloved ones;
the days of their lives will be over,
and the days of their leading others astray will no longer be counted.
5 In those days the angels will gather and launch themselves eastward against the Parthians and Medes.[b]
They will stir up the kings, so that a spirit of turmoil comes over
them;
they will shake them from their thrones,
and they will burst out like lions from their dens
and like starving wolves among the flocks.
6 They will march up and trample the land of his chosen ones, and the land of his chosen ones will be before them like a threshing floor and a beaten path.
7 But the city of my righteous ones will be an obstacle to their horses.[c]
They will start fighting each other;
their own right hands will be strong against them;
a man will not acknowledge his brother,
nor a son his father or his mother,
until the corpses from their slaughter are past counting,
and their punishment will not be in vain.
8 In those days Sheol will open its jaws,
and they will sink into it;
their destruction will be complete.
Sheol will swallow the sinners in the presence of the chosen."

Notes

- a (56:3) Its own chosen and beloved ones: that is, the favorites of the fallen angels, the giants (compare 10:12; 14:6).
- b (56:5) The Parthians and Medes: the Parthian empire, east of the Euphrates, which invaded Syria and Judea in 40 BC. Many date the Parables partly by this allusion. Medes: the ancient people of Media, in northwest Iran.
- c (56:7) The city of my righteous ones: Jerusalem. Compare Ezek 38–39; Zech 14:2–3, 13.

Chapter 57

1 After this I saw another army, of wagons with men riding on them, coming on the winds from the east and from the west toward the south.[a] 2 The rumble of their wagons was heard, and when that uproar happened, the holy ones in heaven took notice, and the pillars of the earth were shaken from their places. The noise of it was heard from one end of heaven to the other for one day. 3 Every one of them will bow low in worship before the Lord of Spirits. This is the end of the second discourse.

Notes

- a (57:1) This verse is often read as the return of the scattered Jews of the diaspora to Jerusalem; compare Isa 43:5–6; 49:22; 66:20.

Chapter 58

1 I began to speak the third discourse, about the righteous and the chosen.

2 How happy you will be, righteous and chosen ones,
for your lot will be glorious!

3 The righteous will live in the sunlight,
and the chosen in the light of everlasting life.
There will be no end to the days of their life,
and no counting the days of the holy ones.

4 They will seek the light and find righteousness with the Lord of Spirits.
Peace will belong to the righteous in the name of the Lord of the ages.

5 After this the holy ones in heaven will be told to search out the secrets of righteousness, the inheritance of faith;
for it has risen like the sun on the dry ground,
and darkness has gone by.

6 There will be unending light,
and they will never come to an end of days,
for the darkness will first have been destroyed, and the light of uprightness will stand firm forever before the Lord of Spirits.

Chapter 59

1 In those days my eyes saw the secrets of the lightning and the lights and the judgments they carry out. They flash for blessing or for curse, as the Lord of Spirits wills. 2 There I saw the secrets of the thunder:
how, when it crashes in the heights of heaven, its sound is heard. He let me see the judgments carried out on the earth, whether for well-being and blessing or for curse, according to the word of the Lord of Spirits. 3 After that all the secrets of the lights and of the lightning were shown to me: they flash for blessing and for plenty.

Chapter 60

1 In Enoch's life, year five hundred, month seven, day fourteen.[a] In that discourse I saw how a violent shaking shook the heaven of heavens, and the host of the Most High, the angels, thousands upon thousands and myriads upon myriads, were greatly disturbed.
2 The Head of Days was sitting on the throne of his glory, with the angels and the righteous standing around him.
3 Great trembling seized me,
terror took hold of me;
my waist gave way,
my insides dissolved,
and I fell on my face.
4 Michael sent another angel, one of the holy ones, and he lifted me up. When he had lifted me up, my spirit came back to me, for I had not been able to bear the sight of that host, the uproar, and the shaking of heaven.
5 Michael said to me, "Why does a sight like this disturb you? Until today the day of his mercy has lasted; he has been merciful and slow to anger toward those who live on the dry ground.
6 But when the day comes, with the power, the punishment, and the judgment that the Lord of Spirits has made ready for those who do not bow to the just law, for those who deny the just judgment, and for those who take his name in vain—that day has been made ready:
for the chosen a covenant, but for sinners an investigation."

7 On that day two monsters will be separated from each other: a female monster named Leviathan,[b] to live in the depths of the sea above the springs of the waters, 8 and the male named Behemoth, who fills with his chest a trackless wilderness named Dendayin,[c] east of the garden where the chosen and righteous live, where my grandfather was received up,[d] he who was seventh from Adam, the first human being whom the Lord of Spirits created. 9 I asked the other angel to show me the strength of those monsters, how they were separated on one day and thrown, one into the depths of the sea and the other onto the dry ground of the wilderness. 10 He said to me, "You, son of man,[e] are seeking to know what is hidden." 11 The other angel, who went with me and showed me hidden things, told me what is first and last in heaven, in the height, and beneath the dry ground, in the depth, and at the ends of heaven and at the foundations of heaven, 12 and about the storerooms of the winds: how the winds are divided up, how they are weighed, and how the gates of the winds are counted, each by the strength of its wind; the strength of the moon's light, and how its strength is suited; the divisions of the stars by their names, and how every division is marked off; 13 the thunderclaps, by the places where they fall; all the divisions made among the lightning flashes so that they may flash; and their host, so that they obey at once. 14 The thunder has resting places, assigned to it while it waits for its crash. Thunder and lightning cannot be parted; though they are not one and the same, they travel together through the wind and do not separate. 15 For when the lightning flashes, the thunder sounds its voice, and the wind gives it rest at the right moment, dividing evenly between them. The storehouse of their crashes is like sand; each of them, as it crashes, is held back with a bridle, turned back by the power of the wind, and driven on to the many regions of the earth. 16 The wind of the sea is male and strong.
By the might of its strength it reins the sea back, and in the same way it drives it forward and scatters it among all the mountains of the earth. 17 The wind of the frost is its own angel, and the wind of the hail is a good angel. 18 The wind of the snow has left its storerooms because of its strength. There is a special wind in it, and what rises from it is like smoke; its name is hoarfrost. 19 The wind of the mist does not share their storerooms; it has a storeroom of its own, for its course is glorious in light and in darkness, in winter and in summer, and an angel is in its storeroom. 20 The wind of the dew lives at the ends of heaven and is joined to the storerooms of the rain. Its course is in winter and in summer, and its clouds and the clouds of the mist are joined; one gives to the other. 21 When the wind of the rain goes out of its storeroom, the angels come, open the storeroom, and lead it out. When it spreads over the whole dry ground, it unites with the water on the earth; and whenever it unites with the water on the earth . . .[f] 22 For the waters are for those who live on the dry ground; they are nourishment for the earth from the Most High in heaven. So there is a fixed measure for the rain, and the angels are in charge of it. 23 All this I saw near the Garden of the Righteous. 24 The angel of peace who was with me said to me, "These two monsters, prepared in keeping with the greatness of the Lord, will feed . . .[g] 25 so that the punishment of the Lord of Spirits may not come upon them for nothing. Children will be killed with their mothers, and children with their fathers. When the punishment of the Lord of Spirits rests on them, it will stay on them, so that the punishment of the Lord of Spirits may not be in vain. After that the judgment will take place in keeping with his mercy and his patience."[h]

Notes

- a (60:1) In the life of Enoch: the date originally belonged to Noah (compare Gen 7:6, 11, where Noah is 600 at the flood); the editor who placed this Noah fragment here changed the name, but verse 8 still has Noah speaking of "my grandfather." The seventh month: in the Jewish calendar Tishri, roughly September–October, the month of the Day of Atonement and Tabernacles; on the 364-day calendar of 1 Enoch and Jubilees, see the notes at chapter 72.
- b (60:7) Leviathan: Hebrew liwyatan, perhaps "coiled one," the sea monster of Job 41; Ps 74:14; 104:26; Isa 27:1. Behemoth: Hebrew plural of behemah, "beast," meaning "the great beast" (Job 40:15–24).
- c (60:8) Dendayin: the manuscripts vary (Dendāin, Dâidâin, Dûidâin). Perhaps a form of the desert "Dudael" (10:4), or of Nod "east of Eden" (Gen 4:16).
- d (60:8) My grandfather: Enoch, grandfather of Noah's father Lamech; so the speaker here is Noah (see the note at verse 1). Enoch was "the seventh from Adam" (Gen 5:3–24; Jude 14).

- e (60:10) Son of man: here simply "human being, mortal," as in Ezekiel (Ezek 2:1).
- f (60:21) The text is broken off here in all manuscripts.
- g (60:24) Will feed: the text is broken. Later Jewish tradition held that Leviathan and Behemoth would be food for the righteous at the end (4 Ezra 6:49–52; 2 Bar 29:4).
- h (60:25) The order and wording of verses 24–25 are confused in the manuscripts; this rendering follows the reconstruction generally adopted.

Chapter 61

1 In those days I saw long cords handed to those angels. They took wings for themselves and flew off northward.

2 I asked the angel, "Why have they taken those cords and gone?" He answered, "They have gone off to measure."

3 The angel who went with me said,

"These will bring the measurements of the righteous and the measuring lines of the righteous to the righteous, so that they may lean on the Lord of Spirits' name forever and ever.[a]

4 The chosen will begin to live with the chosen;
these are the measurements that will be given to faith
and will make righteousness firm.

5 These measurements will bring to light every secret of the depths of the earth,
those swallowed up by the desert,
those eaten by wild animals,
and those eaten by the fish of the sea,
so that they may come back and find support
on the day of the Chosen One;
for no one will be lost before the Lord of Spirits,
and no one can be lost."

6 All who are in the heights of heaven received a command, a power, one voice, and one light like fire.

7 With their first words they blessed that one,
and they praised and exalted him with wisdom,
showing wisdom in speech and in the spirit of life.

[8] The Lord of Spirits placed the Chosen One on the throne of glory,[b] and he will judge all the works of the holy ones in heaven above,
and weigh their deeds in the scales.
[9] When he raises his face to judge their hidden ways by the word of the Lord of Spirits' name, and their paths by the way of the just judgment of the Lord of Spirits,
then with one voice they will all speak and bless,
glorify, exalt, and hallow the Lord of Spirits' name.
[10] He will call the whole host of heaven, all the holy ones above, the host of the Lord—the cherubim, the seraphim, and the ophanim,[c] all the angels of power and all the angels of dominion—and the Chosen One, and the other powers that are on the dry ground and over the water.
[11] On that day they will lift a single voice. They will bless, glorify, and exalt in a spirit of faith, of wisdom, of patience, of mercy, of justice and peace, and of goodness, and all will say together, "Blessed is he, and blessed be the Lord of Spirits' name forever and ever!"
[12] All in heaven above who never sleep will bless him;
every holy one in heaven will bless him,
and all the chosen who live in the garden of life,
and every spirit of light that can bless, glorify, exalt, and hallow your blessed name;
and all flesh will glorify and bless your name beyond all measure, forever and ever.
[13] For the Lord of Spirits abounds in mercy and is patient;
all his works and all that he has made
he has revealed to the righteous and the chosen in the Lord of Spirits' name.

Notes

- a (61:3) Measurements… measuring lines: images of resurrection and restoration; compare Zech 2:1–5; Ezek 40:3; Rev 11:1.
- b (61:8) Placed… on the throne: so some manuscripts; others read "The Lord of Spirits sat on the throne of his glory."
- c (61:10) Cherubim, seraphim, ophanim: classes of heavenly beings. Cherubim (Hebrew keruvim, meaning uncertain) guard Eden and the ark (Gen 3:24; Exod 25:18–22); seraphim, “burning ones” (Isa 6:2); ophanim, “wheels” (Ezek 1:15–21; 10:9–13). Compare 71:7.

Chapter 62

1 This is what the Lord commanded the kings, the powerful, the exalted, and those who inhabit the dry ground: “Open your eyes and raise your horns,[a] if you can recognize the Chosen One.”

2 The Lord of Spirits seated him[b] on his glorious throne,
and the spirit of righteousness was poured out on him.
The word of his mouth kills every sinner,
and all the lawless are wiped out before him.[c]

3 On that day all the kings and the powerful,
the exalted and those who hold the dry ground,
will rise up and see and know that he sits on his glorious throne;
righteousness is judged in his presence,
and no false word is spoken before him.

4 Then pain will come over them like that of a woman in labor who struggles to give birth
when her child comes to the mouth of the womb.

5 One group of them will look at the other;
they will be terrified,
their faces will fall,
and pain will grip them
when they see that Son of a Woman[d]
seated on his glorious throne.

6 The kings, the powerful, and all who possess the dry ground will bless, glorify, and exalt the one who rules over everything, who had been hidden.

7 For from the start the Son of Man was hidden;
the Most High kept him in the presence of his power
and revealed him to the chosen.

8 The community of the chosen and holy will be sown,[e]
and all the chosen will stand before him on that day.

9 All the kings, the powerful, the exalted, and those who rule the dry ground will fall face down before him,
worship him, set their hope on that Son of Man,
and beg him and plead for mercy from him.
10 But the Lord of Spirits will press them so hard that they will rush from his presence;
their faces will be full of shame,
and darkness will pile up on their faces.
11 He will hand them over to the angels of punishment
to take vengeance on them,
because they oppressed his children and his chosen ones.
12 They will be a spectacle for the righteous and for his chosen ones.
They will rejoice over them, because the anger of the Lord of Spirits rests on them
and his sword is drunk with their blood.[f] 13 The righteous and chosen will be saved on that day, and from then on they will never again see the faces of the sinners and the lawless.
14 The Lord of Spirits will live over them;
with that Son of Man they will eat,
lie down, and rise, forever and ever.
15 The righteous and chosen will have risen from the earth and will no longer go about with downcast faces.
16 They will be dressed in garments of glory,
garments of life from the Lord of Spirits.
Your garments will not wear out, and your glory will not fade before the Lord of Spirits.[g]

Notes

- a (62:1) Raise your horns: an idiom for showing strength or pride (Ps 75:4–5).
- b (62:2) Seated him: so with a slight change; the manuscripts read "sat on."
- c (62:2) Compare Isa 11:2, 4; Ps Sol 17:24; Rev 19:15.
- d (62:5) Son of a Woman: Ge'ez walda be'si, "son of a man" in most manuscripts; some read walda ʿeguāla ʿemma-ḥeyāw, "son of the offspring of the mother of the living," that is, of Eve. See the note at 46:2.
- e (62:8) Will be sown: that is, will be planted and grow; compare 10:16; 93:2, 5, 10.

- f (62:12) Compare Isa 34:5–6; Deut 32:42.
- g (62:16) Compare 2 Cor 5:2–4; Rev 3:4–5; 6:11.

Chapter 63

1 In those days the powerful and the kings who possess the dry ground will beg his angels of punishment, to whom they have been handed over, to give them a short break, so that they may bow in worship to the Lord of Spirits and acknowledge their sins to him.
2 They will bless and glorify the Lord of Spirits, saying:
"Blessed is the Lord of Spirits, the Lord of kings,
Lord of the powerful and Lord of the rich,
Lord of glory and Lord of wisdom.
3 Every hidden thing shines with your power from generation to generation,
and your glory endures forever and ever.
Your secrets are deep and past counting,
and your righteousness is beyond reckoning.
4 Now we have learned that we ought to glorify and bless the Lord of kings, the one who is King over all kings."
5 They will say, "If only we had a pause to glorify, give thanks,
and confess our faith before his glory!
6 Now we long for a little rest but do not find it;
we chase it but cannot catch it.
Light has gone from before us,
and darkness is our home forever and ever.
7 For we did not believe in him or glorify the Lord of Spirits' name;
our hope was in the scepter of our kingdom
and in our own splendor.
8 On the day of our suffering and distress he does not save us, and we find no break in which to confess that our Lord is faithful in all his deeds, his judgments, and his justice,
and that his judgments show no partiality.

9 We vanish from his presence because of our deeds, and every one of our sins has been counted out exactly."
10 Then they will say to themselves, "Our souls are stuffed with ill-gotten wealth, but it does not stop us from going down out of it into the flames of the torment of Sheol."[a]
11 After that their faces will be filled with darkness and shame before that Son of Man;
they will be driven from his presence,
and the sword will stay before him among them.
12 So says the Lord of Spirits: "This is the decree and the judgment against the powerful, the kings, the exalted, and those who possess the dry ground, in the presence of the Lord of Spirits."

Notes

- a (63:10) The flames of the torment of Sheol: so some manuscripts; others read "the weight" or "the burden of Sheol." Compare Luke 16:23–24.

Chapter 64

1 I saw other figures hidden in that place. 2 I heard the angel's voice say, "These are the angels who came down to the earth, disclosed hidden things to humankind, and led human beings into sin."

Chapter 65

1 In those days Noah[a] saw that the earth had tilted and that its ruin was near.
2 He got up from there and went to the ends of the earth and cried out to his great-grandfather Enoch.[b] In an anguished voice Noah said three times, "Hear me, hear me, hear me!"
3 I said to him, "Tell me what is happening on the earth, that the earth is so battered and shaken, or I may perish with it."
4 Just then there was a great upheaval on the earth; a voice sounded from heaven, and I dropped face down.
5 My great-grandfather Enoch came and stood beside me and said, "Why have you cried out to me so bitterly and with tears?
6 A command has gone out from the Lord against those who live on the dry ground, that their end is to be carried out, because they have learned all the secrets of the angels, all the violence of the satans and all their most secret powers, all the power of those who practice sorcery and spells, and the power of those who cast idols for the whole earth;

7 how silver comes from the dust of the earth, and how soft metal comes into being on the earth.

8 For lead and tin are not produced from the earth as the first is; there is a spring that produces them, and an angel stands in it, and that angel is prominent."

9 After that my great-grandfather Enoch took me by the hand, raised me up, and said to me, "Go, for I have asked the Lord of Spirits about this upheaval on the earth.

10 He told me, 'Because of their lawlessness their judgment has been decided, and I will not hold it back any longer. Because of the sorceries they have searched out and learned, the earth and its inhabitants will be destroyed.'

11 For these there will never be a place of repentance, because they have revealed what was hidden, and they are condemned. But as for you, my son, the Lord of Spirits knows that you are pure and innocent of this blame concerning the secrets.

12 He has set your name among the holy ones and will keep you safe among those who live on the dry ground;
he has destined your righteous offspring for kingship and great honor, and from your offspring will come a spring of the righteous and holy, past counting, forever."

Notes

- a (65:1) Noah: Hebrew Noaḥ, connected in Gen 5:29 with naḥam, "to comfort," and with nuaḥ, "to rest." Chapters 65–69:25 are another piece of the Noah tradition (see the note at 54:7); Noah speaks in the first person.
- b (65:2) Great-grandfather: so the sense; the text has "grandfather" (Ge'ez uses the word loosely). By Gen 5:21–29 Enoch is Noah's great-grandfather: Enoch, Methuselah, Lamech, Noah.

Chapter 66

1 After that he showed me the angels of punishment who are ready to come and unleash all the forces of the water that lies under the earth, to bring judgment and destruction on all who live on the dry ground. 2 The Lord of Spirits ordered the angels who were going out not to raise the waters but to hold them back, for those angels were in charge of the forces of the waters. 3 Then I left Enoch's presence.

Chapter 67

1 In those days the word of God came to me, and he said to me, "Noah, your lot has come up before me, a lot free of blame, a lot of love and uprightness. 2 Now the angels are building a wooden structure,[a] and when they have finished the task I will lay my hand on it and keep it safe. From it will come the seed of life, and a change will take place, so that the earth will not be left empty. 3 I will establish your offspring before me forever and ever, and I will scatter abroad those who live with you. It will not be barren on the face of the dry ground, but it will be blessed and will multiply on the earth in the name of the Lord."
4 He will lock up those angels who displayed lawlessness in that burning valley that my great-grandfather Enoch had shown me earlier in the west, near the mountains of gold, silver, iron, soft metal, and tin.[b] 5 I saw that valley, in which there was a great churning and a heaving of the waters. 6 When all this happened, from that fiery molten metal and from the churning in that place, a smell of sulfur arose and mixed with those waters. That valley of the angels who had led people astray burned beneath that ground. 7 Through its valleys flow rivers of fire, where those angels are punished who led astray the inhabitants of the dry ground. 8 But in those days those waters will serve the kings, the powerful, the exalted, and those who live on the dry ground for the healing of body and soul,[c] and for the punishment of the spirit. Their spirits are full of lust, so that they will be punished in their bodies, for they have denied the Lord of Spirits. They see their punishment every day, yet they do not believe in his name. 9 As the burning of their bodies grows fierce, a matching change will come over their spirits forever and ever, for no one will speak an idle word before the Lord of Spirits. [10] For judgment will come on them, because they trust in the lust of their bodies and deny the Spirit of the Lord. [11] Those same waters will change in those days. When those angels are punished in these waters, the springs will change their heat; and when the angels come up, the spring water will change and turn cold. [12] I heard Michael respond, "This judgment by which the angels are judged is a witness against the kings and the powerful who possess the dry ground. [13] For these waters of judgment serve the healing of the kings' bodies and the lust of their bodies; so they will not see or believe that those waters will change and become a fire that burns forever."

Notes

- a (67:2) A wooden structure: the ark (Gen 6:14–16). Here angels build it.
- b (67:4) Compare 52:2 and 53:1; 54:1.
- c (67:8) Healing of body and soul: so the manuscripts; Charles emends to "for the healing of the body, but for the punishment of the spirit." The hot springs may allude to those used by Herod the Great at Callirrhoe by the Dead Sea, about 4 BC (Josephus, Antiquities 17.171–173).

Chapter 68

[1] After that my great-grandfather Enoch instructed me in every secret contained in the book of the discourses that had been given to him, and he gathered them for me into the words of the book of the discourses. [2] On that day Michael spoke up and said to Raphael, "The force of the spirit carries me away and makes me tremble at the severity of the judgment of the secrets, the judgment of the angels. Who can bear the harsh judgment that has been carried out, before which they melt?" [3] Again Michael spoke up and said to Raphael, "Who would not be softened in heart about it, and whose insides would not be troubled by this word of judgment passed against them, against those whom they have led out like this?" [4] When he stood before the Lord of Spirits, Michael said to Raphael, "I will not take their side under the eye of the Lord, for the Lord of Spirits is angry with them because they behave as if they were the Lord. [5] That is why everything hidden will come upon them forever and ever. Neither angel nor human will have a share in it; they alone have received their judgment forever and ever."

Chapter 69

1 After this judgment they will terrify them and make them tremble, because they revealed this to those who live on the dry ground. 2 Here are the names of those angels.[a] The first of them is Semyaza; the second Artaqifa; the third Armen; the fourth Kokabel; the fifth Turael; the sixth Rumyal; the seventh Danyal; the eighth Neqael; the ninth Baraqel; the tenth Azazel; the eleventh Armaros; the twelfth Batryal; the thirteenth Basasael; the fourteenth Ananel; the fifteenth Turel; the sixteenth Simapesiel; the seventeenth Yetrel; the eighteenth Tumael; the nineteenth Turel; the twentieth Rumael; the twenty-first Azazel. 3 These are the leaders of their angels and their names, their chiefs over hundreds, over fifties, and over tens.

4 The name of the first is Yeqon.[b] He is the one who led all the children of God astray, brought them down to the earth, and misled them through the daughters of humankind.

5 The second is named Asbeel. He gave evil counsel to the holy children of God and misled them into defiling their bodies with human women.

6 The third is named Gadreel. He is the one who showed human beings every deadly blow. He led Eve astray,[c] and showed human beings the weapons of death: shield, breastplate, and sword for battle, and every weapon of death.

7 From his hand they have gone out against those who live on the dry ground from that day and forever.

8 The fourth is named Penemue. He taught human beings bitter and sweet, and taught them all the secrets of their wisdom.

9 He showed people how to write with ink and paper,[d] and through this many have sinned from age to age until this day.

10 Human beings were not created for this, to confirm their good faith with pen and ink.

11 For humans were created no differently from the angels, to stay righteous and pure, and death, which ruins everything, would not have touched them. But through this knowledge of theirs they are perishing, and through this power it is devouring me.[e]

12 The fifth is named Kasdeya. He showed human beings all the evil blows of spirits and demons: the blows that strike the embryo in the womb so that it miscarries, the bites of the snake, and the blows that come in the midday heat, the snake's offspring, whose name is Tabaet.[f]

13 This is Kasbeel's task: he is chief of the oath, which he disclosed to the holy ones while he dwelt in the glory on high; its name is Biqa.

14 This one asked Michael to show him the hidden name, so that he might pronounce it in the oath, so that those who revealed every secret thing to humankind would tremble before that name and oath.

15 Such is the force of this oath, mighty and strong. He put this oath, Akae, in Michael's hand.

16 These are the secrets of this oath,
and they are made firm by his oath:
heaven was hung up before the world was created,
and forever.

17 By it the earth was founded on the water, and from the hidden places of the mountains come lovely waters,
from the creation of the world and forever.

18 By that oath the sea was created, and for its foundation he set the sand against the time of its fury,
and it dares not go beyond it, from the creation of the world and forever.[g]

19 By that oath the depths are made fast;
they stay and do not move from their place, from age to age.

20 By that oath the sun and moon complete their courses and do not swerve from their decree, from age to age.

21 By that oath the stars complete their courses;
he summons each by name,
and they reply to him, from age to age.[h]

22 So too the spirits of the water and of the winds, of all the breezes, and their paths from every quarter of the winds.

23 There the voices of the thunder and the light of the lightning are kept, and there the storerooms of the hail and of the frost are kept, the storerooms of the mist and of the rain and dew.
24 All of them believe and offer thanks to the Lord of Spirits and give him glory with all their might; their food is all thanksgiving. They thank, glorify, and exalt the Lord of Spirits' name forever and ever.
25 This oath is strong over them;
by it they are kept, their paths are kept,
and their course is not destroyed.
26 There was great joy among them;
they blessed, glorified, and exalted,
because the name of that Son of Man had been revealed to them.
27 He sat on his glorious throne, and the whole of judgment was handed over to the Son of Man.[i]
He makes the sinners vanish and be destroyed from the face of the earth, together with those who led the world astray.
28 They will be bound with chains and locked up in the gathering place of their destruction, and all their works will vanish from the face of the earth.
29 From then on nothing will be corruptible,
for that Son of Man has come into view
and is seated on his glorious throne.
All evil will pass away before him, and the word of that Son of Man will go out and prevail before the Lord of Spirits.
Here ends Enoch's third discourse.

Notes

- a (69:2) This list largely repeats 6:7, in corrupted Ethiopic forms; compare the notes there. Shemihazah appears as Semyaza; Asael appears twice (as Azazel).
- b (69:4) Yeqon: perhaps "he will incite" (Hebrew yaqum, "he rises"). Asbeel: perhaps "deserter from God." Gadreel: "God is my helper" or "wall of God." Penemue: perhaps "inside" or "face." Kasdeya: "Chaldean," recalling the Chaldeans as experts in magic and astrology. Kasbeel: perhaps "deceiver of God." Biqa: perhaps "request" or "the one who asks." Akae: meaning unknown; some connect it with ʾ-k-y, "to name."

- c (69:6) He led Eve astray: here the serpent of Gen 3 is identified with a fallen angel; compare Wis 2:24; Rev 12:9.
- d (69:9) Paper: papyrus. Writing itself is here counted among the forbidden arts, in contrast to Enoch the scribe (12:4) and to Jubilees 4:17, where Enoch is the first to learn writing.
- e (69:11) It is devouring me: perhaps "death is devouring us"; the text is uncertain.
- f (69:12) Midday heat: compare Ps 91:6. Tabaet: perhaps "male" or "strong"; the meaning is uncertain.
- g (69:18) Compare Job 38:8–11; Jer 5:22.
- h (69:21) Compare Isa 40:26; Bar 3:34–35.
- i (69:27) Compare John 5:22, 27.

Chapter 70

1 After this, while he was still alive, his name was lifted up into the presence of that Son of Man and into the presence of the Lord of Spirits, away from those who live on the dry ground.[a] 2 He was raised on the chariots of the wind,[b] and his name departed from among them. 3 From that day I was no longer counted among them. He set me between two winds, between north and west, where the angels had taken the cords to mark out for me a place for the chosen and the righteous. 4 There I saw the first ancestors and the righteous who from the beginning have lived in that place.

Notes

- a (70:1) Chapters 70–71 describe Enoch's final removal from earth; compare Gen 5:24, "Enoch walked with God, and he was no more, for God took him." The narrative shifts from third person (70:1–2) to first person (70:3).
- b (70:2) The chariots of the wind: or "of the spirit"; compare Elijah in 2 Kgs 2:11.

Chapter 71

1 After this my spirit was taken away
and went up into the heavens.
I saw the children of God[a] stepping on flames of fire;
their garments were white,
and their faces shone like snow.
2 I saw two rivers of fire,
whose fire gleamed like hyacinth,[b]
and I threw myself face down before the Lord of Spirits.

3 The angel Michael, one of the archangels, took me by my right hand, lifted me up, and led me out into all the secrets;
he showed me all the secrets of mercy and of righteousness.
4 He showed me all the secrets of the ends of heaven,
all the storerooms of all the stars and all the lights,
from where they come out before the holy ones.
5 He carried my spirit off into the heaven of heavens, and there I saw something like a structure built of crystals,[c]
and between the crystals tongues of living fire.
6 My spirit saw a ring of fire encircling that house;
on its four sides were rivers full of living fire,
and they encircled that house.
7 Around it were seraphim, cherubim, and ophanim;
these are the ones who never sleep
and who guard the throne of his glory.
8 I saw angels past counting,
thousands upon thousands and myriads upon myriads,
surrounding that house.
Michael, Raphael, Gabriel, and Phanuel, and the holy angels in heaven above,
go in and out of that house.
9 Out of that house came Michael and Gabriel, Raphael and Phanuel, and many holy angels beyond number,
10 and the Head of Days came with them,
his head pure and white like wool,
his robes past describing.
11 I fell on my face;
my whole body went limp,
and my spirit was transformed.
I cried out in a loud voice,
with a spirit of power,
and I blessed, glorified, and exalted.
12 These blessings that came from my mouth pleased that Head of Days.

13 That Head of Days came, accompanied by Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and Phanuel, and thousands and myriads of angels past counting.
14 He[d] came to me, greeted me with his voice, and said to me,
"You are that son of man[e] who was born for righteousness;
righteousness rests on you, and the righteousness of the Head of Days will not abandon you."
15 He said to me,
"He proclaims peace to you in the name of the age to come,
for from there peace has gone out since the creation of the world,
and so you will have it forever and ever and ever.
16 Everyone will walk in your ways,
since righteousness will never abandon you;
with you will be their homes, and with you their inheritance,
and they will not be parted from you forever and ever and ever.
17 So with that son of man there will be long life,
and the righteous will have peace and an upright way
in the Lord of Spirits' name forever and ever."

Notes

- a (71:1) The children of God: angels; compare 6:2; Job 1:6.
- b (71:2) Hyacinth: a precious stone, probably blue (sapphire or jacinth).
- c (71:5) Crystals: or "hailstones"; compare 14:9–10.
- d (71:14) He: the angel, or perhaps the Head of Days himself. Charles assumes a passage has been lost before this verse and changes "you" to "this."
- e (71:14) You are that son of man: so all the Ethiopic manuscripts. Here Enoch himself is identified with the heavenly figure of the Parables, or, as many read it, is simply called "a human being born for righteousness" (compare 60:10). Charles and some translators emend to "This is the Son of Man." This translation follows the manuscripts.

Chapter 72

The Astronomical Book (chapters 72–82)

1 The book of the movements of the lights of heaven, each as it is, by their kinds, their authority, and their seasons, by their names and their places of rising, and by their months, which Uriel, the holy angel who was with me and who is their guide, showed me. He showed me their whole design exactly as it is, for every year of the world and forever, until the new creation is made that lasts forever.[a] 2 This is the first law of the lights. The light called the sun rises in the eastern gates of heaven and sets in the western gates of heaven. 3 I saw six gates where the sun rises and six gates where the sun sets. The moon also rises and sets in these gates, as do the leaders of the stars with those they lead: six in the east and six in the west, all lined up exactly, one after another. There are also many windows to the right and left of these gates.[b] 4 First the great light named the sun comes out. Its circle is like the circle of heaven, and it is entirely full of fire that gives light and heat. 5 The wind drives the chariot on which it rides up. The sun goes down out of the sky and turns back by way of the north to reach the east, and it is guided so that it arrives at the proper gate and shines in the face of the sky. 6 In this way it rises in the first month[c] in the great gate, which is the fourth of those six gates in the east. 7 In that fourth gate, from which the sun rises in the first month, there are twelve window openings, from which flame comes out when they are opened at their time. 8 When the sun rises in the sky, it comes out through that fourth gate for thirty mornings in a row and sets exactly in the fourth gate in the west of the sky. 9 Through this period each day grows longer and each night shorter, until the thirtieth morning. 10 By then daylight exceeds darkness by one ninth: the day comes to exactly ten parts and the night to eight.[d] 11 The sun rises from that fourth gate and sets in the fourth, then moves to the fifth gate of the east for thirty mornings, rising from it and setting in the fifth gate. 12 Then the day grows longer by two parts and comes to eleven parts, and the night grows shorter and comes to seven parts.[e] 13 It returns to the east and enters the sixth gate, and rises and sets in the sixth gate for thirty-one mornings, because of its sign.[f] 14 On that day the day is longer than the night, so that the day is twice the night: the day becomes twelve parts, and the night is cut back to six parts. 15 Then the sun rises so as to make the day shorter and the night longer. The sun goes back to the east and enters the sixth gate, and rises and sets from it for thirty mornings. 16 When the thirty mornings are over, the day has lost exactly one part and is eleven parts, and the night seven.

17 The sun leaves that sixth gate in the west, goes to the east, and rises in the fifth gate for thirty mornings, and sets again in the west in the fifth western gate. 18 On that day the day has lost two parts; the day comes to ten parts and the night to eight. 19 The sun leaves that fifth gate and sets in the fifth gate of the west, and rises in the fourth gate for thirty-one mornings because of its sign, and sets in the west. 20 On that day the day equals the night; they are of equal length, the night nine parts and the day nine.[g] 21 The sun rises from that gate and sets in the west, then returns to the east and rises in the third gate for thirty mornings and sets in the west in the third gate. 22 On that day the night grows longer than the day, each night longer than the last and each day shorter than the last until the thirtieth morning; the night comes to exactly ten parts and the day to eight. 23 Leaving the third gate, where it rose and set in the west, the sun goes back east and rises out of the second eastern gate for thirty mornings, and likewise sets in the second gate in the west of the sky. 24 On that day the night comes to eleven parts and the day to seven. 25 On that day the sun rises from that second gate and sets in the west in the second gate, and returns to the east into the first gate for thirty-one mornings, and sets in the first gate in the west of the sky. 26 On that day the night grows long and becomes double the day: the night is exactly twelve parts and the day six.[h] 27 With that the sun has gone through the stages of its circuit, and it turns back over those same stages: it enters that gate for thirty mornings and sets also in the west opposite it. 28 That night the night has shortened by a ninth, to eleven parts, and the day is seven parts. 29 The sun comes back and enters the second gate in the east and returns over those stages of its circuit for thirty mornings, rising and setting. 30 On that day the night shortens: the night comes to ten parts and the day to eight. 31 On that day the sun rises from that gate and sets in the west, returns to the east, and rises in the third gate for thirty-one mornings, and sets in the west of the sky. 32 On that day the night has shortened to nine parts and the day is nine parts;
night equals day, and the year comes to exactly three hundred and sixty-four days.[i] 33 The lengthening of the day and the night, and the shortening of the day and the night, all come about through the sun's course; by it they are made different. [34] So its course grows longer by day and shorter by night.[j] [35] This is the law and course of the sun and its return, as often as it returns: sixty times it rises and goes back.[k] That is, the great light called the sun, forever and ever. [36] What rises in this way is the great light, and it is named by its appearance, as the Lord commanded. [37] As it rises, so it sets; it does not grow less and does not rest, but runs day and night. Its light is seven times brighter than the moon's, but in size the two are equal.

Notes

- a (72:1) This section, often called the Astronomical Book or the Book of the Luminaries, is the oldest part of 1 Enoch; Aramaic fragments of a longer form (4QEnastr a–d) are reported to date from about 200 BC or earlier. It sets out a schematic solar year of 364 days: exactly 52 weeks, divided into four quarters of 91 days, each made of two 30-day months and one 31-day month. Because 364 is divisible by 7, every date falls on the same day of the week every year, and festivals never fall on a sabbath. The same calendar is defended in Jubilees and was used by the Qumran community. It runs about 1¼ days short of the true solar year (about 365.24 days); the text never addresses the gap.
- b (72:3) The six gates: the horizon is divided into six sectors on each side, east and west, through which the sun moves north and south over the year. Gate 1 is the southernmost (the sun's rising point at midwinter) and gate 6 the northernmost (at midsummer). The sun spends 30 days in each gate, or 31 at the four turning points, making 364.
- c (72:6) The first month: the month beginning at the spring equinox, roughly late March to late April. This calendar starts the year in spring, as in Exod 12:2.
- d (72:10) Parts: the text divides the whole day-and-night into 18 equal parts, so that one part equals 80 minutes. Here the day is 10 parts (13 hours 20 minutes) and the night 8 (10 hours 40 minutes). At the equinoxes each is 9 parts (12 hours); at midsummer the day reaches 12 parts (16 hours) and the night 6 (8 hours). This 2 : 1 ratio of longest to shortest day fits a latitude well north of Judea and was common in Babylonian astronomy.
- e (72:12) Eleven parts: 14 hours 40 minutes; seven parts: 9 hours 20 minutes.
- f (72:13) Because of its sign: the extra 31st day marks a turning point of the year, here the summer solstice, about June 21.
- g (72:20) The autumn equinox, about September 22: day and night are each 12 hours.
- h (72:26) The winter solstice, about December 21: night 16 hours, day 8 hours.
- i (72:32) The spring equinox, about March 20, completing the year: 30 + 30 + 31 days in each of four quarters = 364 days.
- j (72:34) The sense of this verse is obscure in the manuscripts.

- k (72:35) Sixty times: perhaps meaning the sun passes through each pair of gates twice a year, once going north and once going south (6 × 2 × 5?), or the figure is corrupt. Its meaning is uncertain.

Chapter 73

[1] After this law I saw another law, concerning the lesser light, called the moon. [2] Its circle is like the circle of heaven, and the chariot on which it rides is driven by the wind, and light is given to it by measure. [3] Its rising and setting shift every month, and its days are like the days of the sun. When its light is complete, it is a seventh of the sun's light. [4] This is how it rises. Its first phase comes out in the east on the thirtieth morning. On that day it becomes visible and marks for you the start of the month on the thirtieth day, together with the sun, in the gate where the sun rises. [5] Half of it stands out by a seventh, and its whole disk is empty, without light, except for a seventh of it, a fourteenth part of its light.[a] [6] When it receives a seventh of half its light, its light comes to a seventh and a half. [7] It sets with the sun. When the sun rises, the moon rises with it and receives half of one part of light. On that night, at the beginning of its day, the moon sets with the sun and is unseen that night, with its fourteen and a half parts. [8] On that day it rises with exactly a seventh, comes out and moves away from the sunrise, and in its remaining days it grows bright in the other thirteen parts.

Notes

- a (73:5) The moon's light is counted in fourteenths (or sevenths and their halves). Over 14 or 15 days it gains its light in steps and loses it again in the same steps.

Chapter 74

[1] I saw another course and law for the moon, how by that law it makes its monthly circuit. [2] Uriel, the holy angel who leads them all, showed me all of this and their positions. I recorded where they stood just as he pointed them out, and recorded their months as they are and how their light appears, until fifteen days are completed. [3] By sevenths it completes all its light in the east, and by sevenths it completes all its darkness in the west. [4] In certain months it shifts its settings, and in certain months it follows a course of its own. [5] For two months the moon and sun go down together through the two middle gates, the third and the fourth. [6] It goes out for seven days, turns, and comes back again through the gate where the sun rises and completes all its light. Then it moves away from the sun and in eight days enters the sixth gate, from which the sun comes out. [7] When the sun comes out of the fourth gate, the moon goes out for seven days until it comes out of the fifth, then turns back again in seven days to the fourth gate and completes all its light; then it moves away and enters the first gate in eight days. [8] It comes back again in seven days to the fourth gate, from which the sun comes out. [9] That is how I saw them placed: the rising of the moons and the setting of the sun during those days. [10] If five years are added together, the sun has a surplus of thirty days; and all the days that fall to it for one of those five years, when they are complete, come to 364 days. [11] The surplus of the sun and the stars comes to six days: in five years, at six days a year, that makes thirty days, and the moon falls behind the sun and the stars by thirty days.[a] [12] Sun and stars usher in every year precisely, so that their position never moves ahead or falls behind by a single day, forever; they complete the years with perfect fairness in 364 days. [13] In three years there are 1,092 days, and in five years 1,820 days, so that in eight years there are 2,912 days.[b] [14] For the moon alone the days in three years come to 1,062, and in five years it falls fifty days behind.[c] [15] In five years there are 1,770 days, so that for the moon the days in eight years come to 2,832. [16] In eight years it falls behind by eighty days; all the days it falls behind in eight years are eighty.[d] [17] The year is completed exactly according to their stations in the world and the stations of the sun, which rise from the gates through which it rises and sets for thirty days.

Notes

- a (74:11) The lunar year of twelve months of 29 or 30 days is 354 days, ten days shorter than the 364-day solar year; the text here rounds the yearly difference to six days by a different reckoning, and the figures in verses 10–16 do not all agree. The manuscripts vary in the numbers.
- b (74:13) 3 × 364 = 1,092; 5 × 364 = 1,820; 8 × 364 = 2,912.
- c (74:14) 3 × 354 = 1,062, thirty days short of the solar total; in five years 1,770, fifty short.

- d (74:16) 2,912 − 2,832 = 80.

Chapter 75

1 The leaders of the chiefs of thousands, who are placed over all creation and over all the stars, are also bound up with the four added days.[a] They cannot be separated from their posts, according to the reckoning of the year, and they serve on the four days that are not counted in the reckoning of the year. 2 Because of them people go wrong, for those lights truly serve at the stations of the world: one in the first gate, one in the third gate of heaven, one in the fourth gate, and one in the sixth gate. The year is completed exactly through its 364 separate stations.[b] 3 For Uriel the angel showed me the signs, the seasons, the years, and the days—Uriel, whom the Lord of glory has set forever over all the lights of heaven, in heaven and in the world, so that they may rule over the face of the sky and be seen on the earth and be leaders of the day and the night: the sun, the moon, the stars, and all the serving creatures that make their circuit in all the chariots of heaven.[c] 4 Likewise Uriel showed me twelve doors open in the circle of the sun's chariot in the sky, through which the sun's rays break out. From them warmth spreads over the earth when they are opened at their appointed times; 5 They serve also the winds and the spirit of dew, when they open, standing wide at the edges of the heavens. 6 As for the twelve gates of the sky at the earth's edges: from them the sun, moon, and stars and everything made in the heavens come forth, eastward and westward. 7 Many windows are open to their left and right, and one window at its time sends out warmth, matching those doors from which the stars come out as he has commanded them, and in which they set according to their number. 8 I saw chariots in the sky running through the world above those gates, in which turn the stars that never set. 9 One is larger than all the rest, and it makes its circuit through the whole world.[d]

Notes

- a (75:1) The four added days: the four 31st days, one at the end of each quarter (the equinoxes and solstices), which bring 360 up to 364.
- b (75:2) People go wrong: the author attacks those who used a 360-day year or a lunar calendar; compare 82:4–6 and Jubilees 6:32–38.

- c (75:3) Compare Gen 1:14–18.
- d (75:9) One is larger: perhaps the Great Bear (the Big Dipper), which never sets at northern latitudes; compare "the Bear" in Job 9:9; 38:32.

Chapter 76

1 At the ends of the earth I saw twelve gates open toward all the quarters, from which the winds come out and blow over the earth. 2 Three of them open on the face of the sky, three toward the west, three on the right of the sky, and three on the left.[a] 3 The first three are those of the east, then three of the north, then three of the south, and three of the west. 4 Through four of them come winds of blessing and well-being, and from the other eight come harmful winds. When these are sent, they bring destruction on the whole earth, on the water on it, on all who live on it, and on everything in the water and on the land.

5 The first wind from those gates, called the east wind, comes out through the first gate in the east, the one leaning toward the south. From it come desolation, drought, heat, and ruin. 6 Through the second gate, in the middle, comes what is right: from it come rain, fruitfulness, well-being, and dew. Through the third gate, toward the north, come cold and drought. 7 After these come the south winds, through three gates. Through the first of them, leaning toward the east, a hot wind comes out. 8 Through the middle gate next to it come sweet smells, dew and rain, well-being and health. 9 Through the third gate, toward the west, come dew and rain, locusts and desolation. 10 After these come the north winds. From the seventh gate, on the east side, come dew and rain, locusts and desolation. 11 From the middle gate come, straight on, health and rain, dew and well-being. Through the third gate, on the west side, come mist and frost, snow and rain, dew and locusts. 12 After these four come the west winds. Through the first gate, next to the north, come dew and frost, cold, snow, and ice. 13 From the middle gate come dew and rain, well-being and blessing. Through the last gate, next to the south, come drought and desolation, burning and ruin. 14 So the twelve gates of the four quarters of heaven are finished. All their laws, all their plagues, and all their benefits I have shown you, my son Methuselah.[b]

Notes

- a (76:2) The face of the sky: the east. In Semitic orientation one faces east, so "right" is south and "left" is north.
- b (76:14) Methuselah: Hebrew Metushelaḥ, perhaps "man of the javelin" or "man of Shelah." Enoch's son (Gen 5:21–27), to whom the Astronomical Book and the Epistle are addressed.

Chapter 77

1 The east is named as the first quarter, since it comes first.[a] The second is called the south, because the Most High will come down there; there especially the one who is blessed forever will come down. 2 The west quarter is called "the waning," because there all the lights of heaven wane and go down. 3 The fourth quarter, called the north, is divided into three: the first part is for human habitation; the second holds seas of water, the deeps, forests, rivers, darkness, and mist; and the third part holds the garden of righteousness.

4 I saw seven high mountains, higher than all the mountains on the earth; from there frost comes out, and days, seasons, and years pass away. 5 I saw seven rivers on the earth, larger than all other rivers. One of them comes from the west and pours its waters into the Great Sea.[b] 6 Two flow down from the north and empty into the Red Sea in the east. 7 The other four come out on the north side to their own sea: two of them to the Red Sea, and two into the Great Sea, where they empty; some say, into the desert. 8 I saw seven great islands in the sea and on the land: two on the land and five in the Great Sea.[c]

Notes

- a (77:1) The quarter names are wordplays in Aramaic or Hebrew: east, qedem, also means "first, before"; south, darom, is explained as dar rum, "the Exalted One dwells," here "the Most High will descend there"; west, maʿarav, is linked with ʿarav, "to go down, wane"; north, tsafon, with tsafun, "hidden."
- b (77:5) The Great Sea: the Mediterranean. The Red Sea: the Erythraean Sea, the waters south and east of Arabia (see the note at 32:2). The rivers may be the Nile, Tigris, Euphrates, and others known to ancient geographers.
- c (77:8) Charles counts this as 77:8; some editions number it 77:9.

Chapter 78

1 These are the names of the sun: the first Oryares, and the second Tomas.[a] 2 The moon has four names: the first is Asonya, the second

Ebla, the third Benase, and the fourth Erae. [3] These are the two great lights. Their circle is like the circle of heaven, and the two circles are the same size. [4] In the circle of the sun there are seven portions of light more than in the moon, and these are passed on in fixed amounts until the seventh portion of the sun is used up. [5] They set and go into the western gates, make their circuit by way of the north, and come out through the eastern gates on the face of the sky. [6] When the moon rises, a fourteenth part appears in the sky, and on the fourteenth day it completes its light. [7] Fifteen parts of light are passed to it until the fifteenth day, when its light is completed according to the sign of the year; it becomes fifteen parts, and the moon grows by fourteenths. [8] As it wanes it loses one part a day: fourteen parts remain after day one, thirteen after day two, then twelve, eleven, ten, nine, eight, seven, six, five, four, three, and two by day thirteen; by day fourteen only half a seventh is left, and by day fifteen the last of its light is gone. [9] Some months last twenty-nine days, and one lasts twenty-eight. [10] Uriel showed me another law: when light is passed to the moon, and from which side the sun passes it. [11] All the time the moon is growing in its light, it is drawing it to itself while facing the sun, for fourteen days, until it is lit all over and its light is complete in the sky. [12] Its first day bears the name new moon, since light first dawns on it then. [13] It becomes full exactly on the day the sun sets in the west; it rises from the east at night and shines all night long until the sun rises opposite it, and the moon is seen opposite the sun. [14] On the side from which the moon's light comes, it wanes again there until all the light is gone and all the days of the month are finished, and its disk is empty, without light. [15] It makes three months of thirty days, and at its time it makes three months of twenty-nine days each, in which it completes its waning in the first period, in the first gate, for 177 days.[b] [16] As it goes out, it shows itself through three thirty-day months and three twenty-nine-day months. [17] At night it looks like a man for twenty days each time,[c] and by day it looks like the sky, for there is nothing else in it but its light.

Notes

- a (78:1) The names of the sun and moon are of uncertain origin. Oryares may come from Hebrew ʾor ḥeres, “light of the sun”; Tomas perhaps from Hebrew ḥammah, “heat,” or Aramaic. Of the moon’s names, Asonya, Ebla, Benase, and Erae may reflect Hebrew ʾishon, “pupil (of the eye),” levanah, “white one,” ben ḥese, “son of the full moon,” and yareaḥ, “moon.” All are guesses.
- b (78:15) 177 days: 3 × 30 + 3 × 29 = 177, half of a lunar year of 354 days.
- c (78:17) Like a man: perhaps the “man in the moon”; the text is uncertain.

Chapter 79

1 Now, my son, I have shown you everything, and the law of all the stars of heaven is complete. 2 He showed me all their laws for every day, for every season of rule, for every year and its going out, and for the order set for it every month and every week; 3 and the waning of the moon that takes place in the sixth gate, for in this sixth gate its light is completed, and after that the waning begins; 4 and the waning that takes place in the first gate in its season, until 177 days are completed, which, counted in weeks, are twenty-five weeks and two days.[a] 5 It falls behind the sun and the order of the stars by exactly five days in the course of one period,[b] when this place that you see has been passed through. 6 This is the picture and outline of every light, which Uriel the archangel, their leader, showed me.

Notes

- a (79:4) 25 × 7 + 2 = 177.
- b (79:5) One period: half a year; 182 − 177 = 5. Compare 74:10–16.

Chapter 80

1 At that time Uriel the angel spoke to me in reply: “Look, Enoch, I have shown you everything. I have revealed everything to you, so that you may behold the sun and the moon, the guides of heaven’s stars, and all who turn them, their tasks, their times, and their departures.

2 But in the days of the sinners the years will be cut short;
their seed will be late on their land and in their fields;
everything on the earth will change
and will not appear at its proper time.
The rain will be held back,
and the sky will withhold it.

3 In those times the fruit of the earth will be late and will not grow at its proper time, and the fruit of the trees will be held back in its season.
4 The moon will change its order
and will not appear at its time.
5 In those days the sun will be seen, and it will travel in the evening at the edge of the great chariot in the west, and will shine more brightly than the order of light allows.
6 Many chiefs of the stars will break the order,
will change their circuits and their tasks,
and will not appear at the times set for them.
7 The whole order of the stars will be hidden from the sinners,
and the thoughts of those on the earth will go wrong about them;
they will turn away from all their ways,
they will err and take them for gods.
8 Evil will multiply upon them,
and punishment will come on them to destroy them all."

Chapter 81

1 He said to me,
"Look, Enoch, at these heavenly tablets;[a]
read what is written on them,
and take note of every single thing."
2 I looked at the heavenly tablets and read everything written there and understood it all. I read the book of all human deeds and of all mortals who will be on the earth to the farthest generations.
3 At once I blessed the great Lord, the King of glory forever, for having made all the works of the world.
I praised the Lord for his patience,
and blessed him on account of the children of humankind.
4 After that I said,
"Happy is the one who dies in righteousness and goodness,
about whom no book of wrongdoing has been written and against whom no day of judgment will be found."

5 Those seven holy ones[b] brought me and set me on the earth in front of the door of my house, and said to me, "Tell everything to your son Methuselah, and show all your children that no human being is righteous before the Lord, for he is the one who made them.
6 We will leave you with your son for one year, until you give your instructions, so that you may teach your children, write things down for them, and bear witness to all your children. In the second year they will take you from among them.[c]
7 Let your heart be strong,
for the good will announce righteousness to the good;
the righteous will rejoice with the righteous
and congratulate one another.
8 But sinners will die with sinners,
and the apostate will go down with the apostate.
9 Those who do right will die because of human deeds and be gathered in because of the deeds of the wicked."
10 Then they stopped speaking with me, and I went back among my people, praising the Lord of the world.

Notes

- a (81:1) The heavenly tablets: a heavenly record of all that will happen and of God's laws, prominent also in Jubilees (for example 3:10; 5:13). Compare Ps 139:16; Dan 10:21.
- b (81:5) Those seven holy ones: the seven archangels of 20:1–8.
- c (81:6) Compare 82:1 and chapters 91 and 106–107, where Enoch instructs Methuselah.

Chapter 82

1 Now, my son Methuselah, I am telling you all these things and writing them down for you. I have revealed everything to you and given you books about all of them. So keep safe, my son Methuselah, the books from your father's hand, and pass them on to the generations of the world.
2 I have given wisdom to you and your children, and to the children you will have,
so that they in turn hand it on to their own children through the generations,

a wisdom past their understanding.
3 Those who understand it will not sleep,
but will keep their ears open to learn this wisdom,
and it will please those who eat it more than fine food.
4 Happy are all the righteous! Happy are all who walk in the way of righteousness and do not sin as the sinners do in counting all their days, the days in which the sun crosses the sky, going in and out of each gate for thirty days alongside the chiefs of thousands who order the stars, and with the four extra days that split the year into quarters, which guide them and go in with them on those four days. 5 Because of these, people will go wrong and will not count them in the full reckoning of the year; they will go wrong and not recognize them accurately. 6 They are part of the year's count and stand written truly forever: in gates one, three, four, and six, one day apiece, so that the year is filled out at 364 days. 7 Its account is accurate and its recorded reckoning exact, for Uriel showed me and revealed to me the lights, the months, the festivals, the years, and the days—Uriel, to whom the Lord of all the creation of the world has subjected the host of heaven. 8 He has authority over night and day in heaven, to make the light shine on human beings: sun, moon, and stars, and all the powers of heaven that turn in their circling chariots.
9 Here are the ranks of the stars that go down each in its place, its season, its festival, and its month. 10 Here also are the names of their guides, who see to it that each comes in on time, by rank and season and month, in its term of rule and its station. 11 First come in the four leaders who split the year into quarters; next the twelve rank-leaders who apportion the months; then, for the 360 days, chiefs of thousands who apportion the days; and for the four extra days, leaders who mark off the quarters. 12 These chiefs of thousands are slotted in between one leader and the next, each following a station, while the leaders themselves do the dividing. 13 These are the names of the leaders who divide the four appointed parts of the year: Milkiel, Helemmelek, Meleyal, and Narel.[a] 14 Their guides are named Adnarel, Iyasusael, and Elomeel. These three come after the rank-leaders, and one more comes after those three, who in turn come after the station-leaders that mark off the quarters of the year. 15 At the beginning of the year Melkeyal rises first and rules; he is called Tamaini and "sun." All the days of his rule while he governs are ninety-one days.[b] 16 These are the signs of the days to be seen on earth in the days of his rule: sweat, heat, and calm. All the trees bear fruit and put out leaves; the wheat is harvested; the roses bloom, and all the flowers that come up in the field; but the trees of winter wither.[c] 17 These are the names of the leaders under them: Berkael, Zelebsel, and another chief of a thousand who is added, called Hiluyaseph. And the days of this one's rule are ended. 18 The next leader after him is Helemmelek, whom they call "the shining sun." All the days of his light are ninety-one days.[d] 19 These are the signs of his days on the earth: scorching heat and dryness. The trees ripen their fruit and bring all their fruit to ripeness and readiness; the sheep mate and conceive; all the fruit of the earth is gathered in, and everything in the fields, and the winepress. These things happen in the days of his rule. 20 These are the names, the orders, and the leaders of those chiefs of thousands: Gidaiyal, Keel, and Heel, and the name of the chief of a thousand added to them is Asfael. And the days of his rule are ended.[e]

Notes

- a (82:13) Milkiel: "my king is God." Helemmelek: perhaps "the king's companion" or "the king is strong." Meleyal: "fullness of God." Narel: "light of God" or "fire of God." The names of the lesser leaders are of uncertain meaning.
- b (82:15) Ninety-one days: one quarter of the 364-day year. Beginning at the spring equinox, this first quarter runs roughly from late March to late June.
- c (82:16) The wheat harvest in the land of Israel falls in May–June.
- d (82:18) The second quarter, roughly late June to late September.
- e (82:20) The book breaks off here; the leaders of the third and fourth quarters are not given.

Chapter 83

The Book of Dreams (chapters 83–90)

1 Now, my son Methuselah, I will show you all the visions I have seen, telling them to you one by one.[a] 2 I saw two visions before I married, and they were quite unlike each other. The first came while I was learning to write; the second, before I married your mother, was a fearful vision. About them I prayed to the Lord. [3] I had lain down to sleep at my grandfather Mahalalel's house[b] and in a vision I watched the sky give way, torn loose and falling onto the earth. [4] As it fell on the earth, I saw the earth swallowed in a vast abyss. Mountains hung upon mountains, hills sank down onto hills, and tall trees were ripped from their trunks, flung down, and sunk in the abyss. [5] Then a word came into my mouth, and I raised my voice and cried out, "The earth is destroyed!" [6] My grandfather Mahalalel, who was lying near me, woke me and asked, "Why are you crying out like this, my son? Why such wailing?" [7] I told him the whole vision I had seen, and he said to me, "You have seen something terrible, my son. Your dream vision is grave; it concerns the secrets of all the earth's sin. The earth must sink into the abyss and be utterly destroyed. [8] Now, my son, get up and plead with the Lord of glory, since you are a man of faith, that a remnant may be left on the earth and that he may not wipe out the whole earth. [9] My son, all this will come down on the earth from heaven, and there will be vast destruction on the earth." [10] After that I got up and prayed, pleaded, and begged, and I wrote down my prayer for the generations of the world. I will show it all to you, my son Methuselah. [11] When I had gone outside and seen the sky, the sun coming up in the east, the moon going down in the west, a scattering of stars, the whole earth, and all things just as he had known them from the start, I blessed the Lord of judgment and praised him, because he had made the sun come out of the windows of the east, so that it climbed and rose over the face of the sky and set out and went on along the path appointed for it.

Notes

- a (83:1) The Book of Dreams (chapters 83–90) contains two dream visions. Aramaic fragments of it are reported from Qumran (4QEn c–f), and it is usually dated to about 165–160 BC, during the Maccabean revolt, because the Animal Apocalypse (chapters 85–90) ends its review of history around that time.
- b (83:3) Mahalalel: Hebrew Mahalal'el, "praise of God." Enoch's great-grandfather in Gen 5:12–18 (Mahalalel, Jared, Enoch); the Ethiopic here calls him grandfather.

Chapter 84

1 Lifting my hands in righteousness, I blessed the Holy and Great One.
I spoke using my mouth's breath and the fleshly tongue that God made for human beings to speak with; he gave them breath, a tongue,
and a mouth to speak with:

2 "Blessed are you, Lord, King,
great and mighty in your greatness,
Lord of all the creation of heaven,
King of kings and God of the whole world!
Your power, your kingship, and your greatness last forever and ever,
and your rule through all generations.
All the heavens are your throne forever,
and the whole earth your footstool forever and ever.[a]

3 For you made all things and you rule all things;
nothing is too hard for you.
Wisdom never leaves the place of your throne
or turns away from your presence.
You know, see, and hear everything,
and nothing is hidden from you, for you see everything.

4 Now the angels of your heavens have done wrong,
and your anger rests on human flesh
until the great day of judgment.

5 Now, God and Lord and great King,
I beg and plead with you to grant my prayer:
leave me descendants on the earth;
do not destroy all human flesh
and empty the earth of people, making the destruction permanent.

6 Now, my Lord, remove from the earth the flesh that has roused your anger,
but establish the flesh of righteousness and uprightness
as a plant of eternal seed.[b]
Do not hide your face from your servant's prayer, Lord."

Notes

- a (84:2) Compare Isa 66:1.
- b (84:6) A plant of eternal seed: compare "the plant of righteousness" at 10:16 and 93:2, 5, 10, an image for the faithful remnant of Israel.

Chapter 85

1 Later I had a second dream, and I will tell you all of it, my son. 2 Enoch raised his voice and spoke to his son Methuselah: "I will speak to you, my son. Hear my words, and turn your ear to your father's dream vision.[a] 3 Before I married your mother Edna,[b] I saw in a vision on my bed: there was a bull coming out of the earth, and that bull was white.[c] After it came a young cow, and with her came two bulls, one black and the other red. 4 The black bull gored the red one and chased him across the earth, and after that I could no longer see the red bull. 5 But the black bull grew, and that young cow went with him. I saw many cattle come from him, looking like him and following him. 6 That cow, the first one, left the first bull to look for the red one, but did not find him. She mourned bitterly over him and kept searching. 7 I watched until the first bull came to her and calmed her, and from then on she cried no more. 8 Next she gave birth to a second white bull,[d] and then to many bulls and black cows. 9 In my sleep I saw that white bull also grow and become a great white bull, and many white bulls came from him that looked like him. 10 They began to father many white bulls like themselves, one after another, a great many.

Notes

- a (85:2) Chapters 85–90 are known as the Animal Apocalypse. They retell history from Adam to the end time in symbols: the patriarchs before Jacob are bulls (white for the righteous line, black for the wicked); fallen angels are stars; Israel are sheep; the nations are wild beasts and birds of prey; and angels appear as men. The notes identify each figure as most scholars read it.
- b (85:3) Edna: perhaps "delight" (Hebrew 'ednah). Enoch's wife, not named in Genesis; Jubilees 4:20 also calls her Edna.
- c (85:3) The white bull is Adam; the heifer is Eve; the black and red bulls are Cain and Abel.
- d (85:8) Another white bull: Seth (Gen 4:25).

Chapter 86

1 Again, as I slept, I looked with my eyes and saw the sky above, and there a star fell from heaven,[a] and it got up, ate, and grazed among those cattle. 2 After that I saw the large black cattle, and they all changed their stalls, their pastures, and their herds, and began to live together.[b] 3 Again I looked in the vision toward the sky, and I saw many stars come down and throw themselves from heaven to that first star. They became bulls among those cattle and grazed with them.[c] 4 I looked at them and saw that they all exposed their organs like stallions and began to mount the cows of the cattle. They all became pregnant and gave birth to elephants, camels, and donkeys.[d] 5 All the cattle were afraid of them and terrified, and began to bite with their teeth, to devour, and to gore with their horns. 6 They even began to devour those cattle, and all the children of the earth began to shake and tremble before them and run away from them.

Notes

- a (86:1) A star: the first fallen angel, probably Asael (Azazel), compare 88:1 and 10:4.
- b (86:2) The line of Seth (white) and the line of Cain (black) mingle.
- c (86:3) The Watchers come down (chapter 6; Gen 6:1–4).
- d (86:4) The giants, in three kinds, compare 7:2 and the note there.

Chapter 87

1 Again I saw how they began to gore one another and devour one another, and the earth began to cry out. 2 I raised my eyes to heaven again and saw in the vision beings coming out of heaven who looked like white men.[a] Four came out from that place, and three with them.
3 The three who came out last took me by the hand and carried me off, far from the earth's generations, up to a lofty place. They showed me a tower rising high above the earth, with all the hills lower than
it. 4 One of them said to me, "Stay here until you see everything that happens to those elephants, camels, and donkeys, and to the stars and the cattle, all of them."

Notes

- a (87:2) Like white men: angels. The four are the archangels of chapter 10 (Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and Sariel or Phanuel); the three with them are other angels who take Enoch up.

Chapter 88

1 I saw one of the four who had come out first seize that first star which had fallen from heaven. He tied it hand and foot and threw it into an abyss; that abyss was narrow and deep, dreadful and dark.[a] 2
Another of them unsheathed a sword and handed it to the elephants, camels, and donkeys, and they began to strike one another, and the whole earth shook because of them.[b] 3 As I watched in the vision, one of the four who had come out threw stones down from heaven, gathered and took all the great stars whose organs were like stallions', tied them all hand and foot, and threw them into an abyss of the earth.

Notes

- a (88:1) Compare 10:4–5, where Raphael binds Asael and casts him into darkness.
- b (88:2) Compare 10:9–12.

Chapter 89

1 One of those four went to that white bull[a] and taught him a secret, without his being afraid. He had been born a bull and became a man. He built himself a great vessel and lived on it, and three bulls lived with him in that vessel, and they were shut in. 2 Again I raised my eyes toward heaven and saw a high roof with seven streams of water on it, and those streams poured a great deal of water into an enclosure. 3 I looked again, and springs opened on the floor of that great enclosure, and the water began to swell and rise over the floor. I watched that enclosure until its whole floor was covered with water.
4 Water, darkness, and mist grew over it. When I looked at how high the water was, it had risen above the height of the enclosure and was pouring over it, and it stood on the earth. 5 All the cattle of that enclosure were herded together until I saw them sink, swallowed up, and die in that water. 6 But the vessel floated on the water, while all the cattle, elephants, camels, and donkeys sank to the bottom with all the animals. I could no longer see them; they could not get away, but died and sank into the depths. 7 Again I watched in the vision until those streams were taken away from that high roof, the chasms of the earth were leveled, and other abysses were opened. 8 Then the water began to drain into these until the earth could be seen. The vessel came to rest on the earth, the darkness withdrew, and light appeared.

9 That white bull who had become a man came out of the vessel, and the three bulls with him. One of the three was white like that bull, one was red as blood, and one was black. And that white bull left them.[b] 10 They began to produce wild animals and birds, so that there came to be different kinds: lions, leopards, wolves, dogs, hyenas, wild boars, foxes, badgers, pigs, falcons, vultures, kites, eagles, and ravens. Among them a white bull was born.[c] 11 They began to bite one another. But the white bull born among them fathered a wild donkey and a white bull with it, and the wild donkeys multiplied.[d] 12 The bull born from him fathered a black wild boar and a white sheep. The boar fathered many boars, but the sheep fathered twelve sheep.[e] 13
When those twelve sheep had grown, they handed one of them over to the donkeys, and the donkeys in turn handed that sheep over to the wolves, and that sheep grew up among the wolves.[f] 14 The Lord brought the other eleven to share its home and pasture among the wolves, and they increased into many flocks. 15 The wolves began to fear them and oppressed them, even destroying their little ones; they threw their young into a river full of water.[g] But the sheep began to cry out over their little ones and to complain to their Lord. 16 A sheep that had been rescued from the wolves fled and escaped to the wild donkeys.[h] I saw the sheep mourning and crying out, pleading with their Lord with all their strength, until the Lord of the sheep came down from a lofty dwelling at the sheep's cry and came to them and shepherded them. 17 He called the sheep that had escaped the wolves and spoke with it about the wolves, that it should warn them not to touch the sheep. 18 The sheep went to the wolves as the Lord had said, and another sheep met it and went with it.[i] The two went together into the gathering of those wolves and spoke with them, warning them not to touch the sheep from then on. 19 After that I saw the wolves oppress the sheep harshly with all their might, and the sheep cried out. 20 The Lord came to the sheep, and they began to strike those wolves.[j] The wolves began to wail, but the sheep grew quiet and at once stopped crying out. 21 I watched the sheep until they left the wolves behind. But the wolves' eyes were blinded, and they set out after the sheep with all their might. 22 The Lord of the sheep led the way, with his whole flock behind him. His face was dazzling, glorious, and fearful to look at. 23 But the wolves began to chase those sheep until they reached a sea of water. 24 That sea was split, and the water stood on one side and the other in front of them. Their Lord went at their head and stood between the flock and the wolves.[k] 25 Since the wolves did not yet see the sheep, they went into the middle of that sea; the wolves followed the sheep and ran after them into the sea.

26 When they saw the Lord of the sheep, they turned to run from his face, but the sea came back together and became as it had been made;
the water swelled and rose until it covered those wolves. 27 I watched until all the wolves chasing those sheep had died and drowned.
28 The sheep, however, came safely out of the water into a desert without water or pasture, and there their eyes started to open so that they could see.[l] I saw the Lord of the sheep shepherding them, providing water and pasture, while that sheep went ahead as their guide. 29 That sheep went up to the top of that high rock,[m] and the Lord of the sheep sent it to them. 30 After that I saw the Lord of the sheep standing in front of them. His appearance was great, fearful, and majestic; all those sheep saw him and were afraid before his face.
31 They were all afraid and trembled because of him, and they cried out to the sheep that was with them, “We cannot stand before our Lord or look at him.”[n] 32 The sheep that led them went up again to the top of that rock. Meanwhile the flock grew blind and strayed from the path it had shown them, and that sheep did not know it.[o] 33 The Lord of the sheep was very angry with them. That sheep found out, came down from the top of the rock, came to the sheep, and found most of them blinded and gone astray. 34 When they saw it, they were afraid and trembled before it, and wanted to go back to their folds.
35 That sheep took other sheep with it, came to the sheep that had strayed, and began to kill them,[p] and the sheep were afraid of it. So that sheep brought back the strayed sheep, and they returned to their folds. 36 In this vision I kept watching until that sheep turned into a man, constructed a house for the Lord of the sheep, and settled the whole flock in it.[q] 37 I watched until the sheep that had met the sheep

who led them fell asleep.[r] I watched until all the great sheep died and young ones took their place; these reached a pasture and drew near a stream.[s] 38 Then that sheep, their leader who had become a man, parted from them and fell asleep, and all the sheep looked for it and wept over it bitterly.[t] 39 I watched until they stopped weeping for that sheep and crossed that stream of water. Then two sheep arose as leaders in place of those who had led them and fallen asleep.[u] 40 I watched until the sheep came to a good place, a pleasant and glorious land, and I watched until those sheep were satisfied; and that house stood among them in the pleasant land.
41 Sometimes their eyes were opened and sometimes blinded, until another sheep rose up to lead them and turned them all back, and their eyes came open.[v] 42 The dogs, foxes, and wild boars began to devour those sheep, until the Lord of the sheep raised up a ram from among them to lead them.[w] 43 That ram began to butt those dogs, foxes, and wild boars on every side, until he had destroyed them all. 44
That sheep whose eyes were opened saw that ram among the sheep, until it abandoned its glory and began to butt those sheep, trample them, and behave disgracefully. 45 The Lord of the sheep sent the lamb to another lamb, to make it a ram and leader of the sheep in place of the ram that had abandoned its glory.[x] 46 It went to it, spoke with it privately, and made it a ram, prince and leader of the sheep; but through all this those dogs were oppressing the sheep. 47 The first ram chased that second ram, and the second ram got up and fled from it.
I watched until those dogs brought down the first ram.[y] 48 The second ram then took the lead of the young sheep. 49 The flock increased greatly, while every dog, foxes, and wild boars were afraid and fled from it. The ram gored the wild beasts to death, and they had no more power among the sheep and robbed them of nothing. This ram had many offspring and then died, and a young sheep took its place as ram and became prince and leader of those sheep.[z] 50 That house became large and wide, and it was built for those sheep. On the house rose a great high tower for the Lord of the sheep.[aa] The house was low, but the tower was raised high, and the Lord of the sheep took his stand upon it, and a full table was laid before him.

51 Again I saw those sheep going astray and walking in many paths and abandoning that house of theirs. The Lord of the sheep summoned some of the flock and sent them to the rest, who set about killing them.[ab] 52 One of them was saved and not killed. It hurried away and cried out over the sheep, and they tried to kill it, but the Lord of the sheep rescued it from them, lifted it up to where I was, and settled it there.[ac] 53 He sent many other sheep to those sheep to testify to them and lament over them. 54 After that I saw that when they abandoned the house of the Lord and his tower, they fell away completely and their eyes were blinded. I saw the Lord of the sheep carry out great slaughter among them in their flocks, until those sheep brought on that slaughter themselves and betrayed his place. 55 He handed them over to the lions and leopards, the wolves and hyenas, the foxes, and all the wild beasts, and those wild beasts began to tear those sheep apart. 56 I saw that he abandoned that house of theirs and their tower and gave them all over to the lions to tear and devour them, to all the wild beasts. 57 I began to cry out with all my strength and appeal to the Lord of the sheep, pleading with him about the sheep, that they were being devoured by all the wild beasts. 58 But he stayed silent, though he saw it, and was glad that they were devoured, swallowed,
and robbed, and left them to be devoured by all the beasts.
59 He called seventy shepherds[ad] and threw those sheep to them to pasture them. He said to the shepherds and their companions, "From now on, each of you is to pasture the sheep, and do everything I command you. 60 I will hand them over to you counted, and tell you which of them are to be destroyed; destroy those." And he handed those sheep over to them. 61 He called another and said to him, "Watch and note everything the shepherds do to these sheep, for they will kill more of them than my orders allow.[ae] 62 Write down every excess and destruction the shepherds carry out: how many they destroy at my command and how many on their own whim. Record against each shepherd all the destruction he causes. 63 Read me the tally of those they kill and those they give up to be killed, so that it may stand as evidence against them and I may know all the shepherds' actions and judge their conduct, whether they keep the command I gave them. 64

But they must not know it. Do not tell them or warn them, but simply record against each one all the destruction the shepherds cause, each in his time, and bring it all up to me." 65 I watched until those shepherds pastured in their season, and they began to kill and destroy more than they had been told, and they handed those sheep over to the lions. 66 The lions and leopards ate and devoured most of those sheep, with the wild boars sharing the meal; and they burned that tower and tore down that house.[af] 67 I grieved deeply over that tower, because the house of the sheep had been torn down, and afterward I could not see whether those sheep went into that house.

68 The shepherds and their companions handed those sheep over to all the wild beasts to devour them, and each of them received a set number in his time. The other wrote in a book how many of them each one destroyed. 69 Each one killed and destroyed far more than was allotted, and I began to weep and mourn over those sheep. 70 So in the vision I saw the one who wrote: how he wrote down each one destroyed by those shepherds, day by day, and carried the whole book up, laid it down, and showed it to the Lord of the sheep—everything they had done, all that each of them had done away with, and all they had handed over to destruction. 71 It was read aloud to the Lord of the sheep; then he took it from the writer, read it himself, sealed it, and set it aside.

72 Right away I saw the shepherds pasture for twelve hours.[ag] Three of those sheep turned back, came and went in, and began to rebuild everything of that house that had fallen down;[ah] the wild boars tried to stop them but could not.[ai] 73 They began to build again as before, and they raised up that tower, and it was called the high tower. Once more they laid a table in front of the tower, yet every loaf on it was polluted and unclean.[aj] 74 Through all this the flock's eyes were sightless, and so were their shepherds'. Great numbers were handed to the shepherds to be destroyed, who stamped on them and ate them up. 75 The Lord of the sheep stayed silent until all the sheep were scattered over the field and mixed with the beasts, and the shepherds did not rescue them from the beasts. 76 The one who wrote the book carried it up, showed it, and read it before the Lord of the sheep. He pleaded with him on their behalf and begged him for them as he showed him all the shepherds' deeds, and he testified before him against all the shepherds. [77] He took the book itself, laid it down beside him, and left.

Notes

- a (89:1) That white bull: Noah. He is born a bull but becomes a man, perhaps meaning he is taught by angels or set apart; Moses likewise becomes a man in verse 36. The three bulls are Shem, Ham, and Japheth.
- b (89:9) Shem is white (the chosen line); Ham and Japheth are red and black, though which is which is uncertain.
- c (89:10) The wild animals and birds are the nations. Lions, leopards, and others appear later as Israel's oppressors: Egyptians are wolves; Philistines dogs; Edomites wild boars; Ammonites and Moabites foxes; Assyrians lions; Babylonians leopards (or tigers); Greeks eagles and other birds of prey; Seleucid Syrians ravens. A white bull: Abraham.
- d (89:11) A wild donkey: Ishmael, called "a wild donkey of a man" in Gen 16:12. A white bull: Isaac. The wild donkeys are the Arabs or Midianites.
- e (89:12) The black wild boar: Esau, ancestor of Edom. The white sheep: Jacob, whose twelve sons are the twelve sheep. From here on Israel is pictured as sheep.
- f (89:13) Joseph, sold to the Ishmaelites/Midianites and taken to Egypt (Gen 37:25–36).
- g (89:15) Exod 1:8–22.
- h (89:16) Moses, who fled to Midian (Exod 2:15).
- i (89:18) Another sheep: Aaron (Exod 4:27).
- j (89:20) The plagues of Egypt (Exod 7–12).
- k (89:24) Exod 14:19–22.
- l (89:28) Opening and blinding of the eyes is the vision's image for Israel's faithfulness and apostasy.
- m (89:29) Mount Sinai (Exod 19).
- n (89:31) Exod 20:18–19.
- o (89:32) The golden calf (Exod 32).
- p (89:35) The Levites' slaughter in Exod 32:26–28.
- q (89:36) The house: here the tabernacle (Exod 25–40); later it stands for Jerusalem, with the "tower" as the temple.
- r (89:37) Fell asleep: died. Aaron's death (Num 20:28).
- s (89:37) The Jordan.
- t (89:38) The death of Moses (Deut 34).
- u (89:39) Two sheep: perhaps Joshua and Caleb, or Joshua and Eleazar.
- v (89:41) The period of the judges; the other sheep is probably Samuel.
- w (89:42) A ram: Saul, the first king. The dogs are the Philistines; the foxes Ammon and Moab; the boars Edom/Amalek.
- x (89:45) The lamb sent is Samuel; the other lamb is David (1 Sam 16).

- y (89:47) Saul pursues David and dies fighting the Philistines (1 Sam 18–31).
- z (89:49) The last sentence (Charles's 48b) tells of David's death and Solomon's succession; some manuscripts place it after verse 48.
- aa (89:50) The tower: Solomon's temple. The house is now Jerusalem.
- ab (89:51) The prophets, compare 1 Kgs 19:10; Neh 9:26.
- ac (89:52) Elijah, taken up to heaven (2 Kgs 2:11), now dwelling with Enoch.
- ad (89:59) Seventy shepherds: angelic rulers set over Israel from the exile to the end time, each for a fixed period. The number recalls the seventy years of Jer 25:11–12 and the seventy weeks of years of Dan 9:24, and the seventy nations of Gen 10. Their periods fall into four groups of 12, 23, 23, and 12 (89:72; 90:1, 5).
- ae (89:61) Another: a recording angel, perhaps Michael (compare 90:14, 17).
- af (89:66) The Babylonian destruction of Jerusalem and the temple in 587/586 BC, with Edom joining in (Obad 10–14; Ps 137:7).
- ag (89:72) Twelve hours: the periods of twelve shepherds, the Persian era. Each shepherd's term is called an hour.
- ah (89:72) Three sheep: probably Zerubbabel, Jeshua the high priest, and Ezra or Nehemiah (Ezra 3–6; Neh 2–6).
- ai (89:72) The wild boars: here the Samaritans and neighboring peoples who opposed the rebuilding (Ezra 4).
- aj (89:73) The author judges the worship of the second temple to be impure, perhaps over calendar or priestly disputes; compare Mal 1:7.

Chapter 90

1 I watched until thirty-five shepherds had taken up the pasturing in this way,[a] each completing his term as the first ones had; and others took them in hand to pasture them for their term, each shepherd in his own term. 2 Next in my vision every bird of the air came flocking: eagles, vultures, kites, and ravens, with the eagles at the head of them all,[b] and they set upon the sheep, pecking out their eyes and feeding on their flesh. 3 The sheep cried out because the birds were eating their flesh. As for me, I looked on and mourned in my sleep over that shepherd who was pasturing the sheep. 4 I watched until those sheep were devoured by the dogs, eagles, and kites, and they left them no flesh, skin, or sinew, until only their bones were standing; then their bones too fell to the ground, and the sheep became few. 5 I watched until twenty-three had taken up the pasturing and completed, in their terms, fifty-eight periods.[c]

6 But look: lambs were born to those white sheep,[d] and they began to open their eyes and see, and to cry out to the sheep. 7 They cried out to them, but the sheep did not listen to what they said; they were completely deaf, and their eyes were utterly blinded. 8 I saw in the vision the ravens swoop on those lambs and seize one of them,[e] and tear the sheep to pieces and devour them. 9 I watched until horns grew on those lambs, and the ravens knocked their horns down. Then I watched until a great horn sprouted on one of those sheep,[f] and their eyes were opened. 10 It looked at them, and it cried out to the sheep, and the rams caught sight of it and came running to it together. 11 Still, through all this, those eagles, vultures, ravens, and kites kept tearing the sheep, swooping on them and devouring them. The sheep stayed silent, but the rams mourned and cried out. 12 The ravens fought hard against it, striving to topple its horn, yet they could not prevail. 13 I watched until the shepherds, eagles, vultures, and kites came and called to the ravens to break the horn of that ram. They fought and battled with it, and it fought with them and cried out for its help to come.[g] 14 I kept watching until the man who listed the shepherds' names and took them up to the Lord of the sheep arrived to aid it and revealed all things to it; he had descended to assist that ram.[h] 15 I watched until the Lord of the sheep came to them in anger, and everyone who saw him ran, and all of them collapsed into his shadow away from his presence. 16 All the eagles, vultures, ravens, and kites gathered together, and all the sheep of the field came with them; they all came together and helped one another to break that ram's horn.[i] 17 I watched that man who wrote the book at the Lord's command, until he opened the book about the destruction that the last twelve shepherds had done, and showed before the Lord of the sheep that they had destroyed far more than those before them. 18 I watched until the Lord of the sheep came to them, took in his hand the staff of his anger, and struck the earth. The earth split open, and all the beasts and all the birds of the sky fell away from those sheep and were swallowed up in the earth, and it closed over them. 19 I kept watching until the sheep were handed a mighty sword and marched out against all the beasts of the field to kill them, and all the beasts and birds of the sky fled from before them.

20 I watched until a throne was set up in the pleasant land,[j] and the Lord of the sheep sat on it, and the other took the sealed books and opened them before the Lord of the sheep.[k] 21 The Lord called those men, the first seven white ones,[l] and ordered them to bring before him all the stars whose organs were like stallions', starting with the first star that led the way; and they brought them all before him. 22
He said to the man who wrote before him, who was one of those seven white ones, "Take those seventy shepherds to whom I handed over the sheep, and who on their own authority took them and killed more than I commanded." 23 And look, I saw them all bound, and they all stood before him. 24 Judgment was held first on the stars. Tried and convicted, they were sent off to the place of sentence; they were thrown into an abyss full of fire and flame and full of pillars of fire.[m] 25 The seventy shepherds were then tried, convicted, and hurled into that abyss of fire. 26 At that time I saw a similar abyss opened in the middle of the earth, full of fire. The blinded sheep were led in, every one tried and convicted, and cast into this blazing pit, where they burned. It lay on the right-hand side of the house.[n] 27 I watched the sheep burn, bones and all.
28 I stood up to look, until they folded up that old house. They carried off all its pillars, and all the beams and decorations of the house were folded up with it, and they carried it away and put it in a place in the south of the land. 29 I kept watching until the Lord of the sheep brought in a fresh house, bigger and loftier than before, and raised it where the folded-up one had stood. Every pillar in it was new, and its adornments were new too, and grander than those of the old house he had removed. All the sheep were inside it.[o] 30 I saw every remaining sheep, with every beast of the earth and every bird of the air, bowing down and paying homage to those sheep, pleading with them and obeying them in everything.[p] 31 After that, those three who were dressed in white, who had taken me by the hand and brought me up before, took me up with the hand of that ram also holding me, and set me down among those sheep before the judgment took place.[q] 32 Every one of those sheep was white, with fleece thick and clean. 33 All that had been destroyed and scattered, along with every wild beast and every bird of the air, assembled in the house, and the Lord of the sheep was full of joy because they were all good and had come back to his house. 34 I watched until they laid down that sword that had been given to the sheep; they brought it back into the house, and it was sealed in the Lord's presence. All the sheep were invited into that house, but it could not hold them. 35 Every one of them had open eyes and beheld what was good, and there was not one among them who did not see. 36 I saw that the house was large and wide and very full.

37 Then I saw a white bull born, big-horned,[r] and every wild beast and every bird of the air stood in awe of him and made constant petition to him. 38 I watched until all their kinds were transformed and they all became white bulls. The first among them became a lamb,[s] which grew into a mighty creature with huge black horns on its head; and the Lord of the sheep took delight in it and in the whole herd. 39 I slept among them, and I woke up having seen everything. 40 This is the vision I saw while I slept. I woke up and blessed the Lord of righteousness and gave him glory. 41 Then I wept bitterly, and my tears would not stop until I could bear it no longer. When I looked, they ran down because of what I had seen, for everything will come and be fulfilled, and all human deeds in their order were shown to me. 42 On that same night the earlier dream came back to me, and it made me weep and left me shaken, for I had seen that vision."

Notes

- a (90:1) Thirty-five shepherds: 12 of the Persian period plus 23 more, carrying the story into the Greek period after Alexander the Great (332 BC).
- b (90:2) The eagles: the Macedonians/Greeks, probably the Ptolemies of Egypt, who ruled Judea about 301–200 BC. The ravens are the Seleucids of Syria.
- c (90:5) Fifty-eight periods: 12 + 23 + 23 shepherds, leaving the last 12 for the final age (90:17).
- d (90:6) The lambs: a reform movement among pious Jews in the early second century BC, perhaps the group behind this book or the Hasidim of 1 Macc 2:42.
- e (90:8) One of those lambs: probably the high priest Onias III, murdered about 171 BC (2 Macc 4:33–35; compare Dan 9:26).
- f (90:9) A great horn: Judas Maccabeus, leader of the Jewish revolt against the Seleucid king Antiochus IV from 166 BC (1 Macc 3–9). The vision's history ends with his struggles, which dates it to about 164–160 BC.

- g (90:13) Verses 13–15 and 16–18 seem to be two versions of the same scene; Charles rearranged them (13, 16, 19 then 14, 15, 17, 18). This translation keeps the manuscript order.
- h (90:14) That man: the recording angel of 89:61, often taken as Michael, who in 2 Macc 11:6–8 sends a heavenly rider to aid Judas.
- i (90:16) The sheep of the field: probably wild sheep, that is, the Hellenizing Jews who sided with the Seleucids.
- j (90:20) The pleasant land: the land of Israel (compare Dan 8:9; 11:16).
- k (90:20) Compare Dan 7:9–10.
- l (90:21) The first seven white ones: the seven archangels (20:1–8; compare 87:2).
- m (90:24) Compare 18:11; 21:7–10.
- n (90:26) To the right: south of Jerusalem, the Valley of Hinnom (Gehenna); compare 27:1–3.
- o (90:29) The new house: a new Jerusalem built by God himself; compare Isa 54:11–12; Ezek 40–48; Rev 21:2. Notably no tower (temple) is mentioned.
- p (90:30) Compare Isa 49:23; 60:14.
- q (90:31) Before the judgment: the order is odd; some read "before the judgment" as "after." The ram may be Elijah, here pictured as a ram, who returns before the end (Mal 4:5); compare 89:52.
- r (90:37) A white bull: a messianic figure. Humanity returns to the condition of Adam (the first white bull, 85:3), and all the nations become white bulls.
- s (90:38) A lamb: the Ethiopic word nagar ("word," or a corruption) is unclear; Charles emended to "wild ox" (Hebrew re'em), others keep "lamb." This translation follows the common reading "lamb," noting the uncertainty.

Chapter 91

The Epistle of Enoch (chapters 91–108)

1 "Now, my son Methuselah, call all your brothers to me, and gather to me all the sons of your mother;
for a word calls me,
and the spirit is poured out on me,
so that I may show you everything that will happen to you forever."[a]

2 Then Methuselah went and called all his brothers to him and gathered his relatives.

3 He spoke to all the children of righteousness and said,
"Hear, you sons of Enoch, all your father's words,
and listen well to the voice of my mouth.

I urge you and tell you, beloved:
love uprightness and walk in it.
4 Do not come near uprightness with a divided heart,
and do not keep company with the double-hearted,
but walk in righteousness, my sons.
It will guide you on good paths,
and righteousness will go with you.
5 For I know that violence will grow strong on the earth, and a great punishment will be carried out on the earth;
all wrongdoing will come to an end,
cut off at its roots,
and its whole building torn down.[b]
6 Wrongdoing will again reach its full measure on the earth, and all deeds of wrongdoing, violence,
and transgression will prevail twice over.
7 When sin, wrongdoing, blasphemy,
and violence in every kind of deed increase,
and apostasy, transgression, and impurity increase,
a great punishment will come from heaven on all these,
and the holy Lord will come out in anger and punishment
to carry out judgment on the earth.
8 In those days violence will be cut off at its roots,
and the roots of wrongdoing together with deceit,
and they will be destroyed from under heaven.
9 All the idols of the nations will be given up,
their temples burned with fire,
and they will be removed from the whole earth.
The nations will be thrown into the judgment of fire
and perish in anger and in harsh judgment forever.
10 The righteous will rise from their sleep,
and wisdom will rise and be given to them.
11 After that the roots of wrongdoing will be cut off, and the sinners will be destroyed by the sword … will be severed from the blasphemers everywhere; schemers of violence and speakers of blasphemy alike will fall by the sword.[c]

12 After that there will be another week, the eighth, the week of righteousness,[d]
and a sword will be given to it, so that righteous judgment may be carried out on the oppressors,
and sinners will be handed over to the righteous.
13 At its end they will gain houses through their righteousness, and a house will be built for the Great King in glory forever.[e] 14 After that, in the ninth week, righteous judgment will be revealed to the whole world;
all the works of the wicked will vanish from the whole earth,
the world will be written down for destruction,
and all humankind will look to the path of uprightness.
15 After this, in the tenth week, in its seventh part,
there will be the great eternal judgment,
in which he will take vengeance among the angels.
16 The first heaven will depart and pass away,
and a new heaven will appear,[f]
and all the powers of the heavens will shine seven times as bright forever.
17 After that there will be many weeks without number, forever,
in goodness and righteousness,
and sin will never again be mentioned.
18 So now, my sons, I am telling you and pointing out to you which roads lead to righteousness and which to violence.
I will show them to you again,
so that you may know what will happen.
19 Listen to me now, my sons:
keep to the roads of righteousness
and keep off the roads of violence;
for everyone who travels the roads of wrongdoing will perish forever."

Notes

- a (91:1) Chapters 91–108 make up the final section of 1 Enoch: Enoch's instruction to his children (91), the Apocalypse of Weeks (93:1–10 with 91:11–17), and the Epistle proper (92; 94–105), followed by the Birth of Noah (106–107) and a closing

appendix (108). The Aramaic fragments (4QEn g) and the Greek Chester Beatty papyrus (for 97:6–107:3) are reported to support most of it; it is usually dated to the second century BC. In the Ethiopic manuscripts the order is disturbed: the last three "weeks" (91:12–17) stand before the first seven (93:3–10). The Aramaic is reported to have them in sequence, and many translations rearrange them; this translation keeps the Ethiopic order and numbering, and the notes point to the sequence.

- b (91:5) The first end: the flood.
- c (91:11) The text of this verse is damaged; the gap is marked by an ellipsis.
- d (91:12) The eighth week: in the sequence of the Apocalypse of Weeks this follows 93:10. Each "week" is an age of world history; the author probably lived in the seventh, the time of the "apostate generation" (93:9) in the early second century BC.
- e (91:13) A house … for the Great King: a new temple. The Great King: God (compare Ps 48:2; Matt 5:35).
- f (91:16) Compare Isa 65:17; 66:22; 2 Pet 3:13; Rev 21:1.

1 The book written by Enoch—Enoch wrote this complete teaching of wisdom, praised by everyone and judge of the whole earth—for every child of mine who will dwell on the earth, and for the generations to come who will practice uprightness and peace.[a]

2 Do not let your spirit be troubled because of the times, for the Holy and Great One has set days for everything.

3 The righteous one will rise from sleep;
he will rise and walk the ways of righteousness,
and his whole way and conduct will be in eternal goodness and grace.

4 He will be gracious to the righteous one and give him lasting uprightness, and give him power, so that he will have goodness and righteousness and walk in eternal light.

5 Sin will perish in darkness forever and will not be seen again from that day on, forever.

Notes

- a (92:1) This verse is the heading of the Epistle of Enoch proper; the bracketed words in Charles ("Enoch indeed wrote … all the earth") may be a scribe's addition.

Chapter 93

1 Afterward Enoch handed on the books and began to tell from them.
2 Enoch said,
"About the children of righteousness,
about the chosen of the world,
and about the plant of uprightness,[a] I will speak these things;
I, Enoch, will declare them to you, my sons,
according to what appeared to me in the heavenly vision,
what I learned from the word of the holy angels,
and what I came to understand from the heavenly tablets."
3 Enoch began to tell from the books and said,
"I came into the world seventh, in the first week,[b]
while judgment and righteousness still lasted.
4 After me, in the second week, great wickedness will arise,
and deceit will have sprung up.
In it will be the first end,[c]
and in it a man will be saved.
After it is over, wrongdoing will grow,
and a law will be made for the sinners.
5 After that, at the end of the third week,
a man will be chosen as the plant of righteous judgment,[d]
and his descendants will become the plant of righteousness forever.
6 After that, at the end of the fourth week,
visions of the holy and righteous will be seen,
and a law for all generations, and an enclosure, will be made for them.[e] 7 After that, at the end of the fifth week, the house of glory and dominion will be built forever.[f]
8 After that, in the sixth week, all who live in it will be blinded, and the hearts of all of them will godlessly abandon wisdom.
In it a man will go up,[g]
and at its end the house of dominion will be burned with fire, and the whole race of the chosen root will be scattered.

9 After that, in the seventh week, an apostate generation will arise;
its deeds will be many,
and all its deeds will be apostate.
10 At its end the chosen righteous from the eternal plant of righteousness will be chosen to receive sevenfold instruction about all his creation.[h]
11 For who is there among all humankind who can hear the voice of the Holy One without being shaken? Who can think his thoughts? Who is there who can look on all the works of heaven?[i] 12 How could anyone look at heaven? Who could grasp heavenly things, or see a soul or spirit and report on it, or go up and see all their ends and grasp them or act like them? 13 Who among all people could know how wide and how long the earth is, and to whom has the measure of all of them been shown? 14 Or is there anyone who could tell the length of heaven, how great its height is, what it rests on, how many stars there are, and where all the lights rest?

Notes

- a (93:2) The plant of uprightness (or righteousness): Israel, or the faithful within it; compare 10:16; 84:6; Isa 60:21; 61:3.
- b (93:3) The seventh: Enoch is the seventh from Adam (Gen 5; Jude 14).
- c (93:4) The first end: the flood. A man: Noah. A law … for the sinners: the laws given after the flood (Gen 9:1–7).
- d (93:5) A man: Abraham. His descendants, Israel, are "the plant of righteousness."
- e (93:6) The law of Sinai and the tabernacle (or the land of Israel as an "enclosure").
- f (93:7) The temple of Solomon.
- g (93:8) A man: Elijah (2 Kgs 2:11). The house of dominion … burned: the destruction of the temple in 587/586 BC and the exile.
- h (93:10) The sequence continues at 91:11–17 (weeks eight to ten).
- i (93:11) Verses 11–14 are a separate wisdom poem on the limits of human knowledge, compare Job 38; Isa 40:12–14; Sir 1:2–3. Its rhetorical questions contrast with Enoch, who has been shown these things.

Chapter 94

1 Now I tell you, my sons: love righteousness and walk in it;
for the paths of righteousness deserve to be welcomed,
but the paths of wrongdoing will suddenly be destroyed and vanish.

2 To certain people of a generation the paths of violence and of death will be revealed, and they will keep far from them
and not follow them.
3 Now I tell you, the righteous:
do not walk in the path of evil or in the paths of death,
and do not come near them, so that you are not destroyed.
4 But seek and choose for yourselves righteousness and a chosen life,
and walk in the paths of peace,
and you will live and prosper.
5 Hold on to my words in the thoughts of your hearts,
and do not let them be wiped from your hearts;
for I know that sinners will tempt people to mistreat wisdom, so that no place will be found for her,
and temptation of every kind will not lessen.
6 Woe to those who build wrongdoing and oppression and lay deceit as a foundation;
for they will suddenly be overthrown,
and they will have no peace.[a] 7 Woe to those who build their houses with sin;
for they will be overthrown from all their foundations
and fall by the sword.
Those who get gold and silver in judgment will suddenly perish.
8 Woe to you, the rich, for you have trusted in your riches;
from your riches you will depart,
because you did not remember the Most High in the days of your wealth.
9 You have committed blasphemy and wrongdoing
and have made yourselves ready for the day of slaughter,
the day of darkness and the day of the great judgment.
10 So I tell you and declare to you:
the one who created you will overthrow you,
and there will be no pity at your fall,
and your Creator will rejoice at your destruction.

11 In those days your righteous ones will be a rebuke to the sinners and the wicked.

Notes

- a (94:6) The woes (94:6–100:9; 103:5–8) attack wealthy oppressors and apostates, in the style of the prophets (Isa 5:8–23; Amos 6:1–7) and of Luke 6:24–26.

Chapter 95

1 If only my eyes were a cloud of water,
so that I might weep over you and pour down my tears like rain from a cloud,
and so find rest from my heart's distress!
2 Who has allowed you to practice insult and wickedness?
Judgment will catch up with you, sinners.
3 Do not fear the sinners, you righteous;
for the Lord will again hand them over to you,
so that you may carry out judgment on them as you wish.
4 Woe to you who pronounce curses that cannot be undone;
healing will be far from you because of your sins.
5 Woe to you who repay your neighbor with evil;
for you will be repaid according to your deeds.
6 Woe to you, lying witnesses,
and those who weigh out injustice,
for you will suddenly perish.
7 Woe to you, sinners, for you persecute the righteous;
for you yourselves will be handed over and persecuted, you people of injustice,
and its yoke will be heavy on you.

Chapter 96

1 Take hope, you righteous! For the sinners will suddenly perish before you, and you will rule over them as you wish.
2 On the day of the sinners' distress
your children will soar and rise like eagles;
your nest will be higher than the vultures'.

You will climb up and go into the crevices of the earth and the clefts of the rock forever, like rock badgers, away from the unjust, and the sirens will sigh and weep because of you.[a] 3 So do not be afraid, you who have suffered;
for healing will be your share,
a bright light will shine on you,
and you will hear the voice of rest from heaven.
4 Woe to you, sinners, for your riches make you look like the righteous, yet your own hearts expose you as sinners,
and that will testify against you, a reminder of your evil deeds.
5 Woe to you who eat the finest wheat and drink wine from large bowls,[b]
and trample the lowly with your strength.
6 Woe to you who drink water from every spring,
for you will suddenly be consumed and wither away,
because you have abandoned the spring of life.[c]
7 Woe to you who practice wrongdoing, deceit, and blasphemy;
it will be a reminder against you for evil.
8 Woe to you, the mighty,
who use your might to oppress the righteous;
for your day of ruin is on its way.
Then many good days will come to the righteous, on the day of your judgment.

Notes

- a (96:2) Rock badgers: the hyrax, a small animal that shelters in rocks (Ps 104:18; Prov 30:26). The sirens: the Ethiopic borrows the Greek seirēnes, which the Greek Bible uses for desert creatures (perhaps ostriches or jackals) in Isa 13:21. The verse is obscure and some think it is out of place.
- b (96:5) Compare Amos 6:6.
- c (96:6) Compare Jer 2:13.

Chapter 97

1 Believe, you righteous, that the sinners will be put to shame and perish on the day of wrongdoing.
2 Know, you sinners, that the Most High has your destruction in mind,
and the angels of heaven rejoice over your destruction.
3 What will you do, you sinners,
and where will you run on that day of judgment,
when you hear the sound of the prayer of the righteous?
4 You will fare like those against whom this word will stand as evidence:
"You have been companions of sinners."
5 At that time the righteous will pray and be heard by the Lord,
and your time of judgment will arrive.
6 All the words of your wrongdoing will be read out before the Great Holy One;
your faces will be covered with shame,
and he will reject every work grounded in wrongdoing.[a] 7 Woe to you, sinners, who live in the middle of the sea and on the dry land;
the memory of you is evil against you.
8 Woe to you who get silver and gold unjustly and say,
"We have grown rich and have possessions,
and have gotten everything we wanted.
9 Now let us do what we have planned;
for we have stored up silver,
our barns are full to the brim, as if with water,
and many are the farmhands in our houses."[b] 10 Your lies will flow away like water, for your wealth will not last
but will quickly fly up from you;
because you got it all unjustly,
you will be handed over to a great curse.

Notes

- a (97:6) From 97:6 to 107:3 a Greek text survives in the Chester Beatty–Michigan papyrus (fourth century AD). Where it differs from the Ethiopic in meaning, the notes say so.
- b (97:9) Compare Luke 12:16–21.

Chapter 98

1 Now I swear to you, the wise and the foolish,
that you will see many things on the earth.
2 You men will put on more finery than a woman and more colors than a young girl;
in royalty, grandeur, and power,
in silver, gold, and purple,
in splendor and in food you will be poured out like water.
3 So they will lack teaching and wisdom,
and through this they will perish along with their possessions;
with all their glory and splendor,
in shame, slaughter, and great poverty,
their spirits will be thrown into the furnace of fire.
4 I have sworn to you, sinners: no mountain was ever made a slave,
no hill made a woman's maid,
so sin was not sent onto the earth;
people created it themselves,[a]
and those who commit it will fall under a great curse.
5 Barrenness was not given to woman;
because of the deeds of her own hands she dies childless.[b] 6 By the Holy Great One I swear to you, sinners, that every evil thing you do lies open in heaven,
and none of your oppressive deeds are covered or hidden.
7 Do not think in your spirit or say in your heart that you do not know and do not see that every sin is recorded every day in heaven before the Most High.
8 From now on you know that all the oppression you inflict is written down every day until the day of your judgment.
9 Woe to you, fools, for you will perish through your folly. You sin against the wise, and so good fortune will not be your share.

10 Now know that you are ready for the day of destruction. Do not hope to live, sinners; you will go away and die, for you know no ransom. You are made ready for the day of the great judgment, for the day of distress and great shame for your spirits.
11 Woe to you, stubborn of heart, who do evil and eat blood![c] Where do you get good things to eat and drink and be full? From all the good things the Lord Most High has placed in abundance on the earth. So you will have no peace.
12 Woe to you who love deeds of wrongdoing! Why do you hope for good fortune for yourselves? Know that you will be handed over to the righteous, and they will cut off your necks and kill you and show you no mercy.
13 Woe to you who rejoice at the distress of the righteous, for no grave will be dug for you.
14 Woe to you who treat the words of the righteous as nothing, for you will have no hope of life.
15 Woe to you who write down lying and wicked words; for they write down their lies so that people will hear them and act wickedly toward their neighbor.[d]
16 So they will have no peace but will die a sudden death.

Notes

- a (98:4) Sin was not sent: the Epistle insists on human responsibility for sin, in tension with the Book of the Watchers, which traces evil to the fallen angels (chapters 6–16).
- b (98:5) The meaning is uncertain; the sense may be that suffering comes from human deeds, not from God's decree.
- c (98:11) Eat blood: forbidden in Gen 9:4; Lev 17:10–14.
- d (98:15) Perhaps aimed at rival teachers or writings; compare 104:10–11.

Chapter 99

1 Woe to you who act wickedly
and take pride in lies and praise them;
you will perish, and no happy life will be yours.
2 Woe to those who twist the words of uprightness
and break the eternal law,

and make themselves into what they were not, into sinners;
they will be trampled on the earth.
3 In those days, you righteous, get ready to raise your prayers as a reminder and set them as evidence before the angels,
so that they may set the sin of the sinners as a reminder before the Most High.
4 In those days the nations will be stirred up, and the families of the nations will rise on the day of destruction.
5 In those days the destitute will go out and carry off their children and abandon them, so that their children perish because of them;
they will abandon their nursing infants and not return to them,
and will have no pity on their loved ones.
6 Again I swear to you, sinners, that sin is made ready for a day of unending bloodshed.
7 Those who worship stones, and carved images of gold, silver, wood, stone, and clay, and those who worship unclean spirits and demons and all kinds of idols in ignorance, will get no help at all from them.
8 They will become wicked through the folly of their hearts, and their eyes will be blinded by the fear of their hearts and by visions in their dreams.
9 Through these they will become wicked and afraid, for they will have done all their work in a lie
and worshiped a stone;
so in an instant they will perish.
10 But in those days, happy is everyone who takes wisdom's words to heart and grasps them, who keeps to the Most High's ways and follows his righteous road,
and do not become wicked with the wicked;
for they will be saved.
11 Woe to you who spread evil to your neighbors;
for you will be killed in Sheol.[a] 12 Woe to you who make false and deceitful measures,
and to those who cause bitterness on the earth;
for by this they will be completely consumed.

13 Woe to you who build your houses through others' hard labor,
whose every brick and stone is made of sin;
I assure you, you will have no peace.
14 Woe to those who reject the measure and eternal inheritance of their ancestors, whose souls follow idols;
for they will have no rest.
15 Woe to those who do wrong and help oppression,
and kill their neighbors, until the day of the great judgment.
16 For he will throw down your glory,
bring affliction on your hearts,
rouse his fierce anger,
and put every one of you to the sword;
and the holy and righteous, all of them, will recall your sins.

Notes

- a (99:11) Sheol: Hebrew she'ol, the realm of the dead; compare 22:1–14.

Chapter 100

1 In those days fathers will be struck down together with their sons in one place,
and brothers will fall dead one with another,
until the streams run with their blood.
2 For a man will not hold back his hand from killing his sons and grandsons, and the sinner will not hold back his hand from his honored brother;
from dawn to sunset they will kill one another.
3 The horse will wade up to its chest in the blood of sinners,
and the chariot will sink to its top.[a] 4 In those days the angels will come down into the hidden places and gather in one place all who brought down sin, and the Most High will rise on that day of judgment
to carry out great judgment among sinners.
5 Over all the righteous and holy he will appoint guardians from among the holy angels,

to guard them like the pupil of an eye,[b]
until he puts an end to all wickedness and all sin;
and even if the righteous sleep a long sleep, they have nothing to fear.

6 Then the children of the earth will see the wise in safety and grasp everything this book says,
and realize that wealth cannot save them
when their sins bring them down.

7 Woe to you, sinners, on the day of fierce anguish,
you who afflict the righteous and burn them with fire;
you will be repaid according to your deeds.

8 Woe to you, stubborn of heart,
who stay awake to plan wickedness;
fear will come on you,
and there will be no one to help you.

9 Woe to you, sinners, because of the words of your mouth and the deeds of your hands that your wickedness has done;
you will burn in blazing flames worse than fire.

10 Now know that he will ask the angels in heaven about your deeds, and the sun, the moon, and the stars about your sins, because on the earth you pass judgment on the righteous.

11 He will call every cloud, mist, dew, and rain to testify against you; for they will all be held back because of you from coming down on you, and they will remember your sins.

12 Now go ahead and give gifts to the rain so that it will not be held back from coming down on you, or to the dew, if it has accepted gold and silver from you to come down![c]

13 When frost and snow with their cold, and all the snowstorms with all their plagues, fall on you, in those days you will not be able to stand before them.

Notes

- a (100:3) Compare Rev 14:20.
- b (100:5) Like the pupil of an eye: traditionally "the apple of the eye"; compare Deut 32:10; Ps 17:8.

- c (100:12) Irony: the rich cannot bribe the weather. The Greek is reported to differ here.

Chapter 101

1 Look at the sky, you children of heaven, and at every work of the Most High; fear him and do no evil in his presence. 2 If he shuts the windows of heaven and holds back the rain and the dew from falling on the earth because of you, what will you do then? 3 If he sends his anger on you because of your deeds, you cannot plead with him, for you spoke proud and arrogant words against his righteousness. So you will have no peace. 4 Do you not see the sailors on ships, how their vessels are tossed about by the waves and shaken by the winds, and are in great danger? 5 They are afraid because all their valuable goods go out on the sea with them, and their hearts dread that the sea will swallow them and they will die in it. 6 Are not the whole sea and all its waters and all its motion the work of the Most High? Has he not set limits to what it does and hemmed it in on every side with sand?[a] 7 When he rebukes it, it takes fright and dries up, and every fish in it perishes, together with all that it holds. Yet you sinners who live on the land have no fear of him. 8 Is it not he who formed heaven and earth and whatever fills them? Who gave insight and wisdom to every creature that moves over the land and through the sea? 9 Do not the sailors fear the sea? Yet sinners do not fear the Most High.

Notes

- a (101:6) Compare Job 38:8–11; Jer 5:22.

Chapter 102

1 In those days, when he brings a terrible fire on you,
where will you run, and where will you find rescue?
When he hurls his word against you,
will you not be shaken and afraid?
2 All the lights will be shaken with great fear,
and all the earth will be shaken and tremble in alarm.
3 All the angels will carry out their orders and try to hide from the presence of the Great Glory,
and the children of the earth will tremble and shake.

You sinners will be cursed forever,
and you will have no peace.
4 Do not be afraid, you souls of the righteous;
take hope, you who have died in righteousness.
5 Do not grieve if your soul has gone down to Sheol in grief,
and your body did not fare in life as your goodness deserved;
but wait for the day of the sinners' judgment,
the day of cursing and punishment.
6 Yet when you die, the sinners say over you,
"As we die, so the righteous die,
and what good have they gained from their deeds?
7 Look, they die just as we do, in grief and darkness;
what more do they have than we?
From now on we are equal.
8 What will they receive, and what will they see forever?
Look, they too have died,
and from now on they will never see light."[a]
9 I tell you, sinners: you are content to eat and drink, to rob and sin, to strip people naked, to get wealth and see good days.
10 Have you seen how the righteous end, that no violence of any kind is found in them until they die?
11 "Still, they perished and became as though they had never been, and their spirits went down to Sheol in distress."

Notes

- a (102:8) The sinners' argument recalls Eccl 2:14–16; 3:19–21; Wis 2:1–5.

Chapter 103

1 And now I make this vow to you, the righteous, by the splendor of the Great One, the Honored and Powerful, who rules, and by his majesty I vow it to you:
2 I know a mystery;
I have read the heavenly tablets
and seen the holy books,
and I have found written and engraved in them about them:

3 every blessing, joy and glory has been made ready for them and recorded for the spirits of those who have died in righteousness;
your reward for your hard work will be a rich share of good things, and your portion is far better than the portion of those still alive.
4 The spirits of you who have died in righteousness will live and rejoice;
their spirits will not perish, nor their memory before the face of the Great One,
for all the generations of the world.
So do not fear their scorn any longer.
5 Woe to you, sinners, when you have died,
if you die in the wealth of your sins,
and those like you say of you,
"Happy are the sinners! They have seen all their days.
6 Now they have died in prosperity and wealth,
and have seen no distress or killing in their life;
they have died in honor,
and no judgment was carried out on them while they lived."
7 Know that their souls will be brought down to Sheol, and they will be wretched in their great distress.
8 Your spirits will pass into darkness, into fetters and a blazing flame, where the judgment is severe;
and the great judgment will last through every generation of the world.
Woe to you, for you will find no peace.
9 Do not say of the righteous and good who are alive,
"In our troubled days we have worked hard and known every trouble;
we have met much evil and been worn out,
and have become few and small in spirit.
10 We were ruined, and nobody came to our aid, not even with a word;
we were tormented and crushed, and we gave up expecting to see another day of life.

11 We had hoped to be the head, and we turned out to be the tail;[a] we labored and strained and gained no satisfaction from our labor;
we became a meal for sinners and the lawless,
and they pressed their yoke hard upon us.
12 Those who hated us and struck us have ruled over us,
and we bowed our necks to those who hated us,
but they had no pity on us.
13 We wanted to get away from them, to escape and rest,
but found no place to run to and be safe from them.
14 We complained to the rulers in our distress
and cried out against those who devoured us, but they paid no attention to our cries
and would not listen to our voice.
15 They helped those who robbed us, devoured us, and made us few. They hid their oppression and did not remove from us the yoke of those who devoured us, scattered us, and murdered us. They hid their murders and did not remember that they had raised their hands against us."[b]

Notes

- a (103:11) Compare Deut 28:13, 44.
- b (103:15) Verses 9–15 voice the complaint of the righteous; the answer follows in chapter 104.

Chapter 104

1 I vow to you that the angels in heaven keep you in mind for good in the presence of the Great One's glory, and that your names are inscribed there before him.[a] 2 Take hope! For before, you were put to shame through evil and affliction, but now you will shine like the lights of heaven; you will shine and be seen, and the gates of heaven will be opened to you.[b] 3 When you cry out, let your cry be for justice, and justice will show itself to you; for all you have suffered will be avenged upon the rulers and upon everyone who aided your plunderers. 4 Take hope, and do not throw away your hope; for you will have great joy like the angels of heaven. 5 What will you have to do? You will not have to hide on the day of the great judgment, you will not be found as sinners, and the eternal judgment will be far from you for all the generations of the world. 6 Now do not be afraid, you righteous, when you see the sinners growing strong and prospering in their ways. Do not keep company with them, but keep far from their violence; for you will become companions of the hosts of heaven. 7 Though you sinners say, "None of our sins will be searched out and written down," still they will write down all your sins every day. 8 Now I tell you that light and darkness, day and night, both look upon all your sins. 9 Do not be wicked in your hearts; do not lie or alter the words of uprightness, or call the words of the Holy Great One lies, or pay attention to your idols; for all your lying and all your wickedness lead not to righteousness but to great sin. 10 Now I know this mystery: sinners will alter and twist the words of righteousness in many ways; they will speak wicked words, lie, practice great deceptions, and write books about their own words. 11 But if they copy out my words faithfully into their own languages, neither altering them nor cutting anything away, but setting down faithfully everything that I first declared about them,[c] 12 then I know another mystery: books will be given to the righteous and the wise, to be a source of joy, uprightness, and much wisdom. 13 The books will be given to them, and they will believe them and rejoice over them; and then all the righteous who have learned from them all the paths of uprightness will be rewarded.

Notes

- a (104:1) Compare Dan 12:1; Luke 10:20.
- b (104:2) Compare Dan 12:3.
- c (104:11) This passage, with its concern for faithful copying and translation "in their languages," is notable in a work that itself survives mainly in translation. Compare Rev 22:18–19.

Chapter 105

1 In those days, says the Lord, they will call to the children of the earth and testify about their wisdom: "Show it to them, for you are their guides, and rewards over the whole earth. 2 For I and my son will be joined with them forever in the paths of uprightness in their lives. You will have peace. Rejoice, you children of uprightness!" Amen.[a]

Notes

- a (105:2) I and my son: the phrase is unusual; it may refer to God and the righteous (or Israel) as his son, or be a Christian touch. The Greek papyrus is reported to lack this chapter.

Chapter 106

The Birth of Noah (chapters 106–107)

1 Some days later my son Methuselah chose a wife for his son Lamech, and she conceived and bore him a son.[a] 2 The child's body was as white as snow and as ruddy as a rose in blossom; the hair on his head and his long locks were white like wool, and his eyes were lovely. When he opened his eyes, the whole house filled with light, as if the sun were shining in it. 3 Then he stood up in the hands of the midwife, opened his mouth, and spoke with the Lord of righteousness. 4 Lamech, his father, was terrified of him and ran away to his own father, Methuselah. 5 He said to him, "I have fathered a strange son, different from and unlike a human being, resembling the children of the God of heaven. His nature is different; he is not like us. His eyes are like the rays of the sun, and his face is glorious. 6 I think he cannot have come from me, but from the angels, and I fear that something extraordinary will happen on earth in his time. 7 Now, my father, I am here to plead with you and beg you to go to Enoch, our father, and learn the truth from him, for he lives among the angels." 8 When Methuselah heard what his son said, he traveled to the ends of the earth to find me, for he had been told that I was there. He called out, and I heard his voice and went to him. I said to him, "I am here, my son. Why have you come to me?" 9 He answered, "I have come to you because of something that worries me greatly, a troubling sight. 10 Now, my father, hear me. A son has been born to my son Lamech, unlike anyone else. His nature is not like a human nature. The color of his body is whiter than snow and redder than a rose in bloom, the hair of his head is whiter than white wool, his eyes are like the rays of the sun, and when he opened his eyes he lit up the whole house. 11 He rose up from the midwife's hands, opened his mouth, and praised the Lord of heaven. 12 His father Lamech became afraid and fled to me. He does not believe that the boy is his, but that he is in the likeness of the angels of heaven. So I have come to you so that you may tell me the truth." [13] I, Enoch, replied, "The Lord is going to do something new on earth. I have seen it before in a vision, and I am telling you now: in the days of my father Jared, certain angels of heaven disobeyed the Lord's command.[b] [14] They sin and break the law; they have joined themselves to women and sin with them, have married some of them, and have fathered children by them. [15] A great destruction will come over the whole earth; there will be a flood and great destruction for one year.[c] [16] This son who has been born to you will be left on the earth, and his three children will be saved with him; when all humankind on the earth dies, he and his sons will be saved. [17] They will produce giants on the earth, not of spirit but of flesh, and there will be great punishment on the earth, and the earth will be cleansed of all impurity.[d] [18] Now tell your son Lamech that the one who has been born is truly his son. Name him Noah, for he will be left to you, and he and his sons will be saved from the destruction that will come on the earth because of all the sin and all the wrongdoing that will reach its full measure on the earth in his days.[e] [19] After that, injustice will grow greater still than the injustice that had at first reached its full measure on earth. For I know the mysteries of the holy ones: the Lord himself has revealed them to me and explained them, and I have read them on the heavenly tablets.

Notes

- a (106:1) Chapters 106–107 tell of Noah's miraculous birth, a story also found in the Genesis Apocryphon from Qumran (1QapGen 2–5). Lamech: Hebrew Lemekh, of uncertain meaning (Gen 5:25–31).
- b (106:13) Jared: Hebrew Yered, "descent," explained in 6:6 as the time when the Watchers came down.
- c (106:15) For one year: the flood lasts a year and ten days in Gen 7:11; 8:14 (or a full year by the 364-day calendar).
- d (106:17) Charles moves verse 17 before 15 for sense; this translation keeps the usual numbering.
- e (106:18) Noah: Hebrew Noaḥ, linked with nuaḥ, "rest," and niḥam, "comfort" (Gen 5:29); compare 107:3.

Chapter 107

1 I saw written on them that generation after generation will do wrong, until a generation of righteousness arises, wrongdoing is destroyed, sin passes away from the earth, and every kind of good comes on it. 2 Now, my son, go and tell your son Lamech that this son who has been born is truly his son, and that this is no lie." 3
When Methuselah heard the words of his father Enoch—for Enoch had disclosed everything to him in secret—he went back and reported them to Lamech, and the boy was named Noah, because he will bring comfort to the earth after all that destruction.

Chapter 108

Another Book of Enoch (chapter 108)

1 Here is a further book that Enoch composed for his son Methuselah and for the people who will follow him and observe the law in the last days.[a] 2 You who have done good, wait for those days, until an end is made of those who do evil and of the power of the lawbreakers. 3 Wait until sin has passed away, for their names will be erased from the book of life and from the holy books; their offspring will be destroyed forever, and their spirits will be killed. They will cry out and mourn in a place that is a formless wasteland, and they will burn in the fire, for there is no earth there.[b] 4 There I saw a kind of cloud that I could not see through; it was so deep that I could not see over it. I saw a flame blazing brightly, and shining mountainlike shapes that wheeled and swung back and forth. 5 I asked one of the holy angels who accompanied me, "What is this glowing thing? It is no heaven, only the flame of a blazing fire, with a sound of weeping and crying, of lament and fierce pain." 6 He said to me, "This place you see is where the spirits of sinners and blasphemers are thrown, and of those who do evil, and of those who twist everything the Lord has spoken through the mouth of the prophets about the things to come. 7 Some of these matters are written and engraved up in heaven, so that the angels can read them and learn what lies ahead for the sinners, and for the spirits of the humble, and for those who mortified their bodies and were repaid by God, and for those who were shamed by wicked people: [8] those who loved God, and cared nothing for gold or silver or any of the good things of the world, but surrendered their bodies to torture; [9] who from the time they came into being did not crave earthly food, but counted everything as a passing breath and lived that way; and the Lord tested them often, and their spirits were found pure, so that they might bless his name. [10] I have recounted in the books all the blessings meant for them. He has assigned them their reward, because they have been found to love heaven more than their life in the world. Though they were trampled by wicked people, and suffered abuse and insult from them and were put to shame, still they blessed me.[c] [11] And now I will call forth the spirits of the good people of the generation of light, and I will transform those born in darkness, who were given no honor in the flesh to match their faithfulness. [12] I will lead them out into radiant light, those who loved my holy name, and I will set each of them on his throne of honor. [13] They will shine for times without number; for righteousness is God's judgment, and to the faithful he will give faithfulness in the dwelling of upright paths. [14] They will watch the ones born in darkness being thrown into darkness, even as the righteous shine out. [15] The sinners will cry out as they see them shining, and they will go where days and times are set for them."

Chapter 1

God's Words to Moses on Mount Sinai

1 In the first year after the Israelites left Egypt, on the sixteenth day of the third month,[a] God said to Moses, "Come up to me on the mountain. I will give you the two stone tablets of the law and the commandment, which I have written so that you may teach them."[b] 2 So Moses went up the mountain of God, and the glory of the Lord settled on Mount Sinai, and a cloud covered it for six days. 3 On the seventh day he called Moses out of the cloud, and the sight of the Lord's glory on the mountaintop was like a blazing fire. 4 Moses stayed on the mountain forty days and forty nights, and God showed him the history of all the days of the law and the testimony, from the earliest times to the latest.[c] 5 He said, "Set your heart on every word
I speak to you on this mountain, and write them in a book, so that their descendants may see that I never abandoned them, however much evil they did by breaking the covenant that I am making today between me and you on Mount Sinai, for all their generations. 6 When all these things have come upon them, they will recognize that I am more just than they in every judgment and in every act, and that I was truly with them. 7 You must write down for yourself all the words that I tell you today. I know how rebellious and stubborn they are, even before I bring them into the land that I promised on oath to their ancestors, to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: 'I will give your descendants a land flowing with milk and honey.' 8 They will eat and be full, and then turn to foreign gods, which cannot rescue them from any of their troubles; and this witness will be heard against them. 9 They will forget every commandment I give them, and follow the nations, their filth and their shamelessness, and serve their gods, and those gods will become a trap, a distress, an affliction, and a snare for them. 10

Many will be destroyed and carried off, and will fall into the hands of their enemies, because they abandoned my rules and my commandments, the festivals of my covenant, my sabbaths, my holy place that I made holy for myself among them, my tabernacle, and my sanctuary, which I made holy for myself in the middle of the land, so that I might set my name there and have it dwell.[d] 11 They will build themselves high places, sacred poles, and carved idols, and each will bow down to his own, and be led astray; they will sacrifice their children to demons and to every product of their hearts' delusion. 12 I will send witnesses to them to testify against them, but they will not listen; they will kill the witnesses, and hunt down those who look for the law. They will do away with it all and twist it into something wicked in my sight. 13 Then I will hide my face from them and hand them over to the nations to be taken captive, plundered, and devoured. I will uproot them from the land and scatter them among the nations. 14 They will forget my whole law, all my commandments, and all my judgments, and lose their way over the new moons, sabbaths, festivals, jubilees, and ordinances.[e] 15 After that they will turn back to me from among the nations, with all their heart, all their soul, and all their strength. I will gather them from all the nations, and they will look for me, and I will let them find me when they look for me with all their heart and all their soul. 16 I will show them plentiful peace with justice, and I will plant them as a plant of uprightness, with all my heart and all my soul.[f] They will be a blessing and not a curse; they will be the head and not the tail. 17 I will build my sanctuary among them and live with them; I will be their God, and they will be my people in truth and righteousness. 18 I will not abandon them or let them down, for I am the Lord their God." 19 Moses fell on his face and prayed: "Lord, my God, do not abandon your people and your inheritance, to wander in the delusions of their own hearts. Do not hand them over to their enemies, the nations, to rule over them and make them sin against you. 20 Lord, lift up your mercy over your people, and create in them an upright spirit. Do not let the spirit of Beliar rule them, accuse them before you, and trap them off every path of righteousness, so that they are destroyed from your presence.[g] 21 They are your people and your inheritance, whom you rescued with your great power from the Egyptians. Create in them a clean heart and a holy spirit, and never let them be trapped by their sins, from now on and forever." 22 The Lord answered Moses: "I know how perverse they are, with their schemes and their stubbornness. They will not obey until they confess their own sin and the sin of their ancestors. 23 After that they will turn back to me in complete uprightness, with their whole heart and soul. I will cut away the foreskin of their hearts and of the hearts of their descendants, and create a holy spirit in them, and cleanse them so that they never again turn away from me, from that day on and forever. 24 Their souls will cling to me and to all my commandments, and they will keep them; I will be their Father, and they will be my children. 25 All of them will be called children of the living God, and every angel and every spirit will know that these are my children, that I am their Father in truth and justice, and that I love them. 26 Now write down for yourself all these words that I tell you on this mountain, the first and the last, everything that will happen in all the divisions of days, under the law and the testimony, in the weeks and the jubilees, forever, until I come down and live with them for all time." 27 Then he said to the angel of the presence, "Write for Moses from the beginning of creation until my sanctuary is built among them for all eternity.[h] 28 The Lord will appear before the eyes of all, and all will know that I am the God of Israel, the Father of all Jacob's children, and king on Mount Zion forever. Zion and Jerusalem will be holy."[i] 29 Then the angel of the presence, who went ahead of Israel's camp, took the tablets of the divisions of the years, from the time of creation, the law and the testimony of the weeks and the jubilees, year by year, in the full count of the jubilees, from the day of the new creation, when the heavens, the earth and all creation will be renewed according to the powers of heaven and all the works of the earth, until the Lord's sanctuary is made in Jerusalem on Mount Zion, and all the lights are renewed for healing, peace, and blessing for all the chosen of Israel, so that it may be so from that day forever.[j]

Notes

- a (1:1) The sixteenth day of the third month: Geʿez gives only "the third month, the sixteenth day." Jubilees counts months by number (as the older books of the Bible often do) in its fixed 364-day calendar, which begins at the spring equinox on a Wednesday (see the note at 6:29–32). In that calendar the sixteenth day of the third month falls in early June, a day after the Feast of Weeks that Jubilees fixes on the fifteenth (6:17–22). Compare Exod 19:1.
- b (1:1) The Prologue, which Charles prints before 1:1 without a verse number, reads: "This is the account of the division of the days, of the law and the testimony, of the events of the years, of their weeks of years and their jubilees, through all the years of the world, as the Lord told Moses on Mount Sinai when he went up to receive the tablets of the law and the commandment, at God's own word to him: 'Go up to the top of the mountain.'" A week of years is seven years; a jubilee is seven such weeks, forty-nine years (compare Lev 25).
- c (1:4) The earlier and the later history: the Ethiopic has "the first and the last," which Charles takes to mean the whole sweep of history, from creation to the final age. The book presents itself as that revelation, dictated to Moses by an angel (1:27).
- d (1:10) My holy place … my sanctuary: the Temple in Jerusalem. The writer speaks of the tabernacle as still standing in the time of the kings, and the "land" that holds the sanctuary is Judah.
- e (1:14) Lose their way over the new moons: an early hint of the book's main quarrel. Jubilees insists that the year has exactly 364 days, 52 weeks, with festivals on fixed dates, and rejects calendars governed by the moon (see 6:29–38).
- f (1:16) I will plant them as a plant of uprightness: the Ethiopic text is damaged here (Charles marks it as corrupt). The sense given is his proposed restoration, "I will plant them … in the land," following Jer 32:41.
- g (1:20) Beliar: the Ethiopic form of Belial ("worthlessness"), here the chief of the evil spirits. He appears again in 1:20 and in Jubilees' other mentions of demonic rule; compare Mastema (10:8).
- h (1:27) The angel of the presence: the angel who stands before God's face (Isa 63:9). Later (2:1) he dictates the account to Moses, and Jubilees is presented as his words. Charles suggested Michael. The idea that the law came through angels is also found in Gal 3:19.
- i (1:28) This verse stands here in the manuscripts, but Charles thought it belongs after verse 25.
- j (1:29) Charles considered the middle of this sentence damaged in the Ethiopic. The "new creation" looks ahead to the end of days (compare Isa 65:17; Rev 21:1).

Chapter 2

The Creation and the Sabbath

[1] The angel of the presence spoke to Moses at the Lord's word: "Write the full story of creation: how the Lord God finished all his work and everything he made in six days, rested on the seventh day, made it holy for all ages, and set it as a sign for all his works. 2 On the first day he made the heavens above, the earth, the waters, and all the spirits that serve before him: the angels of the presence, the angels of holiness, the angels of the spirits of fire, of the winds, of the clouds, of darkness, of snow, hail and frost, the angels of the voices, of thunder and lightning, the angels of the spirits of cold and heat, winter and spring, autumn and summer, and of every spirit of his creatures in heaven and on earth. He also made the depths and the darkness, evening and night, and the light, dawn and day, which he prepared in the knowledge of his heart.[a] 3 Then we saw his works and praised him and sang before him for all that he had made, for he made seven great works on the first day. 4 On the second day he made the firmament in the midst of the waters, and the waters were divided that day: half rose above it and half sank below it, over the surface of the whole earth. This was the only work he made on the second day. 5 On the third day he commanded the waters to withdraw from the surface of the whole earth into one place, and the dry ground to appear. 6 The waters obeyed him, pulling back from the face of the earth into one place beyond this firmament, and the dry ground appeared. 7 That day he made for them all the seas, each in its basin, all the rivers, the pools of water in the hills and across the earth, all the lakes, all the dew on the ground, and the seed that is sown, all that sprouts, the fruit trees, the trees of the forest, and the garden of Eden in Eden, and every plant of every kind. These four great works God made on the third day.[b] 8 On the fourth day he made the sun, the moon, and the stars, and set them in the sky's firmament to give light over the whole earth, to rule the day and the night, and to separate light from darkness. 9 God set the sun as a great sign on the earth, for days, sabbaths, months, festivals, years, sabbaths of years, jubilees, and every season of the years.[c] 10 It separates light from darkness and brings prosperity, so that everything that grows and sprouts on the earth may thrive. These three things he made on the fourth day. 11 On the fifth day he made the great sea creatures in the depths of the waters; these were the first flesh made by his hands. He made the fish and everything that moves in the water, and everything that flies, the birds and all their kinds. 12 The sun rose over them to make them thrive, and over everything on the earth, everything that sprouts from the ground, all the fruit trees, and all flesh. These three kinds he made on the fifth day. 13 On the sixth day he made all the wild animals of the earth, all the livestock, and everything that moves on the ground. 14 After all that, he made humankind, male and female, and gave them rule over everything on the earth and in the seas, over everything that flies, over the wild animals, the livestock, and everything that moves on the ground, over the whole earth; over all of this he gave them rule. These four kinds he made on the sixth day. 15 In all there were twenty-two kinds of things.[d] 16 He finished all his work on the sixth day: everything in the heavens and on the earth, in the seas and in the depths, in light and in darkness, and in everything. 17 He gave us a great sign, the sabbath day, so that we would work six days and keep sabbath on the seventh from all work. 18 All the angels of the presence and all the angels of holiness, these two great orders, he commanded to keep sabbath with him in heaven and on earth. 19 He said to us, 'I will set apart a people for myself from all the peoples, and they will keep the sabbath. I will make them holy as my own people and bless them. Just as I have made the sabbath day holy, and still do, so I will bless them, and they will be my people and I will be their God. 20 I have chosen the descendants of Jacob out of everything I have seen and I have written him down as my firstborn son. I have made him holy for myself forever, and I will teach them the sabbath day, so that they may rest on it from all work.' 21 So he made in it a sign, so that they would keep sabbath with us on the seventh day, to eat and drink and bless the one who made all things, who has blessed and made holy for himself a special people above all peoples, and so that they would keep sabbath along with us. 22 He made their commands rise to him like a sweet fragrance, welcome to him every day. 23 There were twenty-two heads of the human race from Adam to Jacob, and twenty-two kinds of work were done until the seventh day. This seventh day is blessed and holy, and the other one is blessed and holy too; the one serves with the other for holiness and blessing.[e] 24 It was granted that Jacob and his descendants should always be the blessed and holy ones of the first testimony and law, just as he made the sabbath day holy and blessed on the seventh day. [25] He made heaven and earth and all that he made in six days, and God made the seventh day holy, because of all his works. So he commanded that anyone who does any work on it must die, and anyone who profanes it must surely die.[f] [26] So command the Israelites to keep this day and make it holy, to do no work on it and not to defile it, for it is holier than all other days. [27] Anyone who profanes it must certainly die, and anyone who does any work on it will die forever, so that the Israelites keep this day through all their generations and are not rooted out of the land. It is a holy day and a blessed day. [28] Everyone who keeps it, and rests on it from all his work, will be holy and blessed always, like us. [29] Tell the Israelites the law of this day: that they should keep sabbath on it and not abandon it in the delusions of their hearts; that it is not allowed to do on it anything inappropriate or to pursue their own pleasure; that they should not prepare anything to eat or drink on it, nor draw water, nor carry any load in or out through their gates that they did not prepare for themselves at home on the sixth day.[g] [30] They must not bring anything in or out from house to house on that day, for that day is holier and more blessed than any jubilee day in the jubilees. On it we kept sabbath in heaven before it was made known to any human being that they should keep sabbath on the earth. [31] The Creator of all things blessed it, but he did not make all peoples and nations holy to keep the sabbath on it; only Israel. Only to them did he grant eating, drinking, and keeping sabbath on the earth. [32] The Creator of all things blessed this day that he had made, for a blessing, for holiness, and for glory above all days. [33] This law and testimony was given to the Israelites as an everlasting law throughout their generations.

Notes

- a (2:2) Seven works on the first day: heaven, earth, waters, spirits, the abysses, darkness, and light (verse 3 speaks of seven). The angels, in this book, are made on the first day, so they could not have helped with later work; later Jewish tradition disputed this. The two highest orders are “angels of the presence” and “angels of holiness." The rest are the angels who govern natural forces; compare 1 Enoch 60:11–21 and 75:3.

- b (2:7) Four works on the third day: Genesis names three (dry land and seas, plants, fruit trees); Jubilees adds the garden of Eden.
- c (2:9) The sun, and not the moon, is the sign. This is the book's central calendar claim: it follows the sun's fixed year of 364 days (52 weeks), and the moon plays no part in its reckoning (compare 6:36–38).
- d (2:15) Twenty-two: seven on day one, one on day two, four on day three, three on day four, three on day five, four on day six. The number matches the letters of the Hebrew alphabet, the twenty-two books (of the Hebrew Bible, as counted), and the twenty-two generations from Adam to Jacob (verse 23).
- e (2:23) Between verses 22 and 23 Charles marks a gap in the Ethiopic and proposes this restoration: "As there are twenty-two letters, and twenty-two sacred books, and twenty-two heads of humankind from Adam to Jacob, so there were twenty-two kinds of work." "The other one" in the second half of this verse is Jacob (Israel).
- f (2:25) Compare Exod 31:14–15 and Num 15:32–36.
- g (2:29) Charles considered part of this verse out of order in the Ethiopic. The ban on carrying burdens recalls Jer 17:21–22. Anything to eat was to be prepared the day before (Exod 16:23).

Chapter 3

Eden and the Fall

1 During the six days of the second week, at God's word, we brought to Adam all the wild animals, livestock, birds, and everything that moves on the ground or in the water, each by kind and species: the wild animals on the first day, the livestock on the second, the birds on the third, everything that moves on the ground on the fourth, and what moves in the water on the fifth.[a] 2 Adam gave names to them all, and whatever he called each one became its name. 3 For those five days Adam watched all of them, male and female, of every kind on earth, but he was alone, and found no companion suitable for him. 4 Then the Lord said to us, "It is not good for the man to be alone. Let us make a helper for him." 5 The Lord our God sent a deep sleep upon him, and he slept. God took one of his ribs to make the woman; this rib was the beginning of the woman. He built up flesh in its place and formed the woman. 6 Then he roused Adam from his sleep, and as soon as Adam woke he rose to his feet; it was the sixth day. The Lord led the woman to him, and Adam recognized her and said, "At last: bone from my bones, flesh from my flesh! She shall be called my wife, since she was drawn out of her husband." [7] For this reason a man and his wife become one: a man leaves his father and mother, attaches himself to his wife, and the two become a single body. [8] Adam was made in the first week, and the rib, his wife, in the same week; in the second week God showed her to him. For this reason the commandment was given to keep the days of uncleanness: seven days for a male child, and twice seven for a female.[b] [9] When Adam had completed forty days in the land where he was made, we brought him into the garden of Eden to work it and take care of it, but his wife was brought in on the eightieth day, and only after that did she enter the garden of Eden. [10] This is why the commandment about a woman giving birth is written on the heavenly tablets: "If she gives birth to a boy, she is unclean for seven days, as in the first week of days, and then thirty-three days she must remain in the blood of her purifying. She must touch nothing holy and must not enter the sanctuary until she has completed the days set for a male child.[c] [11] But for a girl she is unclean for two weeks of days, as in the first two weeks, and sixty-six days in the blood of purifying, eighty days in all." [12] When she had completed eighty days, we brought her into the garden of Eden, because it is holier than all the rest of the earth, and every tree planted in it is holy. [13] So the rule for a woman who bears a boy or a girl is these days: she must touch nothing holy and not enter the sanctuary until those days for a boy or a girl are complete. [14] This is the law and testimony written for Israel, so that they will keep it always. [15] In the first week of the first jubilee, Adam and his wife lived in the garden of Eden for seven years, working and tending it; we gave him tasks and taught him everything fit for farming.[d] [16] He worked the garden, and was naked and did not know it, and was not ashamed. He guarded the garden from the birds, wild animals, and livestock, gathered its fruit and ate it, and put aside the rest for himself and his wife. [17] When the seven years were complete, in the second month, on the seventeenth day, the serpent came to the woman and said, "Did God tell you not to eat from every tree in the garden?" [18] She answered, "God told us we may eat the fruit of all the trees of the garden, but about the fruit of the tree in the middle of the garden, God said, ‘Do not eat it, and do not even touch it, or you will die.’” 19 The serpent said to the woman, “You certainly will not die. God knows that on the day you eat it, your eyes will be opened, you will be like gods, and you will know good and evil.” 20 The woman saw that the tree was pleasant and lovely to look at, and that its fruit was good to eat, and she took some and ate. 21 She first covered her shame with fig leaves, then gave some to Adam, and he ate; his eyes were opened, and he saw that he was naked. 22 He took fig leaves and sewed them together, made himself an apron, and covered his shame. 23 God cursed the serpent and was angry with it forever.[e] 24 He was angry with the woman, because she had listened to the serpent’s voice and eaten. He said to her, “I will greatly increase your sorrow and pain; you will bear children in sorrow, and you will turn back to your husband, and he will rule over you.”[f] 25 To Adam he said, “Because you listened to your wife and ate from the tree I told you not to eat from, the ground is cursed because of you. It will produce thorns and thistles for you, and you will eat your bread by the sweat of your face, until you return to the earth you were taken from; you are earth, and to earth you will return.” 26 He made them coats of skin, dressed them, and sent them out of the garden of Eden. 27 On the day Adam left the garden, he offered a sweet-smelling offering of incense—frankincense, galbanum, stacte, and spices—in the morning when the sun rose, the day he had covered his shame.[g] 28 That day the mouths of all the wild animals, livestock, birds, and every creature that walks or moves were shut, so that they could no longer speak; until then they had all spoken to one another with one lip and one tongue.[h] 29 He sent out of the garden of Eden every creature that had been in it, and all were scattered by kind and species to the places made for them. 30 To Adam alone he gave the means to cover his shame, out of all the animals and livestock. 31 That is why the heavenly tablets prescribe that all who know the judgment of the law must cover their shame and not uncover themselves as the nations do.[i] 32 On the new moon of the fourth month Adam and his wife left the garden of Eden and settled in the land of Elda, the land of their creation.[j] 33 Adam named his wife Eve. 34 They had no son until the first jubilee, and after that he knew her.[k] 35 Adam worked the land as he had been taught in the garden of Eden.

Notes

- a (3:1) The "second week" is the second week of creation, counted from the first sabbath, which is the beginning of the first week of the world's history. The "we" is the angels of the presence, who speak throughout this account.
- b (3:8) Compare Lev 12:2–5. The writer explains the law of purification after childbirth from the order of events in Eden.
- c (3:10) The heavenly tablets: tablets in heaven on which God has written law and the course of history. Jubilees often appeals to them for rules, including some not found in the Pentateuch (1 Enoch 81:1–2 and 93:2 also mention them).
- d (3:15) Seven years: the first week of years. A tradition recorded in Jewish literature says that Adam was in Eden only a few hours; Jubilees makes it seven years.
- e (3:23) Charles suspected something has dropped out here. He suggested it described the loss of the serpent's legs, a tradition found in the Aramaic Targum on Genesis and in Josephus.
- f (3:24) You will turn back to your husband: so the Greek and Syriac in Gen 3:16; the Hebrew has "your desire will be for your husband."
- g (3:27) Compare the incense of Exod 30:34. Adam is made the first priest.
- h (3:28) Josephus also says that all creatures spoke in the garden. In Jubilees the single original language is Hebrew (12:25–26).
- i (3:31) The nations … uncover themselves: likely a reference to Greek athletic exercise in the nude, which pious Jews of the second century BC opposed (1 Macc 1:14–15; 2 Macc 4:12–14).
- j (3:32) The new moon of the fourth month: here "new moon" means the first day of the fourth month (about June 21, the summer solstice, in the 364-day calendar of Jubilees). Elda: perhaps a form of the Hebrew word for "birth." Charles thought so.
- k (3:34) Eve: Hebrew Ḥawwah, associated with "living" in Gen 3:20.

Chapter 4

Cain and Abel; the Line to Noah

1 In the third week of the second jubilee Eve gave birth to Cain, in the fourth week to Abel, and in the fifth week to her daughter Awan.[a] 2 In the first year of the third jubilee, Cain killed Abel, because God accepted Abel's sacrifice and refused Cain's offering. 3 He killed him in the field, and his blood cried out from the ground to heaven, accusing him of the murder. 4 The Lord rebuked Cain for killing Abel, made him a wanderer on the earth because of his brother's blood, and cursed him on the earth. 5 For that reason it is written on the heavenly tablets:

“Cursed is the one who strikes his neighbor in secret. Let everyone who has seen and heard say, ‘So be it.’ And cursed too is the one who saw and did not report it.”[b] 6 That is why, when we appear before the Lord our God, we report all the sin that is committed in heaven and on earth, in light and in darkness, and everywhere. 7 Adam and his wife grieved over Abel for four weeks of years. In the fourth year of the fifth week they were glad again, and Adam knew his wife, and she bore a son. He named him Seth, saying, “God has raised up a second child for us on the earth in place of Abel, because Cain killed him.”[c] 8 In the sixth week he fathered his daughter Azura. 9 Cain took his sister Awan as his wife, and at the end of the fourth jubilee she bore him Enoch. In the first year of the first week of the fifth jubilee, houses were built on the earth, and Cain built a city and named it after his son Enoch.[d] 10 Adam knew Eve his wife, and she bore nine more sons. 11 In the fifth week of the fifth jubilee Seth took his sister Azura as his wife, and in the fourth year of the sixth week she bore him Enos. 12 He was the first to call on the name of the Lord on the earth. 13 In the third week of the seventh jubilee Enos took his sister Noam as his wife, and in the third year of the fifth week she bore him a son, whom he named Kenan. 14 At the end of the eighth jubilee Kenan took his sister Mualeleth as his wife, and in the first week of the ninth jubilee, in the third year, she bore him a son, whom he named Mahalalel.[e] 15 In the second week of the tenth jubilee Mahalalel took Dinah, daughter of Barakiel, his father’s brother’s daughter, as his wife, and in the third week, in the sixth year, she bore him a son, whom he named Jared, because in his days the angels of the Lord came down to earth.[f] They are called the Watchers, and were sent to teach people, and to practice justice and uprightness on earth. 16 In the eleventh jubilee, during its fourth week, Jared married Baraka, the daughter of Rasuel, who was his cousin on his father’s side. In the fifth week, in the jubilee’s fourth year, she bore him a son, whom he called Enoch. 17 Enoch was the first person born on earth to learn writing, knowledge, and wisdom, and he wrote the signs of the sky in a book, in the order of their months, so that people might know the seasons of the years in the order of their months.[g] 18 He was the first to write a testimony, and he testified to the human race in the generations of the earth. He set out the weeks of the jubilees, made known the days of the years, arranged the months, and counted the sabbaths of years, as we had shown him. [19] He saw in a dream-vision what has been and what will be, how it will go for human beings in all their generations until the day of judgment. He saw and understood everything, wrote down his testimony, and placed it on earth for all human beings and their generations. [20] In the twelfth jubilee, in the seventh week, he took a wife named Edni, daughter of Danel, his father's brother's daughter, and in the sixth year of that week she bore him a son, whom he named Methuselah. [21] He then spent six jubilees of years with God's angels, who showed him everything on earth and in heaven, the course of the sun, and he wrote it all down. [22] He warned the Watchers who had sinned with the daughters of men; they had begun to join themselves to them and to be defiled, and Enoch bore witness against all of them. [23] He was taken from among human beings, and we led him into the garden of Eden in majesty and honor, and there he writes down the condemnation and judgment of the world and all the wickedness of humankind.[h] [24] Because of that, God brought the waters of the flood over all the land of Eden, for he was put there as a sign, to testify against all human beings and recount every deed of every generation until the day of judgment. [25] He burned the incense of the sanctuary, sweet-smelling spices, welcome to the Lord on the mountain. [26] For the Lord has four places on earth: the garden of Eden, the mountain of the east, this mountain where you are today, Mount Sinai, and Mount Zion, which will be made holy in the new creation to make the earth holy; through it the earth will be cleansed of all its guilt and uncleanness in all the generations of the world.[i] [27] In the fourteenth jubilee Methuselah took a wife, Edna, daughter of Azriel, his father's brother's daughter, in the third week, in the first year of that week, and he fathered a son and named him Lamech. [28] In the fifteenth jubilee, in the third week, Lamech took a wife named Betenos, daughter of Barakiel, his father's brother's daughter, and in that week she bore him a son. He named him Noah, saying, "This one will comfort me in my trouble and all my work, and over the ground that the Lord cursed."[j] [29] At the end of the nineteenth jubilee, in the seventh week, in its sixth year, Adam died, and all his sons buried him in the land of his creation. He was the first to be buried in the earth. 30 He was seventy years short of a thousand years, for a thousand years are like one day in the testimony of heaven, and so it was written about the tree of knowledge: "On the day you eat from it you will die." For that reason he did not complete the years of that day; he died during it.[k] 31 At the end of that jubilee, in the same year, Cain was killed after him; his house fell on him, and he died in the middle of it, killed by its stones. He had killed Abel with a stone, and a stone killed him, a just judgment. 32 For that reason it was ordained on the heavenly tablets: "With the tool a man uses to kill his neighbor, he is to be killed; as he wounded him, so they are to treat him."[l] 33 In the twenty-fifth jubilee Noah took a wife named Emzara, daughter of Rakeel, his father's brother's daughter, in the first year of the fifth week. In the third year of it she bore him Shem, in the fifth year Ham, and in the first year of the sixth week Japheth.

Notes

- a (4:1) Jubilees fills in what Genesis leaves out, including the wives of the early patriarchs, who are all sisters or cousins. Awan: "iniquity" (Hebrew 'awen). Cain's wife is his sister in this book, as in later Jewish tradition.
- b (4:5) Compare Deut 27:24.
- c (4:7) Seth: in Gen 4:25 Eve explains the name as "God has appointed (shath) another child." In Jubilees the father usually names the child.
- d (4:9) Years in this book can be counted from creation: the first year of the first week of the fifth jubilee is year 197 (4 × 49 + 1). Charles gives these year numbers in his margins; they follow the book's own chronology, in which a jubilee is forty-nine years.
- e (4:14) Mualeleth: perhaps "she who praises God."
- f (4:15) Jared: the name suggests the Hebrew verb yarad, "come down." The angels who came down are the Watchers, described in 1 Enoch 6.
- g (4:17) Enoch writes the signs of the sky: compare the Astronomical Book (1 Enoch 72–82), which also lays out a 364-day solar year. Jubilees claims for the calendar the authority of the first scribe.
- h (4:23) Taken from among human beings: Gen 5:24. Here he is in Eden as a heavenly scribe, as in 1 Enoch 12:3–4.
- i (4:26) Four places: three of them are tied to a great figure—Eden to Adam, Sinai to Moses, Zion to David. The "mountain of the east" is uncertain; Charles allowed that it may be the mountain above Eden where Seth's family lived.

- j (4:28) Noah: Hebrew Noaḥ, tied to "comfort" (naḥam) in Gen 5:29.
- k (4:30) A thousand years are like one day: compare Ps 90:4 and 2 Pet 3:8. Adam lived 930 years (Gen 5:5); Jubilees says 930, "seventy short of a thousand."
- l (4:32) The law of equal retribution: compare Exod 21:24; Lev 24:19–20.

Chapter 5

The Watchers, the Giants, and the Flood

1 When human beings began to multiply across the earth and daughters were born to them, the angels of God saw them in a certain year of this jubilee, saw that they were beautiful, and took wives for themselves from any they chose. They bore sons to them, and these were giants.[a] 2 Lawlessness grew on the earth, and all flesh corrupted its way: human beings, livestock, wild animals, birds, and everything that walks on the earth all corrupted their ways and their natures. They began to devour one another, lawlessness grew on the earth, and every thought of every human heart was evil continually. 3 God looked at the earth, and it was corrupt: all flesh had corrupted its natural order, and everything on the earth had done every kind of evil before his eyes. 4 He said, "I will destroy people and all flesh on the face of the earth, which I made." 5 But Noah found favor in the Lord's eyes. 6 He was furious with the angels whom he had sent to earth, and commanded that they be uprooted from all their power. He told us to bind them in the depths of the earth, and there they are, bound in the midst of it, and kept apart. 7 Against their sons a command went out from before his face: that they be struck down with the sword and removed from under heaven. 8 He said, "My spirit will not remain in human beings forever, for they too are flesh, and their days will be a hundred and twenty years."[b] 9 He sent his sword among them so that each killed his neighbor, and they began to kill each other until all had fallen by the sword and been wiped from the earth. 10 Their fathers saw their destruction, and afterward were bound in the depths of the earth forever, until the day of the great condemnation, when judgment will be carried out on all who have corrupted their ways and works before the Lord.[c] 11 He destroyed all of them from their places, and not one remained whom he did not judge according to all their wickedness. 12 He made a new and righteous nature for all his works, so that they would not sin in their whole nature forever, but all be righteous, each according to its kind, always. 13 The judgment of all is ordained and written on the heavenly tablets in justice, even the judgment of all who leave the path set for them to walk. If they do not walk in it, judgment is written for every creature and for every kind. 14 There is nothing in heaven or on earth, in light or in darkness, in Sheol or in the deep, or in the place of darkness, that is not judged; all their judgments are ordained, written, and engraved. 15 He will judge all of them, the great according to their greatness and the small according to their smallness, each according to his path. 16 He does not show partiality, nor does he accept bribes. If he says he will judge each one, then even if someone gave everything on earth, he would not accept the gifts or the person, and would take nothing from his hand, for he is a righteous judge. 17 The decree written down for the Israelites is this: if they come back to him in justice, he will forgive every offense and overlook every sin. 18 The decree is written that he will have compassion on all who repent of their guilt, one day in each year.[d] 19 As for all who corrupted their ways and thoughts before the flood, no one's person was accepted except Noah's; for his sake his sons were accepted, and God saved them from the waters of the flood on his account, because his heart was righteous in all his ways, as had been commanded concerning him, and he had not departed from anything ordained for him. 20 The Lord said he would destroy everything on the earth, people, livestock, wild animals, birds of the air, and everything that moves on the ground. 21 He commanded Noah to build an ark so that he could be saved from the waters of the flood. 22 Noah built the ark exactly as he was commanded, in the twenty-seventh jubilee of years, in the fifth week, in the fifth year, on the first day of the first month.[e] 23 In the sixth year of it, in the second month, on the first day of the second month, he entered, along with everything we brought to him, into the ark, and on the seventeenth, in the evening, the Lord shut it from outside.[f] 24 The Lord opened seven floodgates of heaven and the mouths of the springs of the great deep, seven mouths in number.[g] 25 The floodgates began to pour water from the sky for forty days and forty nights, and the springs of the deep

also sent up water, until the whole world was full of water. [26] The waters rose on the earth: fifteen cubits above all the high mountains.[h] The ark rose above the ground and moved across the surface of the waters. [27] The water covered the earth for five months, a hundred and fifty days. [28] The ark came to rest on the top of Lubar, one of the mountains of Ararat.[i] [29] When the fourth month began, the fountains of the great deep were sealed and the windows of heaven were shut. When the seventh month began, every opening in the earth's depths was uncovered, and the water started to sink away into the deep below. [30] On the first day of the tenth month the mountaintops were seen, and on the first day of the first month the earth was visible. [31] The waters disappeared from the earth in the fifth week, in its seventh year, and on the seventeenth day of the second month the earth was dry. [32] On the twenty-seventh day of it he opened the ark and sent out the wild animals, livestock, birds, and every moving thing.[j]

Notes

- a (5:1) Angels of God: the Hebrew of Gen 6:2 has "sons of God." Jubilees follows the older reading of the Greek version, "angels," and so does 1 Enoch (chapters 6–7). Giants: Hebrew Nephilim.
- b (5:8) Compare Gen 6:3.
- c (5:10) Charles argued that verses 10–12 describe the final judgment, so that "were bound" should be read "are bound" and the verbs in verse 11 are future: "He will destroy all from their places and not one will be left whom he does not judge." This translation keeps the Ethiopic tenses, which treat it as already happened.
- d (5:18) Verses 17–18 look like a later addition borrowed from 34:18–19. The reference is to the Day of Atonement, on the tenth day of the seventh month (about October 1 in the 364-day calendar; see 34:18–19).
- e (5:22) The twenty-seventh jubilee, fifth week, fifth year is year 1307 from creation (26 × 49 + 28 + 5). The first day of the first month is the first Wednesday of the year, in late March.
- f (5:23) On the first day of the second month: about April 21. The seventeenth of the second month: about May 7. The year in the 364-day calendar starts on a Wednesday at about the spring equinox. The seventeenth of the second month is Gen 7:11.
- g (5:24) Seven: in this book the number seven recurs in many places connected with the flood, as with the weeks and the jubilees.
- h (5:26) Fifteen cubits: about 22 feet (a cubit being about 18 inches, or 45 centimeters; about 6.7 meters). Compare Gen 7:20.
- i (5:28) Lubar: a mountain name found only in this book (see 7:1 and 7:17).

- j (5:32) Charles notes that Gen 8:14 gives the twenty-seventh day of the second month as the day the earth was dry; here the earth dries on the seventeenth and the ark is opened ten days later. The year of the flood, in all, runs from the second month (about April 21) through a year to the second month of the next year, a full 364-day year and ten days.

Chapter 6

Noah's Covenant, the Feast of Weeks, and the Year of 364 Days

1 On the first day of the third month he came out of the ark and built an altar on that mountain.[a] 2 He made atonement for the earth, and took a kid and made atonement with its blood for all the guilt of the earth, for everything that had been on it was destroyed, except those in the ark with Noah. 3 He put the fat of it on the altar. He took an ox, a goat, a sheep, kids, salt, a turtledove, and a young pigeon, and laid a burnt offering on the altar; he poured out on it a grain offering mixed with oil, sprinkled wine, and strewed frankincense over everything, and sent up a pleasing fragrance, welcome to the Lord. 4 The Lord smelled the pleasing fragrance, and made a covenant with him that there would never again be a flood to destroy the earth, that seedtime and harvest would never cease in all the days of the earth, and that cold and heat, summer and winter, day and night would never change their order or end. 5 "As for you, be fruitful and multiply on the earth, and become many on it, and be a blessing on it. I will put fear and dread of you in everything that lives on the earth and in the sea. 6 I have given you all the wild animals, all the winged creatures, everything that moves on the ground, and the fish in the waters, and everything, for food; as with the green plants, I have given you everything to eat. 7 But you must not eat flesh with its life, that is, with the blood. The life of all flesh is in the blood, or else your own blood, your lives, will be demanded. From the hand of every man and from the hand of every animal I will demand the blood of a human being. 8 Whoever sheds a man's blood, by a man his own blood will be shed, for God made humankind in his own image.
9 As for you, be fruitful and multiply on the earth." 10 Noah and his sons swore that they would not eat any blood that was in any flesh, and he made a covenant before the Lord God forever, throughout all the generations of the earth, in this month.[b] 11 For that reason he told you to make a covenant with the Israelites in this month, on the mountain, with an oath, and to sprinkle blood on them over all the words of the covenant that the Lord made with them forever.[c] 12 This testimony is written about you, that you must always keep it, and never eat the blood of any animal, bird, or livestock, on any day, in all the days of the earth. Anyone who eats the blood of an animal, livestock, or bird, in all the days of the earth, he and his descendants will be rooted out of the land. 13 Command the Israelites to eat no blood, so that their names and their descendants will always be before the Lord our God. 14 There is no limit of days for this law, for it is forever. They must keep it through their generations, so that they may keep making supplication for you with blood before the altar. Every day, morning and evening, they must seek forgiveness on your behalf continually before the Lord, so that they keep the covenant and are not rooted out.[d] 15 He gave Noah and his sons a sign that there would never again be a flood on the earth. 16 He set his bow in the cloud as a sign of the everlasting covenant, that there would never again be a flood to destroy the earth all the days of the earth. 17 For that reason it is ordained and written on the heavenly tablets that they celebrate the Feast of Weeks in this month, once a year, to renew the covenant every year.[e] 18 This whole festival was kept in heaven from the day of creation until the days of Noah: twenty-six jubilees and five weeks of years. Noah and his sons kept it for seven jubilees and one week of years, until the day Noah died. From that day his sons let it lapse until the days of Abraham, and they ate blood. 19 But Abraham kept it, and Isaac and Jacob and his children kept it, up to your time. In your time the Israelites forgot it, until you celebrated it again on this mountain. 20 Command the Israelites to keep this festival through all their generations as a commandment for them: on one day in the year, in this month, they are to celebrate the festival. 21 This is the Feast of Weeks, also called the Feast of First Fruits, a feast with two aspects and two purposes. Keep it as it is written and carved concerning it.[f] 22 For I wrote in the book of the first law, the one I wrote for you, that you should celebrate it at its season, on one day in the year, and I explained its sacrifices to you, so that the Israelites would remember and celebrate it through their generations in this month, one day each year.[g] 23 On the first day of the first month, the first day of the fourth month, the first day of the seventh month, and the first day of the tenth month are days of remembrance and days of the seasons in the four divisions of the year. They are written and ordained as a testimony forever.[h] 24 Noah established them for himself as festivals for all generations forever, so that they became a memorial to him. 25 On the first day of the first month he was told to make the ark, and on that day the earth became dry and he opened it and saw the earth. 26 On the first of the fourth month the openings of the lower abysses were stopped up. On the first of the seventh month every vent in the earth's depths was uncovered, and the waters began pouring down into them. 27 On the first day of the tenth month the tops of the mountains were seen, and Noah was glad. 28 For that reason he established them for himself as festivals, as a lasting memorial, and so they are ordained. 29 They set them down on the heavenly tablets: each season has thirteen weeks, and from one memorial to the next passes thirteen weeks, from the first to the second, the second to the third, and the third to the fourth.[i] 30 All the days of the commandment are fifty-two weeks of days, and these make the whole year complete. 31 So it is engraved and ordained on the heavenly tablets, and there is no neglecting this commandment for a single year or from year to year. 32 Command the Israelites to keep the years by this count: three hundred and sixty-four days, and these make a complete year. They must not alter its time from its days or its festivals, for everything will fall out in them according to the testimony. They must not leave out a single day or disturb any festival.[j] 33 But if they neglect them and do not keep them as he commanded, they will disturb all their seasons, and the years will be shifted out of this order, and they will neglect their ordinances. 34 The Israelites will all forget. They will lose the track of the years, overlook the new moons, seasons, and sabbaths, and wander from the whole order of the year.[k] 35 For I know, and from now on I will tell you, and it is not of my own devising; the book lies written before me, and the division of days is ordained on the heavenly tablets, so that they will not forget the festivals of the covenant and walk by the festivals of the nations, in their error and ignorance. 36 For there will be those who watch the moon carefully; it throws the seasons out of order, and each year it comes ten days early.[1] 37 A time will come when they overturn the order, treating a detestable day as the day of witness and an impure day as a feast. They will mix up all the days, holy ones with impure and impure with holy, and make errors about months, sabbaths, festivals, and jubilees. 38 For that reason I am commanding you and testifying to you, so that you may testify to them: after your death your descendants will disturb it, so that they will not make the year only three hundred and sixty-four days. For that reason they will go wrong about the beginnings of the months, the seasons, the sabbaths, and the festivals, and they will eat all kinds of blood with all kinds of flesh.

Notes

- a (6:1) That mountain: Lubar (5:28).
- b (6:10) In this month: the third month. The covenant with Noah, in this book, is renewed each year on the Feast of Weeks (verses 17–22).
- c (6:11) He told you: God is speaking to Moses through the angel. The sprinkling of blood is from Exod 24:8.
- d (6:14) This refers to the daily offering (Num 28:3–8). Charles noted that these verses carry the covenant with Noah over to Moses' time, and verse 15 returns to Noah.
- e (6:17) The Feast of Weeks (Hebrew Shavuot, later "Pentecost") comes fifty days after the offering of the first sheaf. In this book it is celebrated on the fifteenth day of the third month, and it is tied to Noah's covenant. Later Judaism associated it with the giving of the law on Sinai.
- f (6:21) A double nature: it commemorates the covenant with Noah and also marks the first fruits of the wheat harvest.
- g (6:22) The book of the first law is the Pentateuch, written by the angel. "One day" may also be read "the first day," meaning the first day of the week, Sunday; the Feast of Weeks then always falls on a Sunday in this calendar. This is also the view of the Sadducees.
- h (6:23) Days of remembrance: four days that begin the four quarters of the year (about March 22, June 21, September 20, and December 20). They correspond to the four "days that are not counted in the reckoning of the year" in 1 Enoch 75:1.
- i (6:29) This is the heart of the book's calendar. A year of 364 days is exactly 52 weeks, divided into four seasons of thirteen weeks (91 days: months of 30, 30, and 31 days). Because 364 is divisible by seven, each date falls on the same weekday every year. The year begins on a Wednesday, the fourth day of the week, when the sun and moon were made (2:8). Passover, the fourteenth of the first month, is always a Tuesday, the Feast of Weeks the fifteenth of the third month always a Sunday, and so on. The calendar is purely solar. It is also the calendar of 1 Enoch 72–82 and of many Dead Sea Scrolls, and it is one reason scholars link the book to the sect that kept the scrolls.

- j (6:32) Charles saw a difficulty: 52 weeks do not divide into twelve months of 30 days. The solution is in the four extra days that fall at the end of each quarter (months of 30, 30, and 31 days), the "days of remembrance" of verse 23.
- k (6:34) Compare 1 Enoch 82:4–6.
- l (6:36) Ten days early: a year of twelve lunar months has about 354 days, ten or eleven fewer than the 364-day year.

Chapter 7

Noah's Vineyard and His Warnings

1 In the seventh week, in its first year, in this jubilee, Noah planted vines on the mountain where the ark had come to rest, called Lubar, one of the Ararat mountains. They bore fruit in the fourth year, and he guarded the fruit and gathered it that year, in the seventh month.[a] 2 He made wine from it and put it in a jar and kept it until the fifth year, until the first day of the first month. 3 He celebrated the day of this feast with joy. He offered a burnt offering to the Lord: a young ox, a ram, seven sheep a year old, and a kid of the goats, to make atonement for himself and his sons.[b] 4 He prepared the kid first and put some of its blood on the flesh that was on the altar he had made, and he laid all the fat on the altar where he made the burnt offering, and the ox, the ram, and the sheep, with all their flesh. 5 He put all their grain offerings mixed with oil on it, and then sprinkled wine on the fire he had earlier lit on the altar, and he placed incense on the altar, and sent up a sweet fragrance, welcome to the Lord his God. 6 He rejoiced and drank some of this wine, he and his children, with joy. 7 In the evening he went into his tent, and being drunk he lay down and slept, and lay uncovered in his tent as he slept. 8 Ham saw his father Noah naked, and went out and told his two brothers outside. 9 Shem took a garment and got up, he and Japheth, and they put the garment on their shoulders and walked backward and covered their father's nakedness, with their faces turned away. 10 Noah woke from his sleep and knew all that his younger son had done to him, and he cursed him and said, "Cursed be Canaan; he will be a slave to his brothers."[c] 11

He blessed Shem, saying, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Shem, and let Canaan be his slave. 12 May God enlarge Japheth, and may God live in the tent of Shem, and may Canaan be his slave." 13 Ham knew that his father had cursed his youngest son, and he was upset that he had cursed his son, and he left his father, he and his sons with him: Cush, Mizraim, Put, and Canaan. 14 He built himself a city and named it after his wife, Neelatamauk. 15 Japheth saw it and was jealous of his brother, and he too built himself a city and named it after his wife, Adataneses.
16 Shem lived with his father Noah, and built a city near his father, on the mountain, and he too named it after his wife, Sedeqetelebab.[d] 17 These three cities lie near Mount Lubar: Sedeqetelebab facing the mountain on the east, Neelatamauk on the south, and Adataneses on the west. 18 These are the sons of Shem: Elam, Asshur, Arpachshad (born two years after the flood), Lud, and Aram. 19 These are the sons of Japheth: Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tubal, Meshech, and Tiras.
These are the sons of Noah. 20 In the twenty-eighth jubilee Noah began to teach his grandsons the ordinances and commandments, and all the judgments he knew. He urged his sons to practice righteousness, to cover the shame of their flesh, to bless their Creator, to honor father and mother, to love their neighbor, and to guard their souls from fornication, uncleanness, and all injustice.[e] 21 The flood came on the earth because of these three things: the fornication in which the Watchers, against the law of their ordinances, went chasing after the daughters of men, taking wives from any they chose, and began the uncleanness. 22 They fathered sons, the Naphidim, and these were all unlike each other, and devoured each other. The giants killed the Naphil, and the Naphil killed the Eljo, and the Eljo killed humankind, and one person killed another.[f] 23 Everyone sold himself to do wrong and shed much blood, and the earth was filled with injustice. 24 After this they sinned against the animals and birds and everything that moves or walks on the earth; much blood was shed on the earth, and every thought and desire of human beings was vanity and evil continually. 25 The Lord wiped out everything from the face of the earth, because of the wickedness of their deeds, and because of the blood they had shed in the midst of the earth. 26 “We were left, I and you, my sons, and everything that entered the ark with us. Now I see your works before me, and you are not walking in righteousness; you have begun to walk the path of destruction, and you are splitting from one another, jealous of one another, so that, my sons, you are not at peace, each with his brother. 27 For I see that the demons have begun to lead you and your children astray, and I fear for you that after my death you will shed human blood on the earth, and that you too will be wiped from the face of the earth. 28 Whoever sheds human blood and whoever eats the blood of any flesh will all be wiped from the earth. 29 No one will be left who eats blood or sheds human blood on the earth, and no descendant of his will be left living under heaven.

They will go down to Sheol and into the place of condemnation, and they will all be swept into the darkness of the deep by a violent death.
30 No blood is to be seen on you, from all the blood there will be all the days that you kill any animal or livestock or anything that flies on the earth. Do a good deed for your souls by covering what has been shed on the surface of the earth. 31 Do not be like the person who eats with the blood; guard yourselves so that no one eats blood in your presence. Cover the blood, for so I have been commanded to testify to you and your children, along with all flesh.[g] 32 Do not let the soul be eaten with the flesh, so that your blood, which is your life, will not be demanded from the hand of any flesh that sheds it on the earth. 33 The land cannot be cleansed of blood that has been spilled on it, except by the blood of the person who spilled it; only then will the land be made pure for every generation. 34 Now, my children, listen: practice justice and righteousness, so that you will be planted in righteousness across the whole earth, and your glory be lifted high before my God, who saved me from the waters of the flood. 35 You will go and build cities for yourselves and plant in them all the plants on the earth, and all the fruit trees as well. 36 For three years the fruit of anything that is eaten will not be gathered. In the fourth year its fruit will be counted as holy, and they will offer it, acceptable before the Most High God, who made heaven and earth and everything. Let them offer the first of the wine and oil in abundance as first fruits on the altar of the Lord, who receives it, and let the servants of the Lord's house eat what is left before the altar that receives it.[h] 37 In the fifth year, make the release, so that you release it in justice and uprightness, and you will be righteous, and everything you plant will prosper.[i] 38 This is what Enoch, your father's father, commanded his son Methuselah, and Methuselah his son Lamech, and Lamech commanded me everything his fathers had commanded him. 39 I too will give you a command, my sons, as Enoch commanded his son in the first jubilees: while he was still alive, in the seventh generation, he commanded and testified to his son and his grandsons until the day of his death."

Notes

- a (7:1) Lubar: see the note at 5:28. Charles dates the planting at year 1317 from creation. A fruit tree's first three years of fruit were not to be eaten (Lev 19:23–25).
- b (7:3) The feast: the first day of the first month, the New Year in this calendar (about March 22). Compare Num 29:2.
- c (7:10) Compare Gen 9:25. In Jubilees the curse falls on Canaan because Noah's blessing had already been given to all three sons (Gen 9:1), and God had blessed Ham.
- d (7:16) The names of these wives come only from Jubilees. Sedeqetelebab appears to mean "righteousness of heart" (Hebrew ṣedeq + lebab).
- e (7:20) From here to the end of the chapter, Charles saw a piece of a lost "Book of Noah" (compare 10:1–15 and 1 Enoch 106:19–107:3). Later Jewish teaching ascribed seven commandments to the sons of Noah for all peoples.
- f (7:22) Naphidim, Naphil, Eljo: three classes of offspring. The Ethiopic spellings of the three names reflect Hebrew Nephilim and, perhaps, Elyo, a class otherwise unknown; Charles thought the text damaged here.
- g (7:31) Cover the blood: compare Lev 17:13. Jubilees traces the law of blood back to Noah, not Moses.
- h (7:36) Servants of the house of the Lord: the priests. Later Jewish law has the owners eat the rest in Jerusalem.
- i (7:37) The release: Charles read "in the seventh year let it rest." The Ethiopic text of the verse is uncertain.

Chapter 8

Kainam and the Division of the Earth

1 In the twenty-ninth jubilee, in the first week, at its beginning, Arpachshad took a wife named Rasuya, daughter of Susan, daughter of Elam, and in the third year of that week she bore him a son, whom he named Kainam.[a] 2 The boy grew, and his father taught him to write, and he went off to look for a place where he could take a city for himself. 3 He found an inscription that people of earlier generations had carved on a rock, and read what was on it, and copied it. It led him into sin, for it held the teaching of the Watchers, by which they observed omens from the sun, moon, and stars, in all the signs of heaven.[b] 4 He wrote it down and said nothing about it, for he was afraid to speak to Noah about it, in case he be angry with him over it. 5 In the thirtieth jubilee, in the second week, in its first year, he took a wife named Melka, daughter of Madai, son of Japheth, and in the fourth year he fathered a son, whom he named Shelah, saying, "Truly I have been sent."[c] 6 Shelah grew up and took a wife named Muak, daughter of Kesed, his father's brother, in the thirty-first jubilee, in the fifth week, in its first year. 7 She bore him a son in its fifth year, and he named him Eber. Eber took a wife named Azurad, daughter of Nebrod, in the thirty-second jubilee, in the seventh week, in its third year. 8 In its sixth year she bore him a son, whom he named Peleg, because in the days when he was born Noah's descendants began to divide the earth among themselves; for that reason he named him Peleg.[d] 9 They divided it among themselves in secret, and told Noah. 10 At the beginning of the thirty-third jubilee they divided the earth into three parts, for Shem, Ham, and Japheth, each according to his inheritance, in the first year of the first week, when one of us, who had been sent, was with them. 11 He called his sons, and they came to him, they and their children, and he divided the earth into the lots that his three sons would take as their possession. They reached out their hands and took the writing from the bosom of Noah, their father. 12 On the writing, the lot of Shem came out as the middle of the earth, which he and his sons would take as an inheritance for themselves through the generations forever. It runs from the middle of the mountain range of Rafa, from the mouth of the water of the river Tina, and its portion goes west through the middle of this river and extends until it reaches the water of the abysses, out of which this river flows and pours its waters into the sea of Meat, and the river flows into the great sea. Everything to the north is Japheth's, and everything to the south belongs to Shem.[e] 13 It extends until it reaches Karaso; this is in the bosom of the tongue that looks south. 14 His portion runs along the great sea, in a straight line until it reaches the west of the tongue that looks south, for this sea is called the tongue of the Egyptian sea. 15 From there it turns to the south, to the mouth of the great sea on the shore of its waters, and runs west to Afra, until it reaches the waters of the river Gihon, and south of the waters of Gihon, to the banks of this river.[f] 16 It runs east until it reaches the garden of Eden, to the south of it, and from the east of the whole land of Eden and the whole east it turns to the east, and goes on until it reaches the east of the mountain named Rafa, and comes down to the bank of the mouth of the river Tina. 17 This portion came to Shem and his sons by lot, to possess forever, through his generations, forever. 18 Noah was glad that this portion fell to Shem and his sons, and he remembered everything he had said in prophecy, for he had said, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Shem, and may the Lord live in the dwelling of Shem." 19 He understood that Eden's garden is the holiest place and the Lord's dwelling, that Mount Sinai is the center of the wilderness, and that Mount Zion is the center, the navel, of the earth. These three were made as sacred places, each facing the others. 20 He blessed the God of gods, who had put the word of the Lord in his mouth, and he blessed the Lord forever. 21 He knew that a blessed portion and a blessing had come to Shem and his sons through all generations: the whole land of Eden, the whole land of the Red Sea, the whole land of the east, India, the Red Sea and its mountains, the whole land of Bashan, the whole land of Lebanon, the islands of Kaftur, all the mountains of Sanir and Amana, the mountains of Asshur in the north, all the land of Elam, Asshur, Babylon, Susa and Maidai, all the mountains of Ararat, and the whole region beyond the sea, beyond the mountains of Asshur in the north: a blessed and spacious land, and everything in it is very good.[g] 22 For Ham came out the second portion, beyond the Gihon toward the south, to the right of the garden, and it extends south to all the mountains of fire, and west to the sea of Atel, and west to the sea of Mauk, into which everything that is not destroyed goes down.[h] 23 It goes north to the borders of Gadir and along the coast of the sea to the waters of the great sea, until it nears the river Gihon, and follows the river Gihon until it reaches the right of the garden of Eden.[i] 24 This is the land that came to Ham as his portion, to hold forever for himself and his sons through their generations forever. 25 Japheth's share was the third. It lay past the river Tina, north of where its waters empty out, and stretched northeast across all of Gog's territory and every land east of it. 26 It runs north, to the mountains of Qelt in the north, and toward the sea of Mauk, and comes out east of Gadir as far as the region of the waters of the sea.[j] 27 It runs until it approaches the west of Fara, and returns toward Aferag, and runs east to the waters of the sea of Meat. 28 It runs to the region of the river Tina in a northeasterly direction, until it nears the boundary of its waters, toward the mountain Rafa, and turns north. 29 This is the land that came to Japheth and his sons as the portion of his inheritance, to possess for himself and his sons through their generations forever: five great islands and a great land in the north. 30 Cold is its climate, while Ham's land is scorching; Shem's land is neither scorching nor cold but blends the two.

Notes

- a (8:1) Kainam (Cainan): he appears in the Greek version of Gen 11:13 and in Luke 3:36, but not in the Hebrew text.
- b (8:3) Josephus tells of knowledge of the stars carved on pillars by the sons of Seth. Here the knowledge is corrupt, since it comes from the Watchers. Compare 1 Enoch 8:3.
- c (8:5) Shelah: the name sounds like Hebrew shalaḥ, "send." Compare Gen 10:24.
- d (8:8) Peleg: Hebrew "division"; compare Gen 10:25.
- e (8:12) The geography of this chapter is that of a map: Rafa is probably the Rhipaean mountains (the Urals in ancient geography); Tina is the Tanais, the river Don; Meat is the Sea of Azov; Gihon is the Nile; the great sea is the Mediterranean. The scheme is of the Jewish map of the world, with Jerusalem as the "navel" of the earth (verse 19; compare Ezek 38:12 and 1 Enoch 26:1).
- f (8:15) Afra: the Roman province of Africa, the north African coast around Carthage.
- g (8:21) Kaftur: Caphtor, probably Crete. Sanir: Senir, the Hebrew name for Mount Hermon. Maidai: Media.
- h (8:22) The mountains of fire: the volcanic peaks of the south. The sea of Atel is the Atlantic; the sea of Mauk is the great ocean river that was supposed to encircle the world. Charles suggested that the text may mean "into which everything that falls is destroyed."

- i (8:23) Gadir: Gades, modern Cádiz in Spain.
- j (8:26) Qelt: the Celts.

Chapter 9

The Portions of Noah's Grandsons

1 Ham divided his portion among his sons. The first portion came out for Cush, to the east; west of him for Mizraim; west of him for Put;
and west of that, along the sea, for Canaan.[a] 2 Shem also divided his portion among his sons. The first portion came out for Elam and his sons, east of the Tigris, until it reaches the east: the whole land of India, along the Red Sea on its coast, the waters of Dedan, all the mountains of Mebri and Ela, the whole land of Susa, and everything on the side of Pharnak, to the Red Sea and the river Tina. 3 For Asshur came out the second portion: the whole land of Asshur, Nineveh, and Shinar, as far as the border of India, and it climbs and skirts the river.
4 For Arpachshad came out the third portion: the whole land of the Chaldean region east of the Euphrates, bordering the Red Sea, and all the waters of the desert near the tongue of the sea that looks toward Egypt, all the land of Lebanon, Sanir, and Amana, to the border of the Euphrates. 5 For Aram came out the fourth portion: the whole land of Mesopotamia between the Tigris and the Euphrates, north of the Chaldeans, to the border of the mountains of Asshur and the land of Arara. 6 For Lud came out the fifth portion: the mountains of Asshur and everything belonging to them, until it reaches the Great Sea, and the east of Asshur, his brother. 7 Japheth also divided his inherited land among his sons. 8 The first portion came out for Gomer, east of the northern side as far as the river Tina; in the north, for Magog, came out all the inner parts of the north, until it reaches the sea of Meat. 9 For Madai came out, as his portion to possess, the land west of his two brothers, to the islands and to the coasts of the islands. 10 For Javan came out the fourth portion: every island and the islands toward the border of Lud.[b] 11 For Tubal came out the fifth portion, in the middle of the tongue of land that approaches the border of Lud's portion, to the second tongue, to the region beyond the second tongue, up to the third tongue.[c] 12 For Meshech came out the sixth portion: the whole region beyond the third tongue, until it approaches the east of Gadir. 13 For Tiras came out the seventh portion: four great islands in the middle of the sea, which reach to Ham's portion; and the islands of Kamaturi fell by lot to the sons of Arpachshad as his inheritance.[d] 14 So Noah's sons divided it among their sons in the presence of Noah their father, and he bound them all with an oath, laying a curse on anyone who tried to seize a portion that had not fallen to him by lot. 15 They all said, "So be it, so be it," for themselves and their sons forever, through their generations until the day of judgment, when the Lord God will judge them with sword and fire for all the unclean wickedness of their errors, with which they have filled the earth with transgression, uncleanness, fornication, and sin.

Notes

- a (9:1) Cush: Ethiopia. Mizraim: Egypt. Put: Libya.
- b (9:10) Javan: Greece (Ionia).
- c (9:11) The three tongues are probably the three great peninsulas of southern Europe: Thrace, Greece, and Italy.
- d (9:13) The last clause looks like a later addition (Charles), since Arpachshad was a son of Shem.

Chapter 10

Demons, the Death of Noah, and the Tower of Babel

1 In the third week of this jubilee, unclean demons began to lead astray Noah's grandsons, and to make them go wrong and destroy them.[a] 2 Noah's sons came to their father Noah and told him about the demons that were leading astray, blinding, and killing his grandsons. 3 He prayed before the Lord his God: "God of the spirits of all humanity, you have been merciful to me. You rescued me and my sons from the floodwaters and did not wipe me out as you did those headed for destruction. Your favor to me has been immense, and your compassion for my soul has been immense. Let your favor rest on my sons, and do not let wicked spirits govern them, or they will wipe them from the earth. 4 But bless me and my sons, so that we may multiply and fill the earth. 5 You know how your Watchers, the fathers of these spirits, acted in my day; and as for these spirits that are alive, lock them up and hold them fast in the place of condemnation, so that they do not bring destruction on the sons of your servant, my God; for these are malicious and were made to destroy. 6 Do not let them rule over the spirits of the living, for you alone can rule over them. Do not let them have power over the sons of the righteous from now on and forever." 7 The Lord our God told us to bind them all. 8 Mastema, the chief of the spirits, came and said, "Lord, Creator, let some of them stay with me, to listen to my voice and do all that I tell them; for if some are not left to me, I will not be able to carry out my will against human beings. They are meant for corruption and for leading astray under my judgment, for the wickedness of humankind is great."[b] 9 God said, "Let a tenth of them stay with him, and let nine parts go down into the place of condemnation."[c] 10 He told one of us to teach Noah all their medicines, for he knew they would not walk uprightly or strive in righteousness.[d] 11 We did everything he said: we bound all the malicious evil spirits in the place of condemnation, and left a tenth of them to be subject to Satan on the earth. 12 We explained to Noah all the medicines for their diseases and for their deceptions, and how he could heal with the herbs of the earth. 13 Noah wrote everything down in a book as we instructed him, about every kind of medicine. So the evil spirits were kept from hurting Noah's sons. 14 He gave all that he had written to Shem, his eldest son, for he loved him very much above all his sons. 15 Noah died and joined his ancestors, and was buried on Mount Lubar, in Ararat. 16 He completed nine hundred and fifty years of life: nineteen jubilees, two weeks of years, and five years.[e] 17 In his life on earth he surpassed all human beings except Enoch, because of his righteousness, in which he was perfect. Enoch's office was ordained as a testimony for the generations of the world, to recount all the deeds of each generation until the day of judgment. 18 In the thirty-third jubilee, in the first year of the second week, Peleg took a wife named Lomna, daughter of Sinar, and in the fourth year of this week she bore him a son and he named him Reu; for he said, "Look, human beings have become evil, with the wicked plan of building themselves a city and a tower in the land of Shinar."[f]

19 They left the land of Ararat and went east to Shinar, for in his days they built the city and the tower, saying, “Come, let us climb up by it into heaven.” 20 They began to build, and in the fourth week they made bricks with fire, and the bricks served them as stone, and the mortar they used to join them was asphalt, which comes out of the sea and from springs of water in the land of Shinar. 21 They built it for forty-three years. Its width was 203 bricks, and a brick was a third of a unit in height; its height came to 5,433 cubits and 2 palms, and one wall was thirteen stades long and the other thirty.[g] 22 The Lord our God said to us, “Look, they are one people, and this is what they have begun to do, and now nothing will be held back from them.
Come, let us go down and confuse their language, so that they will not understand one another’s speech, and they will be scattered into cities and nations, and a single purpose will never again be among them until the day of judgment.” 23 The Lord came down, and we came down with him to see the city and the tower that human beings had built. 24 He confused their language, and they no longer understood one another’s speech, and then they stopped building the city and the tower. 25 For this reason the whole land of Shinar is called Babel, because the Lord confused all the language of humankind there, and from there they were scattered to their cities, each according to his language and his nation. 26 The Lord sent a mighty wind against the tower and threw it down to the earth. It lay between Asshur and Babylon in the land of Shinar, and they called it “Overthrow.”[h] 27 In the first year of the fourth week, at the beginning of the thirty-fourth jubilee, they were scattered from the land of Shinar. 28 Ham and his sons went into the land that he was to occupy, which he had acquired as his portion in the land of the south.[i] 29 Canaan saw that the land of Lebanon as far as the river of Egypt was very good, and he did not go to the land of his inheritance in the west, by the sea, but settled in the land of Lebanon, east and west, from the border of the Jordan and from the border of the sea. 30 His father Ham and his brothers Cush and Mizraim said to him, “You have settled in a land that is not yours, and did not fall to us by lot. Do not do it; for if you do, you and your sons will fall in the land and be cursed through rebellion; for you have settled by rebellion, and by rebellion your children will fall, and you will be rooted out forever. 31 Do not live in the dwelling of Shem, for it came to Shem and his sons by their lot. 32 You are cursed, and you will be cursed beyond all Noah's sons, by the curse by which we bound ourselves with an oath before the holy judge and before Noah our father." 33 But he did not listen to them, and settled in the land of Lebanon from Hamath to the entrance of Egypt, he and his sons, to this day. 34 For this reason that land is called Canaan.[j] 35 Japheth and his sons went toward the sea and settled in the land of their portion. Madai saw the land by the sea and did not like it, and begged a portion from Elam, Asshur, and Arpachshad, his wife's brother, and settled in the land of Media, near his wife's brother, to this day. 36 He named his dwelling and the dwelling of his sons Media, after the name of their father Madai.

Notes

- a (10:1) Verses 1–15 are the other main piece of the "Book of Noah" (see ch. 7). The Hebrew original of verses 1–2 and 9–14 survives among the Dead Sea Scrolls, Charles noted. The "demons" are the spirits of the dead giants, the offspring of the Watchers and women (1 Enoch 15:8–12).
- b (10:8) Mastema means "hostility" or "animosity" (Hebrew mastemah; compare Hos 9:7–8). Here he is the chief of the evil spirits, and in 11:5 and 17:16 he is identified with Satan, the Adversary. In the Dead Sea Scrolls he is called Belial.
- c (10:9) Compare 1 Enoch 15–16, where all the demons are left free until the judgment.
- d (10:10) The angel was Raphael, whose name means "God heals" (Tobit 3:17; 12:14–15).
- e (10:16) 19 × 49 + 2 × 7 + 5 = 950 years. See Gen 9:29.
- f (10:18) Reu: sounds like Hebrew ra', "evil."
- g (10:21) The measurements of Jubilees, converted. A cubit is about 18 inches (45 cm), and a palm 3 inches (7.6 cm), so the 5,433 cubits and 2 palms is about 8,150 feet (2,484 m), a little more than a mile and a half. A stade is about 607 feet (185 m): thirteen stades is about 7,900 feet (2.4 km) and thirty stades about 18,200 feet (5.5 km). The numbers are legendary, and the text seems also confused.
- h (10:26) The tower's name in Jubilees is "Overthrow"; the real name was Babel (Hebrew bavel, a pun on balal, "confuse," in Gen 11:9). Jewish tradition says that seventy nations were created at Babel, each under an angel.
- i (10:28) "South" should read "north," as Charles saw: Ham's true portion was northwest Africa (8:22–24).

- j (10:34) Canaan: the ancient pun is lost, but the book plays on the name as "a land seized by Canaan."

Chapter 11

The Birth of Idolatry and the Family of Abram

1 In the thirty-fifth jubilee, in the first year of the third week, Reu took a wife named Ora, daughter of Ur, son of Kesed, and in the seventh year of this week, in this jubilee, she bore him a son and he named him Serug. 2 The sons of Noah began to fight one another, to take captives and kill one another, to shed human blood on the earth and eat blood, to build strong cities, walls, and towers; individuals began to raise themselves above the nation, to found the first kingdoms, and to go to war, people against people, nation against nation, and city against city. Everyone began to do evil, to acquire weapons, to teach their sons war, to capture cities, and to sell male and female slaves.[a] 3 Ur, son of Kesed, built the city of Ara of the Chaldeans, and named it after himself and his father.[b] 4 They made molten images for themselves, and each worshiped the idol, the molten image he had made. They began to make carved images and unclean likenesses, and malicious spirits helped and led them astray into transgression and uncleanness. 5 Prince Mastema worked hard to do all this, and sent out other spirits, those placed under his hand, to commit every sort of wrong and sin and transgression, to corrupt and destroy, and to shed blood on the earth. 6 For this reason he named Seroh "Serug," because everyone turned to commit every sort of sin and transgression.[c] 7 He grew up and lived in Ur of the Chaldeans, near his wife's mother's father, and worshiped idols. He took a wife in the thirty-sixth jubilee, in the first year of the fifth week, named Melka, daughter of Kabor, his father's brother's daughter. 8 In the first year of that week she bore him Nahor, and he grew up and lived in Ur of the Chaldeans, and his father taught him the studies of the Chaldeans, to practice divination and augury by the signs of heaven. 9 In the thirty-seventh jubilee, in the first year of the sixth week, he took a wife named Iyaska, daughter of Nestag of the Chaldeans. 10 In the seventh year of this week she bore him Terah. 11 Prince Mastema sent ravens and birds to devour the seed that was sown in the land, to destroy the land and rob human beings of their labor. Before they could plow in the seed, the ravens picked it from the surface of the ground. 12 For this reason he named him Terah, because the ravens and the birds brought them to poverty and devoured their seed.[d] 13 The years began to be barren because of the birds, and they ate all the fruit from the trees; only with great effort could they save a little of all the fruit of the earth in their days. 14 In this thirty-ninth jubilee, in the first year of the second week, Terah took a wife named Edna, daughter of Abram, his father's sister. 15 In the seventh year of this week she bore him a son, and he named him Abram, after the name of his mother's father, for he had died before his daughter conceived. 16 The child began to understand the errors of the earth, that everyone had gone astray after carved images and uncleanness. His father taught him writing, and when he was two weeks of years old he separated himself from his father, so that he would not worship idols with him.[e] 17 He began to pray to the Creator of all things to save him from the errors of human beings, and that his portion would not fall into error after uncleanness and vileness. 18 The seedtime came for sowing seed on the land, and they all went out together to protect their seed from the ravens. Abram went with them, and the boy was fourteen years old. 19 A cloud of ravens came to eat the seed, and Abram ran to meet them before they landed on the ground, and cried to them before they landed to eat the seed, and said, "Do not come down; go back to where you came from," and they began to turn back. 20 That day he made the clouds of ravens turn back seventy times, and not one raven stayed anywhere in the land where Abram was. 21 Everyone in the country who was with him saw him shout and watched every raven turn away; his name grew great throughout Chaldea. 22 That year all who wanted to sow came to him, and he went with them until the time of sowing ended. They sowed their land, and that year they brought home enough grain, and ate and were satisfied. 23 In the first year of the fifth week, Abram taught the makers of tools for oxen, the woodworkers, and they made a container above the ground, facing the frame of the plow, to hold the seed, so that the seed fell down from it onto the plowshare and was hidden in the earth, and they no longer feared the ravens.[f] 24 They made containers above the ground in the same way on all the plow frames, and they sowed and tilled all the land as Abram commanded them, and they no longer feared the birds.

Notes

- a (11:2) A note against monarchy: in this account the first kingdoms come from violence.
- b (11:3) "Ur of the Chaldeans" (Gen 11:28) is here read as two persons' names, Ur and Kesed.
- c (11:6) Serug is linked to Hebrew sarar, "turn aside, rebel."
- d (11:12) The Hebrew pun on Terah is uncertain.
- e (11:16) Two weeks of years: fourteen years old; Abram's age is given as in the fourteen-year-old of verse 18. The story of Abram's break with idolatry is the root of much later Jewish legend (compare the Apocalypse of Abraham).
- f (11:23) A seed drill: an improvement on scattering by hand. Rabbinic tradition ascribes the plow to Noah.

Chapter 12

Abram Burns the Idols and Leaves Ur

1 In the seventh year of the sixth week, Abram said to his father Terah, "Father!" He said, "Here I am, my son." 2 He said, "What help and profit do we get from these idols you worship, and bow down to? 3 There is no spirit in them. They are dumb forms, and a deception of the heart. Do not worship them. 4 Worship the God of heaven, who sends the rain and the dew on the earth, and does everything on the earth, and made everything by his word; all life is from before his face.[a] 5 Why do you worship things that have no spirit in them? They are the work of human hands, and you carry them on your shoulders, and you have no help from them; they are a great shame to those who make them, and a deception of the heart to those who worship them. Do not worship them." 6 His father said, "I know it too, my son, but what can I do with a people who have made me serve before them? 7 If I tell them the truth, they will kill me, for they are attached to them, to worship and honor them. Keep quiet, my son, or they will kill you." 8 He said these things to his two brothers, and they were angry with him, and he kept quiet. 9 In the seventh year of the second week of the fortieth jubilee, Abram took a wife named Sarai, the daughter of his father, and she became his wife.[b] 10 Haran, his brother, took a wife in the third year of the third week, and in the seventh year of this week she bore him a son, and he named him Lot. 11 Nahor, his brother, took a wife. 12 In the sixtieth year of Abram's life, in the fourth year of the fourth week, Abram got up by night and burned the house of the idols, and everything in it, and no one knew.[c] 13 They got up in the night and tried to save their gods from the middle of the fire. 14 Haran hurried to save them, but the fire flared over him, and he was burned in the fire and died in Ur of the Chaldeans before his father Terah, and they buried him in Ur of the Chaldeans. 15 Terah left Ur of the Chaldeans, he and his sons, to go to the land of Lebanon and the land of Canaan, and he settled in the land of Haran, and Abram lived with his father Terah in Haran for two weeks of years.[d] 16 In the fifth year of the sixth week, Abram sat up all night on the first day of the seventh month to watch the stars from evening to morning, to see what the year would be like for rain, and he sat alone watching.[e] 17 A thought rose in his heart, and he said, "The signs of the stars, and the paths of the sun and moon, all rest in the Lord's hand. Why am I trying to investigate them? 18 If he wants, he sends rain, morning and evening; if he wants, he holds it back. Everything is in his hand." 19 He prayed that night and said, "My God, God Most High, you alone are my God. I have chosen you and your dominion. You made everything, and everything that exists is the work of your hands. 20 Rescue me from the hands of the evil spirits who have power over the thoughts of human hearts, and do not let them lead me astray from you, my God. Establish me and my descendants forever, so that we do not go astray from now on and forever." 21 He said, "Should I go back to Ur of the Chaldeans, where they are seeking my face to have me return to them, or am I to stay here in this place? Make the right path before you prosper in the hands of your servant, so that he may do it and not walk in the deceitfulness of my heart, my God." 22 He finished speaking and praying, and the word of the Lord was sent to him through me, saying, "Leave your country, your relatives, and your father's house for a land I will show you, and I will make you a great and numerous nation. 23 I will bless you and make your name great, and you will be blessed on the earth, and in you all the families of the earth will be blessed. I will bless those who bless you, and curse those who curse you. 24 I will be a God to you and to your son, and to your son's son, and to all your descendants. Do not be afraid; from now on and for all generations of the earth I am your God." 25 The Lord God said, "Open his mouth and his ears, so that he can hear and speak with his mouth in the language that has been revealed," for it had stopped coming from the mouths of all human beings from the day of the overthrow of Babel.[f] 26 I opened his mouth, his ears, and his lips, and began to speak with him in Hebrew, the language of creation. 27 He took the books of his fathers, which were written in Hebrew, and copied them, and from then on began to study them, and I explained to him what he could not understand, and he studied them through the six rainy months.[g] 28 In the seventh year of the sixth week he spoke to his father and told him he was going to leave Haran to go to the land of Canaan, to see it and return to him. 29 His father Terah said to him, "Go in peace. May the eternal God make your path straight, and may the Lord be with you and protect you from all evil, and give you grace, mercy, and favor before those who see you, and may no human being have power over you to harm you. Go in peace. 30 If you see a land pleasant to your eyes to live in, then get up and take me to you, and take Lot with you, the son of Haran your brother, as your own son. The Lord be with you. 31 Leave your brother Nahor with me until you return in peace, and we will all go with you together."

Notes

- a (12:4) Abram's argument against idols closely follows Ps 115:4–8 and Jer 10:1–16. Its likeness to the Apocalypse of Abraham (chs. 1–8) shows both draw on one older legend.
- b (12:9) Sarai is Abram's half-sister (Gen 20:12). Later rabbis allowed such a marriage to Noah's descendants, but it is forbidden in Lev 18:9; 20:17.
- c (12:12) The sixtieth year of his life is the year of the world 1936 (nineteen centuries and thirty-six years after creation). Abram was born in 1876 (11:15).
- d (12:15) Fourteen years.
- e (12:16) The first day of the seventh month: about September 20 in the 364-day calendar, the beginning of the autumn rain season.

- f (12:25) The “language that has been revealed” is Hebrew, said here to be the original tongue of all humankind, lost at Babel and restored to Abram. See 12:26–27 and 3:28.
- g (12:27) The six rainy months: the winter half-year. Another tradition says that Eber alone kept Hebrew, because he took no part in building the tower.

Chapter 13

Abram in Canaan and Egypt

1 Abram left Haran, taking his wife Sarai and Lot, his brother Haran’s son, to the land of Canaan; he came to Asshur and went on to Shechem and settled near a tall oak.[a] 2 He saw that the land was very pleasant, from the entrance of Hamath to the tall oak. 3 The Lord said to him, “To you and your descendants I will give this land.” 4 He built an altar there and offered a burnt offering on it to the Lord, who had appeared to him. 5 He moved from there to the mountain between Bethel on the west and Ai on the east, and pitched his tent there. 6 He saw that the land was very wide and good, and everything grew on it: vines, figs, pomegranates, oaks, holm oaks, terebinths, olive trees, cedars, cypresses, date palms, and all the trees of the field, and there was water on the mountains. 7 He blessed the Lord, who had led him out of Ur of the Chaldeans and brought him to this land. 8 In the first year of the seventh week, on the first day of the first month, he built an altar on this mountain and called on the name of the Lord: “You, the eternal God, are my God.”[b] 9 He offered a burnt offering on the altar to the Lord, asking that he be with him and not leave him all the days of his life. 10 He moved from there and went south, and came to Hebron (Hebron was built at that time), and lived there for two years, and went from there into the southern land, to Bealoth, and there was a famine in the land.[c] 11 Abram went to Egypt in the third year of the week, and lived in Egypt for five years before his wife was taken from him. 12 Now Tanis in Egypt was built at that time, seven years after Hebron.[d] 13 When Pharaoh took Sarai, Abram’s wife, the Lord struck Pharaoh and his house with great plagues because of Sarai, Abram’s wife. 14 Abram became very rich in flocks, cattle, donkeys, horses, camels, male and female slaves, and in silver and gold in great quantity. Lot, his brother’s son, was also wealthy. 15 Pharaoh returned

Sarai, Abram's wife, and sent Abram away from Egypt. He went back to the spot where he had first set up his tent, the site of the altar, with Ai to the east and Bethel to the west, and he blessed the Lord his God for bringing him back safe. [16] In the third year of the first week of the forty-first jubilee he returned to this place and offered a burnt offering on it, and called on the name of the Lord, and said, "You, the Most High God, are my God forever and ever." [17] In the fourth year of this week Lot parted from him, and Lot settled in Sodom, and the men of Sodom were very great sinners. [18] It grieved him in his heart that his brother's son had left him, for he had no children. [19] In that year when Lot was taken captive, in the fourth year of this week, the Lord said to Abram after Lot had separated from him, "Lift up your eyes from the place where you are staying, north and south, west and east. [20] All the land you see I will give to you and your descendants forever, and I will make your descendants as the sand of the sea. Though a man could count the dust of the earth, your descendants will not be counted. [21] Get up, walk through the land, its length and its breadth, and see it all, for I will give it to your descendants." Abram went to Hebron and lived there. [22] In this year Chedorlaomer, king of Elam, came with Amraphel, king of Shinar, Arioch, king of Sellasar, and Tergal, king of nations, and they killed the king of Gomorrah; the king of Sodom fled, and many fell wounded in the valley of Siddim by the Salt Sea.[e] [23] They took Sodom, Adam, and Zeboim captive, and they took Lot, the son of Abram's brother, captive, with all his possessions, and went to Dan.[f] [24] Someone who had escaped came and told Abram that his brother's son had been captured, and Abram armed his household servants. [25] . . . for Abram and his descendants, a tenth of the first fruits to the Lord, and the Lord ordained it as an ordinance forever, that they should give it to the priests who served before him, and that they should possess it forever.[g] [26] There is no limit of days to this law, for he ordained it for generations forever, that they should give the Lord the tenth of everything: of the seed, the wine, the oil, the cattle, and the sheep. [27] He gave it to his priests to eat and drink with joy before him. [28] The king of Sodom came to him and bowed before him, and said, "Our lord Abram, give us the people you have rescued, but keep the plunder." [29] Abram said to him, "I lift up my hands to the Most High God: from a thread to a sandal strap I will not take anything of yours, so that you cannot say I made Abram rich; except only what the young men have eaten, and the share of the men who went with me, Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre. They will take their share."

Notes

- a (13:1) Asshur: the Ethiopic is corrupt here; Charles read "Canaan." The tall oak is that of Gen 12:6 (Moreh), as read by the Greek version.
- b (13:8) The first day of the first month (about March 22, the new year) of the year 1954 from creation. Abram was seventy-five (Gen 12:4).
- c (13:10) Bealoth: a town in the south of Judah (Josh 15:24).
- d (13:12) Compare Num 13:22. Tanis is Zoan.
- e (13:22) Sellasar is Ellasar. Tergal reads as in the Greek form of Tidal (Gen 14:1). The valley of Siddim is the Dead Sea area.
- f (13:23) Adam is Admah.
- g (13:25) The text has a gap before this verse. The missing lines must have told how Abram pursued the kings and met Melchizedek (Gen 14:15–20). Some Jews were uneasy that Abraham paid tithes to an uncircumcised priest, and one solution was to identify Melchizedek with Shem.

Chapter 14

God's Covenant with Abram, and the Birth of Ishmael

[1] After these things, in the fourth year of this week, on the first day of the third month, the word of the Lord came to Abram in a dream: "Do not be afraid, Abram. I am your protector, and your reward will be very great."[a] [2] He said, "Lord, Lord, what will you give me, since I am going away childless, and the son of Maseq, the son of my female slave, is Eliezer of Damascus; he will be my heir, and to me you have given no offspring." [3] He answered him, "This man will not inherit from you. Your heir will be a child of your own body, and he will be the one who inherits." [4] He brought him outside and said to him, "Look toward heaven and count the stars, if you are able to count them." [5] He looked toward heaven and saw the stars. He said to him, "So will your descendants be." [6] He believed in the Lord, and it was counted to him as righteousness. [7] He said to him, "I am the Lord who brought you out of Ur of the Chaldeans, to give you the land of the Canaanites to possess forever, and I will be God to you and to your descendants after you." [8] He said, "Lord, Lord, how will I know that I will inherit it?" [9] He said to him, "Take me a heifer three years old, a goat three years old, a sheep three years old, a turtledove, and a pigeon." [10] He took all these in the middle of the month, and lived by the oak of Mamre, near Hebron. [11] He built an altar there and sacrificed all of these animals, pouring their blood on the altar. He cut each animal in two and set the halves facing each other, but he left the birds uncut. [12] Birds came down on the pieces, and Abram drove them away and did not let the birds touch them. [13] When the sun had set, a trance fell on Abram, and a horror of great darkness fell on him, and he was told, "Know for certain that your descendants will be foreigners in a land that is not theirs, and they will be made slaves and afflicted for four hundred years.[b] [14] I will judge the nation they serve, and after that they will come out with great wealth. [15] You will go to your fathers in peace, and be buried at a good old age. [16] But in the fourth generation they will return here, for the wrongdoing of the Amorites is not yet complete."[c] [17] He woke from his sleep and got up, and the sun had set, and there was a flame, and a smoking furnace, and a flame of fire passed between the pieces. [18] On that day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, "To your descendants I will give this land, from the river of Egypt to the great river, the river Euphrates: the Kenites, Kenizzites, Kadmonites, Perizzites, Rephaim, Phakorites, Hivites, Amorites, Canaanites, Girgashites, and Jebusites." [19] The day passed, and Abram offered the pieces and the birds, with their grain offerings and drink offerings, and the fire consumed them. [20] On that day we made a covenant with Abram, as we had made a covenant with Noah in this month, and Abram renewed the festival and ordinance for himself forever.[d] [21] Abram rejoiced and told all these things to his wife Sarai, and he believed he would have offspring, but she did not bear. [22] Sarai advised her husband Abram and said to him, "Go in to my Egyptian slave Hagar; perhaps I will build up descendants for you through her." [23] Abram obeyed what his wife Sarai said and told her, "Do it." So Sarai took Hagar, her Egyptian servant, and gave her to her husband Abram as a wife. [24] He went in to her, and she conceived and bore him a son, and he named him Ishmael, in the fifth year of this week; this was the eighty-sixth year of Abram's life.[e]

Notes

- a (14:1) First day of the third month: about May 22. The covenant itself is made on the fifteenth day of the same month (verses 10 and 20), the day of the Feast of Weeks (about June 5).
- b (14:13) Four hundred years: Gen 15:13. Exod 12:40 has 430, and Paul counts 430 from the promise (Gal 3:17). In Jubilees the four hundred years run from the birth of Isaac.
- c (14:16) A generation here is a hundred years.
- d (14:20) On that day: the fifteenth of the third month (see 6:17–22), the Feast of Weeks.
- e (14:24) The year 1965 from creation.

Chapter 15

The Feast of First Fruits, Circumcision, and the Promise of Isaac

1 In the fifth year of the fourth week of this jubilee, in the third month, in the middle of the month, Abram celebrated the feast of the first fruits of the grain harvest.[a] 2 He offered new offerings on the altar, the first fruits of the produce, to the Lord: a heifer, a goat, and a sheep on the altar as a burnt offering to the Lord; he offered their grain offerings and drink offerings on the altar with frankincense. 3 The Lord appeared to Abram and said to him, "I am God Almighty; show yourself faithful before me and be perfect. 4 I will make my covenant between me and you, and I will multiply you greatly." 5 Abram fell on his face, and God talked with him and said, 6 "See, my ordinance is with you, and you will be the father of many nations. 7 You will no longer be called Abram, but from now on your name, forever, will be Abraham, for I have made you the father of many nations.[b] 8 I will make you very great, and make you into nations, and kings will come out of you. 9 I will establish my covenant between me and you, and your descendants after you, through their generations, as an eternal covenant, so that I may be God to you and to your descendants after you. 10 I will give you and your descendants after you the land where you have been a stranger, the land of Canaan, to possess forever, and I will be their God." 11 The Lord said to Abraham, "As for you, keep my covenant, you and your descendants after you. Circumcise every male among you, circumcise your foreskins, and it will be the sign of an eternal covenant between me and you. 12 You will circumcise the child on the eighth day, every male through your generations, whether born in the house or bought with money from any foreigner, anyone you have acquired who is not of your descendants.[c] 13 The one born in your house will certainly be circumcised, and those you buy with money will be circumcised, and my covenant will be in your flesh as an eternal ordinance. 14 The uncircumcised male who is not circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin on the eighth day will be cut off from his people, for he has broken my covenant." 15 God said to Abraham, "As for your wife Sarai, her name will no longer be called Sarai; Sarah will be her name.[d] 16 I will bless her, and give you a son by her, and I will bless him, and he will become a nation, and kings of nations will come from him." 17 Abraham fell facedown and rejoiced. He thought to himself, "Can a man who is a hundred years old have a son, and can Sarah, at ninety years old, give birth?" 18 Abraham said to God, "If only Ishmael might live before you!" 19 God said, "Yes, and Sarah also will bear you a son, and you will name him Isaac, and I will establish my covenant with him, an everlasting covenant, and with his descendants after him.[e] 20 As for Ishmael also, I have heard you, and I will bless him and make him great and multiply him greatly, and he will father twelve princes, and I will make him a great nation. 21 But I will establish my covenant with Isaac, whom Sarah will bear you, in these days, in the next year." 22 He stopped speaking with him, and God went up from Abraham. 23 Abraham did what God had told him. He took his son Ishmael, all who had been born in his household, and all he had purchased, every male of his house, and circumcised the flesh of their foreskins. 24 On that very day Abraham was circumcised, and all the men of his house, those born in the house and all those he had bought with money from foreigners were circumcised with him. 25 This law is for all generations forever, and there is no postponing the circumcision, and no skipping one day out of the eight; for it is an eternal ordinance, ordained and written on the heavenly tablets. 26 Every male who is born and whose foreskin is not circumcised on the eighth day does not belong to the children of the covenant that the Lord made with Abraham, but to the children of destruction; nor is there any mark on him that he is the Lord's; he is destined to be destroyed and killed from the earth, and rooted out of the earth, for he has broken the covenant of the Lord our God. 27 All the angels of the presence and all the angels of holiness have been made like this since the day they were created, and in front of them he consecrated Israel, so that Israel would be with him and with his holy angels.[f] 28 Tell the Israelites to keep the sign of this covenant in every generation as a perpetual law, and they will never be uprooted from the land. 29 For the command is ordained as a covenant, to be kept forever among all the Israelites. 30 The Lord did not bring Ishmael, his sons, his brothers, and Esau near to himself, and he did not choose them, though they are Abraham's children, because he knew them; but he chose Israel to be his people. 31 He made them holy and gathered them from all of humankind; for there are many nations and many peoples, and all are his, and over all he has placed spirits in authority to lead them astray from him.[g] 32 Over Israel, though, he set no angel and no spirit as ruler, because he alone governs them. He himself will guard them and call them to account at the hands of his angels, his spirits, and all his hosts, so that he keeps them and blesses them, and so that they belong to him and he to them, now and always. 33 I now tell you that the Israelites will prove unfaithful to this law. They will not circumcise their sons in keeping with all this law; they will leave out circumcision of the flesh for their sons, and all of them, sons of Beliar, will leave their sons uncircumcised, just as they were born.[h] 34 There will be great wrath from the Lord against the Israelites, because they have abandoned his covenant, turned aside from his word, provoked and blasphemed, since they do not keep the ordinance of this law; for they have treated their members like the nations, so that they will be removed and rooted out of the land. There will be no more pardon or forgiveness for them, for all the sin of this eternal error.

Notes

- a (15:1) The “fourth” week should read “third” (Charles). The middle of the third month is the fifteenth, the Feast of Weeks (about June 5). The Pharisees counted the feast differently, on the sixth of Sivan.
- b (15:7) Abraham: understood as “father of a multitude.”
- c (15:12) Jubilees insists on the eighth day, as in the Greek and Samaritan texts of Gen 17:14.
- d (15:15) Sarah: “princess.”
- e (15:19) Isaac: “he laughs.”
- f (15:27) The two highest ranks of angels share with Israel the keeping of the sabbath (2:18–21) and, here, circumcision; they were “created circumcised.”
- g (15:31) Compare Deut 32:8–9 in the Greek version, where the nations are assigned to “angels of God.” Seventy nations were put under seventy angels, but Israel under none (verse 32); compare Dan 10:13, 20–21, where Michael is Israel’s prince.
- h (15:33) Beliar: another form of Belial, “worthless”; here a name of the chief evil spirit. The author seems to be writing in a time when many Jews abandoned circumcision (the age of Antiochus Epiphanes, c. 170 BC).

Chapter 16

The Promise Renewed, Sodom Destroyed, and Isaac Born

1 On the first day of the fourth month we appeared to Abraham at the oak of Mamre and talked with him, and told him that a son would be given him by his wife Sarah.[a] 2 Sarah laughed, for she heard that we had said these words to Abraham, and we warned her, and she became afraid and denied that she had laughed at the words. 3 We named her son for her, as his name stands decreed and written on the heavenly tablets: Isaac. 4 We also said that when we came back to her at the appointed time, she would be carrying a son. 5 In this month the Lord carried out his judgments on Sodom, Gomorrah, Zeboim, and the whole region of the Jordan, and burned them with fire and sulfur and destroyed them to this day, as I have told you all their deeds: that they are exceedingly wicked and sinful, and defile themselves and commit fornication in their flesh, and work uncleanness on the earth.
6 In the same way God will execute judgment on the places where they do the same uncleanness as the Sodomites, like the judgment of Sodom. 7 But we saved Lot, for God remembered Abraham and sent him out from the middle of the overthrow. 8 He and his daughters committed a sin on the earth such as had not been on the earth from the days of Adam until his time; for the man lay with his daughters. [9] It was commanded and engraved on the heavenly tablets concerning all his descendants to remove them and root them out, and to execute judgment on them like the judgment of Sodom, and to leave no descendant of the man on earth on the day of condemnation.[b] [10] In this month Abraham moved from Hebron, and went and lived between Kadesh and Shur, in the mountains of Gerar. [11] In the middle of the fifth month he moved from there and lived at the Well of the Oath.[c] [12] In the middle of the sixth month the Lord visited Sarah and did to her as he had said, and she conceived. [13] She bore a son in the third month, in the middle of the month, at the time the Lord had told Abraham, on the festival of the first fruits of the harvest, and Isaac was born.[d] [14] Abraham circumcised his son on the eighth day. He was the first to be circumcised according to the covenant ordained forever. [15] In the sixth year of the fourth week we came to Abraham at the Well of the Oath, and appeared to him. [16] We blessed him and told him everything that had been decreed about him: that he would not die until he fathered six more sons and saw them before he died, but that his name and descendants would be called in Isaac.[e] [17] All the descendants of his other sons would be Gentiles and be counted with the Gentiles; but from the sons of Isaac one would become a holy line, and would not be counted among the Gentiles. [18] For he would become the portion of the Most High, and all his descendants would fall into God's possession, to be a people for the Lord's own possession above all nations, a kingdom, priests, and a holy nation.[f] [19] We went on our way and told Sarah all that we had told him, and they both rejoiced with very great joy. [20] He built an altar there to the Lord, who had rescued him and made him rejoice in the land where he stayed as a stranger, and he celebrated a festival of joy in this month for seven days, near the altar he had built at the Well of the Oath.[g] [21] He built booths for himself and his servants for this festival, and he was the first to celebrate the Feast of Tabernacles on earth. [22] During these seven days he brought a burnt offering to the altar each day for the Lord: two oxen, two rams, seven sheep, and one male goat as a sin offering, to make atonement for himself and his descendants. [23] And as a thank offering: seven rams, seven kids, seven sheep, and seven male goats, with their grain offerings and drink offerings; he burned all their fat on the altar, a chosen offering to the Lord for a pleasing fragrance. 24 Morning and evening he burned fragrant substances: frankincense, galbanum, stacte, nard, myrrh, spice, and costum. He offered all seven, ground and mixed together in equal parts, pure. 25 He kept this feast for seven days, rejoicing with all his heart and soul, he and all those in his house; there was no foreigner with him, and no one uncircumcised. 26 He blessed his Creator, who had made him in his generation, for he had made him according to his good pleasure; for he knew and saw that from him would rise the plant of righteousness for the eternal generations, and a holy line from him, so that it would become like him who made all things.[h] 27 He blessed and rejoiced, and called this festival the festival of the Lord, a joy acceptable to the Most High God. 28 We blessed him without end, and all the offspring who would come after him, in every generation of the earth, since he had kept this feast in its proper season, as the heavenly tablets testify. 29 For this reason it is ordained on the heavenly tablets concerning Israel that they celebrate the Feast of Tabernacles for seven days with joy, in the seventh month, acceptable before the Lord: a statute forever through their generations, every year.[i] 30 To this there is no limit of days; it is ordained forever for Israel that they celebrate it, live in booths, put wreaths on their heads, and take leafy branches and willows from the brook. 31 Abraham took palm branches and the fruit of fine trees, and every day he went around the altar with the branches seven times in the morning, and praised and thanked his God for everything with joy.[j]

Notes

- a (16:1) First day of the fourth month: about June 21. Compare Gen 18.
- b (16:9) The descendants of Lot are Moab and Ammon (Gen 19:37–38).
- c (16:11) The Well of the Oath is Beersheba (Gen 21:31). The middle of the fifth month is about August 5.
- d (16:13) In the middle of the third month, the Feast of Weeks (about June 5), in the year 1987 from creation. Charles and others noted that the sixth month is actually meant, so the pregnancy is nine months.

- e (16:16) Charles saw bracketed words here as a later insertion. The six sons are by Keturah (Gen 25:2).
- f (16:18) Compare Exod 19:5–6. The Hebrew text has "a kingdom of priests"; Jubilees has a form closer to Rev 1:6; 5:10.
- g (16:20) Verses 20–31 describe the origin of the Feast of Tabernacles, with several features of its own.
- h (16:26) The plant of righteousness: compare 1 Enoch 10:16; 93:5, 10.
- i (16:29) Seventh month: the fifteenth day is about October 4. Compare Lev 23:34–43.
- j (16:31) In later Jewish practice, the seven circuits of the altar were made only on the seventh day.

Chapter 17

Hagar and Ishmael Sent Away, and Mastema's Challenge

1 In the first year of the fifth week, in this jubilee, Isaac was weaned, and Abraham gave a great banquet in the third month, on the day his son Isaac was weaned.[a] 2 Ishmael, the son of Hagar the Egyptian, stood in front of his father Abraham in his place. Abraham was glad and blessed God, since he had lived to see his sons and had not died without children. 3 He remembered the words God had spoken to him on the day Lot left him, and he rejoiced because the Lord had given him descendants on the earth to inherit the earth, and he blessed the Creator of all things with his whole mouth. 4 Sarah watched Ishmael play and dance, and Abraham delighted in him. She grew jealous and said to Abraham, "Drive out this slave girl and her son. The slave girl's son will never share the inheritance with my son Isaac."[b] 5 This was hard for Abraham, because of his female slave and because of his son, that he should send them away from him. 6 God said to Abraham, "Do not let it be hard for you because of the boy and the slave woman. In everything Sarah has said to you, listen to her words and do them, for in Isaac your name and descendants will be called. 7 But as for the son of this slave woman, I will make him a great nation, because he is of your descendants." 8 Abraham got up early in the morning and took bread and a skin of water, put them on the shoulders of Hagar and the boy, and sent her away. 9 She left and wandered in the desert of Beersheba, and the water in the skin ran out, and the boy was thirsty and could not go on, and he fell down. 10 His mother took him and threw him under an olive tree, and went and sat down opposite him, a bowshot away, for she said, "Let me not see my child die," and as she sat she wept. 11 An angel of God, one of the holy ones, said to her, "Why are you weeping, Hagar? Get up, take the boy and hold him by the hand, for God has heard your voice and seen the boy." 12 She opened her eyes, and saw a well of water, and went and filled her skin with water and gave her child a drink; she got up and went toward the desert of Paran. 13 The boy grew and became an archer, and God was with him. His mother took him a wife from the daughters of Egypt. 14 She bore him a son, and he named him Nebaioth, for she said, "The Lord was near me when I called on him."[c] 15 In the seventh week, in its first year, in the first month of this jubilee, on the twelfth of the month, there were voices in heaven about Abraham, that he was faithful in all that God told him, that he loved the Lord, and that in every affliction he was faithful.[d] 16 Prince Mastema came and said before God, "See, Abraham loves his son Isaac and delights in him above all else; tell him to offer him as a burnt offering on the altar, and you will see whether he will do this, and you will know if he is faithful in everything you test him with."[e] 17 The Lord knew that Abraham was faithful in all his afflictions, for he had tested him by his country, and with famine, and with the wealth of kings, and again through his wife, when she was taken from him, and with circumcision, and through Ishmael and Hagar his slave when he sent them away.[f] 18 In every trial he was found trustworthy. He did not grow impatient or hesitate to act, because he was loyal and loved the Lord.

Notes

- a (17:1) Isaac was weaned about the year 1989 from creation. The text says "fifth"; Charles read "fourth."
- b (17:4) Playing and dancing: the Greek and Latin of Gen 21:9 have "playing with her son Isaac." The word "dancing" in Jubilees may be a copyist's change.
- c (17:14) Nebaioth was Ishmael's eldest son (Gen 25:13). The explanation of the name here is not found in Genesis.
- d (17:15) The twelfth of the first month is about April 2, in the year 2003 from creation. By the book's own count, Isaac is twenty-three at the time (the Seder Olam rabbah says thirty-seven).
- e (17:16) In Genesis God himself tests Abraham (Gen 22:1); here it is Mastema's suggestion, as in Job 1–2.

- f (17:17) Seven of Abraham's ten traditional trials are named here. The others are Sarah's barrenness, the offering of Isaac, and the burial of Sarah; other lists differ slightly.

Chapter 18

The Offering of Isaac

1 God said to him, "Abraham, Abraham!" He said, "Here I am." 2 He said, "Take your beloved son Isaac, whom you love, and travel to the highlands. Offer him there on one of the mountains that I will show you." 3 He got up early in the morning and saddled his donkey, and took two young men with him, and his son Isaac, and split the wood for the burnt offering, and went to the place on the third day, and saw the place from far away. 4 He came to a well of water, and said to his young men, "Stay here with the donkey, and I and the boy will go over there, and when we have worshiped we will come back to you." 5 He took the wood of the burnt offering and laid it on his son Isaac, and took in his hand the fire and the knife, and the two of them went together to that place. 6 Isaac said to his father, "Father," and he said, "Here I am, my son." He said to him, "Here are the fire, the knife, and the wood; but where is the sheep for the burnt offering, father?" 7 He said, "God will provide a sheep for himself for a burnt offering, my son." He came near to the place on the mount of God. 8 He built an altar and set the wood on it, and tied up his son Isaac and laid him on the wood on the altar, and stretched out his hand to take the knife to kill his son Isaac. 9 I stood before him, and before the prince Mastema, and the Lord said, "Tell him not to lay his hand on the boy or do anything to him, for I have shown that he fears the Lord."[a] 10 I called to him from heaven and said to him, "Abraham, Abraham!" and he was terrified and said, "Here I am." 11 I said to him, "Do not lay your hand on the boy and do not do anything to him, for now I have shown that you fear the Lord, and have not held back your son, your firstborn son, from me." 12 Prince Mastema was put to shame, and Abraham lifted his eyes and looked, and there was a single ram caught . . . by its horns, and Abraham went and took the ram and offered it as a burnt offering in place of his son.[b] 13 Abraham called that place "The Lord has seen," so that it is said, "On the mountain the Lord has seen"; that is Mount Zion.[c] 14 The Lord called Abraham by his name a second time from heaven, as he made us appear to speak to him in the name of the Lord. 15 He said, "I have sworn by my own name, says the Lord: because you have done this and did not spare your son, your beloved son, I will surely bless you. I will make your descendants as many as the stars in the sky and the sand on the seashore. Your descendants will take over the cities of their enemies, 16 and in your descendants all the nations of the earth will be blessed, because you have obeyed my voice, and I have shown everyone that you are faithful to me in all I have said to you. Go in peace." 17 Abraham returned to his young men, and together they set out for Beersheba, and Abraham settled by the Well of the Oath. 18 He celebrated this festival every year, seven days with joy, and called it the festival of the Lord, after the seven days during which he went and returned in peace.[d] 19 So it has been ordained and written on the heavenly tablets concerning Israel and its descendants that they keep this festival seven days with festival joy.

Notes

- a (18:9) The speaker is the angel of the presence, who is narrating to Moses. "Mastema" here is probably a class name for evil spirits, and not only their prince. Compare 10:8.
- b (18:12) The text has a gap; Gen 22:13 adds "in a thicket."
- c (18:13) Mount Zion is identified with the mountain of Moriah, as in 2 Chron 3:1.
- d (18:18) The seven days: the Feast of Passover and Unleavened Bread (the fifteenth to the twenty-first of the first month, about April 5–11). Jubilees places Isaac's offering on the twelfth of the first month (17:15) and connects the seven days to the Passover season.

Chapter 19

Sarah's Death, Rebecca, and Abraham's Blessing of Jacob

1 In the first year of the first week of the forty-second jubilee, Abraham returned and lived opposite Hebron, that is, Kiriath Arba, for two weeks of years. 2 In the first year of the second week of this jubilee, the days of Sarah's life were completed, and she died in Hebron.[a] 3 Abraham went to grieve for her and bury her, and we put him to the test, to see whether his spirit was steady and whether he would hold his tongue. He proved steady in this and was not shaken. 4 For in patience of spirit he spoke with the Hittites, so that they would give him a place to bury his dead. 5 The Lord gave him favor before all who saw him, and he asked the Hittites gently, and they gave him the land of the double cave opposite Mamre, that is, Hebron, for four hundred pieces of silver.[b] 6 They begged him, saying, "We will give it to you for nothing," but he would not take it from their hands for nothing, for he paid the price of the place, the money in full, and he bowed to them twice; after this he buried his dead in the double cave.

7 All the days of Sarah's life were a hundred and twenty-seven years, that is, two jubilees, four weeks, and one year. These are the days of Sarah's life. 8 This is the tenth trial with which Abraham was tested, and he was found faithful and patient in spirit.[c] 9 He said nothing at all about the rumor in the land that God had promised it to him and his descendants. He begged for a burial place there for his dead. He was found faithful and was written on the heavenly tablets as God's friend.[d] 10 In the fourth year of this week he took a wife for his son Isaac, named Rebecca, the sister of Laban and daughter of Bethuel; Bethuel was the son of Melca, who was the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother. 11 Abraham took a third wife, named Keturah, from among the daughters of his household servants, for Hagar had died before Sarah.[e] 12 She bore him six sons: Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbak, and Shuah, in the two weeks of years. 13 In the second year of the sixth week, Rebecca bore Isaac two sons, Jacob and Esau.
Jacob was a smooth and upright man, and Esau was fierce, a man of the field, and hairy, and Jacob lived in tents. 14 The boys grew up.
Jacob learned to write; Esau did not, for he was an outdoorsman and a hunter. He learned warfare, and everything he did was savage.[f] 15
Abraham loved Jacob, but Isaac loved Esau. 16 Abraham saw Esau's deeds, and knew that his name and descendants would be called in Jacob. He called Rebecca and gave her instructions about Jacob, for he knew that she also loved Jacob much more than Esau. 17 He said to her, "My daughter, watch over my son Jacob, for he will be in my place on the earth, a blessing among human beings and the glory of all the descendants of Shem. 18 For I know that the Lord will choose him to be a people for his own possession above all peoples on the face of the earth. [19] See, my son Isaac loves Esau more than Jacob, but I see that you truly love Jacob. [20] Add still more to your kindness to him, and let your eyes be on him in love, for he will be a blessing to us on the earth from now on through all generations of the earth. [21] May your hands be strong and your heart be glad in your son Jacob, whom I love far more than all my other sons. He will be blessed forever, and his offspring will fill the entire earth. [22] If a man can count the sand of the earth, his descendants also will be counted. [23] All the blessings with which the Lord has blessed me and my descendants will belong to Jacob and his descendants always. [24] In his descendants my name will be blessed, and the name of my fathers, Shem, Noah, Enoch, Mahalalel, Enos, Seth, and Adam.[g] [25] These will serve to lay the foundations of heaven, to strengthen the earth, and to renew all the lights in the sky." [26] He called Jacob before the eyes of his mother Rebecca, and kissed him and blessed him, and said, [27] "Jacob, my beloved son, whom my soul loves, may God bless you from above the firmament, and give you all the blessings with which he blessed Adam, Enoch, Noah, and Shem; and all the things he told me and all he promised to give me, may he make them stay with you and your descendants forever, as long as the days of heaven above the earth. [28] May the spirits of Mastema not rule over you or your descendants to turn you from the Lord, who is your God from now on forever. [29] May the Lord God be a father to you, and you the firstborn son, and to the people always. Go in peace, my son." [30] They both went out together from Abraham. [31] Rebecca loved Jacob with all her heart and all her soul, much more than Esau, but Isaac loved Esau much more than Jacob.

Notes

- a (19:2) The text says "third"; Charles read "second."
- b (19:5) The double cave is Machpelah (Gen 23).
- c (19:8) Compare 17:17 and the note there.
- d (19:9) "Friend of God": compare Isa 41:8 and Jas 2:23.
- e (19:11) This explains why Abraham did not take Hagar back. A later tradition identifies Hagar and Keturah.

- f (19:14) In the Aramaic Targums, the "tents" are schools. Jacob is portrayed throughout as a lifelong student of the law.
- g (19:24) Methuselah is left out of the list, and Adam is counted among the holy ancestors.

Chapter 20

Abraham's Last Instructions

1 In the first year of the sixth week of the forty-second jubilee, Abraham called Ishmael and his twelve sons, Isaac and his two sons, and the six sons of Keturah and their sons.[a] 2 He commanded them to keep the way of the Lord, to practice righteousness, to love their neighbors, and to act this way among all people; each of them was to walk so as to do justice and righteousness on the earth. 3 They were to circumcise their sons, according to the covenant he had made with them, and not turn to the right or left from any of the paths the Lord had commanded us; and we were to keep ourselves from all fornication and uncleanness.[b] 4 If any woman or girl commits fornication among you, burn her with fire, and do not let them commit fornication with her in their eyes and hearts; and do not let them take wives from the daughters of Canaan, for the descendants of Canaan will be rooted out of the land.[c] 5 He spoke to them about the judgment on the giants and on the people of Sodom, how they were condemned for their wickedness and died for their sexual immorality, impurity, and corrupting one another. 6 "Guard yourselves from all fornication and uncleanness and every pollution of sin, or you will make our name a curse and your whole life a laughingstock, and all your sons will be destroyed by the sword, and you will become cursed like Sodom and all your remnant like the sons of Gomorrah. 7 I beg you, my sons: love the God of heaven and hold on to all his commandments. Do not walk after their idols and their uncleanness. 8 Do not make molten or carved gods for yourselves, for they are empty, and there is no spirit in them; they are the work of human hands, and all who trust in them trust in nothing. Do not serve them or worship them. 9 Serve the Most High God and worship him continually; hope always for his face, and practice uprightness and righteousness before him, so that he will take pleasure in you and give you his mercy, and send you rain morning and evening, and bless all the work you do on the earth, and bless your bread and your water, the fruit of your womb and the fruit of your land, the herds of your cattle and the flocks of your sheep. 10 You will be a blessing on the earth, and all the nations of the earth will desire you and bless their sons in my name, so that they may be blessed as I am." 11 He gave gifts to Ishmael and his sons, and to the sons of Keturah, and sent them away from his son Isaac, and he gave everything to his son Isaac. 12 Ishmael and his sons, and the sons of Keturah and their sons, went together and settled from Paran to the entrance of Babylon, in all the land east of there facing the desert. 13 They mingled with each other, and their name was called Arabs and Ishmaelites.

Notes

- a (20:1) The text says "seventh"; Charles read "sixth."
- b (20:3) Circumcision is binding also on the descendants of Ishmael and Keturah; Esau's line is left out.
- c (20:4) The law of Moses prescribes burning only for a priest's daughter (Lev 21:9); in other cases, stoning.

Chapter 21

Abraham's Last Words to Isaac

1 In the sixth year of the seventh week of this jubilee, Abraham called his son Isaac and commanded him, saying, "I have become old and do not know the day of my death; I am full of my days.[a] 2 I am a hundred and seventy-five years old, and all the days of my life I have remembered the Lord, and have sought with all my heart to do his will and to walk uprightly in all his ways. 3 My soul has hated idols, and I have despised those who served them, and I have given my heart and spirit to observe the will of him who made me. 4 For he is the living God, holy and faithful, and he is righteous beyond all, and with him there is no favoritism and no accepting of gifts, for God is righteous and executes judgment on all who transgress his commandments and despise his covenant. 5 You, my son, keep his commandments, ordinances, and judgments, and do not walk after the abominations, the carved images, and the molten images. 6 Do not eat any blood of animals or livestock, or of any bird that flies in the sky. 7 When you slaughter an animal as an acceptable peace offering, do so and pour its blood over the altar. Burn all the offering's fat on the altar together with fine flour, the grain offering mixed with oil, and its drink offering, all of it on the burnt-offering altar. It is a fragrance pleasing to the Lord. 8 You will offer the fat of the thank offering on the fire that is on the altar: the fat on the belly, all the fat on the inner parts, and the two kidneys and all the fat on them, and on the loins; and you will remove the liver along with the kidneys.

9 Offer all these as a pleasing fragrance, acceptable before the Lord, with its grain offering and drink offering, the bread of the offering to the Lord. 10 Eat the meat that day and the next, but before the sun sets on the second day it must be eaten. Leave nothing for the third day, because then it is unacceptable and may not be eaten anymore, and whoever eats it will load sin on himself. This is what I found written in my ancestors' books, in Enoch's words, and in Noah's.[b] 11
On all offerings you will sprinkle salt, and do not let the salt of the covenant be missing from any of your offerings before the Lord. 12 As for the wood of the sacrifices, be careful not to bring any other wood to the altar except these: cypress, dafran, sagad, pine, fir, cedar, savin, palm, olive, myrtle, laurel, citron, juniper, and balsam.[c] 13 From these woods, put on the altar beneath the sacrifice only pieces that have been checked for appearance. Do not lay cracked or dark wood on it, but hard, clean, flawless, sound wood from fresh growth. Do not lay old wood there, since its scent is gone; it no longer smells as it once did. 14 Besides these woods there is no other that you may place on the altar, for the fragrance is dispersed, and the smell of its fragrance does not go up to heaven. 15 Keep this commandment and do it, my son, so that you may be upright in all your deeds. 16 At all times be clean in your body, and wash yourself with water before you approach to offer on the altar, and wash your hands and feet before you come near the altar; when you are done sacrificing, wash your hands and feet again.
17 Let no blood appear on you or on your clothes. Guard yourself, my son, against blood, be very careful; cover it with dust. 18 Do not eat any blood, for it is the soul; eat no blood at all. 19 Take no gifts for human blood, or it will be shed with impunity, without judgment;

for it is shed blood that makes the earth sin, and the earth cannot be cleansed from human blood except by the blood of the one who shed it. [20] Take no present or gift for human blood: blood for blood, so that you may be accepted before the Lord, the Most High God; for he is the defense of the good; so that you may be kept from all evil, and he may save you from every kind of death. [21] I see, my son, that all the works of human beings are sin and wickedness, and all their deeds are uncleanness, an abomination, and a pollution, and there is no righteousness in them. [22] Take care not to walk in their ways and tread their paths, and not to commit a sin unto death before the Most High God, or he will hide his face from you and give you back into the hands of your transgression, and root you out of the land, and your descendants likewise from under heaven, and your name and your descendants will vanish from the whole earth. [23] Turn away from all their deeds and all their uncleanness, and keep the ordinance of the Most High God, and do his will and be upright in all things. [24] He will bless you in all your deeds, and will raise up from you the plant of righteousness through all the earth, throughout all generations of the earth, and my name and your name will not be forgotten under heaven forever. [25] Go, my son, in peace. May the Most High God, my God and yours, strengthen you to do his will, and may he bless all your descendants and the rest of your descendants through the generations forever, with all righteous blessings, so that you may be a blessing on all the earth." [26] He went out from him rejoicing.

Notes

- a (21:1) The text says "seventh"; Charles read "sixth." These words are Isaac's in Gen 27:2. The rest of the chapter gives Abraham's directions to Isaac on sacrifice, a parallel to Testament of Levi 9, where Isaac teaches Levi.
- b (21:10) These rules about the sacrificial meat are not found in the surviving writings of Enoch or Noah.
- c (21:12) Fourteen kinds of wood. The Mishnah allows any wood except olive and vine. Dafran and sagad are unknown trees; the Ethiopic words are transcribed.

Chapter 22

Abraham's Last Feast, Prayer, and Blessing of Jacob

1 In the first week of the forty-second jubilee, in the sixth year, the year Abraham died, Isaac and Ishmael came from the Well of the Oath to celebrate the Feast of Weeks, the harvest feast of first fruits, with their father Abraham. Abraham was glad that both his sons had come.[a] 2 Isaac had many possessions in Beersheba, and he used to go and see his possessions and return to his father. 3 At that time Ishmael came to visit his father. The two came together, and Isaac presented a burnt offering on his father's altar, the one Abraham had built in Hebron. 4 He offered a thank offering and made a feast of joy before his brother Ishmael, and Rebecca made new cakes from the new grain and gave them to her son Jacob to take to his father Abraham, from the first fruits of the land, so that he could eat and bless the Creator of all things before he died. 5 Isaac also sent by Jacob's hand to Abraham a fine thank offering, so that he could eat and drink. 6 He ate and drank, and blessed the Most High God, who made heaven and earth, who made all the rich things of the earth and gave them to human beings, so that they could eat and drink and bless their Creator. 7 "Now I give thanks to you, my God, because you have let me see this day. Look, I am a hundred and seventy-five years old, an old man and full of days, and all my days have been peace to me. 8 The sword of the enemy has not overcome me in anything you gave me and my children all the days of my life to this day. 9
My God, may your mercy and your peace be on your servant and on the descendants of his sons, so that they may be a chosen nation and an inheritance for you from among all the nations of the earth from now on through all the days of the generations of the earth, through all the ages." 10 He called Jacob and said, "My son Jacob, may the God of all bless you and strengthen you to do righteousness and his will before him, and may he choose you and your descendants to be a people for his inheritance according to his will always. Come near, my son Jacob, and kiss me." 11 He came near and kissed him, and Abraham said, "Blessed be my son Jacob and all the sons of God Most High, through all the ages. May God give you a righteous line, and may he make some of your sons holy in the middle of the whole earth. May nations serve you, and all the nations bow down to your descendants.[b] 12 Be strong in the presence of people, and rule over all the descendants of Seth. Then your ways and your sons' ways will be justified, so that they become a holy nation.[c] 13 May the Most High God give you all the blessings with which he blessed me and with which he blessed Noah and Adam; may they rest on the holy head of your descendants from generation to generation forever. 14 May he cleanse you from all unrighteousness and impurity, so that you may be forgiven all your transgressions and your sins of ignorance.

May he strengthen you and bless you, and may you inherit the whole earth. 15 May he renew his covenant with you, so that you may be a nation for his inheritance for all the ages, and so that he may be to you and your descendants a God in truth and righteousness through all the days of the earth. 16 You, my son Jacob, remember my words and keep the commandments of Abraham your father: separate yourself from the nations, do not eat with them, do not act as they do, and do not become their partner, for their works are unclean, and all their ways are a pollution, an abomination, and uncleanness.[d] 17 They offer sacrifices to the dead and worship evil spirits, and eat over the graves, and all their works are vanity and nothingness. 18 They lack the mind to understand, and their eyes cannot see their own deeds or how they go astray, telling a block of wood, 'You are my God,' and a stone, 'You are my Lord, you save me.' 19 As for you, my son Jacob, may the Most High God help you, and the God of heaven bless you and remove you from their uncleanness and all their error. 20 Be careful, my son Jacob, not to take a wife from any of the daughters of Canaan, for all his descendants are to be rooted out of the earth. 21 For, because of the transgression of Ham, Canaan erred, and all his descendants will be destroyed from the earth with all the rest of them, and none who come from him will be saved on the day of judgment. 22 And all the worshipers of idols and the profane will have no hope in the land of the living; there will be no remembrance of them on the earth, for they will go down to Sheol and into the place of condemnation. As the children of Sodom were taken from the earth, so all who worship idols will be taken away. 23 Do not be afraid, my son Jacob, and do not be dismayed, son of Abraham. May the Most High God keep you from destruction, and deliver you from all the paths of error. 24 I built this house for myself, to put my name on it on the earth; it is given to you and your descendants forever, and it will be named the house of Abraham; it is given to you and your descendants forever; for you will build my house and establish my name before God forever; your descendants and your name will stand through all generations of the earth."[e] 25 He stopped commanding him and blessing him. 26 The two of them lay down together in one bed. Jacob slept against the chest of his grandfather Abraham, who kissed him seven times, his heart and his love glad over the boy. 27 He blessed him with all his heart and said, "The Most High God, the God of all, Creator of all, who brought me out of Ur of the Chaldeans to give me this land to inherit forever, and so that I might establish a holy line: blessed be the Most High forever." 28 He blessed Jacob and said, "My son, over whom I rejoice with all my heart and love, may your grace and mercy be lifted up on him and on his descendants always. 29 Do not abandon him or treat him as nothing from now on to the days of eternity, and may your eyes be opened on him and on his descendants, so that you will protect him, and bless him, and make him holy as a nation for your inheritance. 30 Bless him with all your blessings from now to all the days of eternity, and renew your covenant and your grace with him and with his descendants according to all your good pleasure through all the generations of the earth."

Notes

- a (22:1) The text reads "forty-fourth jubilee … second year"; Charles read "forty-second … sixth." Abraham died in 2109 from creation, at 175 (see 23:8). Feast of Weeks: the fifteenth of the third month, about June 5.
- b (22:11) Compare Gen 27:29.
- c (22:12) All the descendants of Seth: all humankind.
- d (22:16) "Do not eat with them" was a key question in the time of the Maccabees (1 Macc 1:62–63; Dan 1:8).
- e (22:24) "House" here means "family."

Chapter 23

Abraham's Death, Shorter Lives, and the Last Days

1 He placed two of Jacob's fingers on his eyes, and blessed the God of gods, and covered his face, stretched out his feet, slept the sleep of eternity, and was gathered to his fathers. 2 In spite of all this, Jacob lay in his bosom and did not know that his father's father Abraham was dead. 3 Jacob woke from his sleep and found Abraham cold as ice, and said, "Father, father!" but no one answered, and he knew that he was dead. 4 He got up from his bosom and ran and told his mother Rebecca. Rebecca went to Isaac in the night and told him, and they went together, with Jacob, and a lamp in his hand, and when they went in they found Abraham lying dead. 5 Isaac fell on his father's face and wept and kissed him. 6 The voices were heard in Abraham's house, and his son Ishmael got up and went to his father Abraham and wept over him, he and the whole house of Abraham, and they wept with a great weeping. 7 His sons Isaac and Ishmael buried him in the double cave, near his wife Sarah, and they mourned him forty days, all the men of his house, Isaac and Ishmael and all their sons, and all the sons of Keturah in their places; and the days of weeping for Abraham ended. 8 He lived three jubilees and four weeks of years, a hundred and seventy-five years, and completed the days of his life, old and full of days.[a] 9 For the days of the forefathers' lives were nineteen jubilees; and after the flood they began to be fewer than nineteen jubilees, and to shrink in jubilees, and to grow old quickly and be full of their days because of many troubles and the wickedness of their ways, except for Abraham.[b] 10 For Abraham was perfect in all his deeds with the Lord and pleasing in righteousness all the days of his life; yet he did not complete four jubilees in his life, when he had grown old because of the wickedness, and was full of his days. 11
Every generation arising between now and the great day of judgment will age rapidly, before reaching even two jubilees, and old age will strip away their understanding. 12 In those days, if a person lives a jubilee and a half of years, they will say of him, "He has lived long,"
and most of his days are pain, sorrow, and trouble, with no peace.[c] 13
For calamity follows calamity, wound follows wound, trouble follows trouble, and bad news follows bad news, illness follows illness, and all such evil judgments one after another: illness and overthrow, snow, frost, and ice, fever, chills, numbness, famine, death, sword, captivity, and all kinds of calamities and pains. 14 All these will come on an evil generation that transgresses on the earth; their works are uncleanness and fornication, pollution and abominations. 15 Then they will say, “The days of the forefathers were many, even up to a thousand years, and were good; but see, the days of our life, if a person has lived long, are seventy years, or if he is strong, eighty, and those are evil, and there is no peace in the days of this evil generation.”[d] 16 In that generation the sons will convict their fathers and elders of sin and unrighteousness, of the words of their mouths and the great wickedness they commit, and of their abandoning the covenant that the Lord made between them and himself, that they should keep and do all his commandments, ordinances, and laws, without turning to the right or the left. 17 For all have done evil, every mouth speaks injustice, and all their works are uncleanness and abomination, and all their ways are pollution, uncleanness, and destruction. 18 The earth will be destroyed because of all their works; there will be no fruit of the vine and no oil, for their works are altogether faithless; and they will all perish together, animals, livestock, birds, and all the fish of the sea, because of human beings. 19 They will fight each other, the young against the old, the old against the young, the poor against the rich, the lowly against the great, the beggar against the prince, over the law and the covenant; for they have forgotten the commandment, the covenant, the feasts, the months, the sabbaths, the jubilees, and all judgments. 20 They will stand with bows, swords, and war to turn them back into the way, but they will not turn back until much blood has been shed on the earth, one by another. 21 The survivors will not turn back from their evil to the road of justice. All of them will puff themselves up with fraud and wealth, each seizing whatever belongs to his neighbor. They will invoke the great name, but not truthfully or justly, and will defile the most holy place with their impurity and the corruption of their pollution. 22 A great punishment will come on the deeds of this generation from the Lord, and he will hand them over to the sword, to judgment, to captivity, and to being plundered and devoured. 23 He will rouse the sinful nations against them, who have no mercy or compassion, and who will show favor to no one, old or young, for they are more wicked and strong to do evil than all humankind. They will use violence against Israel and transgression against Jacob, and much blood will be shed on the earth, and there will be none to gather the dead and none to bury them. [24] In those days they will cry aloud, and call and pray to be saved from the hand of the sinners, the Gentiles, but none will be saved. [25] The heads of the children will be white with gray hair, and a child of three weeks will look as old as a man of a hundred, and their stature will be destroyed by trouble and oppression. [26] In those days the children will begin to study the laws, to seek the commandments, and to return to the path of righteousness.[e] [27] The days will begin to grow many and increase among those human beings, until their days draw near a thousand years, and to a greater number of years than the number of days before. [28] There will be no old man, nor anyone who is not satisfied with his days, for all will be like children and youths. [29] They will complete all their days and live in peace and joy, and there will be no Satan nor any evil destroyer, for all their days will be days of blessing and healing. [30] In that time the Lord will heal his servants. They will get up and enjoy deep peace, and drive out their enemies. The righteous will see it and give thanks and be glad forever, watching all his judgments and curses fall on their foes. [31] Their bones will rest in the earth, and their spirits will have much joy, and they will know that it is the Lord who executes judgment and shows mercy to hundreds and thousands and to all who love him. [32] And you, Moses, write down these words; for so they are written and recorded on the heavenly tablets as a testimony for the generations forever.

Notes

- a (23:8) 3 × 49 + 4 × 7 = 175. The year was 2109 from creation.
- b (23:9) Human life grows shorter as wickedness grows; compare 4 Ezra 5:50–55.
- c (23:12) A jubilee and a half is 73½ years; compare Ps 90:10, "seventy years, or eighty if we are strong."
- d (23:15) A picture of the troubles of the early second century BC, most likely the Hellenizing crisis before and during the Maccabean revolt (1 Macc 1–2).
- e (23:26) The text from here to verse 31 is a vision of a coming renewal. The people will not rise bodily; the righteous enjoy blessing while their bones rest in the earth and their spirits rejoice (verse 31), as in 1 Enoch 91–104. "Gray hair on the temples of the newborn" (verse 25) is also a sign of the end times in Sibylline Oracles 2.155.

Chapter 24

Isaac at the Well of Vision, Esau's Birthright, and Gerar

1 After the death of Abraham the Lord blessed his son Isaac, and he left Hebron and went and lived at the Well of the Vision, in the first year of the third week of this jubilee, for seven years.[a] 2 A famine struck the land in the first year of the fourth week, a different one from the famine that came in Abraham's time. 3 Jacob boiled lentil stew, and Esau came in from the field hungry. He said to his brother Jacob, "Give me some of this red stew." Jacob said to him, "Sell me your birthright, and I will give you bread, and some of this lentil stew too." 4 Esau said in his heart, "I am going to die; what good is this birthright to me?"
and he said to Jacob, "I give it to you." 5 Jacob said, "Swear to me today," and he swore to him. 6 Jacob gave his brother Esau bread and stew, and he ate until he was full, and Esau despised his birthright; for this reason Esau's name was called Edom, because of the red stew that Jacob gave him for his birthright.[b] 7 So Jacob became the elder and Esau was brought down from his rank. 8 The famine lay over the land, and in the second year of this week Isaac set out to go down to Egypt, and went to Abimelech, the king of the Philistines, at Gerar. 9 The Lord appeared to him and said, "Do not go down to Egypt. Live in the land that I will tell you about, and stay in this land, and I will be with you and bless you. 10 For to you and your descendants I will give all this land, and I will establish my oath that I swore to your father Abraham, and I will multiply your descendants like the stars of heaven, and give your descendants all this land. 11 In your descendants all the nations of the earth will be blessed, because your father obeyed my voice and kept my charge, my commandments, my laws, my ordinances, and my covenant; and now obey my voice and live in this land." 12
He lived in Gerar for three weeks of years.[c] 13 Abimelech gave orders about him and about everything that was his, saying, "Any man who touches him or anything of his will surely die." 14 Isaac grew strong among the Philistines and gained many possessions, cattle, sheep, camels, donkeys, and a large household. 15 He sowed in the land of the Philistines and harvested a hundredfold, and Isaac became very great, and the Philistines envied him. 16 Now all the wells that Abraham's servants had dug in Abraham's lifetime, the Philistines had stopped up after Abraham's death and filled with earth. 17 Abimelech said to Isaac, "Leave us, for you are much stronger than we are," and Isaac left there in the first year of the seventh week and stayed in the valleys of Gerar. 18 They dug again the wells of water that his father Abraham's servants had dug and that the Philistines had closed after the death of his father Abraham, and he gave them the names that his father Abraham had given them. 19 Isaac's servants dug a well in the valley and found living water, and the shepherds of Gerar quarreled with Isaac's shepherds, saying, "The water is ours." Isaac named the well "Perversity," because they had been perverse with us.[d] 20 They dug a second well, and they quarreled over that one too, and he named it "Enmity." He moved on from there and they dug another well, and over that one they did not quarrel, and he named it "Room." Isaac said, "Now the Lord has made room for us, and we have increased in the land."[e] 21 From there he went up to the Well of the Oath, in the first year of the first week in the forty-fourth jubilee.[f] 22 That night, on the first day of the first month, the Lord appeared to him and said,

"I am the God of your father Abraham. Fear nothing, because I am with you. I will bless you, and for the sake of my servant Abraham I will make your descendants as numerous as the grains of sand on the earth."[g] 23 He built there an altar, which his father Abraham had first built, and he called on the name of the Lord, and offered sacrifice to the God of his father Abraham. 24 They dug a well and found living water. 25 Isaac's servants dug another well but found no water. They went and told Isaac they had found none, and Isaac said, "I made an oath to the Philistines today, and so this has been brought upon us."[h] 26 He named that place the Well of the Oath, for there he had sworn to Abimelech, to his friend Ahuzzath, and to Phicol the commander of his army. 27 Isaac knew that day that he had sworn to them under constraint, to make peace with them. 28 That day Isaac pronounced a curse: "Cursed be the Philistines until the day of wrath and fury, out of all the nations. May God make them a mockery and a curse, an object of rage and anger, in the hands of sinners, the Gentiles, and in the hands of the Kittim.[i] 29 Whoever escapes the sword of the enemy and the Kittim, may the righteous nation root out in judgment from under heaven; for they will be enemies and foes of my children through their generations on the earth. 30 No remnant will be left to them, and no one will be saved on the day of the wrath of judgment; for the whole seed of the Philistines is reserved for destruction, uprooting, and expulsion from the earth, and there will be left to these Caphtorim no name or descendants on the earth.[j] 31 Though he go up to heaven, he will be brought down from there; though he make himself strong on earth, he will be dragged out from there; though he hide among the nations, even from there he will be rooted out; though he go down to Sheol, there too his condemnation will be great, and there too he will have no peace. 32 If he goes into captivity, those who seek his life will kill him on the way, and neither name nor descendants will be left to him on all the earth, for he will depart into eternal curse." 33 So it stands written about him on the heavenly tablets, to be carried out against him on the day of judgment, so that he will be uprooted from the earth.

Notes

- a (24:1) Beer-lahai-roi, "the well of the Living One who sees me" (Gen 25:11).
- b (24:6) Edom means "red."
- c (24:12) Three weeks of years is twenty-one years. Charles's chronology puts this in 2080–2101 from creation.
- d (24:19) Hebrew Esek, "quarrel" (Gen 26:20).
- e (24:20) Hebrew Sitnah, "enmity," and Rehoboth, "open spaces" (Gen 26:21–22).
- f (24:21) Beersheba, "well of the oath" or "of seven."
- g (24:22) The new moon of the first month is the first day of the first month, about March 22, a Wednesday in this calendar.
- h (24:25) In the Hebrew of Gen 26:32 the servants say "we have found water"; the Greek reads as here. Here the failure to find water is read as a result of the oath made with Abimelech.
- i (24:28) The curse reflects the bitterness toward the Philistines in the Maccabean period, in which their coastal cities were attacked and taken. Kittim: originally Cyprus; later the western powers, Greeks and Romans.
- j (24:30) Caphtor, usually Crete, is named in Amos 9:7 as the Philistines' origin.

Chapter 25

Rebecca Warns Jacob and Blesses Him

1 In the second year of this week of this jubilee, Rebecca summoned her son Jacob and told him, "My son, you must not marry one of the Canaanite women, as your brother Esau did. He married two of them, and they have made my life bitter with all their defiling ways.
Everything they do is sexual immorality and lust, and nothing about them is just; their conduct is wicked. 2 I love you very much, my son, and my heart and my affection bless you every hour of the day and every watch of the night. 3 Now, my son, listen to my voice and do your mother's will: do not take a wife from the daughters of this land, but only from the house of my father and from my father's relatives.
You will take a wife from the house of my father, and the Most High God will bless you, and your children will be a righteous generation and a holy line." 4 Jacob said to his mother Rebecca, "Look, mother, I am nine weeks of years old, and I have not known nor touched any woman, nor have I betrothed myself to any, nor even thought of taking a wife from the daughters of Canaan.[a] 5 I remember, Mother, what our father Abraham told me: not to marry a Canaanite woman, but to choose a wife from my father's house and from among my kin.
6 I have heard before that daughters have been born to your brother Laban, and I have set my heart on them to take a wife from among them. 7 That is why I have kept watch over my spirit all my life, so that I do not sin or ruin any of my ways. Abraham my father gave me many commands about lust and sexual immorality. 8 In spite of all he commanded me, for these twenty-two years my brother has argued with me, speaking to me often and saying, 'My brother, take a sister of my two wives as your wife,' but I refuse to do as he has done. 9 Mother, I promise you that as long as I live I will never marry one of the Canaanite women, and I will not behave wickedly as my brother has. 10 Do not be afraid, mother; be assured that I will do your will and walk in uprightness, and never corrupt my ways." 11 Then she raised her face toward heaven, spread out her fingers, and opening her mouth blessed God Most High, maker of heaven and earth, offering him thanks and praise. 12 She said, "Blessed be the Lord God, and may his holy name be blessed forever and ever, who has given me Jacob as a pure son and a holy line; for he is yours, and yours shall his descendants be continually and through all the generations forever. [13] Bless him, Lord, and put in my mouth the blessing of righteousness, so that I may bless him." [14] At that hour, when the spirit of righteousness came down into her mouth, she placed both her hands on Jacob's head and said,[b] [15] "Blessed are you, Lord of righteousness and God of the ages; may he bless you beyond all the generations of human beings. My son, may he give you the path of righteousness, and reveal righteousness to your descendants. [16] May he give you many sons in your lifetime; may they grow up as numerous as the months of the year; may their children be great and many, outnumbering the stars of heaven and the sand on the seashore.[c] [17] May he give them this good land, as he said he would give it to Abraham and his descendants after him always, and may they hold it as a possession forever. [18] May I see born to you, my son, blessed children during my life, and may all your descendants be a blessed and holy line. [19] As you have refreshed your mother's spirit during your life, the womb of her who bore you blesses you, my affection and my breasts bless you, and my mouth and my tongue praise you greatly. [20] Increase and spread over the earth, and may your descendants be perfect in the joy of heaven and earth forever, and may your descendants rejoice, and on the great day of peace may they have peace. [21] May your name and your descendants last through all the ages, and may the Most High God be their God, and the God of righteousness live with them, and may his sanctuary be built by them through all the ages. [22] Blessed be the one who blesses you, and may all flesh that falsely curses you be cursed." [23] She kissed him and said, "May the Lord of the world love you as the heart of your mother and her affection rejoice in you and bless you." And she stopped blessing.

Notes

- a (25:4) Nine weeks of years is 63. Genesis 25:26 says he was 60 at the twins' birth and does not give his age at the blessing; Jubilees counts his age by its own scheme.
- b (25:14) Some manuscripts read "Holy Spirit" here.
- c (25:16) Twelve sons, the twelve months of the year.

Chapter 26

Jacob Obtains the Firstborn's Blessing

1 In the seventh year of this week Isaac called his elder son Esau and said to him, "I am old, my son, and see, my eyes are dim, and I do not know the day of my death. 2 Now take your hunting weapons, your quiver and bow, and go out to the field, and hunt and catch some game for me, my son, and make me tasty food, such as my soul loves, and bring it to me to eat, so that my soul may bless you before I die." 3
But Rebecca heard Isaac speaking to Esau. 4 Esau went out early to the field to hunt and catch game and bring it home to his father. 5 Rebecca called her son Jacob and said to him, "Look, I heard your father Isaac speaking to your brother Esau, saying, 'Hunt for me, and make me tasty food, and bring it to me so that I may eat and bless you before the Lord before I die.' 6 Now, my son, obey my voice in what I command you: go to your flock and bring me two good kids of the goats, and I will make them into tasty food for your father, such as he loves, and you will bring it to your father so that he may eat and bless you before the Lord before he dies, and so that you may be blessed." 7 Jacob said to his mother Rebecca, "Mother, I will not hold back anything my father would eat and that would please him. I only fear, mother, that he will recognize my voice and want to touch me. 8 You know that I am smooth and my brother Esau is hairy, and I will look to his eyes like a wrongdoer, and do something he did not command me, and he will be angry with me, and I will bring on myself a curse and not a blessing." 9 His mother Rebecca said to him, "Let your curse be on me, my son; only obey my voice." 10 Jacob did as his mother Rebecca told him. He went and fetched two fine, fat young goats and brought them to his mother, who prepared them as a savory dish, just the way his father loved it. 11 Rebecca took the fine garments that belonged to her older son Esau and were kept in the house with her, and dressed her younger son Jacob in them. She covered his hands and the smooth part of his neck with the skins of the kids. 12 She gave the food and the bread she had prepared into the hand of her son Jacob. 13 Jacob went in to his father and said, "I am your son; I have done as you told me. Get up, sit, and eat what I have caught, father, so that your soul may bless me." 14 Isaac asked his son, "My son, how were you able to find it so fast?" 15 Jacob said, "Because the Lord your God let me find it." 16 Isaac said to him, "Come near, so that I may feel you, my son, to see whether you are my son Esau or not." 17 Jacob went near to his father Isaac, and he felt him, and said, 18 "The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau," and he did not recognize him, because it was a turn of events from heaven to take away his power of perception, and Isaac did not recognize him, for his hands were hairy like his brother Esau's, so that he blessed him.[a] 19 He said, "Are you my son Esau?" and he said, "I am your son." He said, "Bring it near to me so that I may eat of what you have caught, my son, so that my soul may bless you." 20 He brought it near to him and he ate, and he brought him wine and he drank. 21 His father Isaac told him,

"Come close, my son, and kiss me." He came close and kissed him.
22 He smelled the smell of his clothes, and he blessed him and said,
"Look, the smell of my son is like the smell of a full field that the Lord has blessed. 23 May the Lord give you dew from heaven and dew from the earth, with an abundance of grain and oil. May nations serve you, and may peoples bow down before you. 24 Rule over your brothers, and may your mother's sons bow down to you. May all the blessings that the Lord has given to me and to my father Abraham be yours and your descendants' forever. A curse on anyone who curses you, and a blessing on anyone who blesses you." 25 As soon as Isaac had finished blessing his son Jacob, and Jacob had gone out from his father Isaac, he hid himself, and his brother Esau came in from his hunting. 26 He also made tasty food and brought it to his father, and said to his father,
"Let my father get up and eat of my game, so that your soul may bless me." 27 His father Isaac said to him, "Who are you?" and he said to him,
"I am your firstborn, your son Esau; I have done as you commanded me." 28 Isaac was greatly astonished and said, "Who is the one who hunted and caught game and brought it to me, and I ate everything before you came, and blessed him? He will be blessed, and all his descendants forever." 29 When Esau heard his father Isaac's words, he cried out with a very loud and bitter cry and said to his father, "Bless me, me also, father." 30 He said to him, "Your brother came with deceit and has taken away your blessing." Esau said, "Now I know why his name is Jacob: look, he has supplanted me these two times; he took away my birthright, and now he has taken my blessing."[b] 31 He said, "Have you not kept a blessing for me, father?" Isaac answered Esau, "Look, I have made him your lord, and I have given all his brothers to him as servants, and I have strengthened him with plenty of grain, wine, and oil; and what can I do now for you, my son?" 32 Esau said to his father Isaac, "Is there really just one blessing, father? Bless me too, father!" And Esau raised his voice and wept. 33 Isaac answered and said to him, "Look, your dwelling will be far from the dew of the earth and far from the dew of heaven above. 34 By your sword you will live, and you will serve your brother. When you grow great and shake his yoke from your neck, you will sin a complete sin to death, and your descendants will be rooted out from under heaven."[c] 35 Esau kept menacing Jacob over the blessing his father had given him. He said to himself, "Let the days of mourning for my father come soon, so that I can kill my brother Jacob."

Notes

- a (26:18) "Dispensation from heaven" excuses the deception: as with Jacob's deceit in Genesis, the book makes God the author of it.
- b (26:30) Jacob means "he grasps the heel" and so "he supplants" (Gen 27:36).
- c (26:34) This line departs from Genesis 27:40, which says only that Esau will break the yoke. Here breaking it is a sin that destroys Edom, which fits the second-century BC hostility to Edom.

Chapter 27

Jacob Sent to Mesopotamia; the Dream at Bethel

1 Esau's words were told to Rebecca in a dream, and Rebecca sent and called her younger son Jacob and said to him, 2 "Look, your brother Esau will take revenge on you and kill you. 3 So now, my son, obey my voice, and get up and flee to my brother Laban in Haran, and stay with him a few days until your brother's anger turns away and he lets go of his anger against you and forgets everything you have done; then I will send and bring you back from there." 4 Jacob said, "I am not afraid; if he wants to kill me, I will kill him." 5 But she said to him, "Let me not lose both my sons in one day." 6 Jacob said to his mother

Rebecca, “You know my father is old and cannot see, because his eyes are dim. If I leave him, it will seem wrong to him, for I would be going away from you, and my father will be angry and curse me. I will not go. When he sends me himself, then I will.”[a] 7 Rebecca said to Jacob, “I will go in and talk with him, and he will send you off.” 8 Rebecca went in and said to Isaac, “I am weary of my life because of the two daughters of Heth whom Esau has taken as wives; and if Jacob takes a wife from among the daughters of the land such as these, what is the point of my living any longer? For the daughters of Canaan are evil.” 9 Isaac called Jacob and blessed him, and warned him, and said to him, 10 “Do not take a wife from any of the daughters of Canaan; get up and go to Mesopotamia, to the house of Bethuel, your mother’s father, and take a wife from there from the daughters of Laban, your mother’s brother. 11 May God Almighty bless you and increase and multiply you, so that you become a company of nations, and give you the blessings of my father Abraham, to you and your descendants after you, so that you may inherit the land of your wanderings and all the land God gave to Abraham. Go, my son, in peace.” 12 Isaac sent Jacob away, and he went to Mesopotamia, to Laban, son of Bethuel the Syrian, brother of Rebecca, Jacob’s mother. 13 After Jacob had set out for Mesopotamia, Rebecca’s spirit grieved for her son, and she wept. 14 Isaac said to Rebecca, “My sister, do not weep because of my son Jacob; for he goes in peace and will return in peace.[b] 15 The Most High God will keep him from all evil and will be with him, for he will not abandon him all his days. 16 For I know that his ways will prosper in all things wherever he goes, until he returns to us in peace and we see him in peace. 17 Do not fear for him, my sister. He walks a straight road, a man of integrity and faithfulness; he will not be lost. Do not cry.” 18 Isaac comforted Rebecca over her son Jacob and blessed him. 19 In the first year of the second week of the forty-fourth jubilee, Jacob left the Well of the Oath for Haran. On the first day of the first month of that week he reached Luz in the hills, which is Bethel. He arrived there in the evening, left the road toward the west that night, and slept there, since the sun had gone down.[c] 20 He took one of the stones of that place and laid it under the tree at his head, and he was traveling alone, and he slept. 21 That night he dreamed,

and a ladder was set up on the earth, and its top reached to heaven, and the angels of the Lord went up and down on it, and the Lord stood on it. 22 He spoke to Jacob and said, "I am the Lord, God of your father Abraham and God of Isaac; the land you are sleeping on I will give to you and your descendants after you. 23 Your descendants will be like the dust of the earth, and you will spread to the west and east, north and south, and in you and your descendants all the families of the nations will be blessed. 24 Look, I will be with you, and will keep you wherever you go, and I will bring you back to this land in peace;
for I will not leave you until I do everything I told you." 25 Jacob woke from his sleep and said, "This place is really the house of the Lord, and I never knew." Afraid, he said, "This place is awe-inspiring. It is none other than God's house, and this is the gate of heaven." 26 Early in the morning Jacob rose, took the stone that had been under his head, stood it up as a marker, and poured oil over its top. He named the place Bethel; its earlier name was Luz. 27 Jacob made a vow to the Lord: "If the Lord stays with me and protects me on this journey, and provides food for me to eat and clothing to wear, and I make it back to my father's house safely, the Lord will be my God. This stone that I have set up as a pillar to mark this place will be the Lord's house.
Of everything you give me, my God, I will give you a tenth."

Notes

- a (27:6) The author wants to clear Jacob of leaving his aged father.
- b (27:14) "Sister" as an affectionate name for a wife is found in Tobit 5:20 and Song of Songs 4:9. Here it also defends Isaac's calling Rebecca his sister at Gerar.
- c (27:19) The first day of the first month is about March 22, a Wednesday. The year is 2115 from creation in Charles's count. Luz is the old name for Bethel.

Chapter 28

Jacob's Marriages and the Birth of His Children

1 He went on his journey and came to the land of the east, to Laban, Rebecca's brother, and stayed with him, and served him for his daughter Rachel for one week of years.[a] 2 In the first year of the third week he said to him, "Give me my wife, for whom I have served you seven years," and Laban said to Jacob, "I will give you your wife." 3

Laban made a feast and took his elder daughter Leah and gave her to Jacob as a wife, and gave her his maid Zilpah as her maid; and Jacob did not know, for he thought she was Rachel. 4 He went in to her, and it was Leah; and Jacob was angry with Laban and said to him,
"Why have you done this to me? Did I not serve you for Rachel and not for Leah? Why have you wronged me? Take your daughter and I will go, for you have done evil to me." 5 For Jacob loved Rachel more than Leah, because Leah's eyes were weak, but her figure was very handsome; but Rachel had beautiful eyes and a beautiful and very handsome figure. 6 Laban said to Jacob, "It is not done this way in our country, to give the younger before the elder." And it is not right to do this; for it is ordained and written on the heavenly tablets that no one should give his younger daughter before the elder; the elder is given first and the younger after her; and the man who does this, they record guilt against him in heaven, and no one who does this is righteous, for this deed is evil before the Lord.[b] 7 Command the children of Israel not to do this: let them not take or give the younger before they have given the elder, for it is very wicked. 8 Laban said to Jacob, "Let the seven days of the feast for this one pass, and I will give you Rachel, so that you will serve me another seven years, and pasture my sheep as you did in the former week." 9 On the day when the seven days of Leah's feast had passed, Laban gave Rachel to Jacob, so that he would serve him another seven years, and he gave Rachel Bilhah, the sister of Zilpah, as a maid.[c] 10 He served another seven years for Rachel, for Leah had been given to him for nothing. 11 The Lord opened Leah's womb. She conceived and bore Jacob a son, whom he named Reuben, on the fourteenth of the ninth month, in the first year of the third week.[d] 12 But Rachel's womb was closed, for the Lord saw that Leah was hated and Rachel loved. 13 Again Jacob went in to Leah, and she conceived and bore Jacob a second son, and he named him Simeon, on the twenty-first of the tenth month, in the third year of this week.[e] 14 Again Jacob went in to Leah, and she conceived and bore a third son, and he named him Levi, on the new moon of the first month, in the sixth year of this week.[f] 15 Jacob slept with her again. She conceived and bore a fourth son, whom he named Judah, on the fifteenth of the third month, in the first year of the fourth week.[g] 16 Rachel was jealous of Leah because of all this, since she had no children. She said to Jacob, “Give me children.” Jacob replied, “Have I kept the fruit of the womb from you? Have I left you?” 17 When Rachel saw that Leah had borne Jacob four sons, Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, she said to him, “Go in to my maid Bilhah, and she will conceive and bear a son for me.” 18 She gave him her maid Bilhah as a wife. He went in to her, and she conceived and bore him a son, and he named him Dan, on the ninth of the sixth month, in the sixth year of the third week.[h] 19 Jacob slept with Bilhah a second time. She conceived and bore Jacob another son, whom Rachel named Naphtali, on the fifth of the seventh month, in the second year of the fourth week.[i] 20 When Leah realized she had stopped bearing children, she grew envious of Rachel and gave her own servant Zilpah to Jacob as a wife. Zilpah conceived and bore a son, whom Leah named Gad, on the twelfth of the eighth month, in the third year of the fourth week.[j] 21 He went in to her again, and she conceived and bore him a second son, and Leah named him Asher, on the second of the eleventh month, in the fifth year of the fourth week.[k] 22 Jacob slept with Leah, who conceived and gave birth to a son, Issachar, on the fourth day of the fifth month in the fourth year of the fourth week; she handed him over to a wet-nurse.[l] 23 Jacob went in again to her, and she conceived and bore two children, a son and a daughter, and she named the son Zebulun and the daughter Dinah, on the seventh of the seventh month, in the sixth year of the fourth week.[m] 24 The Lord was gracious to Rachel and opened her womb, and she conceived and bore a son, and she named him Joseph, on the new moon of the fourth month, in the sixth year of this fourth week.[n] 25 In the days when Joseph was born, Jacob said to Laban, “Give me my wives and sons, and let me go to my father Isaac and build myself a house; for I have completed the years I served you for your two daughters, and I will go to my father’s house.” 26 Laban said to Jacob, “Stay with me for your wages, and pasture my flock for me again, and take your wages.” 27 They agreed with each other that he would give him as his wages the lambs and kids born black, spotted, and white; these were to be his wages. 28 All the sheep bore spotted, speckled, and black young, variously marked, and they bore again lambs like themselves, and all that were spotted were Jacob's and those not spotted were Laban's. [29] Jacob's possessions multiplied greatly, and he had cattle, sheep, donkeys, camels, menservants, and maidservants. [30] Laban and his sons envied Jacob, and Laban took his sheep back from him, and watched him with evil intent.

Notes

- a (28:1) Seven years.
- b (28:6) This verse is the angel's comment. The rule is not known elsewhere in Jewish tradition.
- c (28:9) The Law forbids marrying two living sisters (Lev 18:18). Bilhah and Zilpah are sisters here and in the Testament of Naphtali 1; later Jewish tradition makes them Laban's daughters.
- d (28:11) Reuben means "See, a son." The ninth month, day 14, falls about December 2. The year is 2122 from creation in Charles's count.
- e (28:13) Tenth month, day 21: about January 9. Simeon means "hearing."
- f (28:14) First day of the first month: about March 22, a Wednesday. Levi means "joined."
- g (28:15) Third month, day 15: about early June, the Feast of Weeks. Judah means "praise." The year number in the manuscripts is uncertain.
- h (28:18) Sixth month, day 9: about August 28. Dan means "he judged." The year number is uncertain in the manuscripts.
- i (28:19) Seventh month, day 5: about September 24. Naphtali means "my wrestling."
- j (28:20) Eighth month, day 12: about October 31. Gad means "fortune."
- k (28:21) Eleventh month, day 2: about January 20. Asher means "happy."
- l (28:22) Fifth month, day 4: about July 24. Issachar means "wages." The order of births is disputed in the manuscripts.
- m (28:23) Seventh month, day 7: about September 26.
- n (28:24) First day of the fourth month: about June 21. The year is 2134 from creation in Charles's count. Joseph means "may he add." The twelve sons follow the order of Genesis 29–35: Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Dan, Naphtali, Gad, Asher, Issachar, Zebulun, Joseph, Benjamin.

Chapter 29

Jacob's Flight and Covenant with Laban

[1] When Rachel had borne Joseph, Laban went to shear his sheep, for they were a three days' journey from him. [2] Jacob saw that Laban was going to shear his sheep, and he called Leah and Rachel and spoke kindly to them, that they should come with him to the land of Canaan. 3 For he told them how he had seen everything in a dream, everything that God had said to him about returning to his father's house, and they said, "We will go with you to every place where you go." 4 Jacob blessed the God of his father Isaac and the God of his grandfather Abraham. He rose, seated his wives and children on camels, gathered all his goods, crossed the river, and entered Gilead. He concealed his plan from Laban and told him nothing. 5 In the seventh year of the fourth week, on the twenty-first of the first month, Jacob set out toward Gilead. Laban chased after him and caught up with him in the hill country of Gilead, on the thirteenth of the third month.[a] 6 The Lord did not let him harm Jacob, for he appeared to him in a dream by night. And Laban spoke to Jacob. 7 On the fifteenth of those days Jacob made a feast for Laban and all who came with him, and Jacob swore to Laban that day, and Laban also to Jacob, that neither would cross the mountain of Gilead to the other with evil purpose.[b] 8 He made a heap there as a witness; for this reason the name of that place is called "The Heap of Witness," after this heap.[c] 9 Before that, however, Gilead was known as the land of the Rephaim, since the Rephaim were born there: giants ten cubits tall, or nine, or eight, down to seven.[d] 10 Their territory stretched from the land of the Ammonites to Mount Hermon, and the seats of their kingdom were Karnaim, Ashtaroth, Edrei, Misur, and Beon.[e] 11 The Lord wiped them out for the wickedness of their deeds, for they were thoroughly vicious. The Amorites, wicked and sinful, settled in their place, and today no nation has filled up its sins to the same extent; none of them has a long life on the earth anymore. 12 Jacob sent Laban away, and he went to Mesopotamia, the land of the east, and Jacob returned to the land of Gilead. 13 He crossed the Jabbok in the ninth month, on the eleventh of it. On that day his brother Esau came to him, and he was reconciled to him, and Esau left him for the land of Seir, but Jacob lived in tents.[f] 14 In the first year of the fifth week in this jubilee he crossed the Jordan and lived beyond the Jordan, and he pastured his sheep from the Sea of the Heap to Beth-shan, to Dothan, and to the forest of Akrabbim.[g] 15 He sent to his father Isaac from all his goods clothing, food, meat, drink, milk, butter, cheese, and some dates of the valley, [16] and also to his mother Rebecca four times a year, at the turning points of the months, between plowing and harvest, between late summer and the rains, and between winter and spring, at Abraham's tower.[h] [17] Isaac had come back from Beer-sheba, the Well of the Oath, and gone up to his father Abraham's tower, where he was living by himself, away from Esau his son. [18] For in the days when Jacob went to Mesopotamia, Esau took as a wife Mahalath, the daughter of Ishmael, and he gathered all his father's flocks and his wives and went up and lived on Mount Seir, and left his father Isaac alone at the Well of the Oath. [19] Isaac went up from the Well of the Oath and lived in the tower of his father Abraham in the mountains of Hebron. [20] Jacob sent there everything he used to send his father and mother from time to time, whatever they needed. They blessed Jacob with their whole heart and soul.

Notes

- a (29:5) First month, day 21: about April 11. Third month, day 13: about June 2.
- b (29:7) The fifteenth of the third month, the Feast of Weeks, about June 4.
- c (29:8) Gilead, in Hebrew Galeed, means "heap of witness" (Gen 31:47).
- d (29:9) Ten cubits is about 15 feet (4.5 m); seven cubits about 10½ feet (3.2 m); the cubit is taken as 18 inches. Compare Gen 14:5; Deut 3:11.
- e (29:10) These places were scenes of Judas Maccabeus's victories (1 Macc 5), which may be why they are named.
- f (29:13) Ninth month, day 11: about November 29.
- g (29:14) Year 2136 from creation in Charles's count. The text of the first place name is damaged; a Latin copy has "from the Salt Sea."
- h (29:16) The four times match the four quarters of the 364-day year, each ending with a short day, the "days of remembrance" at the turn of the seasons.

Chapter 30

Dinah, the Shechemites, and the Choice of Levi

[1] In the first year of the sixth week he went up to Salem, east of Shechem, in peace, in the fourth month.[a] [2] They took Dinah, Jacob's daughter, into the house of Shechem, the son of Hamor the Hivite, ruler of the region. He raped and defiled her. She was a young girl of twelve. [3] He begged his father and her brothers to give her to him as a wife. Jacob and his sons were angry at the men of Shechem, for they had defiled their sister Dinah, and they spoke to them with evil intent and dealt deceitfully with them and tricked them.[b] 4 Simeon and Levi came unexpectedly to Shechem and carried out judgment on all the men of Shechem, and killed all the men they found in it and left not one remaining; they killed them all in torment, because they had dishonored their sister Dinah. 5 Never again must it happen, from this day on, that a daughter of Israel is violated. Judgment has been decreed in heaven against such people: that every Shechemite man be put to the sword, because they committed an outrage in Israel. 6 The Lord delivered them into the hands of the sons of Jacob to wipe them out with the sword and carry out judgment on them, so that it would not be done again in Israel that a virgin of Israel is defiled. 7 If there is anyone in Israel who wants to give his daughter or his sister to a man of the descendants of the Gentiles, he will surely die, and they will stone him; for he has done a shameful thing in Israel; and they will burn the woman with fire, because she has dishonored the name of her father's house, and she will be rooted out of Israel.[c] 8 Let no adulteress and no uncleanness be found in Israel through all the days of the generations of the earth; for Israel is holy to the Lord, and every man who has defiled it will surely die; they will stone him. 9 For so it has been ordained and written on the heavenly tablets about all the descendants of Israel: whoever defiles it will surely die, and will be stoned. 10 To this law there is no limit of days, and no remission, and no atonement; but the man who has defiled his daughter will be rooted out from all Israel, because he has given some of his seed to Moloch and acted impiously, defiling it.[d] 11 You, Moses, command the children of Israel and warn them not to give their daughters to the Gentiles, and not to take any of the Gentiles' daughters for their sons, for this is abominable before the Lord. 12 For this reason I have written for you in the words of the Law all the deeds of the Shechemites against Dinah, and how Jacob's sons said, "We will not give our daughter to a man who is uncircumcised, for that would be a disgrace to us." 13 It is a shame for Israel, both for those who give and for those who take foreign women, for this is defiling and loathsome to Israel. 14 Israel will not be free of this uncleanness if it has a wife

from the daughters of the Gentiles, or has given any of its daughters to a man of any of the Gentiles. 15 Plague will follow plague and curse follow curse, and every kind of judgment will fall on anyone who does this, or who looks away from people practicing such impurity, or from those who pollute the Lord's sanctuary or dishonor his holy name. Then the entire nation will be judged together for this one man's impurity and profanation. 16 There will be no favoritism and no partiality, and he will not accept from his hands fruits, offerings, burnt offerings, fat, or the fragrance of a pleasing aroma, so as to accept it; and so it will be with every man or woman in Israel who defiles the sanctuary. 17 That is why I ordered you: "Give this witness to Israel. Look at what became of the Shechemites and their sons: two of Jacob's sons handed them over to death, and killed them in torment. It was credited to the two as justice, and recorded in their favor as justice. 18 The descendants of Levi were chosen for the priesthood and to be Levites, to serve before the Lord continually, as we do, and so that Levi and his sons may be blessed forever; for he was zealous to carry out righteousness, judgment, and vengeance on all who rose up against Israel.[e] 19 So they record on the heavenly tablets blessing and righteousness in his favor before the God of all. 20 We recall the man's justice, shown throughout his life in every season. For a thousand generations they will keep the record, and it will pass to him and to his descendants after him. He is entered on the heavenly tablets as a friend and a just man. 21 All this account I have written for you, and have commanded you to tell the children of Israel that they should not sin, nor transgress the ordinances, nor break the covenant that has been ordained for them, but should fulfill it and be recorded as friends. 22 But if they transgress and practice uncleanness in any way, they will be recorded on the heavenly tablets as adversaries, and they will be destroyed out of the book of life, and they will be recorded in the book of those who will be destroyed and rooted out of the earth.[f] 23 On the day when the sons of Jacob killed Shechem, a writing was recorded in their favor in heaven, that they had executed righteousness, uprightness, and vengeance on the sinners, and it was written for a blessing. 24 They brought their sister

Dinah out of Shechem's house, and they took captive everything in Shechem, their sheep, cattle, donkeys, all their wealth, and all their flocks, and brought them all to their father Jacob. 25 He reproached them because they had put the city to the sword, for he feared those who lived in the land, the Canaanites and the Perizzites. 26 The dread of the Lord was on all the cities around Shechem, and they did not rise to pursue the sons of Jacob, for terror had fallen on them.

Notes

- a (30:1) Charles dates this to 2143 from creation. "Salem" and "in peace" are the same Hebrew word, shalem/shalom, and the text joins both readings (Gen 33:18). The fourth month runs from about June 21.
- b (30:3) The book leaves out the circumcision of the Shechemites, for it approves of what Simeon and Levi did and praises it. Genesis 49:5–7 condemns their act. The attitude here fits the strong hostility to Shechem (the Samaritans) in the author's time.
- c (30:7) This passage is a fierce attack on marriage with outsiders. Leviticus 21:9 prescribes burning only for a priest's daughter who becomes a prostitute.
- d (30:10) Compare Lev 18:21 and 20:2–5, where giving offspring to Moloch is forbidden. Here marrying a daughter to a Gentile is made the same as that sin.
- e (30:18) Another reason for Levi's choice is given in 32:3. Compare Testament of Levi 4–6.
- f (30:22) The "book of life" (Ex 32:32; Ps 69:28) first meant the register of the living people of God. Later it means eternal life (Rev 3:5; 1 Enoch 47:3).

Chapter 31

Jacob at Bethel and Hebron; Isaac Blesses Levi and Judah

1 On the new moon of the month Jacob spoke to all the people of his house, saying, "Purify yourselves and change your clothes, and let us get up and go to Bethel, where I made a vow to him on the day I fled from my brother Esau, because he has been with me and brought me into this land in peace; and put away the foreign gods that are among you." 2 They gave up the foreign gods and what was in their ears and on their necks, and Rachel gave Jacob all the idols she had stolen from her brother Laban. He burned them and broke them to pieces and destroyed them, and hid them under an oak in the land of Shechem. 3 He went up to Bethel on the new moon of the seventh month. He built an altar at the place where he had slept, and set up a pillar there, and sent word to his father Isaac to come to him for his sacrifice, and to his mother Rebecca.[a] 4 Isaac said, “Let my son Jacob come, and let me see him before I die.” 5 Jacob went to his father Isaac and his mother Rebecca, to the house of his father Abraham, and he took two of his sons with him, Levi and Judah, and he came to his father Isaac and his mother Rebecca.[b] 6 Rebecca came out of the tower to its entrance to kiss and hug Jacob. When she heard, “Your son Jacob is here,” her spirit had come back to life, and she kissed him. 7 She looked at his two sons and knew them, and she said, “Are these your sons, my son?” She hugged and kissed them and blessed them: “Through you Abraham’s descendants will become renowned, and you will be a blessing on the earth.” 8 Jacob went in to his father Isaac, to the room where he lay, and his two sons were with him, and he took his father’s hand and bent down and kissed him, and Isaac clung to the neck of his son Jacob and wept on his neck. 9 The dimness lifted from Isaac’s eyes and he saw Jacob’s two sons, Levi and Judah. He said, “Are these your sons, my son? They look just like you.” 10 Jacob told him that they were truly his sons; “and you have truly seen that they are truly my sons.” 11 They stepped up to him, and he turned, kissed them, and held them both in one embrace. 12 The spirit of prophecy fell on his lips. He took Levi’s right hand and Judah’s left. 13 He turned to Levi first, and began to bless him first, and said to him, “May the God of all, the very Lord of all the ages, bless you and your children through all the ages.[c] 14 May the Lord give you and your offspring great honor and splendor, and choose you and your offspring out of all humanity to come near him and serve in his sanctuary, like the angels of the presence and the holy ones. As they are, so may the descendants of your sons be:

glorious, great, and holy, and may he make them great for all ages.[d] 15 They will be rulers, judges, and leaders over all the offspring of Jacob’s sons. They will speak the Lord’s word with justice and decide all his cases justly. They will make my ways known to Jacob and my paths to Israel. The Lord’s blessing will be placed in their mouths, to bless all the offspring of the beloved.[e] 16 Your mother named you Levi, and she named you rightly: you will be joined to the Lord and be a companion to all Jacob’s sons. Let his table be yours; eat from it, you and your sons. May your table be full in every generation, and your food never run short through all the ages.[f] 17 Let all who hate you fall down before you, let all your adversaries be rooted out and perish;

blessed be the one who blesses you, and cursed be every nation that curses you." 18 To Judah he said, "May the Lord give you strength and power to tread down all who hate you. You will be a prince, you and one of your sons, over the sons of Jacob; may your name and your sons' name go out and cross every land and region. Then the Gentiles will fear before your face, and all the nations will quake, and all the peoples will tremble. 19 In you will be the help of Jacob, and in you will be found the salvation of Israel. 20 When you sit on the throne of the honor of your righteousness, there will be great peace for all the descendants of the sons of the beloved; blessed be the one who blesses you, and all who hate you, afflict you, and curse you will be rooted out and destroyed from the earth and be accursed." 21 Turning, he kissed him again and embraced him, and rejoiced greatly because he had seen the sons of his son Jacob in very truth. 22 He went out from between his feet and fell down and bowed to him. And he blessed them. And Jacob rested there with his father Isaac that night, and they ate and drank with joy. 23 He made the two sons of Jacob sleep, one at his right hand and the other at his left, and it was counted to him as righteousness. 24 Through that night Jacob told his father everything:
the great kindness the Lord had shown him, how he had made all his undertakings succeed, and guarded him from every harm. 25 Isaac blessed the God of his father Abraham, who had not withdrawn his mercy and righteousness from the sons of his servant Isaac. 26 In the morning Jacob told his father Isaac the vow he had made to the Lord, and the vision he had seen, and that he had built an altar, and that everything was ready for the sacrifice to be made before the Lord as he had vowed, and that he had come to set him on a donkey. 27 Isaac said to his son Jacob, "I cannot go with you, for I am old and cannot bear the journey. Go, my son, in peace, for I am a hundred and sixty-five years old this day; I can no longer travel. Set your mother on a donkey and let her go with you.[g] 28 I know, my son, that you have come on my account, and may this day be blessed on which you saw me alive and I also saw you, my son. 29 May you prosper and fulfill the vow you made; do not put off your vow, for you will be called to account for it; so make haste to carry it out, and may he who made all things be pleased, to whom you made the vow." 30 He said to Rebecca, "Go with your son Jacob," and Rebecca went with her son Jacob, and Deborah with her, and they came to Bethel. 31 Jacob remembered the prayer with which his father had blessed him and his sons Levi and Judah. He was glad and blessed the God of his fathers, Abraham and Isaac. 32 He said, "Now I know that I and my sons have an everlasting hope before the God of all." So this was decreed for the two of them, and the way Isaac blessed them is written on the heavenly tablets as their lasting witness.

Notes

- a (31:3) The new moon of the seventh month is the first day of the seventh month, about September 20, a Wednesday.
- b (31:5) Hebron. Rabbinic tradition does not mention this last meeting of Jacob and Isaac.
- c (31:13) Levi is given first place. Compare Testament of Levi 9.
- d (31:14) Levi's line is to serve in the sanctuary as the two highest orders of angels serve in heaven (see 2:2, 18).
- e (31:15) Priests who also rule: the Maccabean priest-princes held both roles. The beloved is Abraham.
- f (31:16) Levi means "joined" (Gen 29:34).
- g (31:27) Isaac was 60 when Jacob was born (Gen 25:26) and would be 165 at the time given here, which is about 105 years old when Jacob was 45; the book's own count is meant.

Chapter 32

Levi's Dream, the Tithes, and Israel's Name

1 He stayed that night at Bethel, and Levi dreamed that they had ordained him and made him priest of the Most High God, him and his sons forever; and he woke from his sleep and blessed the Lord.[a] 2 Jacob got up early in the morning on the fourteenth of this month and gave a tithe of everything that came with him, of both people and cattle, of gold and every vessel and garment; yes, he gave tithes of everything.[b] 3 In those days Rachel became pregnant with her son Benjamin. Jacob counted his sons from him upward, and Levi fell to the portion of the Lord, and his father clothed him in the garments of the priesthood and filled his hands.[c] 4 On the fifteenth of this month he brought fourteen bulls from the herd, twenty-eight rams, forty-nine sheep, seven lambs, and twenty-one young goats to the altar as a burnt offering, a sweet aroma pleasing to God.[d] 5 This was his offering, because of the vow he had made that he would give a tenth, with their grain offerings and drink offerings. 6 When the fire had consumed it, he burned incense on the fire over it, and for a thank offering two oxen, four rams, four sheep, four male goats, two yearling sheep, and two kids of the goats; and so he did daily for seven days. 7 He and all his sons and his men ate this with joy there for seven days, blessing and thanking the Lord, who had delivered him from all his trouble and given him his vow. 8 He tithed all the clean animals and made a burnt sacrifice, but the unclean animals he did not give to his son Levi; and he gave him all the souls of the men.[e] 9 Levi served as priest at Bethel before his father Jacob, in preference to his ten brothers, and he was priest there, and Jacob fulfilled his vow; so he tithed again the tithe to the Lord and made it holy, and it became holy to him. 10 For this reason it is ordained on the heavenly tablets as a law that the tithe be tithed again, to eat before the Lord from year to year in the place chosen for his name to dwell, and to this law there is no limit of days forever.[f] 11 This ordinance is written so that it may be fulfilled from year to year, eating the second tithe before the Lord in the place chosen, and nothing is to remain over from it from this year to the year following. 12 For in its own year the seed is to be eaten until the days of the gathering of the year's seed, and the wine until the days of the wine, and the oil until the days of its season. 13 All that is left over and has become old is to be treated as polluted; let it be burned with fire, for it is unclean. 14 So let them eat it together in the sanctuary, and not let it become old.

15 All the tithes of the cattle and sheep will be holy to the Lord, and will belong to his priests, who will eat them before him from year to year; for so it is ordained and engraved regarding the tithe on the heavenly tablets. 16 On the following night, the twenty-second day of this month, Jacob decided to build that place and surround the court with a wall, and to make it holy forever, for himself and his children

after him.[g] 17 The Lord appeared to him by night and blessed him and said to him, "Your name will not be called Jacob, but they will name you Israel." 18 He said to him again, "I am the Lord, who created heaven and earth, and I will increase you and multiply you greatly, and kings will come from you, and they will judge everywhere the foot of human beings has trodden. 19 I will give your descendants all the earth that is under heaven, and they will judge all the nations as they desire, and after that they will take possession of the whole earth and inherit it forever."[h] 20 He finished speaking with him, and he went up from him, and Jacob watched until he had ascended into heaven. 21 He saw in a vision of the night, and an angel came down from heaven with seven tablets in his hands, and gave them to Jacob, and he read them and knew everything written in them that would happen to him and his sons through all the ages.[i] 22 He showed him all that was written on the tablets, and said to him, "Do not build this place, and do not make it an eternal sanctuary, and do not live here, for this is not the place. Go to the house of your father Abraham and live with your father Isaac until the day of your father's death.[j] 23 For in Egypt you will die in peace, and in this land you will be buried with honor in the tomb of your fathers, with Abraham and Isaac. 24 Do not be afraid, for what you have seen and read will all be so; and write down everything as you have seen and read it." 25 Jacob said, "Lord, how can I remember everything I have read and seen?" and he said to him, "I will bring everything to your remembrance."[k] 26 He went up from him, and Jacob woke from his sleep and remembered everything he had read and seen, and he wrote down all the words he had read and seen. 27 He celebrated there yet another day, and sacrificed on it according to everything he had sacrificed on the former days, and he named it "Addition," because this day was added, and the former days he called "The Feast."[l] 28 So the right way was shown to him, and it stands written on the heavenly tablets; and it was revealed to him that he should keep it, adding this day to the seven days of the feast. 29 Its name was called "Addition," because it was recorded among the feast days in the number of the days of the year.[m] 30 That night, the twenty-third of the month, Deborah, Rebecca's nurse, died. She was buried beneath the town under the river oak. Jacob called the spot "The River of Deborah" and the oak "The Oak of Deborah's Mourning."[n] 31 Rebecca went back to her home, to his father Isaac. Jacob sent along with her rams, sheep, and he-goats so she could prepare for his father the kind of meal he liked. 32 He went after his mother until he came to the land of Kabratan, and he lived there.[o] 33 Rachel gave birth to a son during the night and called him "Son of my sorrow," because the birth had caused her such pain. But his father named him Benjamin, on the eleventh of the eighth month, in the first year of the sixth week of this jubilee.[p] 34 Rachel died there and was buried in the land of Ephrath, which is Bethlehem, and Jacob built a pillar on Rachel's grave, on the road above her grave.

Notes

- a (32:1) Testament of Levi 8 puts Levi's vision of seven men in white at Bethel. "Priest of the Most High God" is also Melchizedek's title (Gen 14:18), later taken up by the Maccabean priest-kings; see also Ps 110:4.
- b (32:2) The fourteenth of the seventh month: about October 3.
- c (32:3) Counting backward from Benjamin (1) to Levi (10th), Levi is the tenth and so the tithe (Lev 27:32). "Filled his hands" is the technical term for ordination as a priest (Ex 29:9).
- d (32:4) The fifteenth of the seventh month, about October 4, is the Feast of Tabernacles. The numbers of animals do not match Num 29:12–40.
- e (32:8) That is, the people and servants of his household who were counted in the tithe, as Testament of Levi 9 says.
- f (32:10) The second tithe: Deut 14:23.
- g (32:16) The twenty-second of the seventh month: about October 11, the eighth day after the start of Tabernacles.
- h (32:19) Here the promise covers the whole inhabited earth, not only the land of Canaan as in Gen 35:12.
- i (32:21) Compare 4 Ezra 14:24.
- j (32:22) The Bethel sanctuary is not to be the one central shrine. Compare 45:4.
- k (32:25) Compare 4 Ezra 14:40 and John 14:26.
- l (32:27) This is the eighth day of Tabernacles (Lev 23:36). The Hebrew name is aseret, "assembly" or "holding back." The Ethiopic text is corrupt here; Charles suggests "keeping back," because he was kept back on that day.
- m (32:29) The text of this verse is very damaged. The sense is that the eighth day is counted among the festal days of the year.
- n (32:30) The twenty-third of the seventh month: about October 12. Compare Gen 35:8.

- o (32:32) This place name comes from a misunderstanding of Hebrew kibrath ha'arets, "some distance," in Gen 35:16.
- p (32:33) Eighth month, day 11: about October 30. The year is 2143 from creation in Charles's count. Benjamin means "son of the right hand" or "of the south"; Benoni, "son of my sorrow."

Chapter 33

Reuben and Bilhah; Laws on Incest

1 Jacob went and lived to the south of Magdaladra'ef, and he went to his father Isaac, he and his wife Leah, on the new moon of the tenth month.[a] 2 Reuben saw Bilhah, Rachel's maid, his father's concubine, bathing in water in a secret place, and he desired her. 3 He hid himself at night, and entered Bilhah's house, and found her sleeping alone on a bed in her house. 4 He lay with her, and she woke and saw that Reuben was lying with her in the bed, and she pulled the edge of her covering and seized him, and cried out, and discovered that it was Reuben. 5 She was ashamed because of him, and released her hand from him, and he fled. 6 She lamented greatly over this thing and did not tell anyone. 7 When Jacob returned and sought her, she said to him, "I am not clean for you, for I have been defiled as far as you are concerned; for Reuben has defiled me and lain with me in the night, and I was asleep and did not know until he uncovered my skirt and slept with me." 8 Jacob was very angry with Reuben because he had lain with Bilhah, because he had uncovered his father's skirt. 9 Jacob did not go near her again because Reuben had defiled her. And any man who uncovers his father's skirt does a very wicked deed, for he is abominable before the Lord. 10 For this reason the heavenly tablets contain this written decree: no man may sleep with his father's wife or lift the edge of his father's robe, for that is defiling. Both are certain to die, the man who sleeps with his father's wife and the woman too, because they have polluted the land. 11 There will be nothing unclean before our God in the nation he has chosen for himself as a possession. 12 A second time it is written: "Cursed is the man who lies with his father's wife, for he has exposed his father's shame." And all the Lord's holy ones said, "So be it, so be it." 13 You, Moses, command the children of Israel to keep this word; for it carries the penalty of death; and it is unclean, and there is no atonement forever to atone for the man who has done this, but he is to be put to death, killed, stoned, and rooted out from the midst of the people of our God. [14] No man in Israel who does this may stay alive even one day on earth, for he is loathsome and impure. [15] Let them not say that Reuben was granted life and forgiveness after he lay with his father's concubine, and she also, though she had a husband, and her husband Jacob, his father, was still alive. [16] For until that time the ordinance, judgment, and law had not been revealed in full for everyone, but in your days it has been revealed as a law of seasons and days, and an everlasting law for the everlasting generations.[b] [17] For this law there is no end of days and no atonement; but both must be rooted out from the midst of the nation; on the day they commit it, they shall kill them. [18] You, Moses, write it down for Israel so that they keep it and act according to these words and do not commit a sin unto death; for the Lord our God is judge, who shows no favoritism and accepts no gifts. [19] Tell them these words of the covenant, so that they hear and keep them and are on their guard concerning them, and are not destroyed and rooted out of the land; for all who commit it on the earth are uncleanness, abomination, contamination, and pollution before our God. [20] There is no greater sin than the fornication they commit on the earth; for Israel is a holy nation to the Lord its God, a nation of inheritance, a priestly and royal nation and his own possession; and no such uncleanness will appear in the midst of the holy nation. [21] In the third year of this sixth week Jacob and all his sons went and lived in the house of Abraham, near his father Isaac and his mother Rebecca.[c] [22] These were the names of Jacob's sons: the firstborn Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun, the sons of Leah; and the sons of Rachel, Joseph and Benjamin; and the sons of Bilhah, Dan and Naphtali; and the sons of Zilpah, Gad and Asher; and Dinah, Leah's daughter, the only daughter of Jacob. [23] They came and bowed to Isaac and Rebecca, and when they saw them they blessed Jacob and all his sons, and Isaac rejoiced greatly, for he saw the sons of his younger son Jacob, and he blessed them.

Notes

- a (33:1) The new moon of the tenth month is the first day of the tenth month, about December 20, a Wednesday. The place name stands for "the tower of Eder of Ephrath" (Gen 35:21).
- b (33:16) Compare Rom 4:15: "where there is no law there is no transgression."
- c (33:21) Year 2145 from creation in Charles's count.

Chapter 34

War with the Amorite Kings; Joseph Sold; the Day of Atonement

1 In the sixth year of this week of this forty-fourth jubilee Jacob sent his sons to pasture their sheep, and his servants with them, in the pastures of Shechem.[a] 2 The seven kings of the Amorites gathered against them to kill them, hiding under the trees, and to take their cattle as plunder.[b] 3 Jacob, Levi, Judah, and Joseph were in the house with their father Isaac, for his spirit was sorrowful and they could not leave him; and Benjamin, the youngest, stayed with his father for that reason. 4 Then came the king of Taphu, the king of Aresa, the king of Seragan, the king of Selo, the king of Ga'as, the king of Bethhoron, the king of Ma'anisakir, and all those who live in these mountains and in the woods in the land of Canaan.[c] 5 They told Jacob, "Look, the Amorite kings have surrounded your sons and plundered their herds." 6 He got up from his house, he and his three sons and all his father's servants and his own servants, and went against them with six thousand men carrying swords. 7 He killed them in the pastures of Shechem, and pursued those who fled, and he killed them with the edge of the sword, and he killed Aresa, Taphu, Seragan, Selo, Ma'anisakir, and Ga'as, and recovered his herds.[d] 8 He prevailed over them and imposed tribute on them, that they should pay him tribute of five fruit products of their land, and he built Robel and Tamnatares.[e] 9 He came back safely and made terms with them, and they were his subjects until the day he and his sons went down into Egypt. 10 In the seventh year of this week he sent Joseph from his house to the region of Shechem to see how his brothers were, and Joseph found them near Dothan. 11 They dealt treacherously with him and made a plot against him to kill him, but changing their minds, they sold him to Ishmaelite merchants, and they brought him down to Egypt and sold him to Potiphar, Pharaoh's official, the chief of the cooks, priest of the city of Elew.[f] 12 The sons of Jacob killed a kid and dipped Joseph's coat in the blood and sent it to their father Jacob on the tenth of the seventh month.[g] 13 He mourned the whole night, since they had brought him the news at evening. Grief made him feverish over the death, and he said, "A wild animal has eaten Joseph." Everyone in his household wept and mourned with him throughout that day. 14 His sons and his daughter got up to comfort him, but he refused to be comforted for his son. 15 On that day Bilhah heard that Joseph had perished, and she died mourning him; she was living in Kabratan, and Dinah his daughter also died after Joseph perished. And these three mournings came on Israel in one month. 16 They buried Bilhah opposite Rachel's tomb, and Dinah his daughter they buried there too. 17 He mourned for Joseph one year, and did not stop, for he said, "Let me go down to the grave mourning for my son." 18 For this reason it is ordained for the children of Israel that they should humble themselves on the tenth of the seventh month, the day the news that made Jacob weep for Joseph reached him, and that they should make atonement for themselves on it with a young goat on the tenth of the seventh month, once a year, for their sins; for they had grieved their father's love over his son Joseph.[h] 19 This day has been ordained so that they should grieve on it for their sins, for all their transgressions and all their errors, so that they might cleanse themselves on that day once a year. 20 After Joseph perished, Jacob's sons took wives for themselves. The name of Reuben's wife was Ada; the name of Simeon's wife was Adiba'a, a Canaanite; the name of Levi's wife was Melka, of the daughters of Aram, of the descendants of the sons of Terah; the name of Judah's wife, Betasu'el, a Canaanite; the name of Issachar's wife, Hezaqa; the name of Zebulun's wife, Ni'iman; the name of Dan's wife, 'Egla; the name of Naphtali's wife, Rasu'u, of Mesopotamia; the name of Gad's wife, Maka; the name of Asher's wife, Ijona; the name of Joseph's wife, Asenath the Egyptian; and the name of Benjamin's wife, 'Ijasaka.[i] 21 Simeon repented and took a second wife from Mesopotamia, as his brothers did.

Notes

- a (34:1) Charles dates this to 2148 from creation.
- b (34:2) The war story is told more fully in the Testament of Judah 3–7. It fits Gen 48:22, where Jacob says he took Shechem with sword and bow.
- c (34:4) Taphu is probably Tappuah. Aresa may be Hazor. Selo is Shiloh. Bethhoron was the scene of several Maccabean victories (1 Macc 3:13–24). Several of these places are famous from Maccabean battles, which may be why the author names them.
- d (34:7) Six of the seven kings are killed; so also the Testament of Judah 4.
- e (34:8) Timnath-heres, as in Judg 2:9.
- f (34:11) The Greek calls Potiphar "chief cook" by mistaking the Hebrew ("captain of the guard"). Elew is Heliopolis (On), the Egyptian temple city.
- g (34:12) The tenth of the seventh month: about September 29, a Friday in this calendar.
- h (34:18) This reason for the Day of Atonement (Lev 16) is peculiar to Jubilees. "Humble themselves" means to fast.
- i (34:20) Betasu'el is "daughter of Shua" (Gen 38:2). Compare Testament of Levi 11. These marriages with Canaanites conflict with 30:7–10.

Chapter 35

Rebecca's Last Words and Death

1 In the first year of the first week of the forty-fifth jubilee Rebecca called her son Jacob and commanded him concerning his father and his brother, that he should honor them all the days of his life.[a] 2 Jacob said, "I will do everything as you have commanded me; for this will be honor and greatness to me, and righteousness before the Lord, that I should honor them. 3 You too, mother, know from the time I was born until this day all my deeds and everything in my heart, that I always think good toward everyone. 4 How could I not do this thing you have commanded me, that I should honor my father and my brother? 5 Tell me, mother, what perversity have you seen in me, and I will turn away from it, and mercy will be on me." 6 She answered, "My son, in all my days I have seen nothing twisted in you, only what is right. Still, let me tell you plainly: I am going to die this year and will not outlive it. I saw the day of my death in a dream, and I am not to live past a hundred and fifty-five years. Look, I have used up all the days I was given to live." 7 Jacob laughed at his mother's words, because his mother had told him that she would die; and she was sitting opposite him in full strength, and was not weak; for she came and went and saw, and her teeth were strong, and no illness had touched her all the days of her life. [8] Jacob said to her, "Blessed am I, mother, if my days come near the days of your life, and my strength stays with me as yours does; and you will not die, for you are joking idly with me about your death." [9] She went in to Isaac and said to him, "I make one request of you: make Esau swear that he will not harm Jacob or pursue him with enmity; for you know Esau's thoughts, that they have been perverse from his youth, and there is no goodness in him; for he wants you dead, to kill him. [10] You know everything he has done from the day his brother Jacob went to Haran until this day: how he has abandoned us with his whole heart and done evil to us; he has taken your flocks for himself and carried off all your possessions from before your face. [11] When we begged and pleaded with him for what was our own, he acted like a man doing us a favor. [12] He is bitter against you because you blessed Jacob, your perfect and upright son; for there is no evil in him, only goodness, and since he came from Haran until this day he has not robbed us of anything, for he brings us everything in its season always, and rejoices with all his heart when we take from his hands, and he blesses us, and has not left us since he came from Haran until this day, and he stays with us continually at home, honoring us." [13] Isaac said to her, "I also know and see what Jacob does, how he honors us wholeheartedly. I used to love Esau more than Jacob because he was the firstborn, but now I love Jacob more, since Esau has done many wicked things and has no justice in him: every one of his ways is wrongdoing and violence. [14] Now my heart is troubled because of all his deeds, and neither he nor his descendants will be saved, for they are those who will be destroyed from the earth and rooted out from under heaven, for he has abandoned the God of Abraham and gone after his wives and after their uncleanness and their error, he and his children. [15] You tell me to make him swear that he will not kill his brother Jacob; even if he swears, he will not keep his oath, and he will do no good but only evil. [16] But if he wants to kill his brother Jacob, he will be given into Jacob's hands, and will not escape from his hands. [17] Do not be afraid for Jacob, for Jacob's guardian is great, powerful, honored, and praised more than Esau's guardian."[b] 18 Rebecca sent and called Esau, and he came to her, and she said to him, "I have a request to make of you, my son, and promise to do it, my son." 19 He said, "I will do everything you say to me, and I will not refuse your request." 20 She said to him, "I ask that on the day I die you will take me in and bury me near Sarah, your father's mother, and that you and Jacob will love each other, and that neither will want evil against the other, but only mutual love, and so you will prosper, my sons, and be honored in the midst of the land, and no enemy will rejoice over you, and you will be a blessing and a mercy in the eyes of all who love you." 21 He said,

"I will do all you have told me, and I will bury you on the day you die near Sarah, my father's mother, as you desire that her bones be near your bones. 22 And my brother Jacob I will love above every other person, since I have no brother in the whole world except him. There is no great virtue in my loving him: he is my brother, we were planted together in your body and came out together from your womb. If I did not love my brother, whom would I love? 23 I myself beg you to exhort Jacob concerning me and my sons, for I know that he will surely be king over me and my sons, for on the day my father blessed him he made him the higher and me the lower. 24 I swear to you that I will love him, and not want evil against him all the days of my life, but only good." And he swore to her about all this matter. 25 She called Jacob before Esau's eyes and gave him a commandment according to the words she had spoken to Esau. 26 He said, "I will do what pleases you; believe me that no evil will come from me or my sons against Esau, and I will be first in nothing but love." 27 They ate and drank, she and her sons, that night, and she died that night, three jubilees and one week and one year old, and her two sons Esau and Jacob buried her in the double cave near Sarah, their father's mother.[c]

Notes

- a (35:1) Year 2157 from creation in Charles's count.
- b (35:17) "Guardian" here is a guardian angel; compare Matt 18:10; Acts 12:15.

Chapter 36

Isaac's Last Words and Death; the Death of Leah

1 In the sixth year of this week Isaac summoned his two sons, Esau and Jacob. When they came he told them, "My sons, I am about to take the road my fathers took, to the everlasting home where they are.[a] 2 So bury me near my father Abraham, in the double cave in the field of Ephron the Hittite, where Abraham bought a tomb to bury in; in the tomb that I dug for myself, bury me there. 3 I command you, my sons, to practice righteousness and uprightness on the earth, so that the Lord may bring on you all that the Lord said he would do for Abraham and his descendants. 4 Love each other, my sons, the way a person loves his own life. Let each look for ways to help his brother, and let them work together in the land, loving one another as they love themselves. 5 Concerning idols, I command and warn you to reject them and hate them and not love them, for they are full of deception for those who worship them and bow down to them. 6
Remember, my sons, the Lord God of your father Abraham, and how
I too worshiped him and served him in righteousness and joy, so that he might multiply you and increase your descendants like the stars of heaven, and establish you on the earth as the plant of righteousness that will not be rooted out through all generations forever. 7 Now I will make you swear a great oath, for there is no oath greater than it, by the glorious, honored, great, splendid, wonderful, and mighty name, which created the heavens and earth and all things together, that you will fear him and worship him. 8 And that each of you will love his brother with affection and righteousness, and that neither of you will want evil against his brother from now on forever, all the days of your life, so that you may prosper in all your deeds and not be destroyed. 9 If either of you plots evil against his brother, know that from now on everyone who plots evil against his brother will fall into his hand and be rooted out of the land of the living, and his descendants will be destroyed from under heaven. 10 On the day of confusion, of cursing, fury, and anger, with blazing, consuming fire, just as he burned Sodom, so he will burn that man's land and town and everything he owns. He will be wiped from the book of human instruction and not entered in the book of life, but in the book marked for destruction. He will depart into an everlasting curse, so that their sentence is renewed forever in hatred, cursing, rage, torment, fury, plagues, and sickness. 11 I say and testify to you, my sons, according to the judgment that will come on the man who wants to injure his brother." 12 He divided all his possessions between the two on that day, and he gave the larger portion to the firstborn, together with the tower and everything around it, and everything Abraham had possessed at the Well of the Oath. 13 He said, "This larger portion I will give to the firstborn." 14 Esau said, "I sold my birthright to Jacob and gave it to him; let it be given to him, and I have nothing to say about it, for it is his." 15 Isaac said, "May a blessing rest on you, my sons, and on your descendants this day, for you have given me rest, and my heart is not pained about the birthright, lest you work wickedness because of it. 16 May the Most High God bless the man who works righteousness, him and his descendants forever." 17 When he had finished instructing and blessing them, they ate and drank together in his presence. He was glad that the two were of one mind. They left him, spent the rest of the day at rest, and went to sleep. 18 That day Isaac lay down on his bed, glad at heart, and fell into the everlasting sleep, dying at a hundred and eighty. He had lived twenty-five weeks of years and five years. His two sons, Esau and Jacob, buried him.[b] 19 Esau went to the land of Edom, to the mountains of Seir, and lived there. 20 Jacob lived in the mountains of Hebron, in the tower of the land of the wanderings of his father Abraham, and he worshiped the Lord with all his heart and according to the visible commands, as he had divided the days of his generations.[c] 21 Leah, his wife, died in the fourth year of the second week of the forty-fifth jubilee. He buried her in the twin cave next to his mother Rebecca, on the left of the tomb of Sarah, his father's mother.[d] 22 All her sons and his sons came to mourn over his wife Leah with him, and to comfort him about her, for he was lamenting her. 23 For he loved her very much after her sister Rachel died; for she was perfect and upright in all her ways and honored Jacob, and all the days she lived with him he did not hear a harsh word from her mouth, for she was gentle, peaceable, upright, and honorable. 24

He remembered all her deeds that she had done during her life, and he lamented her greatly; for he loved her with all his heart and all his soul.

Chapter 37

Esau's Sons Make War on Jacob

1 On the day that Isaac, the father of Jacob and Esau, died, the sons of Esau heard that Isaac had given the elder's portion to his younger son Jacob, and they were very angry.[a] 2 They quarreled with their father, saying, "Why has your father given Jacob the elder's portion and passed over you, although you are the elder and Jacob the younger?" 3 He told them, "I traded my birthright to Jacob for a bowl of lentil stew. Then, the day my father sent me out to hunt game and bring him something to eat so he could bless me, Jacob came in with a trick and brought my father food and drink. My father blessed him and made me his subject. 4 Now our father has made us swear, me and him, that we will not plot evil against each other, but will continue in love and peace, each with his brother, and not make our ways corrupt." 5 They said to him, "We will not listen to you to make peace with him; for our strength is greater than his, and we are more powerful than he; we will go against him and kill him and destroy him and his sons. And if you will not go with us, we will do harm to you too. 6 Now listen to us: let us send to Aram, Philistia, Moab, and Ammon, and choose for ourselves chosen men who are eager for battle, and let us go against him and fight him, and exterminate him from the earth before he grows strong."[b] 7 Their father said to them, "Do not go and do not make war with him, or you will fall before him." 8 They said to him, "This too is exactly how you have behaved from your youth until this day, and you put your neck under his yoke. We will not listen to these words." 9 They sent to Aram and to Aduram, the friend of their father, and hired a thousand fighting men with them, chosen men of war. 10 From Moab and from the Ammonites came a thousand hired chosen men, and from Philistia a thousand chosen men of war, and from Edom and the Horites a thousand chosen fighting men, and from the Kittim mighty men of war. 11 They said to their father, "Go out with them and lead them, or we will kill you." 12 He burned with rage when he saw that his sons were pushing him to march in front of them against his brother Jacob. 13 But afterward he remembered all the evil lying hidden in his heart against his brother Jacob; and he did not remember the oath he had sworn to his father and mother that he would never plot evil against his brother Jacob. 14 In spite of all this, Jacob did not know they were coming against him to battle, and he was mourning for his wife Leah, until they came very near the tower with four thousand warriors and chosen men of war. 15 The people of Hebron sent him word: "Your brother is marching against you to fight, with four thousand swordsmen carrying shields and weapons."

They sent this because they preferred Jacob to Esau; Jacob was the more generous and kind of the two. 16 But Jacob would not believe it until they came very near the tower. 17 He shut the gates of the tower, and stood on the battlements and spoke to his brother Esau and said,
"Noble is the comfort with which you have come to comfort me for my wife who has died. Is this the oath you swore to your father and again to your mother before they died? You have broken the oath, and at the moment you swore to your father you were condemned." 18 Then Esau answered and said to him, "Neither human beings nor the animals of the earth have any oath of righteousness that, once sworn, holds forever; every day they plot evil against each other, and how each may kill his adversary and enemy. 19 You hate me and my children forever. There is no keeping the tie of brotherhood with you.
20 Hear what I now declare to you: only if the boar can change its hide and turn its bristles soft as wool, or grow horns on its head like a stag's or a ram's, will I honor the bond of brotherhood with you. c 21
If wolves make peace with lambs so as not to devour or harm them, and if their hearts are good toward them, then there will be peace in my heart toward you. 22 If the lion becomes the friend of the ox and makes peace with him, and is bound under one yoke with him and plows with him, then I will make peace with you. 23 When the raven becomes white as the raza, then know that I have loved you and will make peace with you. You will be rooted out, and your sons will be rooted out, and there will be no peace for you."[d] 24 When Jacob saw that Esau was so evilly disposed toward him with his heart and all his soul as to kill him, and that he had come springing like the wild boar that charges on the spear that pierces and kills it and does not recoil from it, 25 he spoke to his own men and to his servants that they should attack him and all his companions.

Notes

- a (37:1) The story of the war between Jacob's sons and Esau, in chapters 37 and 38, is also found in Testament of Judah 9 and in later Jewish tradition; Jubilees has the oldest form. Several peoples named here played a part in Maccabean wars.
- b (37:6) Aram is Syria, the ruling power in the Maccabean period.
- c (37:20) Sayings of this kind compare with the rebuke to Akiba: "Sooner will grass grow on your beard than the Messiah appear." The boar may stand for Esau.
- d (37:23) The raza is a large white bird said to eat grasshoppers.

Chapter 38

The Battle at the Tower and the Kings of Edom

1 After that Judah spoke to his father Jacob and said to him, "Bend your bow, father, and shoot your arrows and bring down the adversary and kill the enemy; and may you have the power, for we will not kill your brother, since he is like you and the same as you; let us give him this honor." 2 Then Jacob bent his bow and shot the arrow and struck his brother Esau on his right breast and killed him.[a] 3 Again he shot an arrow and struck Adoran the Aramean on the left breast, and drove him backward and killed him. 4 Then Jacob's sons went out, they and their servants, dividing themselves into companies on the four sides of the tower. 5 Judah led the way, with Naphtali, Gad, and fifty servants at his side, to the south of the tower. They struck down everyone in front of them, and no one got away. 6 Levi, Dan, and Asher went out on the east side of the tower, and fifty men with them, and they killed the fighting men of Moab and Ammon.

7 Reuben, Issachar, and Zebulun went out on the north side of the tower, and fifty men with them, and they killed the fighting men of the Philistines. 8 Simeon, Benjamin, and Enoch, Reuben's son, went out on the west side of the tower, and fifty men with them, and they killed four hundred men of Edom and the Horites, stout warriors; and six hundred fled, and four of Esau's sons fled with them, and left their father lying dead, where he had fallen on the hill that is in Aduram.[b] 9 Jacob's sons pursued them to the mountains of Seir. Jacob buried his brother on the hill that is in Aduram, and he returned to his house. 10 Jacob's sons leaned hard on Esau's sons in the highlands of Seir and bent their necks, so that they became servants to Jacob's sons. 11 They sent to their father to ask whether they should make peace with them or kill them. 12 Jacob sent word to his sons to make peace. They did so and laid the yoke of servitude on the Edomites, who paid tribute to Jacob and his sons from then on. 13 They continued to pay tribute to Jacob until the day he went down to Egypt. 14 The sons of Edom have not got free of the yoke of servitude that the twelve sons of Jacob put on them, to this day.[c] 15 These are the kings who reigned in Edom before any king reigned over the children of Israel, in the land of Edom. 16 Balaq, son of Beor, reigned in Edom, and the name of his city was Danaba.[d] 17 Balaq died, and Jobab, son of Zara of Boser, reigned in his place. 18 Jobab died, and 'Asam of the land of Teman reigned in his place. 19 'Asam died, and 'Adath, son of Barad, who killed Midian in the field of Moab, reigned in his place, and the name of his city was Avith. 20 'Adath died, and Salman from 'Amaseqa reigned in his place. 21 Salman died, and Saul of Ra'aboth by the river reigned in his place. 22 Saul died, and Ba'elunan, son of Achbor, reigned in his place.
23 Ba'elunan, son of Achbor, died, and 'Adath reigned in his place, and the name of his wife was Maitabith, daughter of Matarat, daughter of Metabedza'ab. 24 These are the kings who reigned in the land of Edom.

Notes

- a (38:2) Later tradition says Esau was killed by Chushim, son of Dan, at Machpelah, when Jacob's body was brought there for burial.

- b (38:8) Aduram is the Adora of 1 Macc 13:20 in Edom, captured by John Hyrcanus, who forced the Edomites to accept circumcision. In Testament of Judah 9 the name appears as Anoniram.
- c (38:14) "To this day" is the author's own day; Edom was made tributary to Israel by John Hyrcanus.
- d (38:16) These names follow Gen 36:31–39 in the Greek form. Balaq is Bela; Danaba is Dinhabah.

Chapter 39

Joseph in Potiphar's House and in Prison

1 Jacob lived in the land of his father's wanderings, in the land of Canaan. 2 These are the generations of Jacob. Joseph was seventeen years old when they took him down to the land of Egypt, and Potiphar, Pharaoh's official, the chief cook, bought him.[a] 3 He set Joseph over all his house, and the blessing of the Lord came on the Egyptian's house because of Joseph, and the Lord made him prosper in everything he did. 4 The Egyptian committed everything into Joseph's hands, for he saw that the Lord was with him and that the Lord made him prosper in everything he did. 5 Joseph's appearance was handsome, very beautiful was his appearance, and his master's wife lifted up her eyes and saw Joseph, and she loved him and begged him to be with her. 6 But he did not surrender himself. He remembered the Lord, and what his father Jacob used to read to him from Abraham's teachings: that no man may commit adultery with a married woman, that death is the penalty fixed for him in heaven before God Most High, and that his sin will be entered against him in the eternal books before the Lord forever. 7 Joseph remembered these words and refused to lie with her. 8 She begged him for a year, but he refused and would not listen. 9 But she threw her arms around him and clung to him inside the house, trying to force him to lie with her.
She had shut the doors. He left his cloak in her hands, burst through the door, and ran out of her sight. 10 The woman saw that he would not lie with her, and she slandered him in the presence of her lord, saying, "Your Hebrew servant, whom you love, tried to force me so that he might lie with me; and when I raised my voice he fled and left his garment in my hands when I held him, and he broke through the door." 11 The Egyptian saw Joseph's garment and the broken door and heard his wife's words, and he threw Joseph into prison, into the place where the prisoners the king imprisoned were kept. 12 He stayed there in the prison, and the Lord granted Joseph the goodwill and pity of the chief jailer, who saw that the Lord was with him and made all his work succeed. 13 He committed everything into his hands, and the chief of the prison guards knew nothing of what was with him, for Joseph did everything, and the Lord brought it to completion. 14

He stayed there two years. In those days Pharaoh, king of Egypt, was angry with his two officials, the chief butler and the chief baker, and he put them in custody in the house of the chief cook, in the prison where Joseph was kept. 15 The chief of the prison guards appointed Joseph to serve them, and he served them. 16 The two of them had a dream, the chief cupbearer and the chief baker, and they told it to Joseph. 17 As he interpreted to them, so it happened to them, and Pharaoh restored the chief butler to his office, and killed the chief baker, as Joseph had interpreted to them. 18 But the chief butler forgot Joseph in the prison, although he had told him what would happen to him, and he did not remember to tell Pharaoh how Joseph had told him, for he forgot.

Notes

- a (39:2) "Chief cook" renders the Greek of Gen 37:36; the Hebrew means "captain of the guard." See 34:11.

Chapter 40

Pharaoh's Dreams and Joseph's Rise

1 In those days Pharaoh dreamed two dreams in one night concerning a famine that was to come over all the land, and he woke from his sleep and called all the interpreters of dreams in Egypt and the magicians, and told them his two dreams, and they were not able to explain them. 2 Then the chief butler remembered Joseph and spoke of him to the king, and he brought him out of the prison, and he told his two dreams before him. 3 He told Pharaoh that the two dreams were a single dream, and he said, "Seven years of abundance are coming over the whole land of Egypt, and after them seven years of famine, a famine unlike any the land has known. [4] Let Pharaoh now name officials across Egypt to collect and store grain in every town during the years of plenty. Then there will be food for the seven years of famine, and the country will not perish in the famine, which will be extremely harsh." [5] The Lord gave Joseph favor and mercy in Pharaoh's eyes, and Pharaoh said to his servants, "We will not find such a wise and discerning man as this man, for the spirit of the Lord is with him." [6] He appointed him second in all his kingdom and gave him authority over all Egypt, and had him ride in Pharaoh's second chariot. [7] He clothed him with linen garments and put a gold chain on his neck, and a herald proclaimed before him, "'El 'El wa 'Abirer," and he put a ring on his hand and made him ruler over all his house, and magnified him, and said to him: "Only on the throne will I be greater than you."[a] [8] Joseph governed all of Egypt. Pharaoh's officials, his servants, and everyone who handled the king's business loved him, because he behaved with integrity, free of pride and arrogance, showing no favoritism and accepting no bribes, and judged all the people of the land fairly. [9] Egypt enjoyed peace under Pharaoh because of Joseph. The Lord was with him and gave him favor and kindness throughout his life among everyone who knew him or heard of him, and Pharaoh's realm was well governed. There was no Satan and no wicked person in it.[b] [10] The king called Joseph's name Sephantiphans, and gave Joseph as wife the daughter of Potiphar, daughter of the priest of Heliopolis, the chief cook.[c] [11] On the day Joseph stood before Pharaoh he was thirty years old. [12] In that year Isaac died. And as Joseph had said in the interpretation of the two dreams, there were seven years of plenty over all the land of Egypt, and the land of Egypt produced abundantly, one measure yielding eighteen hundred measures. [13] Joseph gathered food into every city until they were full of grain, until they could no longer count and measure it for its great quantity.

Notes

- a (40:7) "'El 'El wa 'Abirer" probably reflects Hebrew 'el 'el wa-'abir 'el, "God, God, and the mighty one of God," an expansion of the Hebrew word abrek ("bow

the knee") in Gen 41:43. "Mighty one of God" may be a title of a great magician; compare Acts 8:10.

- b (40:9) The absence of Satan is a sign of great happiness; compare 23:29.
- c (40:10) Sephantiphans is Zaphenath-paneah (Gen 41:45). The author treats Potiphar of Gen 37:36 and Potiphera of Gen 41:45 as one man. Later Jewish legend makes Asenath a daughter of Dinah raised in his house.

Chapter 41

Judah and Tamar

1 In the second year of the second week of the forty-fifth jubilee, Judah chose a wife for his firstborn Er from the daughters of Aram, a woman named Tamar.[a] 2 Er detested her and did not sleep with her, because his own mother was a Canaanite woman and he wanted a wife from his mother's family, but his father Judah would not permit it. 3 This Er, Judah's firstborn, was wicked, and the Lord killed him. 4 Judah said to his brother Onan, "Go in to your brother's wife and do a husband's brother's duty to her, and raise up offspring for your brother." 5 Onan knew that the offspring would not be his, but his brother's only, and he went into his brother's wife's house and spilled the seed on the ground; and he was wicked in the Lord's eyes, and he killed him. 6 Judah said to Tamar, his daughter-in-law, "Stay in your father's house as a widow until my son Shelah grows up, and I will give you to him as a wife." 7 He grew up; but Bedsu'el, Judah's wife, did not allow her son Shelah to marry. And Bedsu'el, Judah's wife, died in the fifth year of this week.[b] 8 In the sixth year Judah went up to shear his sheep at Timnah. They told Tamar, "Look, your father-in-law is going up to Timnah to shear his sheep."[c] 9 She took off her widow's clothing, put on a veil, made herself up, and sat at the town gate by the road to Timnah. 10 As Judah was going along he found her and thought she was a prostitute, and he said to her, "Let me come in to you"; and she said to him, "Come in," and he went in. 11 She said to him, "Give me my pay"; and he said to her, "I have nothing in my hand but my ring on my finger, and my necklace, and the staff in my hand." 12 She said to him, "Give them to me until you send me my pay"; and he said to her, "I will send you a kid from the goats"; and he gave them to her, and went in to her, and she conceived by him. 13 Judah went to his sheep, and she went to her father's house.

14 Judah sent a young goat by his shepherd, an Adullamite, but the man could not find her. He asked the locals, "Where is the prostitute who was here?" They answered, "We have no prostitute here." 15 He returned and told him that he had not found her: "I asked the people of the place, and they said to me, 'There is no prostitute here.'" He said, "Let her keep them, or we will become a laughingstock." 16 When she had completed three months, it was plain that she was pregnant, and they told Judah, "Look, your daughter-in-law Tamar is pregnant by prostitution." 17 Judah went to her father's house and said to her father and her brothers, "Bring her out and let them burn her, for she has done an unclean thing in Israel."[d] 18 When they brought her out to burn her, she sent the ring, the necklace, and the staff to her father-in-law, saying, "Recognize whose these are, for by him I am pregnant." 19 Judah recognized them and said, "Tamar is more righteous than I am.
Therefore let them not burn her." 20 For that reason she was not given to Shelah, and he did not approach her again. 21 After that she bore two sons, Perez and Zerah, in the seventh year of this second week.[e] 22 With that, the seven years of fruitfulness of which Joseph spoke to Pharaoh were completed. 23 Judah admitted that what he had done was wrong, since he had slept with his daughter-in-law. He found it repulsive and conceded that he had sinned and gone astray, having exposed his own son's robe. He began to lament and plead with the Lord for his offense. 24 We told him in a dream that it was forgiven him because he pleaded earnestly and lamented and did not do it again.
25 He received forgiveness because he turned from his sin and from his ignorance, for he had transgressed greatly before our God; and everyone who acts in this way, everyone who lies with his mother-in-law, let them burn him with fire, so that he burns in it, for uncleanness and pollution are on them; let them burn them with fire.[f] 26 And you, command the children of Israel that there be no uncleanness among them, for everyone who lies with his daughter-in-law or with his mother-in-law has committed uncleanness; let them burn the man who lay with her with fire, and likewise the woman, and he will turn wrath and punishment away from Israel.[g] 27 To Judah we declared that his two sons had not slept with her, and for that reason his line was kept going into a second generation and would not be uprooted. [28] For in singleness of eye he had gone and sought punishment, namely according to the judgment of Abraham, which he had commanded his sons: Judah had sought to burn her with fire.[h]

Chapter 42

The Brothers' Two Journeys to Egypt

[1] In the first year of the third week of the forty-fifth jubilee, famine began to settle on the land; the rain refused to fall at all.[a] [2] The earth turned barren, yet in Egypt there was food, since Joseph had gathered grain in the seven years of plenty and kept it safe. [3] The Egyptians came to Joseph for him to give them food, and he opened the storehouses where the grain of the first year was, and sold it to the people of the land for gold. [4] The famine was terribly severe in Canaan. Jacob heard there was grain in Egypt and sent his ten sons there to buy some for him. He did not send Benjamin, and Jacob's ten sons reached Egypt together with the others who had come. [5] Joseph recognized them, but they did not recognize him, and he spoke to them and questioned them, and said to them, "Are you not spies, and have you not come to explore the approaches of the land?" And he put them in custody. [6] After that he set them free again, and held Simeon alone and sent his nine brothers away. [7] He filled their sacks with grain, and put their gold in their sacks, and they did not know. [8] He commanded them to bring their younger brother, for they had told him that their father was living, and their younger brother. 9

They went up from the land of Egypt and came to the land of Canaan, and told their father all that had happened to them and how the lord of the country had spoken harshly to them and had seized Simeon until they should bring Benjamin. 10 Jacob said, “You have bereaved me of my children! Joseph is gone and Simeon is gone too, and you will take Benjamin away. Your wickedness has come on me.”[b] 11 He said, “My son will not go down with you, in case he falls sick; for their mother bore two sons, and one has perished, and you will take this one from me too. If he were to catch a fever on the road, you would bring my old age down with sorrow to death.”[c] 12 For he saw that their money had been returned to each man in his sack, and for this reason he was afraid to send him. 13 The famine increased and became severe in the land of Canaan and in all lands except the land of Egypt, for many of the Egyptians had stored up their seed for food from the time they saw Joseph gathering seed together and putting it in storehouses and keeping it for the years of famine. 14 The people of Egypt fed themselves on it during the first year of their famine. 15 But when Israel saw that the famine was very severe in the land and there was no relief, he said to his sons, “Go again and get food for us so that we do not die.” 16 They said, “We will not go; unless our youngest brother goes with us, we will not go.” 17 Israel saw that if he did not send him with them, they would all perish because of the famine. 18 Reuben said, “Hand him over to me. If I do not bring him back to you, put my two sons to death in place of his life.” Jacob answered, “He will not go with you.” 19 Judah stepped forward and said, “Send him with me. If I do not bring him back, let the blame rest on me before you for the rest of my days.” 20 He sent him along with them in the second year of this week, on the first of the month. They reached Egypt with the other travelers, carrying gifts: balm, almonds, terebinth nuts, and pure honey.[d] 21 They went and stood before Joseph, and he saw his brother Benjamin and knew him, and said to them, “Is this your youngest brother?” They said to him, “It is he.” He said, “May the Lord be gracious to you, my son!” 22 He sent him into his house and brought Simeon out to them, and made a feast for them, and they presented to him the gift they had brought in their hands. [23] They ate before him, and he gave them all a portion, but Benjamin's portion was seven times larger than any of theirs. [24] They ate and drank and got up and stayed with their donkeys. [25] Joseph devised a plan to learn their thoughts, whether thoughts of peace prevailed among them, and he said to the steward over his house, "Fill all their sacks with food, and return their money to them in their containers, and put my cup, the silver cup I drink from, in the sack of the youngest, and send them away."

Chapter 43

Joseph Makes Himself Known

[1] He did as Joseph had instructed, filling all their sacks with grain, returning each man's money into his sack, and placing the cup in Benjamin's sack. [2] Early in the morning they left, and when they had gone from there, Joseph said to the steward of his house, "Pursue them, run and seize them, saying, 'You have repaid me evil for good; you have stolen from me the silver cup from which my lord drinks.' And bring their youngest brother back to me, and bring him quickly before I go out to my seat of judgment." [3] He ran after them and said these words to them. [4] They said to him, "God forbid that your servants should do this thing and steal any vessel from your lord's house, when the money we found in our sacks the first time we, your servants, brought back from the land of Canaan. [5] How then should we steal any vessel? Look, here we are with our sacks; search, and wherever you find the cup in the sack of any of us, let him be killed, and we and our donkeys will serve your lord." [6] He said to them, "Not so; the man with whom I find it, only he will I take as a servant, and you will return in peace to your house." [7] As he searched their containers, beginning with the eldest and ending with the youngest, it was found in Benjamin's sack. [8] They tore their clothes and loaded their donkeys and returned to the city and came to Joseph's house, and they all bowed down on their faces to the ground before him. 9 Joseph said to them, "You have done evil." They said, "What shall we say and how shall we defend ourselves? Our lord has discovered the transgression of his servants; look, we are our lord's servants, and our donkeys too." 10 Joseph said to them, "I also fear the Lord. As for you, go to your homes and let your brother be my servant, for you have done evil. Do you not know that a man delights in his cup as I do in this cup? And yet you have stolen it from me."[a] 11 Judah said, "O my lord, let your servant, I pray, speak a word in my lord's ear: your servant's mother bore two sons to our father; one went away and was lost and has not been found, and he alone is left of his mother, and our father, your servant, loves him, and his life is bound up with this boy's life. 12 When we go to your servant our father and the boy is not with us, he will die, and we will bring our father down with sorrow to death. 13 Now let me, your servant, stay in place of the boy as a slave to my lord, and let the boy go with his brothers, for I became surety for him from the hand of your servant our father, and if I do not bring him back, your servant will bear the blame before our father forever." 14 Joseph saw that they were all of one mind in goodness toward each other, and he could not control himself, and he told them that he was Joseph. 15 He spoke with them in the Hebrew language and fell on their necks and wept. But they did not recognize him, and they began to weep.[b] 16 He said to them, "Do not weep over me, but hurry and bring my father to me; and you see that it is my mouth that speaks and the eyes of my brother Benjamin that see. 17 This is only the second year of the famine, and five more years remain with no harvest, no fruit on the trees, and no plowing. 18 Come down quickly, you and your households, so that you do not perish through the famine, and do not grieve over your possessions, for the Lord sent me before you to set things in order so that many people might live. 19 Tell my father that I am alive. See, you can tell him the Lord has made me a father to Pharaoh and master of his house and of the whole country of Egypt.

20 Tell my father of all my glory and all the riches and glory the Lord has given me." 21 By the command of Pharaoh's mouth he gave them chariots and provisions for the way, and gave them all many-colored clothing and silver. 22 To their father he sent clothing and silver and ten donkeys carrying grain, and he sent them away. 23 They went up and told their father that Joseph was alive, that he was measuring out grain to all the nations of the world, and that he ruled all of Egypt. 24 Their father could not believe it, for he was out of his mind with shock. But when he saw the wagons Joseph had sent, his spirit came back to life. He said, "It is enough for me that Joseph lives. I will go down to see him before I die."

Notes

- a (43:10) Compare Gen 44:15, "Do you not know that a man like me can divine?" The change in Jubilees may be deliberate.
- b (43:15) That Joseph spoke Hebrew is a Midrashic touch; compare Genesis Rabbah 93.

Chapter 44

Jacob Goes Down to Egypt

1 Israel left his home on the first of the third month, traveled by way of the Well of the Oath, and on the seventh of that month offered a sacrifice to the God of his father Isaac.[a] 2 Jacob remembered the dream he had seen at Bethel, and he was afraid to go down to Egypt. 3 He was considering sending word to Joseph to come to him, since he himself did not wish to go down. So he waited there seven days, in case a vision might show him whether to stay or to go down. 4 He celebrated the harvest feast of first fruits with old grain, because in all Canaan there was not a handful of seed; the famine had struck the wild animals, the livestock, and the birds, as well as human beings.[b] 5 On the sixteenth the Lord appeared to him and said to him, "Jacob, Jacob." He said, "Here I am." He said to him, "I am the God of your fathers, the God of Abraham and Isaac; do not be afraid to go down to Egypt, for I will make a great nation of you there.[c] 6 I will go down with you, and I will bring you up again, and in this land you will be buried, and Joseph will close your eyes with his hands. Do not be afraid; go down to Egypt." 7 His sons and his sons' sons got up and put their father and their possessions on wagons. 8 Israel left the Well of the Oath on the sixteenth of this third month and went to the land of Egypt. 9 Israel sent Judah ahead of him to his son Joseph to survey the land of Goshen, for Joseph had told his brothers to come and live there so they might be near him. 10 This was the best land in the land of Egypt, and near him, for all of them and for the cattle

too. 11 These are the names of the sons of Jacob who went to Egypt with their father Jacob.[d] 12 Reuben, the firstborn of Israel; and these are the names of his sons: Enoch, Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi — five, counting the father. 13 Simeon and his sons; and these are the names of his sons: Jemuel, Jamin, Ohad, Jachin, Zohar, and Shaul, son of the Zephathite woman — seven.[e] 14 Levi and his sons; and these are the names of his sons: Gershon, Kohath, and Merari — four. 15 Judah and his sons; and these are the names of his sons: Shelah, Perez, and Zerah — four. 16 Issachar and his sons; and these are the names of his sons: Tola, Phua, Jasub, and Shimron — five. 17 Zebulun and his sons; and these are the names of his sons: Sered, Elon, and Jahleel
— four. 18 These are the sons of Jacob, and their sons, born to him by Leah in Mesopotamia: six sons, and one sister, Dinah. All the persons descended from Leah who went to Egypt with their father
Jacob numbered twenty-nine; counting their father Jacob, thirty. 19
The sons of Zilpah, Leah's servant, wife of Jacob, whom she bore to Jacob: Gad and Asher. 20 These are the names of their sons who went with him to Egypt: the sons of Gad: Ziphion, Haggi, Shuni, Ezbon, Eri, Areli, and Arodi — eight. 21 The sons of Asher: Imnah, Ishvah, Ishvi, Beriah, and Serah, their one sister — six. 22 All the souls were fourteen, and all those of Leah were forty-four. 23 The sons of Rachel, wife of Jacob: Joseph and Benjamin. 24 To Joseph in Egypt, before his father came to Egypt, were born those whom Asenath, daughter of Potiphar, priest of Heliopolis, bore to him: Manasseh and Ephraim — three. 25 The sons of Benjamin: Bela, Becher, Ashbel, Gera, Naaman, Ehi, Rosh, Muppim, Huppim, and Ard — eleven. 26 All the souls of Rachel were fourteen. 27 The sons of Bilhah, the servant of Rachel, wife of Jacob, whom she bore to Jacob, were Dan and Naphtali. 28 These are the names of their sons who went with them to Egypt. The sons of Dan were Hushim, Samon, Asudi, 'Ijaka, and Salomon — six. 29 They died in the year in which they entered Egypt, and Hushim alone was left to Dan.[f] 30 These are the names of the sons of Naphtali: Jahziel, Guni, Jezer, Shallum, and 'Iv.[g] 31 And 'Iv, who was born after the years of famine, died in Egypt. 32 All the souls of Rachel were twenty-six. 33 All the souls of Jacob who went to Egypt were seventy souls. These are his children and his children's children, seventy in all; but five died in Egypt before Joseph and had no children. 34 In Canaan two of Judah's sons, Er and Onan, died childless. The Israelites buried those who died there, and they were counted among the seventy nations.

Notes

- a (44:1) First of month 3 is about May 21, and the seventh about May 27, in the book's 364-day calendar. The Ethiopic here reads "Haran" for the starting place, which is probably corrupt for Hebron; compare Gen 37:14. The Well of the Oath is Beersheba.
- b (44:4) The Feast of Weeks, the fifteenth of month 3 (about June 4). See Gen 46:1.
- c (44:5) The sixteenth is about June 5.
- d (44:11) The total of seventy includes Jacob himself. Another count, in Exod 1:5, reaches seventy by leaving Jacob out; Acts 7:14 has seventy-five, following the Greek. The lists below differ in places from Genesis 46, and the tallies in the Ethiopic text do not always add up.
- e (44:13) "Zephathite" means a native of the Canaanite city Zephath; compare Judg 1:17.
- f (44:29) Genesis 46:23 mentions Hushim alone.
- g (44:30) Neither Gen 46:24 nor 1 Chron 7:13 has 'Iv.

Chapter 45

Jacob in Egypt and His Death

1 On the first of the fourth month, in the second year of the third week of the forty-fifth jubilee, Israel entered Egypt, in the region of Goshen.[a] 2 Joseph went to meet his father Jacob in the land of Goshen, and fell on his father's neck and wept. 3 Israel said to Joseph, "Now I can die, having seen you. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, the God of Abraham and of Isaac, who has not held back his kindness and favor from his servant Jacob. 4 It is enough for me that I have seen your face while I am still alive; yes, the vision I saw at Bethel is true. Blessed be the Lord my God forever and ever, and blessed be his name." 5 Joseph and his brothers ate and drank in their father's presence. Jacob was overjoyed to see Joseph eating and drinking with his brothers in front of him, and he blessed the Maker of all things, who had kept him alive and kept all twelve of his sons for him. [6] Joseph gave his father and brothers, as a grant, the right to settle in Goshen, in Rameses, and in the whole surrounding district under his authority beneath Pharaoh. Israel and his sons lived in Goshen, the finest part of Egypt. Israel was a hundred and thirty years old when he arrived in Egypt. [7] Joseph supported his father and his brothers and also their possessions with as much bread as they needed for the seven years of the famine. [8] Egypt was devastated by the famine. In exchange for grain, Joseph acquired all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh, and took the people, their livestock, and everything else into Pharaoh's possession. [9] The years of famine were completed, and Joseph gave the people in the land seed and food so they could sow the land in the eighth year, for the river had overflowed all the land of Egypt. [10] During the seven famine years the river had not flooded and had watered only a few spots along its banks. Now it rose over its banks, the Egyptians sowed their fields, and that year the ground yielded abundant grain. [11] This was the first year of the fourth week of the forty-fifth jubilee.[b] [12] Joseph took a fifth part of the grain of the harvest for the king and left four parts for them as food and seed, and Joseph made it an ordinance for the land of Egypt until this day. [13] Israel lived in the land of Egypt seventeen years, and all the days he lived were three jubilees, a hundred and forty-seven years, and he died in the fourth year of the fifth week of the forty-fifth jubilee.[c] [14] Israel blessed his sons before he died and told them everything that would happen to them in the land of Egypt; and he made known to them what would come on them in the last days, and blessed them, and gave Joseph two portions in the land.[d] [15] He died and joined his ancestors, and was buried in the twin cave in Canaan, beside his father Abraham, in the tomb he had dug for himself in the twin cave in the region of Hebron. [16] He gave all his books and the books of his fathers to his son Levi so that he might preserve them and renew them for his children until this day.[e]

Chapter 46

Joseph's Death and the Oppression of Israel

1 After Jacob's death the Israelites multiplied in Egypt and became a great nation. They were united in heart: brother loved brother, and each helped the other. They increased enormously for ten weeks of years, throughout Joseph's lifetime.[a] 2 There was no Satan and no evil all the days of Joseph's life that he lived after his father Jacob, for all the Egyptians honored the children of Israel all the days of Joseph's life. 3 Joseph died aged one hundred ten. Seventeen of his years were spent in Canaan, ten as a slave, three in prison, and eighty serving the king as ruler of all Egypt. 4 He died, and all his brothers, and all that generation. 5 Before he died he ordered the Israelites to take his bones with them when they left Egypt. 6 He made them swear about his bones, for he knew that the Egyptians would not bring him out again and bury him in the land of Canaan, for Makamaron, king of Canaan, while living in the land of Assyria, fought in the valley with the king of Egypt and killed him there, and pursued the Egyptians to the gates of Ermon.[b] 7 He could not get in, because a different, newer king now ruled Egypt, a stronger man than he. So he went back to Canaan. The gates of Egypt were closed, and nobody left or entered. 8 Joseph died in the sixth week, second year, of the forty-sixth jubilee. He was buried in Egypt, and all his brothers died after him.[c] 9 In the second year of the second week of the forty-seventh jubilee, the king of Egypt marched to war against the king of Canaan. The Israelites carried out the bones of all Jacob's sons except Joseph's and buried them in the twin cave in the field on the mountain.[d] 10 Most of them returned to Egypt, but a few of them stayed in the mountains of Hebron, and your father Amram stayed with them.[e] 11 The king of Canaan was victorious over the king of Egypt, and he shut the gates of Egypt. 12 He devised an evil plan against the children of Israel, to afflict them; and he said to the people of Egypt, 13 "See how the Israelite people have grown more numerous and stronger than we are. Let us plan carefully against them before they multiply further, and wear them down with forced labor before war breaks out and they side against us. Otherwise they will join our enemies and leave our land, for their hearts and eyes are fixed on Canaan." 14 He appointed taskmasters over them to wear them down with forced labor. They built strong cities for Pharaoh, Pithom and Raamses, and rebuilt every wall and fortification in Egypt's cities that had collapsed. 15 They made them serve with harshness, and the more they dealt evilly with them, the more they increased and multiplied. 16 The people of Egypt loathed

the children of Israel.

Notes

- a (46:1) Ten weeks of years is seventy years.
- b (46:6) Makamaron is unidentified. Ermon is probably Heroonpolis, near the desert. Testament of Simeon 8 says the Egyptians guarded Joseph's bones in the royal tombs, because sorcerers said that darkness would fall on Egypt if they left. The war between Egypt and Canaan here may reflect the campaigns of Rameses III.
- c (46:8) Year 2242 from creation in Charles's count.
- d (46:9) Year 2263 from creation in Charles's count.
- e (46:10) The angel speaks to Moses. The remark implies that some Hebrews were already in Canaan before the exodus.

Chapter 47

The Birth and Early Life of Moses

1 In the seventh week, in the seventh year, in the forty-seventh jubilee, your father went out from the land of Canaan, and you were born in the fourth week, in the sixth year of it, in the forty-eighth jubilee; this was the time of tribulation for the children of Israel.[a] 2 Pharaoh, king of Egypt, issued an order about them that they should throw all their newborn male children into the river. 3 They threw them in for seven months, until the day you were born. Your mother hid you for three months, and they informed on her. 4 She made an ark for you and covered it with pitch and asphalt, and put it in the reeds on the bank of the river, and she put you in it seven days, and your mother came by night and nursed you, and by day Miriam,

your sister, guarded you from the birds. [5] In those days Tharmuth, the daughter of Pharaoh, came to bathe in the river, and she heard your voice crying, and she told her maidens to bring you out, and they brought you to her. [6] She took you out of the ark, and she had compassion on you. [7] Your sister said to her, "Shall I go and call one of the Hebrew women to nurse this baby for you?" She said to her, "Go." [8] She went and called your mother Jochebed, and she gave her wages, and she nursed you. [9] Afterward, when you had grown up, they brought you to the daughter of Pharaoh, and you became her son, and your father Amram taught you writing, and after you had completed three weeks they brought you into the royal court.[b] [10] You were three weeks of years at court, until you left the royal court and saw an Egyptian striking your friend, who was one of the children of Israel, and you killed him and hid him in the sand.[c] [11] On the second day you found two of the children of Israel quarreling, and you said to the one who was doing the wrong, "Why do you strike your brother?" [12] He was angry and indignant, and said, "Who made you a prince and a judge over us? Do you think to kill me as you killed the Egyptian yesterday?" And you were afraid and fled because of these words.

Chapter 48

From Moses' Flight to the Exodus

[1] In the sixth year of the third week of the forty-ninth jubilee you left and lived in the land of Midian for five weeks and one year. You returned to Egypt in the second week, in the second year, in the fiftieth jubilee.[a] [2] You yourself know what he said to you on Mount Sinai, and what Prince Mastema wanted to do with you when you were returning to Egypt, on the way, when you met him at the lodging place.[b] [3] Did he not with all his power seek to kill you and rescue the Egyptians from your hand, when he saw that you had been sent to carry out judgment and vengeance on the Egyptians?[c] [4] I rescued you from his hand, and you performed the signs and wonders you were sent to perform in Egypt against Pharaoh and all his house, his servants and his people. 5 For Israel's sake the Lord took great vengeance on them. He struck them with blood, frogs, lice, flies, and painful boils that broke out in sores; he struck their livestock dead;

he sent hail that destroyed everything that grew, and locusts that ate what the hail left, and darkness, and the death of the firstborn of people and animals. On all their idols the Lord took vengeance and burned them with fire.[d] 6 Everything was sent through your hand, so that you would declare these things before they were done, and you spoke with the king of Egypt before all his servants and before his people. 7 Everything happened according to your words; ten great and terrible judgments came on the land of Egypt, so that you might carry out vengeance on it for Israel. 8 The Lord did everything for Israel's sake and in keeping with his covenant, which he had made with Abraham, that he would take vengeance on them as they had brought them into bondage by force. 9 Prince Mastema stood against you and tried to throw you into Pharaoh's hands, and he helped the Egyptian sorcerers, and they stood up and worked before you. 10 We allowed them to work the evils, but we did not allow the remedies to be worked by their hands. 11 The Lord struck them with malignant ulcers, and they were not able to stand, for we destroyed them so that they could not perform a single sign. 12 Despite all these signs and wonders, Prince Mastema was not put to shame, because he took courage and cried out to the Egyptians to pursue you with all the forces of the Egyptians, with their chariots and horses and all the hosts of the peoples of Egypt. 13 I stood between Egypt and Israel, and we saved Israel from Pharaoh and his people. The Lord led the Israelites through the middle of the sea as though across dry ground.
14 All the nations he sent to chase Israel, the Lord our God hurled into the middle of the sea, into the deep abyss below the Israelites, just as the Egyptians had thrown their children into the river. He took vengeance on a million of them, and a thousand strong, vigorous men were destroyed for one nursing infant of your people whom they had thrown into the river.[e] 15 On the fourteenth day, on the fifteenth,

on the sixteenth, on the seventeenth, and on the eighteenth, Prince Mastema was bound and imprisoned behind the children of Israel so that he could not accuse them.[f] 16 On the nineteenth we let them loose so that they could help the Egyptians and pursue the children of Israel.[g] 17 He hardened their hearts and made them stubborn, and the plan was devised by the Lord our God, so that he might strike the Egyptians and throw them into the sea. 18 On the fourteenth we bound him so that he could not accuse the children of Israel on the day when they asked the Egyptians for vessels and garments, silver vessels, gold vessels, and bronze vessels, in order to plunder the Egyptians in return for the bondage in which they had forced them to serve. 19 We did not lead the children of Israel out of Egypt empty-handed.

Notes

- a (48:1) Years 2372 and 2410 from creation in Charles's count; five weeks and one year is 36 years. Midian: Exod 2:15.
- b (48:2) "Mastema" ("hostility") is the chief of the evil spirits in this book. Here he takes the place of the Lord in Exod 4:24 (compare 17:16 above and 1 Chron 21:1 against 2 Sam 24:1).
- c (48:3) Other readers say Moses had failed to circumcise his son (so Targum Pseudo-Jonathan on Exod 4:24); the explanation in Jubilees seems to be its author's own.
- d (48:5) This lists the ten plagues of Exod 7–12.
- e (48:14) This is another case of measure-for-measure punishment; compare 4:31 and Wisdom 18:5.
- f (48:15) In the 364-day calendar these days of month 1 fall about April 4–8.
- g (48:16) About April 9.

Chapter 49

Rules for the Passover

1 Remember the commandment the Lord gave you about the Passover, that you should keep it in its season on the fourteenth of the first month, that you should kill it before evening, and that they should eat it by night, on the evening of the fifteenth, from the time of sunset.[a] 2 For on this night, the beginning of the festival and the beginning of the joy, you were eating the Passover in Egypt, when all the powers of Mastema had been let loose to kill all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, from the firstborn of Pharaoh to the firstborn of the captive woman at the mill, and the cattle.[b] 3 This is the sign the Lord gave them: they should not enter to kill any house on whose doorposts they saw the blood of a lamb of the first year, but should pass over it, so that all those in the house would be saved, because the sign of the blood was on its doorposts. 4 The Lord's powers did everything as the Lord commanded them, and they passed over all the children of Israel, and the plague did not come on them to destroy any soul among them, whether of cattle, or people, or dog. 5 The plague struck Egypt with terrible force. Not one house in Egypt escaped a death, and the land was full of weeping and wailing. 6 All Israel was eating the Passover lamb's flesh and drinking wine, praising, blessing, and thanking the Lord God of their fathers, ready to leave Egypt's yoke and cruel slavery.[c] 7 Remember this day all the days of your life, and keep it from year to year all the days of your life, once a year, on its day, according to all its law, and do not put it off from day to day or from month to month. 8 For it is an eternal ordinance, engraved on the heavenly tablets concerning all the children of Israel, that they should keep it every year on its day, once a year, throughout all their generations; and there is no limit of days, for this is ordained forever.

9 Anyone who is clean, and nearby, yet fails to come and keep it on its day, bringing an acceptable offering before the Lord and eating and drinking in his presence at the festival, will be cut off. Since he did not bring the Lord's offering at its set time, he will carry his own guilt. 10 Let the Israelites come and keep the Passover at its fixed time, on the fourteenth of the first month, in the twilight between the two evenings, from the third part of the day until the third part of the night. Two parts of the day belong to the light and the third part to the evening.[d] 11 This is what the Lord commanded you, that you should keep it between the evenings. 12 It is not permitted to kill it during any part of the daylight, but at the time bordering on the evening, and let them eat it in the evening until the third part of the night, and whatever is left of all its flesh from the third part of the night onward, let them burn with fire.[e] 13 They are not to cook it in water, nor to eat it raw, but roasted on the fire: they are to eat it with care, its head with its inner parts, and its feet, roasted with fire, and not break any bone of it; for no bone of the children of Israel is to be crushed.[f] 14 For this reason the Lord commanded the children of Israel to keep the Passover on the day of its fixed time, and not to break a bone of it; for it is a festival day and a commanded day, and there is to be no passing over from day to day or month to month, but let it be kept on the day of its festival. 15 Order the Israelites to keep the Passover every year of their lives, once yearly at its fixed time. It will serve as a remembrance that pleases the Lord, and in any year in which they observe the Passover in its season exactly as he commanded, no plague will come among them to kill or strike. 16 They are not to eat it outside the Lord's sanctuary, but before the Lord's sanctuary, and all the people of the congregation of Israel are to celebrate it in its appointed season. 17 Every man who has come on its day is to eat it in the sanctuary of your God before the Lord, from twenty years old and up; for so it is written and ordained that they should eat it in the Lord's sanctuary. 18 When the children of Israel come into the land they are to possess, into the land of Canaan, and set up the Lord's tabernacle in the middle of the land in one of their tribes until the Lord's sanctuary has been built in the land, let them come and celebrate the Passover in the middle of the Lord's tabernacle, and let them kill it before the Lord from year to year. 19 In the days when the house has been built in the Lord's name in the land of their inheritance, they are to go there and kill the Passover in the evening, at sunset, at the third part of the day. 20 They are to offer its blood on the threshold of the altar and put its fat on the fire on the altar, and eat its flesh roasted with fire in the court of the house that has been sanctified in the Lord's name.[g] 21 They may not celebrate the Passover in their cities, nor in any place except before the Lord's tabernacle, or before his house where his name has dwelt; and they will not go astray from the Lord. 22 And you, Moses, order the Israelites to observe the Passover rules as you were commanded. Teach them every year the day of the festival, and the feast of unleavened bread, so that they eat unleavened bread for seven days, keep its festival, and each of those seven joyful days bring an offering before the Lord on your God's altar.[h] 23 For you celebrated this festival in haste when you left Egypt, until you entered the wilderness of Shur; for on the shore of the sea you completed it.

Notes

- a (49:1) Month 1, day 14 is about April 4 in the 364-day calendar. The fourteenth, a Tuesday, begins at sunset the evening before.
- b (49:2) In Exod 12:29 it is the Lord himself who strikes the firstborn.
- c (49:6) This is the first mention of wine at the Passover meal. Later custom prescribes four cups; see Mishnah Pesahim 10.
- d (49:10) The Jews divided the night into three watches, about 6–10 p.m., 10 p.m.–2 a.m., and 2–6 a.m.; the matching day-parts would be 6–10 a.m., 10 a.m.–2 p.m., and 2–6 p.m. This text says the last of these belongs to the evening. "Between the evenings" (Exod 12:6) was read by the Sadducees and Samaritans as between sunset and full dark, but by the Pharisees as the afternoon (about 3–6 p.m.).
- e (49:12) The rabbis limited the eating to midnight.
- f (49:13) The Latin, which is to be preferred, reads "There shall be no tribulation among the children of Israel on this day." "With care" renders a Greek word; the Hebrew of Exod 12:11 is "in haste."
- g (49:20) In later times the lamb was killed in the Temple but eaten in houses in Jerusalem, because of the great numbers of pilgrims.
- h (49:22) The Ethiopic is corrupt here; the Latin reads "during its days and during."

Chapter 50

The Jubilees and the Sabbath

1 After this law I made known to you the days of the Sabbaths in the desert of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai.[a] 2 I told you of the Sabbaths of the land on Mount Sinai, and I told you of the jubilee years in the sabbaths of years; but I have not told you the year of it until you enter the land you are to possess.[b] 3 The land too will keep its sabbaths while they live on it, and they will know the jubilee year.[c] 4 For this reason I have set out for you the year-weeks, the years, and the jubilees: there have been forty-nine jubilees from the days of Adam until this day, and one week and two years; and there are still forty years to come for learning the commandments of the Lord, until they cross over into the land of Canaan, crossing the Jordan to the west.[d] 5 The jubilees will pass by until Israel is cleansed from all guilt of fornication, uncleanness, pollution, sin, and error, and lives with confidence in all the land, and there will be no more Satan or any evil one, and the land will be clean from that time forever.[e] 6 Now look, the commandment about the Sabbaths: I have written it down for you, with all the judgments of its laws. 7 For six days you will work, but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord your God. You will do no work of any kind on that day, neither you, your sons, your male and female servants, your livestock, nor the foreigner living with you. 8 The man who does any work on it will die; whoever desecrates that day, whoever lies with his wife, or whoever says he will do something on it, that he will set out on a journey on it for buying or selling; and whoever draws water on it that he had not prepared for himself on the sixth day, and whoever picks up any burden to carry it out of his tent or out of his house, will die.[f] 9 Do no work whatever on the Sabbath, other than what you made ready on the sixth day, so that you can eat, drink, rest, and refrain from all labor that day, and bless the Lord your God, who gave you a day of festival and a holy day. This day, among all their days, is a day of the holy kingdom for all Israel, forever. 10 For great is the honor the Lord has given to Israel, that they should eat, drink, and be satisfied on this festival day, and rest on it from all labor that belongs to the labor of human beings, except burning incense and bringing offerings and sacrifices before the Lord for days and for Sabbaths. 11 This work alone is to be done on the Sabbath days in the sanctuary of the Lord your God, so that they may atone for Israel with sacrifice continually from day to day, as a memorial pleasing before the Lord, and that he may receive them always from day to day as you have been commanded.[g] 12 Every man who does any work on it, or goes on a journey, or tills his farm, whether in his house or any other place, and whoever lights a fire, or rides on any animal, or travels by ship on the sea, and whoever strikes or kills anything, or slaughters a beast or a bird, or whoever catches an animal or a bird or a fish, or whoever fasts or makes war on the Sabbaths:[h] 13 the man who does any of these things on the Sabbath will die, so that the children of Israel may keep the Sabbaths according to the commandments about the Sabbaths of the land, as it is written on the tablets that he gave into my hands, so that I should write out for you the laws of the seasons and the seasons according to the division of their days. This completes the account of the division of the days.

Notes

- a (50:1) Exod 16:1.
- b (50:2) Lev 25:8.
- c (50:3) Lev 26:34.
- d (50:4) The count is 49 × 49 + 7 + 2 = 2410 years from creation to the present moment in the story, with forty more years to the entry into Canaan, at 2450. A "year-week" is seven years.
- e (50:5) This points to the messianic age; compare 1:29 and 23:26–30.
- f (50:8) The rule against marital relations on the Sabbath is still followed by the Samaritans; the Mishnah teaches the opposite. Later rabbinic law allowed a journey of 2,000 cubits on the Sabbath (about 3,000 feet, a little over half a mile, or about 900 meters; the "Sabbath day's journey" of Acts 1:12). Buying and selling were forbidden by Nehemiah (Neh 10:31; 13:15–22). Drawing water is forbidden by the Karaite Jews.
- g (50:11) Compare Num 28:9–10 and Matt 12:5.
- h (50:12) Fire is forbidden in Exod 35:3. Riding on an animal is forbidden by the oral law. In the Maccabean wars the rule against fighting was at first kept strictly (1 Macc 2:31–38) and then relaxed (1 Macc 2:41).

2 Enoch

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

1 There was once a wise man and master craftsman whom the Lord[a] loved and welcomed, so that he might see the highest dwellings and witness for himself the wise, great, unimaginable, and unchanging kingdom of God Almighty; the astonishing, glorious, shining, and many-eyed station of the Lord's servants; the unapproachable throne of the Lord; the ranks and appearances of the bodiless hosts; the unspeakable service of the multitude of the elements; the many appearances and the inexpressible singing of the host of Cherubim; and the boundless light. 2 At that time, he says, when I had finished my 165th year, I fathered my son Methuselah.[b] 3 After that, I lived another two hundred years, so that my whole life came to 365 years. 4 On the first day of the month I was alone at home, resting on my bed, and I fell asleep. 5 While I slept, a great sorrow rose up in my heart, and in my sleep I wept, and I could not understand what this sorrow was or what was going to happen to me. 6 Then two men appeared to me, enormous, bigger than anyone I had ever seen on earth. Their faces shone like the sun, and their eyes were like burning lamps. Fire came from their mouths. Their clothing was a kind of singing, and its look was purple; their wings were brighter than gold, and their hands whiter than snow. 7 They stood at the head of my bed and began to call me by name. 8 I got up from my sleep and saw those two men clearly, standing before me. 9 I greeted them, and I was seized with fear; my face changed with terror. The men said to me, 10 "Take courage, Enoch, and do not be afraid. The eternal God has sent us to you, and look: today you will go up with us into heaven. You must tell your sons and all your household everything they are to do at home without you, and let no one come looking for you until the Lord brings you back to them." 11 I hurried to obey them and went out of my house. I went to the doors, as I was told, and called my sons Methuselah, Regim,[c] and Gaidad, and told them all the marvels the men had said to me.

Notes

- a (1:1) The Slavonic text uses Gospod', "Lord," where a Hebrew original would probably have had Yahweh, and Bog, "God." The Slavonic translation never writes the Hebrew name, so "Yahweh" is not supplied.
- b (1:2) "Methuselah" (Hebrew Metushelach) is a name of uncertain meaning, sometimes explained as "man of the spear." In Genesis 5:21 Enoch fathers him at the age of sixty-five; the 165 here is the figure given in the Septuagint's chronology.
- c (1:11) "Regim" and "Gaidad" appear as the names of Enoch's other sons in the Slavonic. Their meanings are not known; they have no counterpart in Genesis 5, which names only Methuselah as Enoch's son.

Chapter 2

1 "Listen to me, my children. I do not know where I am going or what will happen to me. So now, my children, I tell you: do not turn away from God to follow the empty idols, who did not make heaven and earth. They will perish, and so will those who worship them. May the Lord make your hearts steady in the fear of him. And now, my children, let no one try to look for me until the Lord brings me back to you."

Chapter 3

1 When Enoch had said all this to his sons, the angels lifted him onto their wings and carried him up to the first heaven, and set him down on the clouds. I looked down there, and then looked higher, and I saw the upper air. They set me in the first heaven and showed me a vast sea, greater than any sea on earth.

Chapter 4

1 They brought before me the elders and rulers of the star orders, and they showed me two hundred angels who govern the stars and their duties in the heavens. These angels fly on their wings and go around all who travel by sea.

Chapter 5

1 From there I looked down and saw the storehouses of the snow, the angels who guard the fearsome vaults, and the clouds from which the snow comes out and into which it goes back.

Chapter 6

1 They showed me the storehouse of the dew, which looked like olive oil, and its form, which resembled all the flowers of the earth. I also saw many angels guarding the storehouses of these things, and how they are made to shut and open.

Chapter 7

1 Then the men took me and led me up into the second heaven. They showed me a darkness greater than the darkness of the earth, and there I saw prisoners hanging, under guard, waiting for the great and endless judgment. These spirits looked dark, darker than earthly darkness, and they wept without stopping at every hour. 2 I said to the men who were with me, "Why are these being tormented without end?" They answered me, "These are the rebels against God, who did not obey God's commands but followed their own will, and turned aside with their prince, who is also chained up in the fifth heaven." 3
I felt a great pity for them. They bowed to me and said, "Man of God, pray for us to the Lord." I answered them, "Who am I, a mortal man, that I should pray for angels? Who knows where I am going, or what will happen to me? And who will pray for me?"

Chapter 8

1 Then the men led me from there up into the third heaven and put me down. I looked downward and saw the produce of that place, so good that nothing like it has ever been known. 2 I saw all the trees with their fragrant blossoms, and I looked at their fruit, which smelled sweet, and at all the food they bore, which gave off a scented steam. 3
In the middle of the trees stood the tree of life, in the spot where the Lord rests when he goes up into Paradise.[a] This tree is indescribably good and fragrant, more beautifully made than anything that exists.
On every side it is golden and crimson and fiery in appearance, and it covers everything; it bears some of every fruit. [4] Its root is in the garden at the end of the earth. [5] Paradise lies between what decays and what does not decay. [6] Two springs come out of it, one sending out honey and milk, the other oil and wine. They divide into four streams, which flow on quietly and go down into the Paradise of Eden, between what decays and what does not decay. [7] From there they go out over the earth, and they circle round as the other elements do. [8] In that place there is no tree without fruit, and every spot is blessed. [9] Three hundred very bright angels guard the garden, and with endless sweet singing and voices that never fall silent they serve the Lord every day and hour. [10] I said, "How very sweet this place is!" And the men said to me,

Notes

- a (8:3) "Paradise" comes from an old Persian word for an enclosed garden; the Greek paradeisos is used for the garden of Eden in the Septuagint (Genesis 2:8). In Jewish writings of this period Paradise is often placed in the third heaven; compare 2 Corinthians 12:2–4.

Chapter 9

[1] "Enoch, this place has been prepared for the righteous: those who put up with every kind of insult from people who provoke them to anger; who turn their eyes away from wrongdoing; who judge fairly, give bread to the hungry, clothe the naked, lift up the fallen, and help orphans who have been wronged; who walk blamelessly before the Lord and serve him alone. This place is prepared for them as an everlasting inheritance."

Chapter 10

[1] Then the two men led me up to the northern side and showed me a most terrible place. It held every kind of torment: cruel darkness and gloom without a gleam of light, a smoky fire that blazed upward without stopping, and a river of fire pouring out. The whole place was fire everywhere, and everywhere there was frost and ice, thirst and shivering. The chains were very cruel, and the spirits that guarded it were frightening and merciless, with angry weapons and pitiless torture. And I said, [2] "Woe, woe! How terrible this place is!" [3] The men said to me, “Enoch, this place has been prepared for those who dishonor God: those who commit unnatural sin on earth, corrupting boys in the manner of Sodom, and those who practice magic, charms, and diabolical sorcery, and boast of their evil deeds; thieves, liars, slanderers, the envious, the resentful, the sexually immoral, and murderers; those who, under a curse, steal people’s souls; those who, seeing the poor, seize their possessions and grow rich while harming them for other people’s goods; those who could have fed the empty but let the hungry die, who could have clothed them but stripped the naked; and those who did not know their Creator and bowed to gods without soul or life, who can neither see nor hear, empty gods, who also carved idols and bowed down to unclean handiwork. For all of these this place is prepared among the others, as an everlasting inheritance.”

Chapter 11

1 Next the men took me and led me up into the fourth heaven, and showed me all the successive movements and all the rays of light from the sun and the moon. 2 I measured their movements and compared their light, and I saw that the sun’s light is greater than the moon’s. 3 Its circle and the wheels on which it always travels are like the wind rushing past with astonishing speed, and day and night it has no rest. 4 Four great stars accompany its going out and its return, and under each star are a thousand stars, to the right of the sun’s wheel; and four more to the left, each with a thousand stars under it, eight thousand in all, going out continually with the sun. 5 By day fifteen myriads of angels[a] attend it, and by night a thousand. 6 Six-winged ones go out ahead of the sun’s wheel together with the angels, into the flames of fire, and a hundred angels light the sun and set it ablaze.

Notes

- a (11:5) A “myriad” is ten thousand, so fifteen myriads is 150,000. The Slavonic reads the same way in the printed text, though the numbers in this passage vary from copy to copy.

Chapter 12

1 I looked again and saw other flying creatures that belong to the sun. Their names are Phoenixes[a] and Chalkydri,[b] marvelous and wonderful. They have the feet and tails of lions and the heads of crocodiles, and their color is purple, like a rainbow. Their size is nine hundred measures. Their wings are like those of angels, twelve on each. They attend and accompany the sun, carrying heat and dew, as God orders them. 2 In this way the sun turns and travels and rises beneath the heaven, and its course goes under the earth, with the light of its rays shining without end.

Notes

- a (12:1) The Greek phoinix is the legendary bird of Egypt that dies in fire and is reborn from its own ashes; here it is a winged creature serving the sun.
- b (12:1) "Chalkydri" is a Greek-looking word, perhaps from chalkos, "bronze," or from a form of chalkis, a kind of snake or lizard. The creatures are known only from this book.

Chapter 13

1 The men carried me eastward and set me at the gates of the sun, where the sun goes out according to the order of the seasons, the circuit of the months of the whole year, and the number of the hours of day and night. 2 I saw six gates standing open, and each gate measured about seven miles.[a] I measured them accurately and understood how large they are. Through these the sun goes out and travels west, and is evened out, and rises through all the months, and turns back from the six gates according to the succession of the seasons. In this way the whole year is completed after the four seasons have come round.

Notes

- a (13:2) The Slavonic gives "sixty-one stadia and a quarter" (stadii, from the Greek stadion, about 185 meters or 607 feet), which comes to about 11.3 kilometers or 7 miles.

Chapter 14

1 Again the men led me away to the western regions and showed me six great gates standing open, matching the eastern gates, opposite the place where the sun sets, corresponding to the number of days, 365 and a quarter. [2] So again the sun goes down to the western gates and draws its light, the greatness of its brightness, beneath the earth. For the crown of its shining stays in heaven with the Lord, guarded by four hundred angels, while the sun goes around on its wheel under the earth. It stays seven long hours in the night, and spends half of its course under the earth. When it reaches the approach to the east in the eighth hour of the night (about two in the morning),[a] it brings its lights and the crown of its shining, and the sun blazes more than fire.

Notes

- a (14:2) In ancient reckoning the night hours were counted from sunset, so the eighth hour of the night falls between about one and two in the morning; the text's figures for the sun's night course are not exact.

Chapter 15

[1] Then the creatures of the sun, the Phoenixes and Chalkydri, burst into song. Because of this every bird flaps its wings, rejoicing over the giver of light, and at the Lord's command they sang. [2] The giver of light comes to bring brightness to the whole world. The morning watch takes shape, which is the rays of the sun, and the sun of the earth goes out and takes up its brightness to light the whole face of the earth. They showed me this reckoning of the sun's course. [3] The gates it enters are the great gates for reckoning the hours of the year. For this reason the sun is a great creation, whose cycle lasts twenty-eight years[a] and then begins again from the start.

Notes

- a (15:3) The twenty-eight-year "great circle" of the sun is the period after which the days of the week return to the same dates in the Julian calendar (7 × 4 = 28). The next chapter gives a second cycle of 532 years, found by multiplying 28 by 19.

Chapter 16

[1] The men showed me the other course, that of the moon: twelve great gates, crowned from west to east, through which the moon goes in and out at its regular times. [2] It enters the first gate to the western places of the sun, with exactly thirty-one days at the first gate; at the second, exactly thirty-one days; at the third, exactly thirty; at the fourth, exactly thirty; at the fifth, exactly thirty-one; at the sixth, exactly thirty-one; at the seventh, exactly thirty; at the eighth, exactly thirty-one; at the ninth, exactly thirty-one; at the tenth, exactly thirty; at the eleventh, exactly thirty-one; and at the twelfth, exactly twenty-eight. [3] It passes through the western gates in the same order and number as the eastern ones, and completes the 365 and a quarter days of the solar year, whereas the lunar year has 354. Twelve days are therefore missing from the solar circle, and these are the moon's extra days for the whole year. [4] So also the great circle contains 532 years. [5] The quarter day is left out for three years, and the fourth year makes it up exactly.[a] [6] For this reason they are taken outside heaven for three years and are not added to the number of days, because they alter the time of the years by two new months at the completion and two others at the reduction. [7] When the western gates are finished, it returns and goes to the eastern lights. So it travels day and night around the heavenly circles, lower than all the circles, faster than the winds of heaven, and than the spirits, the elements, and the flying angels; every angel has six wings. [8] It has a sevenfold course in nineteen years.

Notes

- a (16:5) This verse, on the leap-year day, is missing from the shorter recension.

Chapter 17

[1] In the middle of the heavens I saw armed soldiers who serve the Lord, with drums and pipes, with ceaseless sweet voices and many kinds of singing that cannot be described, which amazes every mind; the singing of those angels is so wonderful and marvelous. I listened to it with delight.

Chapter 18

[1] The men took me up into the fifth heaven and set me down. There I saw many countless soldiers called Grigori,[a] who looked like human beings, though their size was greater than that of great giants. Their faces were withered, and their mouths were always silent. There was no worship in the fifth heaven. I said to the men who were with me,

2 "Why are these so withered, with sad faces and silent mouths, and why is there no worship in this heaven?" 3 They said to me, "These are the Grigori, who with their prince Satanail[b] rejected the Lord of light. After them come those who are held in great darkness in the second heaven. Three of them went down to earth from the Lord's throne, to the place Ermon,[c] and broke their vows on the shoulder of Mount Ermon. They saw how beautiful the daughters of men were and took wives for themselves, and defiled the earth with their deeds. In every age of their lives they brought lawlessness and unnatural mixing, and giants were born, marvelously huge men, and great hatred." 4 "For this God judged them with a great judgment, and they weep for their brothers. They will be punished on the Lord's great day." 5 I said to the Grigori, "I have seen your brothers and their deeds and their great torments, and I prayed for them, but the Lord has condemned them to be under the earth until the present heaven and earth come to an end forever." 6 I said, "Brothers, why do you wait? Why do you not serve in the presence of the Lord, and why have you not offered your service before the Lord's face, in case you anger your Lord completely?" 7 They listened to my warning and spoke to the four ranks in heaven. And just then, as I stood with the two men, four trumpets sounded together with a great voice, and the Grigori burst into song with one voice. Their voice rose before the Lord, pitiful and moving.

Notes

- a (18:1) "Grigori" comes from the Greek egregoroi, "watchers" or "wakeful ones," the name given in 1 Enoch to the angels who came down to earth (compare Daniel 4:13, "a watcher, a holy one").
- b (18:3) "Satanail" is Satan with the divine ending -el ("God"), the name of the fallen leader in several Slavonic and Jewish writings; "Satan" itself is Hebrew for "adversary."
- c (18:3) "Ermon" is the Slavonic form of Hermon (Hebrew Chermon, "sacred" or "forbidden place"), the mountain in 1 Enoch 6 where the watchers swore their oath.

Chapter 19

1 From there the men took me and carried me up to the sixth heaven. There I saw seven bands of angels, very bright and glorious, their faces shining more than the sun, glistening; there is no difference among them in face, behavior, or dress. These arrange the orders of things, and study the courses of the stars, the changes of the moon, the turning of the sun, and the good government of the world. 2 When they see evildoing they give commands and teaching, with sweet, loud singing and all kinds of songs of praise. 3 These are the archangels, who are above the angels. They measure all life in heaven and on earth. There are the angels appointed over the seasons and years, the angels over rivers and sea, over the fruit of the earth, and over every plant, giving food to every living thing; and the angels who write down all the souls of people, all their deeds, and their lives before the Lord. In their midst are six Phoenixes, six Cherubim, and six six-winged ones, always singing together with one voice, and their singing cannot be described. They rejoice before the Lord at his footstool.

Chapter 20

1 Then the two men lifted me from there up to the seventh heaven. There I saw a very great light and fiery troops of great archangels, bodiless powers, dominions, orders and authorities, Cherubim and Seraphim, thrones and many-eyed ones, nine regiments, the Ioanit[a] stations of light. I became afraid and began to tremble with great terror. The men took me and led me after them, and said to me, 2 "Take courage, Enoch; do not be afraid." They showed me the Lord from far away, sitting on his very high throne. For what is there in the tenth heaven, since the Lord lives there? 3 In the tenth heaven is God, who in the Hebrew language is called Aravat.[b] 4 All the heavenly troops would come and stand on the ten steps according to their rank, and bow down to the Lord, and go back again to their places with joy and gladness, singing songs in the boundless light with small, soft voices, serving him gloriously.

Notes

- a (20:1) "Ioanit" is an obscure word in the Slavonic copies. Its meaning is unknown, and it may be a miscopied form of an earlier name.
- b (20:3) "Aravat" or "Aravoth" (Hebrew aravot) is a word used in Psalm 68:4 and in later Jewish writings for the highest of the heavens, where God lives. Its original meaning may be "steppes" or "clouds."

Chapter 21

1 The Cherubim and Seraphim stand around the throne, the sixwinged and many-eyed ones. They never leave but stand before the Lord's face doing his will; they cover his whole throne and sing with a gentle voice before the Lord: "Holy, holy, holy, Lord, Ruler of hosts;
the heavens and the earth are full of your glory." 2 When I had seen all these things, the men said to me, "Enoch, we have been commanded to travel with you only this far." Then the men went away from me, and I did not see them again. 3 I was left alone at the edge of the seventh heaven. I became afraid and fell on my face and said to myself, "Woe is me! What has happened to me?" 4 Then the Lord sent one of his glorious ones, the archangel Gabriel,[a] who said to me,
"Take courage, Enoch; do not be afraid. Get up, and come with me, and stand before the Lord's face forever." 5 I answered him and said to myself, "My lord, my soul has left me from terror and trembling." I called out to the men who had led me up to this place; I had relied on them, and it was with them that I was going before the Lord's face.
6 Gabriel caught me up like a leaf caught by the wind, and set me before the Lord's face. 7 I saw the eighth heaven, which in the Hebrew language is called Muzaloth,[b] the changer of seasons, of drought and of wet, with the twelve signs of the circle of the sky, which lie above the seventh heaven. 8 I saw the ninth heaven, which in Hebrew is called Kuchavim,[c] where the heavenly homes of the twelve signs of the circle of the sky are.

Notes

- a (21:4) "Gabriel" (Hebrew Gavri'el) means "God is my strong man" or "strength of God."
- b (21:7) "Muzaloth" is the Hebrew mazzalot, the "constellations" or "signs" of 2 Kings 23:5.
- c (21:8) "Kuchavim" is Hebrew kokhavim, "stars."

Chapter 22

1 In the tenth heaven, which is called Aravoth, I saw the appearance of the Lord's face. It was like iron heated in a fire and taken out, throwing off sparks, and burning. 2 So, in a moment of eternity, I saw the Lord's face; but the Lord's face cannot be described. It is marvelous, awesome, and very, very terrible. [3] Who am I to tell of the Lord's unspeakable being and his wonderful face? I cannot tell of the number of his many instructions or his various voices, or of his very great throne, not made by hands, or of the number of those standing around him, the troops of Cherubim and Seraphim, or of their unceasing singing, or of his unchanging beauty. Who could tell of the unspeakable greatness of his glory? [4] I fell face down and bowed to the Lord, and the Lord said to me with his own lips, [5] "Take courage, Enoch; do not be afraid. Get up, and stand before my face forever." [6] Then the chief commander Michael[a] lifted me up and led me before the Lord's face. [7] The Lord said to his servants, testing them, "Let Enoch stand before my face forever." The glorious ones bowed to the Lord and said, "Let Enoch go according to your word." [8] The Lord said to Michael, "Go, take Enoch out of his earthly clothes, anoint him with my sweet ointment, and put him into the clothes of my glory." [9] Michael did as the Lord told him. He anointed me and dressed me. The appearance of that ointment was brighter than the great light, and it was like sweet dew, with a gentle scent, shining like a sunbeam. I looked at myself, and I had become like one of his glorious ones. [10] The Lord called one of his archangels by name, Pravuil,[b] whose wisdom was quicker than that of the other archangels, and who wrote down all the Lord's deeds. The Lord said to Pravuil, "Bring out the books from my storehouses, and a pen for quick writing, and give it to Enoch; deliver to him the choice and comforting books from your hand."

Notes

- a (22:6) "Michael" (Hebrew Mikha'el) means "Who is like God?" The Slavonic title arkhistratig is the Greek archistrategos, "chief commander."
- b (22:10) "Pravuil" is a name found only in this book; it may be related to the Jewish angel name "Vretil," and its meaning is uncertain.

Chapter 23

[1] He told me all the works of heaven, earth, and sea, and all the elements, their paths and movements; the rumblings of thunder; the sun and moon, the courses and changes of the stars; the seasons, years, days, and hours; the rising of the winds; the number of the angels and the making of their songs; and everything human, the language of every human song and life, the commandments, the teachings, and the sweet-voiced singing, and all that is fitting to learn. 2 Pravuil said to me, "All the things I have told you, we have written down. Sit down and write out all the souls of mankind, however many are born, and the places prepared for them forever; for all souls are prepared for eternity, before the world was formed." 3 I worked for sixty days and nights, and I wrote everything out accurately and wrote 366 books.[a]

Notes

- a (23:3) The Slavonic reads "double thirty days and thirty nights"; some copies read simply "thirty days and thirty nights." The number of books also varies from copy to copy.

Chapter 24

1 The Lord called me and said to me, "Enoch, sit down on my left, with Gabriel." 2 I bowed to the Lord, and the Lord said to me, "Enoch, my beloved, all that you see, all that stands finished, I tell to you even before the very beginning: everything I created from non-being, and the visible things from the invisible." 3 "Hear, Enoch, and take in these words of mine. I have not told my secret even to my angels, and I have not told them how they arose, or about my endless kingdom, and they have not understood my creating, which I am telling you today." 4 "For before anything was visible, I alone used to move among the invisible things, like the sun from east to west and from west to east." 5 "But even the sun has peace in itself, while I found no peace, because I was creating everything. I had the idea of laying foundations and of making the visible creation."

Chapter 25

1 "In the very lowest parts I commanded that the visible things should come down from the invisible, and Adoil[a] came down, very great, and I saw him, and look, he had a belly of great light." 2 "I said to him, 'Come undone, Adoil, and let the visible come out of you.'" 3 "He came undone, and a great light came out. I was in the middle of the great light. And as light is born from light, a great age came forth and showed all the creation I had thought of making." 4 "I saw that it was good." [5] "I placed a throne for myself and took my seat on it. I said to the light, 'Go up from there, higher, and fix yourself high above the throne, and be a foundation for the highest things.'" [6] "Above the light there is nothing else. Then I bent over and looked up from my throne."

Notes

- a (25:1) "Adoil" is a name found only in this book. Its meaning is unknown; some have suggested a connection with the Hebrew Adonai ("my Lord") or with a word meaning "the Lord's hand." The idea of God's own substance giving rise to the world is unique to this book.

Chapter 26

[1] "I called the very lowest a second time and said, 'Let Archas[a] come out, firm,' and he came out firm from the invisible." [2] "Archas came out, hard, heavy, and very red." [3] "I said, 'Be opened, Archas, and let there be born from you.' He came undone, and an age came forth, very great and very dark, bearing the creation of all the lower things. I saw that it was good, and I said to him," [4] "'Go down from there, make yourself firm, and be the foundation for the lower things.' It happened, and he went down and fixed himself and became the foundation for the lower things; and below the darkness there is nothing else."

Notes

- a (26:1) "Archas" is of uncertain meaning; some have taken it from Greek archē ("beginning"), others from Aramaic arqa ("earth"). Here it is the dark, heavy counterpart to Adoil.

Chapter 27

[1] "I commanded that something be taken from the light and the darkness, and I said, 'Become thick,' and so it was. I spread it out with the light, and it became water. I spread it out over the darkness, below the light, and then I made the waters firm, that is, the bottomless deep. I made a foundation of light around the water and created seven circles inside it, and I made the water look like crystal, wet and dry, that is, like glass. I made the circling of the waters and the other elements, and I showed each of them its road, and each of the seven stars its own heaven, so that they would travel in this way. And I saw that it was good." [2] "I separated the light from the darkness, in the middle of the water, this way and that. I told the light to be the day and the darkness to be the night. There was evening and there was morning, the first day."

Chapter 28

[1] "Then I made the circle of the heavens firm, and I made the lower water, the water under heaven, gather itself into one mass, and the chaos become dry, and it was so." [2] "Out of the waves I made hard, huge rock, and from the rock I piled up the dry land. The dry land I called earth, and the middle of the earth I called the abyss, that is, the bottomless. I gathered the sea in one place and bound it together with a yoke." [3] "I said to the sea, 'Look, I am giving you your eternal limits, and you will not break loose from your component parts.'" [4] "So I made the firmament firm. This day I called the first created day (Sunday).[a]"

Notes

- a (28:4) The weekday names appear as bracketed additions in the earlier printed English text of this book, and are probably glosses added by copyists. The days of creation run from Sunday to Friday, with the seventh day, the Sabbath, in chapter 32.

Chapter 29

[1] "For all the heavenly troops I shaped the image and substance of fire. My eye looked at the very hard, firm rock, and from the flash of my eye the lightning received its wonderful nature: it is both fire in water and water in fire, and neither puts out the other or dries it up. This is why lightning is brighter than the sun, softer than water, and firmer than hard rock." [2] "From the rock I cut off a great fire, and from the fire I made the ranks of the bodiless angels in ten troops. Their weapons are fire, and their clothing is burning flame. I commanded each one to stand in his own rank." [3] "One of the angels, from the rank of the angels, turned away with the rank that was under him and conceived an impossible thought: to set his throne higher than the clouds above the earth, so that he might become equal in rank to my power." [4] "I threw him down from the height with his angels, and he has been flying in the air ever since, above the bottomless deep."

Chapter 30

1 "On the third day I commanded the earth to grow great, fruitful trees, and hills, and seed for sowing. I planted Paradise and fenced it in, and I placed flaming angels as armed guards. In this way I made new growth." 2 "Then evening came, and morning came, the fourth day." 3 "(Wednesday.) On the fourth day I commanded that there should be great lights on the heavenly circles." 4 "On the first, uppermost circle I put the star of Kruno,[a] on the second Aphrodit, on the third Aris, on the fifth Zoues, on the sixth Ermis, and on the seventh, the lowest, the moon, and I adorned it with the lesser stars." 5 "On the lower circle I placed the sun to give light to the day, and set the moon and the stars to give light to the night." 6 "I made the sun go through each of the twelve constellations, and I appointed the succession of the months with their names and lives, their thunderings, and the marking of their hours, and how they should follow one another." 7 "Then evening came, and morning came, the fifth day." 8 "(Thursday.) On the fifth day I commanded the sea to bring forth fish, and birds of many kinds with feathers, and all the animals that creep over the earth, going about on four legs, and soaring in the air, male and female, and every soul that breathes the spirit of life." 9 "Then evening came, and morning came, the sixth day." 10 "(Friday.) On the sixth day I commanded my wisdom to make man from seven substances: first, his flesh from the earth; second, his blood from the dew; third, his eyes from the sun; fourth, his bones from stone; fifth, his intelligence from the swiftness of the angels and from cloud; sixth, his veins and his hair from the grass of the earth; seventh, his soul from my breath and from the wind." 11 "I gave him seven natures: hearing to the flesh, sight to the eyes, smell to the soul, touch to the veins, taste to the blood, endurance to the bones, and enjoyment to the intelligence." 12 "I thought of a clever saying to say: I made man from both invisible and visible nature; his death and life and image come from both. He knows speech like a created thing; small in greatness and again great in smallness. I placed him on the earth as a second angel, honored, great, and glorious, and I appointed him ruler to rule on earth and to have my wisdom. There was none like him on earth among all my creatures." 13 "I gave him a name made from the four parts, from east, west, south, and north, and I appointed four special stars for him. I called his name Adam,[b] and showed him the two ways, the light and the darkness, and I told him," 14 "'This is good, and that is bad,' so that I might learn whether he has love for me or hatred, and it might become clear which of his race love me." 15 "For I have seen his nature, but he has not seen his own nature. Because he does not see it, he will sin worse. And I said, 'After sin, what is there but death?'" 16 "I put sleep on him, and he fell asleep. I took a rib from him and made him a wife, so that death would come to him through his wife. I took his last word and called her name 'mother,' that is, Eve.[c]"

Notes

- a (30:4) These are the Greek planet names in Slavonic spelling, namely Kronos (Saturn), Aphrodite (Venus), Ares (Mars), Zeus (Jupiter), and Hermes (Mercury). The list skips the fourth circle, which is presumably the sun's, mentioned in the next verse.
- b (30:13) "Adam" is Hebrew for "man," related to adamah, "ground." Here the four letters of the Greek name (A-D-A-M) are taken to stand for the four directions: anatole (east), dysis (west), arktos (north), and mesembria (south). The same idea appears in later Jewish and Christian writings.
- c (30:16) "Eve" (Hebrew Chavvah, "life" or "living") is called "mother of all living" in Genesis 3:20. The Slavonic gives "Eva."

Chapter 31

1 "Adam has life on earth, and I made a garden in Eden, in the east, so that he might keep the covenant and observe the command." 2 "I opened the heavens to him, so that he could see the angels singing the song of victory, and the light without shadow." 3 "He was continually in Paradise, and the devil understood that I wanted to make another world, because Adam was lord on earth, to rule over it and govern it." 4 "The devil is the evil spirit of the lower places. He made himself a fugitive from the heavens, since his name was Satanail, and so he became different from the angels; but although he was changed from the angels, his nature did not change his understanding of what is righteous and what is sinful." 5 "He understood his condemnation and the sin he had committed before, and so he conceived a plan against Adam. In this form he came in and deceived Eve, but did not touch

Adam." 6 "But I cursed ignorance. What I had blessed before I did not curse. I did not curse man, or the earth, or the other creatures, but man's evil fruit and his works."

Chapter 32

1 "I said to him, 'You are earth, and you will go into the earth from which I took you. I will not destroy you, but will send you back to where I took you from.'" 2 "Then I can receive you again at my second coming." 3 "I blessed all my creatures, visible and invisible. And Adam was five and a half hours in Paradise.[a]" 4 "I blessed the seventh day, which is the Sabbath, on which he rested from all his works."

Notes

- a (32:3) The sentence about Adam's five and a half hours is found in the longer recension; the shorter recension does not have it.

Chapter 33

1 "I also appointed the eighth day, that the eighth day should be the first created day after my work, and that the first seven should revolve in the form of the seventh thousand, and that at the beginning of the eighth thousand there should be a time of no counting, without end, with neither years nor months nor weeks nor days nor hours."[a] 2 "Now, Enoch, everything I have told you, everything you have understood, everything you have seen of heavenly things, everything you have seen on earth, and everything I have written in books by my great wisdom: all this I have devised and made, from the uppermost foundation to the lowest and to the end. I have no counselor and no heir for my creations." 3 "I am self-existing, not made by hands, and unchanging." 4 "My thought is my counselor; my wisdom and my word are made; my eyes watch all things, how they stand here and tremble in terror." 5 "If I turn my face away, then everything will be destroyed." 6 "Set your mind on this, Enoch, and know the one who is speaking to you, and take from there the books you yourself have written." 7 "I am giving you Samuil[b] and Raguil,[c] who led you up, and the books. Go down to earth and tell your sons all that I have told you and all that you have seen, from the lowest heaven up to my throne, and all the troops." 8 "For I made all the powers, and there is none that resists me or does not subject himself to me. All subject themselves to my rule and work for my sole government." [9] "Give them the books written in your hand, and they will read them and know me as the creator of everything, and will understand that there is no other God but me." [10] "Let them pass the books of your handwriting on, children to children, generation to generation, nation to nation." [11] "And I will give you, Enoch, as your intercessor, the chief commander Michael, for the writings of your fathers, Adam, Seth, Enos, Cainan, Mahaleleel,[d] and your father Jared."

Notes

- a (33:1) Verses 1 and 2 of this chapter are missing from the shorter recension.
- b (33:7) "Samuil" is the name of an angel who is not otherwise known; it may be a form of Samuel or Semiel, but the meaning is uncertain.
- c (33:7) "Raguil" is Raguel (Hebrew Re'u'el), "friend of God"; in 1 Enoch 20:4 Raguel is the angel who takes vengeance on the world of the luminaries.
- d (33:11) These are the Septuagint-style forms of the names in Genesis 5: Adam ("man"); Seth (Shet, "appointed"); Enos (Enosh, "man"); Cainan (Qenan, perhaps "possession" or "smith"); Mahaleleel (Mahalalel, "praise of God"); and Jared (Yered, "descent").

Chapter 34

[1] "They have rejected my commandments and my yoke. Worthless seed has come up, not fearing God. They would not bow down to me but began to bow to empty gods, and denied my oneness. They have loaded the whole earth with lies, offenses, and abominable lust, with one another and with every other kind of unclean wickedness, too disgusting to relate." [2] "Therefore I will bring a flood on the earth and destroy all people, and the whole earth will crumble together into great darkness."

Chapter 35

[1] "Look, from their seed another generation will rise, much later, but many of them will be very greedy." [2] "The one who raises up that generation will show them the books of your writing and of your fathers. He must point out to them the guardianship of the world, to the faithful men and workers of my pleasure, who do not take my name in vain." [3] "They will tell another generation, and those others, after reading, will be glorified afterward, more than the first."

Chapter 36

[1] "Now, Enoch, I give you thirty days to spend in your house. Tell your sons and all your household, so that all may hear from my face what you tell them, and that they may read and understand that there is no other God but me." [2] "Let them always keep my commandments, and begin to read and take in the books of your writing." [3] "After thirty days I will send my angel for you, and he will take you from the earth and from your sons to me."

Chapter 37

[1] Then the Lord called one of the older angels, terrible and menacing, and set him by my side. He looked white as snow, and his hands were like ice, with the look of a great frost, and he froze my face, because I could not bear the terror of the Lord, just as no one can bear the fire of a stove or the heat of the sun or the frost of the air. [2] The Lord said to me, "Enoch, if your face were not frozen here, no one would be able to look at your face."

Chapter 38

[1] The Lord said to the men who had first led me up, "Let Enoch go down to earth with you, and wait for him until the appointed day."[a] [2] They put me back in my bed at night. [3] Methuselah was waiting for me to come back, watching by my bed day and night. When he heard that I had come, he was filled with awe, and I told him, "Let all my household come together, so that I can tell them everything."

Notes

- a (38:1) The shorter recension omits this entire chapter.

Chapter 39

[1] "O my children, my beloved ones, listen to the warning of your father, as far as it agrees with the Lord's will." [2] "I have been allowed to come to you today and tell you, not from my own lips but from the lips of the Lord, everything that is and was, everything that is happening now, and everything that will happen until the day of judgment." [3] "The Lord has let me come to you. So hear the words of my lips, the lips of a man made great for you; but I am one who has seen the Lord's face, which is like iron heated in a fire, throwing off sparks and burning." [4] "You look now at my eyes, the eyes of a man who is great in meaning for you, but I have seen the Lord's eyes, shining like the rays of the sun and filling the eyes of people with awe." [5] "You see now, my children, the right hand of a man who helps you, but I have seen the Lord's right hand, filling heaven as he helped me." [6] "You see the span of my work, like your own, but I have seen the Lord's limitless and perfect span, which has no end." [7] "You hear the words of my lips, as I heard the words of the Lord, like great thunder that never stops, with clouds hurled about." [8] "And now, my children, listen to the words of the father of the earth. How fearful and awful it is to come before the face of the ruler of the earth; how much more terrible and awful to come before the face of the ruler of heaven, the judge of the living and the dead, and of the heavenly troops. Who can endure that endless pain?"

Chapter 40

[1] "And now, my children, I know everything, because this is from the Lord's lips, and my own eyes have seen it, from beginning to end." [2] "I know everything, and I have written everything down in books: the heavens and their end and their fullness, and all the armies and their marches."[a] [3] "I have measured and described the stars, the great and countless multitude of them." [4] "What man has seen their turnings and their entrances? Not even the angels see their number, but I have written all their names." [5] "I measured the circle of the sun and measured its rays, and counted the hours. I also wrote down everything that moves over the earth. I wrote about the things that are fed, and about all seed, sown and unsown, that the earth produces, and all plants, every grass and every flower, and their sweet scents, and their names; and the dwelling places of the clouds and how they are made, and their wings, and how they carry rain and raindrops." [6] "I investigated everything, and I wrote down the road of the thunder and the lightning. They showed me the keys and their guardians, their rising, and the way they go. Lightning is let out gently, by measure, on a chain, so that a heavy chain and violence do not hurl the angry clouds down and destroy everything on earth." [7] "I wrote down the storehouses of the snow and the vaults of the cold and frosty airs, and I watched their keeper of keys for the season. He fills the clouds with them, and does not run out of stores." [8] "I wrote down the resting places of the winds, and I watched and saw how their key-holders carry scales and measures. First they put the winds in one pan of the scales, and in the other the weights, and let them out by measure, skillfully, over the whole earth, so that by heavy breathing they do not make the earth shake." [9] "I measured the whole earth: its mountains and all its hills, fields, trees, stones, and rivers, everything that exists, I wrote down; the height from the earth to the seventh heaven, and downward to the very lowest hell, and the place of judgment, and the very great, open, weeping hell." [10] "I saw how the prisoners are in pain, waiting for the limitless judgment." [11] "I wrote down all who are being judged by the judge, and all their judgment and sentences, and all their works."

Notes

- a (40:2) In the shorter recension verses 2–7 of this chapter are missing, and the order of the whole chapter is quite different there.

Chapter 41

[1] "I saw all the forefathers from all time, with Adam and Eve. I sighed and burst into tears and spoke of the ruin of their dishonor." [2] "'Woe is me for my weakness and that of my forefathers,' I said, and I thought in my heart and said," [3] "'Blessed is the man who was never born, or who was born and will not sin before the Lord's face, so that he does not come into this place or bring on himself the yoke of this place.'"

Chapter 42

[1] "I saw the key-holders and the guards of the gates of hell standing like great serpents, with faces like lamps going out, with fiery eyes and sharp teeth. And I saw all the Lord's works, how right they are,

while the works of man are some good and some bad, and by their works those who lie wickedly are known."

Chapter 43

[1] "My children, I measured and wrote down every work, every measure, and every righteous judgment." [2] "As one year is more honored than another, so one man is more honored than another: some for great possessions, some for wisdom of heart, some for particular intelligence, some for cleverness, one for silence of lip, another for cleanness, one for strength, another for good looks, one for youth, another for quick wit, one for shape of body, another for good sense. Let it be heard everywhere: no one is better than the one who fears God. He will be more glorious in the time to come."

Chapter 44

[1] "The Lord made man with his own hands, in the likeness of his own face, and the Lord made him small and great." [2] "Whoever insults a ruler's face, and hates the Lord's face, has despised the Lord's face; and whoever vents anger on any man who has done no harm, the Lord's great anger will cut him down; whoever spits in a man's face to shame him will be cut down at the Lord's great judgment." [3] "Blessed is the man who does not turn his heart with malice against anyone, who helps the injured and the condemned, raises up the broken, and does charity for the needy. For on the day of the great judgment every weight, every measure, and every counterweight will be as in the market; that is, they are hung on scales and set out in the market, and each person will learn his own measure, and according to his measure will receive his reward."

Chapter 45

[1] "Whoever hurries to make offerings before the Lord's face, the Lord for his part will hurry that offering along by rewarding his work." [2] "But whoever multiplies the lamps before the Lord's face and does not judge truly, the Lord will not increase his treasure in the kingdom of the highest." [3] "When the Lord asks for bread, or candles, or the flesh of animals, or any other sacrifice, that is nothing. What God asks for is pure hearts, and with all this he is only testing the heart of man."

Chapter 46

1 "Listen, my people, and take in the words of my lips." 2 "If anyone brings gifts to an earthly ruler but has disloyal thoughts in his heart, and the ruler knows it, will he not be angry with him, refuse his gifts, and hand him over to judgment?" 3 "Or if one man makes himself look good to another by a deceitful tongue but has evil in his heart, will the other not see through the treachery of his heart, and the first be condemned, since his untruth was plain to everyone?" 4 "And when the Lord sends a great light, then there will be judgment for the just and the unjust, and no one will escape notice there."

Chapter 47

1 "And now, my children, set your minds on this. Take careful note of the words of your father, all of which have come to you from the Lord's lips."[a] 2 "Take these books written in your father's hand and read them." 3 "For the books are many, and in them you will learn all the Lord's works, everything that has been from the beginning of creation, and will be until the end of time." 4 "If you keep my writings, you will not sin against the Lord; for there is no other besides the Lord, neither in heaven, nor on earth, nor in the very lowest places, nor in the one foundation." 5 "The Lord has placed the foundations in the unknown, and has spread out heavens, visible and invisible. He fixed the earth on the waters and made countless creatures. Who has counted the water and the foundation of what is unfixed, or the dust of the earth, or the sand of the sea, or the drops of rain, or the morning dew, or the breathings of the wind? Who has filled earth and sea, and the unbreakable winter?" 6 "I cut the stars out of fire and decorated the heaven and put it in their midst."

Notes

- a (47:1) The shorter recension omits this entire chapter.

Chapter 48

1 "The sun goes along the seven heavenly circles, which are the appointment of 182 thrones: it goes down on a short day, and again 182 on which it goes down on a long day. It has two thrones on which it rests, turning this way and that above the thrones of the months. From the seventeenth day of the month Tsivan (May–June)[a] it goes down to the month Thevan (December–January),[b] and from the seventeenth of Thevan it goes up." 2 "So it goes close to the earth, and then the earth is glad and makes its fruits grow. When it goes away, the earth is sad, and the trees and all fruits have no blossom." 3 "He measured all this with a good measurement of hours and fixed a measure by his wisdom, of the visible and the invisible." 4 "From the invisible he made all things visible, himself being invisible." 5 "So I make this known to you, my children. Distribute the books to your children, through all your generations, and among the nations that have the sense to fear God. Let them receive the books and come to love them more than any food or earthly sweets, and read them and devote themselves to them." 6 "Those who do not understand the Lord, who do not fear God, who do not accept but reject, who do not receive the books, a terrible judgment awaits them." 7 "Blessed is the man who will bear their yoke and drag it along, for he will be set free on the day of the great judgment."

Notes

- a (48:1) The shorter recension does not have this chapter. "Tsivan" is the Hebrew month Sivan, and "Thevan" is Tebet (Tevet), which here stand for the points where the sun's path turns at the summer and winter solstices; the Slavonic month names are not an exact calendar.
- b (48:1) In the Hebrew calendar Sivan falls in May–June and Tebet in December–January; the "seventeenth day" is given as in the Slavonic.

Chapter 49

1 "I swear to you, my children, but I do not swear by any oath, neither by heaven nor by earth, nor by any other creature that God made." 2 "The Lord said, 'There is no oath in me, and no injustice, but truth.'" 3 "If there is no truth in men, let them swear by the words 'Yes, yes,' or else 'No, no.'" 4 "And I swear to you, yes, yes, that no man has ever been in his mother's womb without a place already prepared beforehand for the rest of that person's soul, and a measure fixed for how long it is intended that a man be tested in this world." [5] "Yes, children, do not deceive yourselves, for a place has been prepared beforehand for every human soul."

Chapter 50

[1] "I have put every man's work in writing, and no one born on earth can stay hidden, and his works cannot stay concealed." [2] "I see everything." [3] "So now, my children, spend the number of your days in patience and gentleness, so that you may inherit endless life." [4] "For the Lord's sake, endure every wound, every injury, every evil word and attack." [5] "If wrongs are done to you, do not pay them back to neighbor or enemy, because the Lord will pay them back for you and be your avenger on the day of the great judgment, so that there will be no taking of revenge here among men." [6] "Whoever among you spends gold or silver for his brother's sake will receive ample treasure in the world to come." [7] "Do not harm widows, orphans, or strangers, or God's wrath will come on you."

Chapter 51

[1] "Stretch out your hands to the poor as far as your strength allows." [2] "Do not hide your silver in the ground." [3] "Help the faithful man in his affliction, and affliction will not find you in your time of trouble." [4] "Every grievous and cruel yoke that comes on you, bear it all for the Lord's sake, and so you will find your reward in the day of judgment." [5] "It is good to go to the Lord's dwelling morning, noon, and evening, for the glory of your Creator." [6] "For every breathing thing glorifies him, and every creature, visible and invisible, gives him praise."

Chapter 52

[1] "Blessed is the man who opens his lips in praise of the God of hosts and praises the Lord with his heart." [2] "Cursed is every man who opens his lips to bring his neighbor into contempt and slander, because he brings God into contempt." [3] "Blessed is he who opens his lips to bless and praise God.[a]" [4] "Cursed before the Lord all the days of his life is he who opens his lips to curse and abuse." [5] "Blessed is he who blesses all the Lord's works." [6] "Cursed is he who brings the Lord's creation into contempt." [7] "Blessed is he who looks down and lifts up the fallen." [8] "Cursed is he who looks for the destruction of what is not his and is eager for it." [9] "Blessed is he who keeps the foundations of his fathers firm from the beginning." [10] "Cursed is he who twists the decrees of his forefathers." [11] "Blessed is he who gives peace and love." [12] "Cursed is he who disturbs those who love their neighbors." [13] "Blessed is he who speaks with a humble tongue and heart to all." [14] "Cursed is he who speaks peace with his tongue while in his heart there is no peace but a sword." [15] "For all these things will be laid bare in the scales and in the books on the day of the great judgment."

Notes

- a (52:3) In the shorter recension verses 3 and 4 are missing.

Chapter 53

[1] "And now, my children, do not say, 'Our father is standing before God and is praying for our sins,' for there is no helper there for anyone who has sinned." [2] "You see how I wrote down all the works of every man before his creation, everything done among all men for all time. No one can tell or relate what I have written, because the Lord sees all the imaginings of man, how empty they are, where they lie in the storehouses of the heart." [3] "And now, my children, take careful note of all the words of your father that I am telling you, so that you do not regret it and say, 'Why did our father not tell us?'"

Chapter 54

[1] "At that time, because of not understanding this, let these books I have given you be an inheritance of your peace." [2] "Hand them to all who want them, and instruct them, so that they may see the Lord's very great and marvelous works."

Chapter 55

[1] "My children, look: the day of my appointed time has come near." [2] "The angels who will go with me are standing in front of me and urging me to leave you. They are standing here on earth, waiting for what they have been told." [3] "For tomorrow I will go up to heaven, to the highest Jerusalem, to my eternal inheritance." [4] "So I tell you to do before the Lord's face everything that pleases him."

Chapter 56

[1] Methuselah[a] answered his father Enoch and said, "What would be pleasing to you, father, that I may do before you, so that you may bless our dwellings and your sons, and your people may be made glorious through you, and then you may depart as the Lord said?" [2] Enoch answered his son Methuselah and said, "Listen, child. From the time the Lord anointed me with the ointment of his glory, there has been no food in me, and my soul does not remember earthly enjoyment, nor do I want anything earthly."

Notes

- a (56:1) The Slavonic spells his name Mathosalam or Methosalam in these chapters, which is the same Methuselah named in chapter 1.

Chapter 57

[1] "My child Methuselah, call all your brothers and all your household and the elders of the people, so that I may speak to them and depart, as is planned for me." [2] Methuselah hurried and called his brothers, Regim, Riman, Uchan, Chermion,[a] and Gaidad, and all the elders of the people before his father Enoch. Enoch blessed them and said to them:

Notes

- a (57:2) The names Riman, Uchan, and Chermion appear only in these Slavonic copies. Their meanings are unknown. For Regim and Gaidad, see the note at chapter 1.

Chapter 58

[1] "Listen to me today, my children." [2] "In those days, when the Lord came down to the earth for Adam's sake and visited all his creatures, which he himself had made, after all these he made Adam. The Lord called all the beasts of the earth, all the reptiles, and all the birds that fly in the air, and brought them all before our father Adam." [3] "Adam gave names to all the living things on earth." [4] "The Lord appointed him ruler over all and put everything under his hands. He made them mute and dull, so that man could command them and they would be subject and obedient to him." [5] "In the same way the Lord made every man lord over all his possessions." [6] "The Lord will not judge a single beast's soul for man's sake, but he will judge the souls of men in the matter of their beasts in this world; for men have a special place." [7] "And just as every human soul is counted by number, so the beasts will not perish, nor any of the souls of the beasts that the Lord made, until the great judgment, and they will accuse man if he has fed them badly."

Chapter 59

[1] "Whoever defiles the soul of beasts defiles his own soul." [2] "For man brings clean animals to make a sacrifice for sin, so that he may have healing for his soul." [3] "If they bring clean animals and birds for sacrifice, man has healing; he heals his soul.[a]" [4] "Everything is given to you for food. Bind the animal by its four feet; that is, make the healing complete, and heal your soul." [5] "But whoever kills a beast without wounds kills his own soul and defiles his own flesh." [6] "And he who does any harm at all to any beast, in secret, is practicing evil and defiles his own soul."

Notes

- a (59:3) The shorter recension does not have verses 3 to 5 of this chapter.

Chapter 60

[1] "He who brings about the killing of a human soul kills his own soul and kills his own body, and there is no healing for him for all time." [2] "He who sets a snare for a man will be caught in it himself, and there is no healing for him for all time.[a]" [3] "He who puts a man into any container, his punishment will not be missing at the great judgment for all time." [4] "He who works crookedly or speaks evil against any soul will not obtain justice for himself for all time."

Notes

- a (60:2) The shorter recension lacks most of this chapter after verse 1; the longer text is followed here.

Chapter 61

[1] “And now, my children, keep your hearts from every injustice that the Lord hates. Just as a man asks God for something for his own soul, so let him do for every living soul. I know everything: in the great time to come, a great inheritance is prepared for men, good for the good and bad for the bad, without number.” [2] “Blessed are those who enter the good houses, for in the bad houses there is no peace and no return from them.” [3] “Listen, my children, small and great! When a man puts a good thought in his heart and brings gifts from his labors before the Lord’s face, but his hands did not make them, then the Lord will turn his face away from the labor of that man’s hand, and the man will not find the labor of his hands.” [4] “And if his hands made it, but his heart grumbles, and his heart does not stop grumbling constantly, he has no advantage.”

Chapter 62

[1] “Blessed is the man who, in his patience, brings his gifts with faith before the Lord’s face, because he will find forgiveness of sins.” [2] “But if he takes back his words before the time, there is no repentance for him; and if the time passes and he does not do of his own will what he promised, there is no repentance after death.” [3] “For every work a man does before the time is all deceit before men and sin before God.”

Chapter 63

[1] “When a man clothes the naked and feeds the hungry, he will find a reward from God.” [2] “But if his heart grumbles, he commits a double evil: ruin of himself and of what he gives; and for him there will be no finding of reward because of it.” [3] “If his own heart is full of his own food and his own flesh, clothed in his own clothing, he commits contempt, and will lose all the reward for his endurance of poverty, and will not find a reward for his good deeds.” [4] “Every proud and boastful man is hateful to the Lord, and so is every false speech clothed in untruth. It will be cut with the blade of the sword of death, thrown into the fire, and burn for all time.”

Chapter 64

1 When Enoch had said these words to his sons, all the people, far and near, heard that the Lord was calling Enoch. They took counsel together: 2 "Let us go and kiss Enoch." Two thousand men came together and came to the place Achuzan,[a] where Enoch was with his sons. 3 The elders of the people, the whole assembly, came and bowed down and began to kiss Enoch, and said to him, 4 "Our father Enoch, may you be blessed by the Lord, the eternal ruler. And now bless your sons and all the people, so that we may be glorified today before your face." 5 "For you will be glorified before the Lord's face for all time, since the Lord chose you rather than all men on earth, and appointed you writer of all his creation, visible and invisible, and redeemer of the sins of man, and helper of your household."

Notes

- a (64:2) "Achuzan" is the Slavonic name of the place, and its location and meaning are unknown. It may come from the Hebrew word achuzzah ("possession"), but that is only a guess.

Chapter 65

1 Enoch answered all his people, saying, "Listen, my children. Before all creatures were made, the Lord made the visible and the invisible things." 2 "And however much time there was and passed by, understand that after all that he made man in the likeness of his own form, and put into him eyes to see, ears to hear, a heart to reflect, and a mind to deliberate with." 3 "The Lord saw all the works of man, and made all his creatures, and divided time. From time he fixed the years, from the years he appointed the months, from the months he appointed the days, and of the days he appointed seven." 4
"In these he appointed the hours and measured them out exactly, so that man might reflect on time and count years, months, and hours, their alternation, beginning, and end, and that he might count his own life from the beginning until death, and reflect on his sin and write down his work, bad and good. For no work is hidden before the Lord, so that every man may know his works and never break any of his commandments, and keep my writing from generation to generation." [5] "When all creation, visible and invisible, as the Lord made it, comes to its end, then every man goes to the great judgment, and then all time will perish, and the years, and from then on there will be no months, days, or hours. They will be joined together and will not be counted." [6] "There will be one age, and all the righteous who escape the Lord's great judgment will be gathered into the great age. For the righteous the great age will begin, and they will live forever, and then there will be among them no toil, sickness, humiliation, anxiety, need, brutality, night, or darkness, but great light." [7] "They will have a great indestructible wall, and a Paradise bright and incorruptible, eternal; for all corruptible, mortal things will pass away, and there will be eternal life."

Chapter 66

[1] "And now, my children, keep your souls from all injustice, such as the Lord hates." [2] "Walk before his face with fear and trembling, and serve him alone." [3] "Bow down to the true God, not to mute idols, but bow down to his likeness, and bring all just offerings before the Lord's face. The Lord hates what is unjust." [4] "For the Lord sees everything. When a man takes thought in his heart, then he advises the minds, and every thought is always before the Lord, who made the earth firm and put all creatures on it." [5] "If you look to heaven, the Lord is there. If you think of the deep of the sea and everything under the earth, the Lord is there." [6] "For the Lord made all things. Do not bow down to things made by man, leaving the Lord of all creation, because no work can stay hidden before the Lord's face." [7] "Walk, my children, in long-suffering, in gentleness, in honesty, in provocation, in grief, in faith and in truth, in reliance on promises, in illness, in abuse, in wounds, in temptation, in nakedness, in need, loving one another, until you go out from this age of ills, so that you become heirs of endless time." [8] "Blessed are the righteous who will escape the great judgment, for they will shine more than the sun, sevenfold. For in this world a seventh part is taken off from everything: light, darkness, food, enjoyment, sorrow, Paradise, torture, fire, frost, and other things. He put everything down in writing, so that you might read and understand."

Chapter 67

1 When Enoch had finished talking to the people, the Lord sent darkness over the earth. There was darkness, and it covered those men standing with Enoch, and they took Enoch up into the highest heaven, where the Lord is. He received him and set him before his face, and the darkness went away from the earth, and light came again. 2 The people saw this but did not understand how Enoch had been taken. They glorified God and found a scroll in which was traced "The Invisible God." And all went to their homes.

Chapter 68

1 Enoch was born on the sixth day of the month Tsivan (May–June)[a] and lived 365 years. 2 He was taken up to heaven on the first day of the month Tsivan (May–June) and stayed in heaven sixty days. 3 He wrote all these signs of all creation, which the Lord made, and wrote 366 books, and handed them over to his sons. He stayed on earth thirty days and was taken up to heaven again on the sixth day of the month Tsivan (May–June), on the very day and hour when he was born. 4 As every man's nature in this life is dark, so are his conception, birth, and departure from this life. 5 At whatever hour he was conceived, at that hour he was born, and at that hour he died. 6 Methuselah and his brothers, all the sons of Enoch, hurried and built an altar at the place called Achuzan, from where Enoch had been taken up to heaven. 7 They took sacrificial oxen and called all the people together and offered the sacrifice before the Lord's face. 8 All the people, the elders of the people, and the whole assembly came to the feast and brought gifts to the sons of Enoch. 9 They held a great feast, rejoicing and making merry for three days, praising God, who had given them such a sign through Enoch, who had found favor with him; and they were to pass it on to their sons from generation to generation, from age to age. 10 Amen.

Notes

- a (68:1) “Tsivan” is the Hebrew month Sivan, which falls in May–June; the Slavonic gives the days of the month only.

2 Baruch

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

The coming destruction of Jerusalem announced to Baruch

1 In the twenty-fifth year of Jeconiah,[a] king of Judah[b], the word of the Lord came to Baruch[c] son of Neriah.[d] It said to him, 2 "Do you see everything these people are doing to Me? The wrongs of these two tribes that were left are worse than the wrongs of the ten tribes that were carried off into exile. 3 The earlier tribes were pushed into sin by their kings, but these two have pushed and pressed their own kings to sin. 4 So I am bringing disaster on this city. For a time it will be taken out of My sight, and I will scatter this people among the nations so that they may do those nations good. My people will be disciplined, and a time will come when they will long for the good days they once had."

Notes

- a (1:1) "Jeconiah" is another name for King Jehoiachin; the Hebrew form Yekonyah means "Yahweh will establish." He was taken to Babylon in 597 BC, and the book dates its opening scene by his reign, though the story itself is set later, at the fall of Jerusalem in 587/586 BC.
- b (1:1) "Judah" (Hebrew Yehudah) is linked in Genesis 29 with "praise." It names the southern kingdom.
- c (1:1) "Baruch" (Hebrew Barukh) means "blessed." He is the scribe who wrote down Jeremiah's words in the book of Jeremiah.
- d (1:1) "Neriah" (Hebrew Neriyyah) means "lamp of Yahweh."

Chapter 2

1 "I have told you this so that you can tell Jeremiah[a] and everyone like you to leave this city. 2 For your works are like a solid pillar under this city, and your prayers like a strong wall around it."

Notes

- a (2:1) "Jeremiah" (Hebrew Yirmeyahu) is traditionally explained as "Yahweh raises up" or "Yahweh loosens."

Chapter 3

1 I answered, "O Lord, my Lord, did I come into the world only to watch my mother[a] suffer? No, my Lord! 2 If I have found favor with You, take my spirit first, so that I may go to my fathers and not see my mother destroyed. 3 Two things press hard on me: I cannot stand against You, and my soul cannot bear to see my mother suffer. 4 But let me say one thing before You, Lord. 5 What will happen after all this? If You destroy Your city and hand over Your land to those who hate us, how will the name of Israel[b] ever be remembered again? 6
Who will sing Your praises? To whom will the teaching of Your law be explained? Will the world go back to what it was before creation, and the age return to the silence of the beginning? Will the whole multitude of souls be swept away and the human race never be named again? And where is everything You promised about us?"

Notes

- a (3:1) The city of Jerusalem, called here "my mother," as Zion is often pictured as a mother in the Hebrew prophets.
- b (3:5) "Israel" (Hebrew Yisrael) is explained in Genesis 32 as "he struggles with God."

Chapter 4

The heavenly Jerusalem

1 The Lord said to me, "This city will be handed over for a time. The people will be disciplined for a time. But the world will not be given over to oblivion. 2 Do you think this is the city of which I said, 'I have carved you on the palms of My hands'? 3 The building that stands among you now is not the one that is kept with Me, the one that was prepared long ago, from the moment I planned to make Paradise, and that I showed to Adam[a] before he sinned. When he disobeyed the command, it was taken from him, just as Paradise was. 4 Afterward I showed it to My servant Abraham[b], by night, among the halves of the sacrificed animals. 5 And again I showed it to Moses[c] on Mount Sinai, when I showed him the pattern of the tent and all its furnishings. 6
Now it is kept safe with Me, like Paradise. 7 So go, and do what I have commanded you."

Notes

- a (4:3) “Adam” (Hebrew adam) means “human being,” from the word for the ground, adamah.
- b (4:4) “Abraham” (Hebrew Avraham) is explained in Genesis 17 as “father of a multitude.”
- c (4:5) “Moses” (Hebrew Mosheh) is linked in Exodus 2 with “drawing out.”

Chapter 5

Baruch’s complaint, and God’s reassurance

1 I answered, “So I am to grieve over Zion[a]. Your enemies will come to this place and defile Your sanctuary, carry Your inheritance off into captivity, and lord it over those You have loved. Then they will go back to the home of their idols and boast in front of them. What will You do for Your great name?” 2 The Lord said to me, “My name and My glory last forever, and My judgment will take its own course in its own time. 3 You will see with your own eyes that the enemy will not overthrow Zion or burn Jerusalem[b]. They will only serve for a while as the Judge’s instruments. 4 But go and do everything I have told you.” 5 So I went and took Jeremiah, Adu,[c] Seraiah,[d] Jabish,[e] Gedaliah,[f] and all the honored men of the people. I led them to the Kidron[g] valley and told them everything I had been told. 6 They raised their voices and all wept. 7 We sat there and fasted until evening.

Notes

- a (5:1) “Zion” (Hebrew Tsiyyon) is the hill of Jerusalem on which the temple stood, and a poetic name for the city and its people.
- b (5:3) “Jerusalem” (Hebrew Yerushalayim) is often explained as “foundation of peace” or “city of peace.”
- c (5:5) “Adu” appears only here and may be a copyist’s form of another name; it is not found in the Bible. It is kept as written.
- d (5:5) “Seraiah” (Hebrew Serayah) means “Yahweh has striven” or “Yahweh rules.”
- e (5:5) “Jabish” is not a name known from the Bible; the Hebrew Yavesh is related to “dry,” as in Jabesh-gilead. It is kept as written.
- f (5:5) “Gedaliah” (Hebrew Gedalyahu) means “Yahweh is great.” A Gedaliah was appointed governor of Judah after the fall of Jerusalem (Jeremiah 40).
- g (5:5) The “Kidron” (Hebrew Qidron), probably “dark” or “turbid,” is the valley east of Jerusalem between the city and the Mount of Olives.

Chapter 6

The Chaldeans invade; the sacred vessels are hidden

1 The next day the army of the Chaldeans[a] surrounded the city. In the evening I, Baruch, left the people, went out, and stood beside the oak.
2 I was grieving over Zion and mourning the captivity that had come upon the people. 3 Suddenly a strong spirit lifted me and carried me up over the wall of Jerusalem. 4 I looked, and there were four angels standing at the four corners of the city, each holding a blazing torch.
5 Another angel began to come down from heaven. He said to them,
"Hold your lamps, and do not light them until I tell you. 6 I have been sent first, to speak a word to the earth and to put into it what the Lord, the Most High, has ordered me to give." 7 I saw him go down into the Holy of Holies and take from it the veil, the holy ark, the mercy seat, the two tablets, the holy garments of the priests, the altar of incense, the forty-eight precious stones with which the priest was adorned, and all the holy furnishings of the tent. 8 He called to the earth in a loud voice, "Earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the mighty God!
Receive what I entrust to you, and guard it until the last times, so that when you are ordered you may give it back, and strangers may not take possession of it. 9 For the time is coming when Jerusalem too will be handed over for a while, until it is said that she is restored forever."
10 Then the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them.

Notes

- a (6:1) "Chaldeans" (Hebrew Kasdim) is the Bible's name for the Babylonians.

Chapter 7

1 After this I heard that angel say to the angels holding the lamps,
"Now destroy the wall and throw it down to its foundations, so that the enemy cannot boast and say, 'We have thrown down the wall of Zion and burned the place of the mighty God.'" 2 And they took the place where I had been standing.

Chapter 8

1 The angels did as he had ordered. When they had broken down the corners of the walls, a voice was heard from inside the temple

after the wall had fallen. It said, [2] "Come in, you enemies; come, you adversaries! The One who guarded the house has left it." [3] Then I, Baruch, went away. [4] After this the Chaldean army entered, seized the house and everything around it, led the people off as captives, killed some of them, and bound King Zedekiah[a] and sent him to the king of Babylon[b].

Notes

- a (8:4) "Zedekiah" (Hebrew Tsidqiyyahu) means "Yahweh is my righteousness." He was the last king of Judah.
- b (8:4) "Babylon" (Hebrew Bavel) is linked in Genesis 11 with "confusion," from the verb balal. The Babylonians themselves understood it as "gate of God."

Chapter 9

A seven-day fast; Jeremiah goes with the exiles

[1] Then I, Baruch, came with Jeremiah, whose heart was found pure of sin and who had not been taken when the city was seized. [2] We tore our clothes, wept, mourned, and fasted for seven days.

Chapter 10

[1] After seven days the word of God came to me and said, [2] "Tell Jeremiah to go and support the people in their captivity in Babylon. But you stay here among the ruins of Zion, and after these days I will show you what will happen at the end of days." [3] I told Jeremiah as the Lord had commanded. [4] He left with the people. [5] But I, Baruch, went back and sat in front of the gates of the temple, and I sang this lament over Zion: [6] "Blessed is the one who was never born, or the one who was born and has died. [7] But for us who live, woe! We see Zion's sufferings and what has happened to Jerusalem. [8] I will call the sirens from the sea. Come, Lilin,[a] from the desert, and you Shedim[b] and dragons from the forests. Wake up, tie up your clothes for mourning, take up the dirges with me, and lament with me. [9] Farmers, do not sow again. Earth, why give your harvest of fruit? Keep the sweet things of your food within you. [10] And you, vine, why give wine any more? No offering will ever again be made from you in Zion, and firstfruits will no longer be brought. [11] Heavens, hold back your dew and do not open the storehouses of rain. [12] Sun, hold back the light of your rays; moon, put out the multitude of your light. For why should light rise again where the light of Zion is darkened? [13] Bridegrooms, do not go in. Brides, do not put on wreaths. Women, do not pray to bear children. [14] For the childless will be happier than anyone, and those with no sons will be glad, and those with sons will be in anguish. [15] Why should they give birth in pain, only to bury in grief? [16] Why should the human race bear sons again, or why should the line of their kind be named again, when this mother lies desolate and her sons are led off into captivity? [17] From now on, do not speak of beauty and do not talk of grace. [18] Priests, take the keys of the sanctuary and throw them high into heaven. Give them to the Lord and say, "Guard Your own house, for we have turned out to be false stewards." [19] And you, virgins who weave fine linen and silk with gold from Ophir,[c] take all these things quickly and throw them into the fire, so that the fire may carry them to the One who made them, and the flame may send them to the One who created them, and the enemy may not take them.

Notes

- a (10:8) The Syriac has "Lilin," feminine night-creatures of Jewish folklore, related to the Hebrew lilith ("night creature") in Isaiah 34:14.
- b (10:8) "Shedim" (Hebrew shedim) are demons or spirits; the word occurs in Deuteronomy 32:17 and Psalm 106:37.
- c (10:19) "Ophir" is a land famous for its gold (1 Kings 9); its location is unknown, and some place it in southern Arabia, East Africa, or India. The name is kept as written.

Chapter 11

[1] "I also say this against you, Babylon. If you had prospered while Zion lived in her glory, our grief would still have been great, to see you made equal to Zion. [2] But now the grief is endless and the mourning has no measure, for you flourish and Zion is desolate. [3] Who will judge these things? To whom shall we bring our complaint about what has happened to us? Lord, how have You endured it? [4] Our fathers went to rest without grief, and the righteous sleep in the earth in peace. [5] They did not know this anguish, and they had not heard what has happened to us. [6] If only you had ears, earth, and a heart, dust, so that you could go and tell Sheol,[a] and say to the dead, 7 'You are more blessed than we who live.'"

Notes

- a (11:6) "Sheol" is the Hebrew name for the place of the dead.

Chapter 12

1 "But I will say what I think, and I will speak against you, land, that now prospers. 2 The noonday sun does not burn all the time, and its rays do not always give light. 3 Do not expect to stay prosperous and joyful forever, and do not be so proud and boastful. 4 For in its own season the wrath of God will surely wake against you, though now, in His patience, it is held back as if by reins." 5 When I had said all this, I fasted for seven days.

Chapter 13

A second fast; judgment on the nations

1 After this I, Baruch, was standing on Mount Zion, and a voice came from on high and said to me, 2 "Stand on your feet, Baruch, and hear the word of the mighty God. 3 You were stunned at what has happened to Zion, and for that very reason you will be kept safe until the end of the times, to serve as a witness. 4 Then, if those prosperous cities ever say, 5 'Why has the mighty God brought this punishment on us?' you and those like you who have seen this disaster will tell them, 'This is the evil, and this is the punishment, that is coming on you and your people at its appointed time, so that the nations may be thoroughly struck down.' 6 Then they will be in anguish. 7 And if they say at that time, 8 'How long?' you will tell them, 'You who drank the strained wine, now drink its dregs as well. That is the judgment of the Most High, who shows no favoritism.' 9 For that reason He had no mercy on His own sons in earlier times, but treated them as enemies because they sinned. 10 So they were disciplined, in order to be made holy. 11 But now, you peoples and nations, you are guilty, because you have always trampled the earth and misused creation. 12 For I have always done you good, and you have always been ungrateful for it."

Chapter 14

Why the righteous perish; God's answer

1 I answered, "You have shown me how the times will run and what will come after them, and You have told me that the punishment You have spoken of will fall on the nations. 2 Now I know that those who have sinned are many, and they lived in comfort and then left the world. But few nations will be left in those times to hear the words
You have spoken. 3 What good is it to us, or what could be worse than what we have already seen happen to us, that we should wait to see it? 4 But let me speak again before You. 5 What have they gained who knew You and did not walk in emptiness like the other nations, who never said to the dead, 'Give us life,' but always feared You and never left Your ways? 6 Yet they have been swept away, and You have shown Zion no mercy on their account. 7 If others did evil, it was for Zion's sake that she should have been forgiven, on account of the works of those who did good, and she should not have been overwhelmed on account of the works of those who did wrong. 8 But who, O Lord, my Lord, can grasp Your judgment? Who can search out the depth of Your way? Who can think through the weight of Your path? 9 Who can take in Your unfathomable counsel? Which of those who are born has ever found the beginning or the end of Your wisdom? 10 For we have all been made like a breath. 11 As breath goes up unasked and dies away again, so it is with human nature. We do not leave by our own will, and we do not know what will happen to us at the end.
12 The righteous rightly look forward to the end, and they leave this dwelling without fear, because they have a store of works laid up with You in treasuries. 13 So they leave this world without fear, and with joy they hope to receive the world You have promised them. 14 But we are in trouble: we are shamefully treated now, and in that time we look ahead to nothing but disasters. 15 You know exactly what You have done through Your servants, but we cannot understand what is good, as You, our Creator, do. 16 Let me speak once more before You, O Lord, my Lord. 17 Long ago, when there was no world with people in it,
You planned and spoke by a word, and at once the works of creation stood before You. 18 You said that You would make humankind the steward of Your works, so that it might be known that humankind was not made for the sake of the world, but the world for the sake of humankind. 19 Now I see that the world made for our sake is still here, but we, for whom it was made, are going away."

Chapter 15

1 The Lord answered me, "You are right to be amazed at the departure of human beings, but you have not judged well the evils that come on those who sin. 2 As for what you said, that the righteous are taken away while the wicked prosper, 3 and what you said, that a man does not know Your judgment, 4 listen, and I will speak to you; pay attention, and I will let you hear My words. 5 A man would not have understood My judgment rightly unless he had received the law and I had taught him understanding. 6 But he broke it knowingly, and for that very reason, because he knew, he will be tormented. 7 As for what you said about the righteous, that this world came into being on their account, so also the world to come will come on their account. 8 For to them this world is a struggle and a labor with much trouble, and the world that is coming is a crown with great glory."

Chapter 16

1 I answered, "O Lord, my Lord, the years of this time are few and bad. Who can win in his short time what has no measure?"

Chapter 17

1 The Lord answered me, "With the Most High, time and a few years are not counted. 2 What good did it do Adam that he lived nine hundred and thirty years and still broke what he was told? His long life did not help him. It brought death and cut short the years of all who were born from him. And what did Moses lose by living only a hundred and twenty years? Because he stayed under the One who formed him, he brought the law to the seed of Jacob[a] and lit a lamp for the nation of Israel."

Notes

- a (17:2) "Jacob" (Hebrew Yaaqov) is explained as "he grasps the heel" or "he supplants."

Chapter 18

1 I answered, “The one who lit the lamp took from the light, and few have followed him. But the many he lit it for took from the darkness of Adam and did not rejoice in the light of the lamp.”

Chapter 19

1 He answered me, “At that time He set a covenant before them and said, ‘See, I have put before you life and death.’ And He called heaven and earth to witness against them. 2 For He knew that His own time was short, but that heaven and earth last forever. 3 After his death they sinned and broke the covenant, though they knew they had the law to correct them, and the light in which nothing could go wrong, and the heavenly spheres that testify, and Me. 4 About everything that exists, I am the one who judges. Do not argue about these things in your soul, and do not torment yourself over what has already happened. 5 What now needs to be weighed is the end of the time, whether of business, of prosperity, or of shame, and not its beginning. 6 If a man does well at the start and is treated shamefully in his old age, he forgets all the good he had. 7 And if a man is treated shamefully at the start and does well at the end, he does not remember his earlier mistreatment.
8 Listen again. Suppose each person did well for all that time, from the day death was decreed against those who disobey, and then was destroyed at the end. Everything would have been in vain.”

Chapter 20

Zion has been taken away to hasten the judgment

1 “So see, the days are coming, and the times will move faster than before, and the seasons will hurry along faster than those that are past, and the years will go by faster than the present ones. 2 That is why I have now taken Zion away, so that I may visit the world sooner, in its season. 3 Now hold on to everything I command you, and seal it in the hidden places of your mind. 4 Then I will show you the judgment of My power and My ways that cannot be searched out.
5 Go and make yourself holy for seven days. Eat no bread, drink no water, and speak to no one. 6 After that, come to that place, and I will reveal Myself to you and speak true things with you. I will give you commands about how the times run, for they are coming and will not wait."

Chapter 21

Baruch's prayer, and God's answer

1 I went there and sat in the Kidron valley in an earth cave, and I made my soul holy. I ate no bread, yet I was not hungry. I drank no water, yet I was not thirsty. I stayed there until the seventh day, as He had commanded me. 2 Then I came to the place where He had spoken with me. 3 At sunset my soul was deep in thought, and I began to speak in the presence of the Mighty One. I said, 4 "You who made the earth, hear me! You fixed the sky by a word and set the height of heaven firm by Your spirit. From the beginning You called what did not yet exist, and it obeys You. 5 You commanded the air with a nod, and You see what is yet to be as clearly as what You are doing now. 6 You rule with great purpose the hosts that stand before You, and the countless holy beings that You made from the beginning, made of flame and fire, who stand around Your throne; You rule them with fierce force. 7 It belongs to You alone to do at once whatever You wish. 8 You make the raindrops fall on the earth by number, and You alone know the end of the times before they come. Look kindly on my prayer. 9 For You alone can sustain all who are, those who have passed away and those who are yet to be, those who sin and those who are righteous, as living beings who cannot be fully known. 10 For You alone live forever, beyond all searching out, and You know the number of mankind. 11 And if in time many have sinned, others, not a few, have been righteous. 12 You know where You keep the end of those who sinned and the final reward of those who were righteous. 13 For if there were only this life, which belongs to everyone, nothing could be more bitter. 14 What use is strength that turns to sickness, or a full table that turns to famine, or beauty that turns to ugliness? 15 For human nature is always changing. 16 What we were before, we no longer are; and what we are now, we will not stay. 17 If an end had not been prepared for all, their beginning would have been pointless. 18

But tell me about everything that comes from You, and shed light on everything I ask You. 19 How long will what decays go on? How long will mortals prosper? And until when will those who sin in the world be stained with so much wickedness? 20 Command it in mercy and carry out everything You said You would bring, so that Your power may be known to those who think Your patience is weakness. 21 Show those who do not know that all that has happened to us and to our city until now has been within the patience of Your power, because for Your name's sake You called us a beloved people. 22 Put an end to death from now on. 23 Rebuke the angel of death, and let Your glory appear, and let the might of Your beauty be known. Let Sheol be sealed so that from now on it takes in no more dead, and let the storehouses of souls give back those shut up in them. 24 For many years have been like desolate ones since the days of Abraham, Isaac[a], Jacob, and all who are like them, who sleep in the earth, those for whose sake You said You created the world. 25 Now show Your glory quickly, and do not put off what You promised." 26 When I finished the words of this prayer, I was very weak.

Notes

- a (21:24) "Isaac" (Hebrew Yitschaq) means "he laughs."

Chapter 22

1 After this, the heavens opened, and I saw, and power was given to me, and a voice from on high said to me, 2 "Baruch, Baruch, why are you troubled? 3 If someone sets out on a road and does not finish it, or leaves by sea and does not reach harbor, can he be comforted? 4 If someone promises a gift to another and does not give it, is that not robbery? 5 If someone sows a field and does not reap its fruit in season, does he not lose everything? 6 If someone plants a plant and it does not grow until its time, can the one who planted it expect fruit from it? 7 If a woman conceives and gives birth too early, does she not surely kill her child? 8 If someone builds a house and does not roof it and finish it, can it be called a house? Tell Me that first."

Chapter 23

1 I answered, “Surely not, O Lord, my Lord.” 2 He answered me, “Then why are you troubled about what you do not know, and uneasy about things of which you are ignorant? 3 Just as you have not forgotten the people who now live and those who have passed away, so I remember those who are appointed to come. 4 When Adam sinned and death was decreed against all who would be born, the number of those to be born was counted, and a place was prepared for that number, where the living might live and the dead might be kept. 5 Before that number is complete, the creature will not live again, for My Spirit is the creator of life, and Sheol will receive the dead. 6 And again, it is given to you to hear what will come after these times. 7 For My redemption has truly come near; it is not far off as it was before.”

Chapter 24

The coming judgment

1 “See, the days are coming when the books will be opened in which the sins of all who have sinned are written, and also the storehouses in which the righteousness of all who have been righteous in creation is gathered. 2 At that time you will see, and many with you, the patience of the Most High, which has lasted through all generations, patient toward all who are born, those who sin and those who are righteous alike.” 3 I answered, “But, Lord, no one knows the number of what has passed or of what is still to come. 4 I know indeed what has happened to us, but what will happen to our enemies I do not know, or when You will visit Your works.”

Chapter 25

The sign of the coming judgment

1 He answered me, “You too will be kept until that time, until the sign that the Most High will give to the people of the earth at the end of days. 2 This will be the sign. 3 When a stupor takes hold of the people of the earth and they fall into many troubles, and then again into great torments, 4 they will say in their thoughts, because of all their suffering, ‘The Mighty One no longer remembers the earth.’ Yes, when they give up hope, then the time will wake.”

Chapter 26

[1] I answered, “Will that tribulation last a long time? Will that hardship go on for many years?”

Chapter 27

The twelve woes, the Messiah, and the temporary Messianic kingdom

[1] He answered me, “That time is divided into twelve parts, and each is kept for what is assigned to it. [2] In the first part there will be the beginning of unrest. [3] In the second part, the killing of great men. [4] In the third part, the fall of many through death. [5] In the fourth part, the sending of the sword. [6] In the fifth part, famine and the holding back of rain. [7] In the sixth part, earthquakes and terrors. [8] The seventh part is missing in the Syriac text.[a] [9] In the eighth part, a crowd of ghosts and attacks by the Shedim. [10] In the ninth part, the falling of fire. [11] In the tenth part, plunder and heavy oppression. [12] In the eleventh part, wickedness and sexual wrongdoing. [13] In the twelfth part, confusion from the mixing together of all the things just named. [14] These parts of that time are held in reserve, and they will mingle with one another and serve one another. [15] Some will leave out part of their own and take from others, and some will finish their own and others’ as well, so that those living on the earth in those days will not understand that this is the end of the times.”

Notes

- a (27:8) The seventh part is missing in the Syriac manuscript; nothing is supplied here, and the list resumes at the eighth.

Chapter 28

[1] “Even so, whoever understands will be wise then. [2] The measure and count of that time is two parts of a week of seven weeks.” [3] I answered, “It is good for a man to come and see, but better that he not come, lest he fall. [4] But I will also say this. [5] Will someone who is incorruptible look down on things that are corruptible, and on whatever happens to them, so that he looks only at what is not corruptible? 6 But if, Lord, what You have told me will surely come to pass, then show me this as well, if I have found favor with You. 7 Will these things take place in one place, or in one part of the earth, or will the whole earth experience them?"

Chapter 29

1 He answered me, "Whatever will happen then will happen to the whole earth, so all who live will experience it. 2 At that time I will protect only those who are found in this land in those very days. 3 When everything that was to happen in those parts has been done, the Messiah will begin to be revealed. 4 Behemoth[a] will be revealed from his place, and Leviathan[b] will rise from the sea, the two great monsters I made on the fifth day of creation and have kept until that time. Then they will be food for all who are left. 5 The earth will yield its fruit ten-thousandfold. Each vine will have a thousand branches, each branch will bear a thousand clusters, each cluster a thousand grapes, and each grape will give a cor[c] of wine, about 55 gallons. 6 Those who were hungry will rejoice, and every day they will see marvels. 7 Winds will go out from Me every morning to bring the fragrance of spice-bearing fruits, and at the end of each day, clouds that let fall the dew of health. 8 At that same time the storehouse of manna will again come down from on high, and they will eat of it in those years, because these are the ones who have come to the end of the age."

Notes

- a (29:4) "Behemoth" (Hebrew behemot) is the great land beast of Job 40:15-24.
- b (29:4) "Leviathan" (Hebrew livyatan) is the sea monster of Job 41 and Psalm 74:14.
- c (29:5) The Syriac has cor, a Hebrew dry and liquid measure (kor). It is usually reckoned at roughly 45 to 60 gallons (170 to 230 liters); the figure given in the text is an approximation.

Chapter 30

The resurrection

1 “After this, when the time of the Messiah’s coming is fulfilled, he will return in glory. 2 Then all who have fallen asleep in hope of him will rise. At that time the storehouses will be opened in which the number of the souls of the righteous is kept, and they will come out, and a crowd of souls will be seen together in one gathering, of one mind. The first will be glad and the last will not be sad. 3 For they know that the time has come of which it is said that it is the end of the times. 4 But the souls of the wicked, when they see all this, will waste away all the more. 5 For they will know that their torment has come and their ruin has arrived.”

Chapter 31

Baruch urges the people to prepare

1 After this I went to the people and said to them, “Gather all your elders to me, and I will speak words to them.” 2 They all gathered in the Kidron valley. 3 I answered and said to them, “Hear, Israel, and I will speak to you; listen, seed of Jacob, and I will teach you. 4 Do not forget Zion, but keep the anguish of Jerusalem in mind. 5 For the days are coming when everything that exists will become prey to corruption, and will be as though it had never been.”

Chapter 32

1 “But if you prepare your hearts, so that you sow the fruits of the law in them, it will protect you in that time when the Mighty One is going to shake the whole creation. 2 After a little while the building of Zion will be shaken so that it can be built again. 3 But that building will not last. After a time it will be uprooted again and stay desolate until the appointed time. 4 Afterward it must be renewed in glory and made perfect forever. 5 So we should not grieve as much over the evil that has come now as over the one that is still to come. 6 For there will be a greater trial than these two tribulations, when the Mighty One renews His creation. 7 Now do not come near me for a few days, and do not look for me until I come to you.” 8 When I had said all this to them, I, Baruch, went my way. When the people saw me leaving, they raised their voices, wept, and said, 9 “Where are you going, Baruch?

Are you abandoning us like a father who abandons his orphaned children and leaves them?"

Chapter 33

1 "Are these the orders your companion Jeremiah the prophet gave you when he said to you, 2 'Look after these people until I go and prepare the rest of the brothers in Babylon, who have been sentenced to be taken into captivity'? 3 Now if you also leave us, it would be better for us all to die before you, and then for you to leave us."

Chapter 34

Baruch's lament

1 I answered the people, "Far be it from me to leave you or withdraw from you. I will only go to the Holy of Holies to ask the Mighty One about you and about Zion, in case I may receive more light. After this I will come back to you."

Chapter 35

1 I, Baruch, went to the holy place, sat down on the ruins, wept, and said, 2 "If only my eyes were springs and my eyelids a fountain of tears. 3 How can I lament for Zion? How can I mourn for Jerusalem? 4 In the place where I now lie face down, the high priest once offered holy sacrifices and placed on it incense of fragrant spices. 5 Now our pride has been turned to dust, and the desire of our soul to sand."

Chapter 36

The vision of the forest, the vine, the fountain, and the cedar

1 When I had said this, I fell asleep there, and in the night I saw a vision. 2 There was a forest of trees planted on a plain, and tall, rugged, rocky mountains surrounded it. That forest took up a lot of room. 3 Then, facing it, a vine rose up, and from beneath it a spring flowed out peacefully. 4 The spring came to the forest and rose into great waves. The waves flooded the forest, and suddenly they tore up most of it and knocked down all the mountains around it. 5 The tops of the forest began to be brought low, and the peaks of the mountains were made low, and the spring was so strong that it left nothing of that great forest except one cedar. [6] When it had thrown that forest down and destroyed and uprooted most of it, so that nothing was left and even its place could not be recognized, the vine came with the spring, in peace and great calm, to a place not far from the cedar. They brought the fallen cedar to the vine. [7] I looked, and the vine opened its mouth and spoke to the cedar. It said, "Are you not the cedar that was left from the forest of wickedness, through whom wickedness lasted and was done all those years, and goodness never? [8] You kept conquering what was not yours, and you never showed compassion to what was yours. You kept stretching your power over those far from you, and you held those who came near you fast in the traps of your wickedness. You always lifted yourself up as if you could never be torn out! [9] But now your time has run out and your hour has come. [10] So you also depart, cedar, after the forest that went before you, and turn to dust with it, and let your ashes be mixed together. [11] Now lie down in anguish and rest in torment until your last time comes, when you will come again and be tormented still more."

Chapter 37

[1] After this I saw that cedar burning and the vine growing, with the plain around it full of flowers that never fade. [2] Then I woke up and got up.

Chapter 38

The vision explained

[1] I prayed and said, "O Lord, my Lord, You always give light to those who are led by understanding. [2] Your law is life, and Your wisdom is the right way. [3] So make known to me the meaning of this vision. [4] You know that my soul has always walked in Your law, and from my earliest days I never left Your wisdom."

Chapter 39

[1] He answered me, "Baruch, this is the meaning of the vision you saw. [2] You saw the great forest surrounded by tall, rugged mountains. This is what it means. [3] See, the days are coming when this kingdom, which once destroyed Zion, will itself be destroyed and made subject to the one that comes after it. 4 After a time that one too will be destroyed, and another, a third, will rise, and it will also hold power for its time and be destroyed. 5 After this a fourth kingdom will rise, whose power will be harsher and more evil than any before it. It will rule for many times as long as the forests on the plain, hold on for ages, and lift itself higher than the cedars of Lebanon[a]. 6 Truth will be hidden by it, and all who are stained with wrongdoing will flee to it, as wild beasts flee and creep into a forest. 7 When the time comes near for it to fall, then the rule of My Messiah will be revealed, which is like the spring and the vine. When it is revealed, it will tear out the multitude of its army. 8 As for the tall cedar left over from that forest, and the vine speaking to it the words you heard, this is what it means."

Notes

- a (39:5) "Lebanon" (Hebrew Levanon) means "white," perhaps for its snowy peaks.

Chapter 40

1 "The last ruler of that time will be left alive after the multitude of his armies has been put to the sword. He will be bound, and they will take him up to Mount Zion, and My Messiah will convict him of all his godless deeds. He will gather and set before him all the works of his armies. 2 Afterward he will put him to death and protect the rest of My people, who will be found in the place I have chosen. 3 His rule will stand forever, until the world of corruption comes to an end and the times I have mentioned are fulfilled. 4 This is your vision, and this is what it means."

Chapter 41

The apostates and the converts

1 I answered, "For whom, and for how many, will these things be?
Who will be worthy to live at that time? 2 I will say before You everything I am thinking, and I will ask You about what I am pondering. 3
I see many of Your people who have turned from Your covenant and thrown off the yoke of Your law. 4 But I have seen others who gave up their emptiness and fled for shelter under Your wings. 5 What will happen to them? How will the last time receive them? 6 Or perhaps their time will be weighed, and they will be judged as the balance tips?"

Chapter 42

1 He answered me, "I will show you this too. 2 As for what you said, 'For whom will these things be, and for how many?' To those who have believed, the good that was promised long ago will come, and to those who despise it, the opposite. 3 As for what you said about those who have drawn near and those who have withdrawn, this is the answer. 4 Those who were first subject to Me and afterward turned away and mingled with the seed of mixed peoples: the time of these was the former time, and it was counted as something exalted. 5 And those who did not know before, but afterward came to know life and mingled only with the seed of the people that had set itself apart: the time of these is the latter time, and it is counted as something exalted. 6 Time will follow time and season will follow season. One will receive from another, and then, with the end in view, everything will be compared by the measure of the times and the hours of the seasons. 7 For corruption will take what belongs to it, and life will take what belongs to it. 8 The dust will be called and told, 'Give back what is not yours, and raise up everything you have kept until its time.'"

Chapter 43

Baruch is told of his death

1 "But you, Baruch, turn your heart to what has been said to you, and understand what has been shown to you, for there are many everlasting comforts for you. 2 You will leave this place and pass from the regions you now see. You will forget whatever is corruptible and will no longer remember what happens among mortals. 3 So go and command your people, and come to this place. After that, fast for seven days, and then I will come to you and speak with you."

Chapter 44

Baruch tells the elders of his coming death

1 I, Baruch, went from there and came to my people. I called my firstborn son, and the Gedaliahs, my friends, and seven of the elders of the people, and I said to them, [2] “See, I am going to my fathers, the way of all the earth. [3] But do not leave the way of the law. Guard the people who remain and warn them, so that they do not turn from the commands of the Mighty One. [4] You see that the One we serve is just, and that our Creator shows no favoritism. [5] See what has happened to Zion, and what has come upon Jerusalem. [6] By this the judgment of the Mighty One will be made known, and His ways, which cannot be traced out yet are right. [7] If you endure and keep on in His fear and do not forget His law, the times will change for the better over you, and you will see the comfort of Zion. [8] For whatever exists now is nothing, but what is to come is very great. [9] Everything corruptible will pass away and everything that dies will go. All the present time will be forgotten, and there will be no memory of the present time, which is stained with evils. [10] For what runs on now runs toward emptiness, and what prospers will quickly fall and be humbled. [11] What is to come will be the object of desire, and we will hope for what comes after. It is a time that does not pass away. [12] The hour comes that lasts forever, and the new world comes, which does not turn to corruption those who go to its blessing, has no mercy on those who go to torment, and does not lead to ruin those who live in it. [13] These are the ones who will inherit the time that has been spoken of, and theirs is the inheritance of the promised time. [14] These are the ones who have gathered for themselves treasures of wisdom, and with them are found stores of understanding. They have not turned away from mercy, and they have kept the truth of the law. [15] To them the world to come will be given, but the dwelling of the rest, who are many, will be in the fire.”

Chapter 45

[1] “So, as far as you can, teach the people, for that work is ours. [2] If you teach them, you will give them life.”

Chapter 46

[1] My son and the elders of the people answered me, “Has the Mighty One humbled us so much as to take you from us so quickly? [2] We will truly be in darkness, with no light for the people who are left. [3] Where will we look for the law again, and who will tell us the difference between death and life?" [4] I said to them, "I cannot resist the throne of the Mighty One. Even so, Israel will never lack a wise man, nor the family of Jacob a son of the law. [5] Only prepare your hearts to obey the law, and be subject to those who are wise and understanding in fear of Him. Prepare your souls so that you do not leave them. [6] If you do these things, good news will come to you. [7] That is what I told you before, and you will not fall into the torment of which I warned you earlier. [8] But about the word that I was to be taken, I did not tell them or my son.

Chapter 47

[1] When I had gone out and sent them away, I went there and said to them, "See, I am going to Hebron[a], for the Mighty One has sent me there." [2] I came to the place where the word had been spoken to me, sat there, and fasted for seven days.

Notes

- a (47:1) "Hebron" (Hebrew Chevron) is related to "association" or "league." It is a city in the hills south of Jerusalem.

Chapter 48

Baruch's prayer and the answer

[1] After the seventh day I prayed before the Mighty One and said, [2] "O my Lord, You call the coming of the times, and they stand before You. You make the power of the ages pass away, and they do not resist You. You set the order of the seasons, and they obey You. [3] You alone know how long the generations last, and You do not reveal Your mysteries to many. [4] You make known how great the fire is, and You weigh how light the wind is. [5] You search out the limits of the heights, and You examine the depths of the darkness. [6] You look after the number of those who pass away, so that they may be kept, and You prepare a home for those who are to come. [7] You remember the beginning that You made, and You do not forget the destruction that is to come. [8] At Your nod, in fear and anger, You command the flames, and they change into spirits. With a word You bring to life what was not, and with mighty power You hold back what has not yet come. [9] You teach created things to understand You, and You make the heavenly spheres wise so that they serve in their ranks. [10] Countless armies stand before You and quietly serve in their ranks at Your nod. [11] Hear Your servant and listen to my plea. [12] We are born in a short time, and in a short time we return. [13] But with You hours are like an age, and days are like generations. [14] So do not be angry with humanity, for it is nothing, [15] and do not hold our deeds against us. What are we? It is by Your gift that we come into the world, and we do not leave by our own will. [16] We never said to our parents, 'Give birth to us,' and we never sent word to Sheol, saying, 'Take us in.' [17] What is our strength, that we could bear Your wrath? What are we, that we could stand Your judgment? [18] Shelter us in Your compassion, and help us in Your mercy. [19] Look at the little ones who are subject to You, and save everyone who comes near You. Do not destroy our people's hope, and do not cut short the times of our help. [20] This is the nation You chose, and these are the people for whom You find no equal. [21] But now I will speak before You and say what my heart thinks. [22] We trust in You, for Your law is with us, and we know that we will not fall as long as we keep Your statutes. [23] We are blessed forever in this at least, that we have not mingled with the nations. [24] For we are all one famous people who received one law from the One. The law among us will help us, and the surpassing wisdom in us will assist us." [25] When I had prayed and said these things, I was greatly weakened. [26] He answered me, "You have prayed simply, Baruch, and all your words have been heard. [27] But My judgment claims what is its own, and My law claims its rights. [28] I will answer you from your own words, and speak to you from your own prayer. [29] It is like this: one who is corrupted is no more. He has done wrong as far as he was able, and he has not remembered My goodness or accepted My patience. [30] So you will surely be taken up, as I told you before. [31] For a time will rise that brings affliction. It will come and pass by with swift violence, and it will be stormy, coming in the heat of anger. [32] In those days all the inhabitants of the earth will be stirred up against one another, because they do not know that My judgment has come near. [33] Not many wise people will be found in that time, and the intelligent will be only a few. Even those who know will mostly stay silent. [34] There will be many rumors and plenty of news. Illusions will be seen at work, and many promises will be told. Some will turn out empty, and some will be confirmed. [35] Honor will turn into shame, strength will be crushed into contempt, integrity will be destroyed, and beauty will become ugliness. [36] In that time many will say to many, 'Where has the multitude of understanding hidden itself, and where has the multitude of wisdom gone?' [37] While they are thinking this over, envy will rise in those who thought nothing of themselves, and passion will seize the peaceful. Many will be stirred up in anger to hurt many, and they will raise armies to shed blood, and in the end they will perish along with them. [38] At that same time a change of the times will be plain to everyone, because throughout those times they made themselves unclean, practiced oppression, each walked in his own works, and did not remember the law of the Mighty One. [39] So a fire will consume their thoughts, and in flames the plans of their inmost being will be tested. For the Judge will come and will not delay. [40] Each of the inhabitants of the earth knew when he was breaking the law, but in their pride they did not know My Law. [41] Then many will certainly weep, more over the living than over the dead." [42] I answered, "O Adam, what have you done to all those born from you? And what will be said to the first Eve[a], who listened to the serpent? [43] This whole multitude is heading toward corruption, and there is no counting those the fire devours. [44] But I will speak again in Your presence. [45] You, O Lord, my Lord, know what is in Your creature. [46] Long ago You commanded the dust to bring forth Adam, and You know the number of those born from him, and how far they have sinned before You, who lived and did not confess You as their Creator. [47] As for all of these, their end will convict them, and Your law, which they broke, will repay them on Your day." [48] "But now let us set the wicked aside and ask about the righteous. [49] I will describe their blessedness and will not be silent in celebrating their glory, which is kept for them. [50] For just as you have endured much labor for a little time in this passing world where you live, so in that world that has no end you will receive great light."

Notes

- a (48:42) "Eve" (Hebrew Chavvah) is traditionally linked to "life" or "living."

Chapter 49

The nature of the resurrection body

1 "Even so, I will ask You again, Mighty One, and I will ask You, who made all things. 2 In what form will those live who live in Your day? How will the splendor of those who come after that time continue? 3 Will they take on this present form again and put on these tangled limbs, which are now caught up in evils and in which evils reach their peak? Or will You perhaps change these things that have been in the world, just as You change the world?"

Chapter 50

1 He answered me, "Listen to this word, Baruch, and write in the memory of your heart everything you will learn. 2 The earth will then surely give back the dead, which it now receives to keep. It will make no change in their form, but as it received them, so it will return them. As I handed them over to it, so it will raise them. 3 For then it will be necessary to show the living that the dead have come back to life and that those who had departed have returned. 4 When they have each recognized those they know now, then the judgment will grow strong, and the things that were spoken of before will come."

Chapter 51

1 "When that appointed day has passed, the appearance of those who are condemned will be changed, and so will the glory of those who are declared righteous. 2 The appearance of those who now do evil will become worse than it is, since they will suffer torment. 3 As for the glory of those who have now been made righteous in My law, who have had understanding in their lives and have planted the root of wisdom in their hearts, their splendor will be glorified in changes, and the form of their faces will be turned into the light of their beauty, so that they may gain and receive the world that does not die, which is then promised to them. 4 Above all, those who come then will grieve over this: that they rejected My law and stopped their ears so as not to hear wisdom or receive understanding. [5] When they see those whom they now look down on, who will then be lifted up and glorified more than they are, the righteous will be transformed into the splendor of angels, and the wicked will waste away still more in wonder at the sights and the forms they behold. [6] For they will see first, and afterward go away to be tormented. [7] But those who were saved by their works, for whom the law has been a hope, understanding an expectation, and wisdom a confidence, will see wonders appear in their time. [8] They will see the world that is now invisible to them, and they will see the time that is now hidden from them. [9] Time will no longer age them. [10] They will live in the heights of that world, and they will be made like the angels and equal to the stars. They will be changed into any form they wish, from beauty into loveliness, and from light into the splendor of glory. [11] The wide spaces of Paradise will be spread out before them, and the beauty of the majesty of the living creatures beneath the throne will be shown to them, along with all the armies of angels, who are now held back by My word so that they do not appear, and are held by a command to stand in their places until their coming arrives. [12] Moreover, there will then be an excellence in the righteous that surpasses that of the angels. [13] For the first will receive the last, whom they were expecting, and the last will receive those of whom they used to hear that they had passed away. [14] For they have been rescued from this world of tribulation and have laid down the burden of anguish. [15] What have people lost their lives for, and what have those on the earth traded their souls for? [16] They did not choose for themselves that time which, beyond the reach of anguish, could never pass away. They chose for themselves the time whose outcomes are full of lamentation and evil. They denied the world that does not age those who come to it, and they rejected the time of glory, so that they will not come to the honor of which I told you before."

Chapter 52

[1] I answered, "How could we forget those for whom woe is then kept in store? [2] Why, then, do we mourn again for those who die? Why do we weep for those who go down to Sheol? [3] Let the lamentations be kept for the start of that coming torment, and let the tears be stored up for the arrival of the destruction of that time. [4] But even in the face of these things I will speak. [5] And as for the righteous, what will they do now? [6] Rejoice in the suffering you now endure. Why do you look for the decline of your enemies? [7] Make your souls ready for what is kept for you, and prepare them for the reward laid up for you."

Chapter 53

The vision of the cloud with dark and bright waters

[1] After I had said these things, I fell asleep there, and I saw a vision. A cloud was rising from a very great sea. I kept looking at it, and it was full of white and black waters, with many colors in those same waters, and at its top there was what looked like great lightning. [2] I saw the cloud moving swiftly in quick courses, and it covered all the earth. [3] After this the cloud began to pour out on the earth the waters it held. [4] I saw that the waters coming down from it were not all alike. [5] At the first they were black and many. Then I saw the waters become bright, but they were not many. After this I saw black waters again, then bright, then black again, and bright again. [6] This happened twelve times, but the black were always more numerous than the bright. [7] At the end of the cloud it rained black waters, darker than all the earlier waters, and fire was mixed with them. Where those waters came down, they brought devastation and destruction. [8] After this I saw the lightning I had seen at the top of the cloud seize the cloud and hurl it to the earth. [9] That lightning shone so brightly that it lit up the whole earth, and it healed the regions where the last waters had come down and brought devastation. [10] It took hold of the whole earth and ruled over it. [11] After this I saw twelve rivers rising from the sea, and they began to surround the lightning and become subject to it. [12] In my fear I woke up.

Chapter 54

Baruch asks for the meaning of the vision

1 I pleaded with the Mighty One and said, “You alone, Lord, know the deep things of the world from ages past. You bring about by Your word what happens in its times. In response to the works of the inhabitants of the earth You hurry the beginnings of the times, and You alone know the end of the seasons. 2 Nothing is too hard for You, and You do everything easily with a nod. 3 To You the depths are like the heights, and the beginnings of the ages serve Your word. 4 You reveal to those who fear You what is prepared for them, so that from then on they may be comforted. 5 You show great deeds to those who do not know. You break open the walls around the ignorant. You light up what is dark and reveal what is hidden to the pure, who in faith have submitted to You and Your law. 6 You have shown this vision to Your servant. Show me its meaning as well. 7 I know that I have received an answer about the things I asked, and in answer to my request You showed me with what voice to praise You and with what limbs to send up praises and hallelujahs to You. 8 Even if my limbs were mouths and the hairs of my head were voices, I still could not give You the praise You deserve, nor honor You as is fitting. I could not recount Your praise or tell the glory of Your beauty. 9 What am I among people, or why am I counted among those better than I am, that I have heard all these marvelous things from the Most High and countless promises from the One who made me? 10 Blessed be my mother among those who bear children, and praised among women be she who gave birth to me. 11 I will not be silent in praising the Mighty One, and with the voice of praise I will tell of His marvelous deeds. 12 Who does anything like Your marvelous deeds, O God? Who can grasp Your deep thought about life? 13 By Your counsel You govern all the creatures that Your right hand made. You set every fountain of light beside You, and You prepared the treasures of wisdom beneath Your throne. 14 Those who have not loved Your law rightly perish, and the torment of judgment awaits those who have not submitted to Your power. 15 Adam sinned first and brought early death on everyone, but of those born from him, each one has prepared torment to come for his own soul, and each has also chosen glories to come for himself.
16 Whoever believes will certainly receive a reward. 17 But as for you wicked ones who live now, go and turn toward destruction, because you will soon be visited, since you rejected the understanding of the Most High. 18 His works have not taught you, and the skill of His creation, always before you, has not persuaded you. 19 So Adam is not the cause except of his own soul, but each of us has become the Adam of his own soul. 20 But You, Lord, explain to me the things You have revealed to me, and tell me about what I asked You. 21 At the completion of the world, vengeance will be taken on those who have done wickedness, according to their wickedness, and You will glorify the faithful according to their faithfulness. 22 You rule over those who belong to You, and You blot out from among Your own those who sin."

Chapter 55

1 When I had finished speaking the words of this prayer, I sat down there under a tree to rest in the shade of its branches. 2 I wondered and was amazed, and I thought about the abundance of goodness that sinners on the earth have rejected, and about the great torment they have despised, although they knew they would be tormented because of the sin they had committed. 3 While I was thinking about these and similar things, the angel Ramiel[a], who is in charge of true visions, was sent to me, and he said to me, 4 "Baruch, why does your heart trouble you, and why does your thought disturb you? 5 If you are so moved by a mere report of the judgment, what will you do when you see it clearly with your own eyes? 6 If you are so overcome by waiting for the day of the Mighty One, what will you do when you come to its arrival? 7 If you are so completely distraught at the word announcing the torment of those who have acted foolishly, how much more when the event itself shows its marvels? 8 If you have heard news of the good and evil things that are then coming and are grieved, what will you do when you see what the Majesty will reveal, which will convict some and make others rejoice?"

Notes

- a (55:3) "Ramiel" (Hebrew Remiel) is thought to mean "thunder of God" or "God has raised up."

Chapter 56

Interpretation: the dark and bright waters

1 "Since you asked the Most High to explain the vision you saw, I have been sent to tell you. 2 The Mighty One has truly made known to you the course of the times that have passed and those that are meant to pass in His world, from the beginning of its creation to its completion, both what is deceit and what is truth. 3 The great cloud you saw rising from the sea and going on to cover the earth is the duration of the world, which the Mighty One made when He decided to make the world. 4 When the word went out from His presence, the duration of the world came into being in a small way, and it was established according to the fullness of the understanding of the One who sent it. 5 The black waters you saw first at the top of the cloud, which came down on the earth first, are the transgression that Adam, the first man, committed. 6 For from the time he transgressed, early death came into being, grief was given a name, anguish was prepared, pain was created, trouble was brought to its height, and disease began to take hold. Sheol kept demanding to be renewed with blood. The bearing of children came about, the passion of parents arose, human greatness was brought low, and goodness withered. 7 What could be blacker or darker than these things? 8 This is the beginning of the black waters you saw. 9 From these black waters, black waters came again, and the darkness of darkness was produced. 10 He became a danger to his own soul, and even to the angels. 11 At that time, when he was created, they had enjoyed freedom. 12 Because he became a danger to them, some of them came down and mingled with the women.
13 Then those who did this were tormented in chains. 14 But the rest of the multitude of angels, who cannot be counted, held themselves back. 15 Those who lived on the earth perished together with them in the waters of the flood. 16 These are the first black waters."

Chapter 57

1 "After these waters you saw bright waters. This is the fountain of Abraham, together with his generations and the coming of his son and his son's son, and of those like them. 2 At that time the unwritten law was known among them, the works of the commandments were fulfilled, belief in the coming judgment arose, hope in the world that was to be renewed was built up, and the promise of the life to come was planted. 3 These are the bright waters you saw."

Chapter 58

1 "The black third waters you saw are the mixing together of all sins that the nations committed after the death of those righteous men, and the wickedness of the land of Egypt[a], where they acted wickedly in the service by which they made their sons serve. 2 Yet even these perished in the end."

Notes

- a (58:1) "Egypt" translates the Hebrew Mitsrayim, of uncertain meaning.

Chapter 59

1 "The bright fourth waters you saw are the coming of Moses, Aaron[a], Miriam[b], Joshua[c] son of Nun, Caleb[d], and all those like them. 2 At that time the lamp of the eternal law shone on all who sat in darkness. It announced the promised reward to those who believe, and the torment of fire kept for them to those who deny. 3 At that time even the heavens were shaken from their place, and those under the throne of the Mighty One were disturbed when He took Moses to Himself. 4 He showed him many warnings, together with the principles of the law and the end of the times, as He has to you also, and likewise the pattern of Zion and its measurements, on the pattern of which the sanctuary of the present time was to be made. 5 He also showed him the extent of the fire, the depths of the abyss, the weight of the winds, and the number of the drops of rain, 6 the restraint of anger, the abundance of patience, and the truth of judgment, 7 the root of wisdom, the riches of understanding, and the spring of knowledge, 8 the height of the air, the greatness of Paradise, the end of the ages, and the start of the day of judgment, 9 the number of the offerings, and the worlds that have not yet come, 10 the mouth of Gehenna, the place where vengeance stands, the place of faith, and the region of hope, 11 the likeness of future torment, the multitude of countless angels, the flaming hosts, the splendor of the lightnings, the voice of the thunders, the ranks of the chief angels, the treasuries of light, the changes of the times, and the study of the law. [12] These are the bright fourth waters you saw."

Notes

- a (59:1) "Aaron" (Hebrew Aharon) is of uncertain meaning.
- b (59:1) "Miriam" (Hebrew Miryam) is of uncertain meaning; it may be related to "bitter" or "beloved."
- c (59:1) "Joshua" (Hebrew Yehoshua) means "Yahweh saves."
- d (59:1) "Caleb" (Hebrew Kalev) is often taken to mean "dog" or "wholehearted."

Chapter 60

[1] "The black fifth waters you saw raining are the works the Amorites did, the spells of their incantations, the wickedness of their mysteries, and the mixing of their pollution. [2] Even Israel was defiled by sins in the days of the judges, although they saw many signs from the One who made them."

Chapter 61

[1] "The bright sixth waters you saw are the time when David[a] and Solomon[b] were born. [2] At that time Zion was built, the sanctuary was dedicated, much blood of the nations that sinned then was shed, and many offerings were made at the dedication of the sanctuary. [3] There was peace and calm at that time. [4] Wisdom was heard in the assembly, and the riches of understanding were honored in the congregations. [5] The holy festivals were kept in blessing and great joy. [6] The judgment of the rulers was seen to be without deceit, and the righteousness of the Mighty One's precepts was carried out in truth. [7] The land was loved by the Lord at that time, and because its inhabitants did not sin, it was glorified above all lands, and the city of Zion ruled over all lands and regions. [8] These are the bright waters you saw."

Notes

- a (61:1) "David" (Hebrew David) probably means "beloved."
- b (61:1) "Solomon" (Hebrew Shelomoh) is related to shalom, "peace."

Chapter 62

1 "The black seventh waters you saw are the perversion that came from the plan of Jeroboam[a], who planned to make two golden calves, 2 and all the wrongdoing that the kings after him did wickedly. 3
They are the curse of Jezebel[b] and the worship of idols that Israel practiced at that time, 4 the withholding of rain, and the famines that happened until women ate the fruit of their own wombs, 5 and the time of captivity that came on the nine and a half tribes, because they were in many sins. 6 Shalmaneser[c], king of Assyria[d], came and led them away captive. 7 As for the nations, it would be tiresome to tell how they always practiced ungodliness and wickedness and never did righteousness. 8 These are the black seventh waters you saw."

Notes

- a (62:1) "Jeroboam" (Hebrew Yarovam) is usually explained as "the people contend" or "may the kinsman increase."
- b (62:3) "Jezebel" (Hebrew Izevel) is a Phoenician name, perhaps meaning "where is the prince?"
- c (62:6) "Shalmaneser" (Assyrian Shulmanu-asharedu) means "Shulmanu is foremost."
- d (62:6) "Assyria" (Hebrew Ashshur) is named for its chief city and god, Ashur.

Chapter 63

1 "The bright eighth waters you saw are the uprightness and honesty of Hezekiah[a], king of Judah, and the grace that came upon him. 2
For Sennacherib[b] was stirred up, so that he would perish, and his rage troubled him, so that he would perish by it, together with the multitude of the nations that were with him. 3 When King Hezekiah heard what the king of Assyria was planning, which was to come and seize him and destroy his people, the two and a half tribes that remained, and even to overthrow Zion also, Hezekiah trusted in his works and hoped in his righteousness, and he spoke with the Mighty
One and said, 4 'See, Sennacherib is ready to destroy us, and he will be boastful and proud when he has destroyed Zion.' 5 The Mighty One heard him, for Hezekiah was wise, and He paid attention to his prayer because he was righteous. 6 Then the Mighty One gave orders to Ramiel, His angel who speaks with you. 7 And I went out and destroyed their multitude, the number of whose commanders alone was one hundred eighty-five thousand, and each of them had an equal number under him. [8] At that time I burned their bodies inside, but I kept their clothes and weapons untouched on the outside, so that the still more wonderful deeds of the Mighty One would appear, and so that His name would be spoken of in all the earth. [9] So Zion was saved and Jerusalem delivered, and Israel was freed from tribulation. [10] All who were in the holy land rejoiced, and the name of the Mighty One was glorified, so that it was spoken of everywhere. [11] These are the bright waters you saw."

Notes

- a (63:1) "Hezekiah" (Hebrew Chizqiyyahu) means "Yahweh strengthens."
- b (63:2) "Sennacherib" (Assyrian Sin-ahhe-eriba) means "Sin (the moon god) has replaced the brothers."

Chapter 64

[1] "The black ninth waters you saw are all the wickedness in the days of Manasseh[a], son of Hezekiah. [2] He did much that was ungodly. He killed the righteous, twisted judgment, shed the blood of the innocent, and violently defiled married women. He overturned the altars, destroyed their offerings, and drove out their priests so that they could not serve in the sanctuary. [3] He made an image with five faces. Four of them looked toward the four winds, and the fifth, on top of the image, stood as an opponent of the zeal of the Mighty One. [4] Then wrath went out from the presence of the Mighty One so that Zion would be uprooted, as also happened in your days. [5] A decree also went out against the two and a half tribes, that they too would be led away captive, as you have now seen. [6] Manasseh's ungodliness grew so great that it removed the praise of the Most High from the sanctuary. [7] For this reason Manasseh was called 'the ungodly' at that time, and in the end his dwelling was in the fire. [8] Though his prayer was heard by the Most High, in the end, when he was thrown into the bronze horse and the bronze horse melted, it served as a sign to him for the hour. [9] He had not lived perfectly, for he was not worthy.

But from then on he would know by whom he would finally be tormented. [10] For the One who is able to help is also able to torment."

Notes

- a (64:1) "Manasseh" (Hebrew Menashsheh) means "he who makes forget."

Chapter 65

[1] "So Manasseh acted ungodly and thought that in his time the Mighty One would not look into these things. [2] These are the black ninth waters you saw."

Chapter 66

[1] "The bright tenth waters you saw are the pure generations of Josiah[a], king of Judah, who was the only one at that time who submitted to the Mighty One with all his heart and all his soul. [2] He cleansed the land of idols and made holy all the vessels that had been defiled. He restored the offerings to the altar and raised the horn of the holy ones. He lifted up the righteous and honored everyone wise in understanding. He brought the priests back to their service and destroyed and removed the magicians, enchanters, and necromancers from the land. [3] Not only did he put to death the ungodly who were alive, but they also took the bones of the dead out of the tombs and burned them with fire. [4] He set up the festivals and the Sabbaths in their holiness, and he burned their defiled ones in the fire. The lying prophets who deceived the people he also burned in the fire, and the people who had listened to them while they lived, he threw into the Kidron brook and heaped stones on them. [5] He was zealous with zeal for the Mighty One with all his soul, and he alone was firm in the law at that time, so that all the days of his life he left no uncircumcised person or anyone who practiced ungodliness in all the land. [6] So he will receive an eternal reward, and he will be glorified with the Mighty One above many at a later time. [7] For his sake and for the sake of those like him, the honorable glories of which you were told before were created and prepared. These are the bright waters you saw."

Notes

- a (66:1) "Josiah" (Hebrew Yoshiyyahu) probably means "Yahweh supports."

Chapter 67

1 “The black eleventh waters you saw are the calamity that is now falling on Zion. 2 Do you think there is no anguish among the angels in the presence of the Mighty One, that Zion was handed over like this, and that the nations boast in their hearts, gather before their idols, and say, ‘She who so often trampled others is trampled down, and she who enslaved others has been enslaved’? 3 Do you think the Most High rejoices in these things, or that His name is glorified? 4 But how will it serve His righteous judgment? 5 After these things, those scattered among the nations will be seized by tribulation, and they will live in shame in every place. 6 For as long as Zion is handed over and Jerusalem laid waste, idols will prosper in the cities of the nations.
The fragrant smoke of the incense of righteousness that comes by the law will be put out in Zion, and in every place in the region of Zion
there will be the smoke of ungodliness. 7 But the king of Babylon, who has now destroyed Zion, will rise up and boast over the people, and he will say great things in his heart before the Most High. 8 But he too will fall in the end. These are the black waters.”

Chapter 68

1 “The bright twelfth waters you saw are this word. 2 After these things a time will come when your people fall into distress, so that they all run the risk of perishing together. 3 Even so, they will be saved, and their enemies will fall before them. 4 In due time they will have great joy. 5 At that time, after a short interval, Zion will be rebuilt again, its offerings will be restored, the priests will return to their service, and the nations will come to honor it. 6 Even so, it will not be fully as it was in the beginning. 7 But after these things there will be the fall of many nations. 8 These are the bright waters you saw.”

Chapter 69

1 “The last waters you saw, which were darker than all those before them, those that came after the twelfth and were gathered together, belong to the whole world. 2 The Most High made a division from the beginning, because He alone knows what will happen. 3 He foresaw six kinds of the outrages and ungodliness that would be done before Him. [4] And He foresaw six kinds of the good works of the righteous that would be done before Him, besides those that He Himself will do at the completion of the age. [5] For this reason there were no black waters mixed with black, and no bright with bright, for it is the end."

Chapter 70

[1] "Now hear the meaning of the last black waters that are to come after the black ones. This is the word. [2] See, the days are coming. When the time of the age has ripened and the harvest of its evil and good seeds has come, the Mighty One will bring on the earth, its inhabitants, and its rulers a disturbance of spirit and a stupor of heart. [3] They will hate one another and stir one another up to fight. The lowly will rule over the honored, and those of low rank will be lifted above the famous. [4] The many will be handed over to the few, those who were nothing will rule over the strong, the poor will have more than the rich, and the ungodly will exalt themselves above the heroic. [5] The wise will be silent and the foolish will speak. Neither the thinking of people nor the counsel of the mighty will be confirmed then, and the hope of those who hope will not be confirmed. [6] When what was foretold has come to pass, confusion will fall on everyone. Some will fall in battle and some will perish in anguish, [7] and some will be destroyed by their own. Then the Most High will call up the nations He prepared beforehand, and they will come and make war on the leaders who are left at that time. [8] Whoever escapes the war will die in the earthquake, whoever escapes the earthquake will be burned by the fire, and whoever escapes the fire will be destroyed by famine. [9] Whoever, among the victors and the defeated, escapes all these things I have mentioned will be handed over to My servant, the Messiah. [10] For all the earth will devour its inhabitants."

Chapter 71

[1] "The holy land will have mercy on its own and protect its inhabitants at that time. [2] This is the vision you saw, and this is its meaning. [3]

I have come to tell you these things because your prayer has been heard by the Most High."

Chapter 72

1 "Now hear also about the bright lightning that is to come at the end, after these black waters. This is the word. 2 After the signs I told you of before have come, when the nations are in turmoil and the time of My Messiah has come, he will summon all the nations. Some of them he will spare, and some he will put to death. 3 These things will come on the nations that he spares. 4 Every nation that has not known Israel and has not trampled the seed of Jacob will indeed be spared. 5 This is because some from every nation will be made subject to your people. 6 But all who have ruled over you, or have known you, will be given up to the sword."

Chapter 73

1 "When he has brought low everything in the world and has sat down in peace for the age on the throne of his kingdom, then joy will be revealed and rest will appear. 2 Then healing will come down like dew, and disease will withdraw. Worry, anguish, and lamentation will pass from among people, and gladness will spread through the whole earth. 3 No one will die before his time again, and no misfortune will strike suddenly. 4 Judgments, abusive talk, quarrels, revenge, bloodshed, passions, envy, hatred, and everything like these will go into condemnation when they are removed. 5 These are the very things that have filled this world with evils, and because of them human life has been greatly troubled. 6 Wild beasts will come out of the forest and serve people, and asps and dragons will come out of their holes to submit to a little child. 7 Women will no longer have pain when they give birth, and they will not suffer torment when they bring forth the fruit of the womb."

Chapter 74

1 "In those days the reapers will not grow tired and the builders will not be worn out, for the work will move ahead quickly by itself, together with those who do it, in great peace. 2 For that time is the end of what is corruptible and the beginning of what is not corruptible. [3] So the things that were foretold will belong to it. It is far from evils and near to things that do not die. [4] This is the bright lightning that came after the last dark waters."

Chapter 75

Baruch's hymn

[1] I answered, "Who can understand Your goodness, Lord? It cannot be grasped. [2] Who can search out Your compassion, which has no end? [3] Who can comprehend Your intelligence? [4] Who can recount the thoughts of Your mind? [5] Who among those who are born can hope to reach those things, unless it is someone to whom You are merciful and gracious? [6] If You did not have compassion on humanity, those under Your right hand could not reach those things, but only those counted by name can be called. [7] But if we who exist know why we have come, and submit to the One who brought us out of Egypt, we will come again and remember the things that have passed, and we will rejoice over what has been. [8] But if we do not know why we have come, and do not acknowledge the rule of the One who brought us up out of Egypt, we will come again and look for the things of the present, and be grieved with pain over what has happened."

Chapter 76

Baruch is told to teach the people for forty days

[1] He answered me, "Since the meaning of this vision has been explained to you as you asked, hear the word of the Most High, so that you may know what will happen to you after these things. [2] You will surely depart from this earth, but not to death. You will be kept until the end of the times. [3] So go up to the top of that mountain, and all the regions of that land will pass before you, together with the shape of the inhabited world, the tops of the mountains, the depths of the valleys, the depths of the seas, and the number of the rivers, so that you may see what you are leaving and where you are going. [4] This will happen after forty days. So go now, and during these days teach the people as far as you can, so that they may learn and not die at the last time, but may learn so that they live in the last times."

Chapter 77

Baruch's address, and his two letters

1 I, Baruch, went there and came to the people. I gathered them together, from the greatest to the least, and said to them, 2 "Listen, children of Israel. See how many of you remain from the twelve tribes of Israel. 3 To you and to your fathers the Lord gave a law more excellent than any given to all other peoples. 4 Because your brothers broke the commands of the Most High, He did not spare the earlier ones, and He gave the later ones also into captivity. He did not leave a remnant of them, 5 but see, you are here with me. 6 If you direct your ways rightly, you also will not depart as your brothers departed, but they will come to you. 7 The One you worship is merciful, the One in whom you hope is gracious, and He is true, so that He will do good and not evil. 8 Have you not seen here what has happened to Zion? 9 Or do you perhaps think the place had sinned and was overthrown for that reason? Or that the land had acted foolishly and so was handed over? 10 Do you not know that because of you who sinned, what did not sin was overthrown, and because of those who did wickedly, what did not act foolishly was handed over to its enemies?" 11 The whole people answered me, "As far as we can recall the good things the Mighty One has done for us, we recall them, and the things we do not remember He knows in His mercy. 12 Even so, do this for us, your people: write also to our brothers in Babylon a letter of teaching and a scroll of hope, so that you may strengthen them too before you leave us. 13 The shepherds of Israel have perished, the lamps that gave light have gone out, and the fountains have held back the streams we used to drink from. 14 We are left in the darkness, among the trees of the forest, and in the thirst of the wilderness." 15 I answered them, "Shepherds, lamps, and fountains come from the law.
Though we depart, the law remains. 16 If you therefore respect the law and give yourselves to wisdom, a lamp will not be missing, a shepherd will not fail, and a fountain will not dry up. 17 Even so, as you have asked me, I will write to your brothers in Babylon and send it by men. In the same way I will write to the nine and a half tribes and send it by a bird." 18 On the twenty-first day of the eighth month ([a]October–November), I, Baruch, came and sat down under the oak, in the shade of its branches. No one was with me, and I was alone. 19 I wrote these two letters. One I sent by an eagle to the nine and a half tribes, and the other I sent to those in Babylon by three men. 20 I called the eagle and said these words to it: 21 "The Most High made you higher than all birds. 22 Now go, and do not linger anywhere, do not enter a nest, and do not settle on any tree until you have crossed the breadth of the many waters of the river Euphrates[b] and have gone to the people who live there, and drop this letter to them. 23 Remember that at the time of the flood Noah[c] received an olive branch from a dove when he sent it out from the ark. 24 The ravens also served Elijah[d], bringing him food, as they had been commanded. 25 Solomon, too, in the time of his kingdom, whenever he wished to send or look for anything, commanded a bird to go, and it obeyed him as he commanded. 26 Now do not let this tire you. Turn neither right nor left, but fly straight, so that you keep the command of the Mighty One, as I have told you."

Notes

- a (77:18) October–November: The text says the "eighth month" of the Hebrew calendar, which is Marcheshvan.
- b (77:22) "Euphrates" (Hebrew Perat) is the great river of Mesopotamia, whose name means "fruitful."
- c (77:23) "Noah" (Hebrew Noach) is linked in Genesis 5 with "rest" or "comfort."
- d (77:24) "Elijah" (Hebrew Eliyyahu) means "my God is Yahweh."

Chapter 78

The letter to the nine and a half tribes

1 These are the words of the letter that Baruch, son of Neriah, sent to the nine and a half tribes across the river Euphrates, in which these things were written. 2 Baruch, son of Neriah, says this to the brothers carried into captivity: "Mercy and peace." My brothers, I keep in mind the love of the One who created us. He loved us from of old and never hated us, but above all He trained us. 3 I know that all of us, the twelve tribes, are bound by one bond, since we were born from one father.

4 So I have been all the more careful to leave you the words of this letter before I die, so that you may be comforted about the evils that have come on you, and may also grieve over the evil that has come on your brothers. I also want you to justify His judgment, 5 which He decreed against you, that you be carried away captive, since what you have suffered is out of proportion to what you have done, so that in the last times you may be found worthy of your fathers. 6 So if you consider that you have suffered these things for your good, so that in the end you will not be condemned and tormented, then you will receive eternal hope. Above all, you must destroy from your heart the empty error that caused you to leave this place. 7 If you do this, He will always remember you, He who always promised on our behalf to those more excellent than we are that He will never forget or abandon us, but will gather again, with great mercy, those who were scattered.

Chapter 79

1 Now, my brothers, first learn what happened to Zion: how Nebuchadnezzar[a], king of Babylon, came up against us. 2 We sinned against the One who made us and did not keep the commandments He gave us, yet He has not punished us as we deserved. 3 What happened to you we also suffer in a still greater degree, for it happened to us as well.

Notes

- a (79:1) "Nebuchadnezzar" (Babylonian Nabu-kudurri-usur) means "Nabu, protect my heir."

Chapter 80

1 Now, my brothers, I tell you that when the enemy had surrounded the city, the angels of the Most High were sent, and they overthrew the fortifications of the strong wall and destroyed the firm iron corners, which could not be uprooted. 2 Even so, they hid all the vessels of the sanctuary, so that the enemy could not take possession of them. 3 When they had done this, they handed over to the enemy the overthrown wall, the plundered house, the burned temple, and the people, who were overcome because they had been given up, so that the enemy could not boast and say, "By force we have been able to lay waste even the house of the Most High in war." [4] They have also bound your brothers and led them away to Babylon, and made them live there. [5] But we have been left here, very few. [6] This is the tribulation I wrote to you about. [7] I know that the comfort of the inhabitants of Zion consoles you, since, as long as you knew it was prospering, your comfort was greater than the tribulation you endured in having to leave it.

Chapter 81

[1] Now hear the word about comfort. [2] I was mourning over Zion, and I asked the Most High for mercy, and I said, [3] "How long will these things last for us? Will these evils come on us always?" [4] The Mighty One acted according to the abundance of His mercies, and the Most High according to the greatness of His compassion. He revealed the word to me so that I would receive comfort. He showed me visions so that I would not endure anguish again, and He made known to me the mystery of the times and showed me the coming of the hours.

Chapter 82

[1] So, my brothers, I have written to you so that you may comfort yourselves in the abundance of your tribulations. [2] Know that our Maker will surely avenge us on all our enemies for everything they have done to us. The end that the Most High will bring is very near, and His mercy that is coming and the end of His judgment are not far off at all. [3] We now see the abundance of the nations' prosperity, though they act ungodly, but they will be like a vapor. [4] We see the greatness of their power, though they do wickedly, but they will be made like a drop of water. [5] We see the firmness of their strength, though they resist the Mighty One every hour, but they will be counted as spit. [6] We consider the glory of their greatness, though they do not keep the statutes of the Most High, but they will pass away like smoke. [7] We think about the beauty of their grace, though they deal in pollution, but they will fade away like grass that withers. [8] We consider the strength of their cruelty, though they do not remember its end, but they will be broken like a wave that passes. [9] We take note of the boasting of their might, though they deny the kindness of God who gave it to them, but they will pass away like a passing cloud.

Chapter 83

[1] For the Most High will surely hasten His times, and He will surely bring on His hours. [2] He will surely judge those who are in His world, and He will visit all things in truth through all their hidden works. [3] He will surely examine the secret thoughts and everything stored in the inner rooms of all the members of the human body, and He will make it plain before everyone with rebuke. [4] So let none of these present things rise into your hearts, but above all let us wait expectantly, because what has been promised to us will come. [5] Let us not now look to the pleasures of the nations in the present, but let us remember what has been promised to us in the end. [6] For the ends of the times and seasons, and whatever goes with them, will surely pass by together. [7] The end of the age will then show the great power of its ruler, when all things come to judgment. [8] So prepare your hearts for what you believed before, so that you do not end up in bondage in both worlds, led away captive here and tormented there. [9] For in everything that exists now, or has passed, or is to come, neither is the evil fully evil, nor again the good fully good. [10] All the health of this time is turning into sickness, [11] all the might of this time is turning into weakness, and all the force of this time is turning into helplessness. [12] Every energy of youth is turning into old age and decline, and every graceful beauty of this time is turning faded and hateful. [13] Every proud rule of the present is turning into humiliation and shame, [14] every praise of the glory of this time is turning into the shame of silence, and every empty splendor and insolence of this time is turning into voiceless ruin. [15] Every delight and joy of this time is turning to worms and corruption, [16] every clamor of the pride of this time is turning into dust and stillness. [17] Every possession of riches in this time is being turned into Sheol alone, [18] all the plunder of passion in this time is turning into unwilling death, and every passion of the desires of this time is turning into a judgment of torment. [19] Every scheme and trick of this time is turning into a proof of the truth, [20] every sweetness of perfumes in this time is turning into judgment and condemnation, [21] and every love of lying is turning into disgrace through the truth. [22] Since all these things are done now, does anyone think they will not be avenged? But the end of all things will come to the truth.

[1] See, I have made these things known to you while I am alive. I said it so that you would learn what is excellent, for the Mighty One has commanded me to teach you, and I will set before you some of the commands of His judgment before I die. [2] Remember that Moses once called heaven and earth to witness against you and said, "If you break the law you will be scattered, but if you keep it you will be kept." [3] He also told you other things when you, the twelve tribes, were together in the desert. [4] After his death you threw them away from you, and for this reason what had been foretold came on you. [5] Moses told you before these things happened to you, and now they have happened to you, for you abandoned the law. [6] I also say to you, now that you have suffered, that if you obey what has been said to you, you will receive from the Mighty One whatever has been stored up and kept for you. [7] Let this letter be a testimony between me and you, so that you remember the commands of the Mighty One, and so that I also have a defense before the One who sent me. [8] Remember the law and Zion, the holy land and your brothers, and the covenant of your fathers, and do not forget the festivals and the Sabbaths. [9] Hand on this letter and the traditions of the law to your sons after you, as your fathers handed them on to you. [10] At all times ask persistently and pray earnestly with your whole heart that the Mighty One may be reconciled to you, and that He may not count the multitude of your sins but remember the uprightness of your fathers. [11] For if He does not judge us according to the abundance of His mercies, woe to all of us who are born."

Chapter 85

[1] “Know also that in former times, in the generations of old, our fathers had helpers, righteous men and holy prophets. [2] We were in our own land, and they helped us when we sinned. They interceded for us with the One who made us, because they trusted in their works, and the Mighty One heard their prayer and forgave us. [3] But now the righteous have been gathered, the prophets have fallen asleep, and we too have gone out from the land. Zion has been taken from us, and now we have nothing except the Mighty One and His law. [4] So if we direct and set our hearts in order, we will receive everything we lost, and far better things many times over. [5] What we lost was subject to corruption, and what we will receive will not be corruptible. [6] I have also written like this to our brothers in Babylon, so that I may bear witness to them as well about these very things. [7] Let all the things I have mentioned be always before your eyes, because we are still in the spirit and power of our freedom. [8] Again, the Most High is patient with us here. He has shown us what is to come and has not hidden from us what will happen in the end. [9] So before judgment claims what is its own and truth what is due to it, let us prepare our souls so that we possess and are not possessed, so that we hope and are not put to shame, and so that we rest with our fathers and are not tormented with our enemies. [10] For the youth of the world is past, the strength of creation is already spent, and the coming of the times is very near. Indeed, they have gone by. The pitcher is near the cistern, the ship near the port, the course of the journey near the city, and life near its end. [11] Prepare your souls again, so that when you sail and step off the ship, you may have rest [12] and not be condemned when you depart. For when the Most High brings all these things to pass, there will be no more a place for repentance, no limit to the times, no duration for the hours, no change of ways, no place for prayer, no sending of petitions, no receiving of knowledge, no giving of love, no place of repentance for the soul, no pleading for offenses, no intercession of the fathers, no prayer of the prophets, and no help of the righteous. [13] There is the sentence of corruption, the way of fire, and the path that leads to Gehenna. [14] For this reason there is one law through one, one age, and an end for all who are in it. [15] Then He will keep safe those He can forgive and at the same time destroy those who are stained with sins."

Chapter 86

[1] When you receive this letter of mine, read it carefully in your congregations. [2] Think it over, above all on the days of your fasts. [3] Remember me by means of this letter, as I also remember you in it, always. Farewell.

Chapter 87

[1] When I had finished all the words of this letter and had written it carefully to its close, I folded it, sealed it securely, tied it to the neck of the eagle, and let it go and sent it off.

4 Baruch

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

1 When the people of Israel were being carried away captive by the Chaldean king,[a] God spoke to Jeremiah.[b] "Jeremiah, my chosen servant," he said, "rise up and leave this city, you and Baruch,[c] because I am about to lay it in ruins; those who live in it have heaped up so many sins." 2 Your prayers stand in the middle of it like a firm pillar, and like a wall of unbreakable steel running all around it. 3 So now, get up and go out before the Chaldean army has the city ringed. 4 Jeremiah answered, "I beg you, Lord,[d] let your servant speak in your presence." 5 "Speak, Jeremiah, my chosen one," the Lord answered. 6
So Jeremiah said, "Lord Almighty,[e] are you handing your chosen city over to the Chaldeans, so that the king and all his people may boast and say, 'I have beaten the holy city of God'? 7 No, my Lord. But if that is what you want, then destroy it with your own hands." 8 The Lord said to Jeremiah, "Because you are my chosen one, get up and leave this city, you and Baruch, because I am going to destroy it for the great number of sins of those who live in it. 9 The king and his army cannot get inside unless I myself open its gates for them. 10 So get up, go to Baruch, and give him these words. 11 At midnight,[f] after you have gotten up, climb onto the city walls. I will show you that they cannot enter until I have brought the city down first." 12 When the Lord had spoken, he went away from Jeremiah.

Notes

- a (1:1) "Chaldeans" is the Greek form of Hebrew Kasdim, the people who ruled Babylon. The book looks back to the Babylonian conquest of Jerusalem in 587/586 BC (compare 2 Kings 25; Jeremiah 39).
- b (1:1) The Hebrew name Yirmeyahu is often explained as "Yahweh lifts up" or "Yahweh throws down"; the meaning is uncertain.
- c (1:1) Baruch (Hebrew Barukh) means "blessed." He is Jeremiah's scribe in Jeremiah 36 and 45.

- d (1:4) The Greek text has kyrios, “Lord,” the word the Greek Bible regularly uses for Yahweh. Throughout the book, “the Lord” renders kyrios; the Hebrew name Yahweh itself does not occur in this Greek text.
- e (1:6) Greek pantokratōr, “ruler of all,” which the Greek Bible uses for the Hebrew title Yahweh Sabaoth (“Yahweh of Armies”).
- f (1:11) Greek “the sixth hour of the night.” Counting the night hours from about 6 p.m., the sixth hour is about midnight.

Chapter 2

1 Jeremiah hurried to tell Baruch everything. The two of them went to the Temple of God; there Jeremiah ripped his robe, covered his head with dust, and walked into the sanctuary of God.[a] 2 When Baruch saw him with his garments torn and dust on his head, he cried out in a loud voice, “Father Jeremiah, what has happened to you? What dreadful sin has the people committed?” 3 Each time the people had sinned, Jeremiah would throw dust over his head and plead for them, until their sin was forgiven. 4 So Baruch asked him, “Father, why are you doing this? What is going on?” 5 Jeremiah said to him, “Rather, let us tear open our hearts, and not fetch water for the troughs. Let us weep until our tears fill them, because the Lord will show this people no pity.” 6 Baruch said, “Father Jeremiah, what has happened?” 7 Jeremiah said, “God is handing the city over to the king of the Chaldeans, to carry the people away captive to Babylon.” 8 When Baruch heard it, he tore his own robe too. “Father Jeremiah,” he said, “who told you this?” 9 Jeremiah said to him, “Stay with me a little while, until midnight, so that you can know that this word is true.”
10 So the two of them remained beside the altar,[b] weeping, with their clothes torn.

Notes

- a (2:1) The Greek says “the sanctuary (hagiastērion) of God,” meaning the Temple.
- b (2:10) The Greek word is thysiastērion, “the place of sacrifice, altar.”

Chapter 3

1 When the hour of night came that the Lord had spoken of to Jeremiah, Jeremiah and Baruch went together up onto the city walls. 2 A trumpet sounded, and angels came out of heaven carrying torches in their hands, and they stood on the walls of the city. [3] When Jeremiah and Baruch saw the angels, they wept. "Now we know the word is true," they said. [4] Then Jeremiah pleaded with the angels: "I ask you not to destroy the city yet, until I have spoken to the Lord." [5] The Lord said to the angels, "Do not destroy the city until I have spoken with my chosen servant Jeremiah." [6] Jeremiah said, "I beg you, Lord, allow me to speak in your presence." [7] The Lord said, "Speak, my chosen Jeremiah." [8] Jeremiah said, "Look, Lord, we now know that you are handing the city over to its enemies, and they will carry the people off to Babylon. [9] What would you have me do with the sacred vessels used in the Temple's worship?" [10] The Lord answered, "Take them, give them over to the earth, and say: 'Listen, earth, to the voice of the one who shaped you, who set you down amid the waters,[a] and who sealed you with seven seals through seven seasons. After all this, you will be given back your adornment. [11] Keep safe the sacred vessels of the Temple until the beloved ones are gathered.'" [12] Jeremiah said, "Lord, show me, I pray, what I ought to do for Abimelech the Ethiopian.[b] He has shown great kindness to the people and to your servant Jeremiah. [13] For he is the one who lifted me out of the muddy pit.[c] I do not want him to see the ruin of the city and its desolation; instead, be merciful to him, so that he is not grieved." [14] The Lord said to Jeremiah, "Send him away to the estate of Agrippa[d] by way of the mountain, and I will shelter him until I bring your people back to the city. [15] And you, Jeremiah, go with your people to Babylon, and stay there preaching the good news to them,[e] until I bring them back to the city. [16] Baruch must stay here while I speak with him." [17] When he had said this, the Lord went up from Jeremiah into heaven. [18] Then Jeremiah and Baruch went into the sanctuary and took the holy vessels of the service; they handed them over to the earth, just as the Lord had told them. [19] Right away, the earth swallowed them up. [20] And the two sat down and wept. [21] At daybreak Jeremiah sent Abimelech off, saying, "Take a basket, and go along the mountain road to the estate of Agrippa. Bring back a few figs for the sick among the people, because the Lord's favor rests on you and his glory crowns your head." [22] Abimelech went, as he had been told.

Notes

- a (3:10) Greek "in the abundance (or fullness) of the waters." Ancient writers pictured the earth as a land set in the waters of the sea (compare Psalm 24:2).
- b (3:12) "Ethiopian" translates Greek Aithiops (Hebrew Kushi, "Cushite"), a man from the upper Nile region south of Egypt. He is the court official of Jeremiah 38:7–13 and 39:15–18.
- c (3:13) Greek lakkos tou borborou, "the pit of mud"; compare the cistern in Jeremiah 38:6, where Jeremiah sank into the mud.
- d (3:14) "Agrippa" is the name the Greek gives to a country property near Jerusalem. It is a Greek or Latin name not otherwise known from Jeremiah's time, which is one sign that the book was composed long after the events it describes.
- e (3:15) The Greek participle euangelizomenos means "bringing good news." It is the verb the New Testament uses for preaching the gospel; here it describes Jeremiah's message of comfort and return to the exiles.

Chapter 4

1 When morning came, the army of the Chaldeans appeared and surrounded the city.

2 Then the great angel sounded the trumpet and called out, "Come in, you forces of the Chaldeans, for the gate has been opened to you."

3 "Let the king come in with his multitude, and let him carry all the people away captive."

4 Jeremiah took the Temple keys, went out beyond the city, and hurled them toward the sun,[a] calling out, "Sun, this is my command: take the Temple keys of God and hold on to them until the day the Lord demands them back from you.

5 For we were not found worthy to guard them, because we proved to be faithless stewards."

6 While Jeremiah was still weeping over the people, they were being dragged off to Babylon.[b]

7 Baruch threw dust on his head and sat down, and he sang this lament:[c] "Why has Jerusalem been laid waste?

Because of the sins of the people we love, it was handed over to enemy hands, because of our sins and the sins of the people.

8 But let the lawless ones not boast, saying, 'We had the strength to take God's city by our own power.' You could not do it. It was because of our sins that we were handed over.

9 But our God will have compassion on us and bring us back to our city. You, however, will not live."
10 "Happy are our ancestors Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: they passed out of this world and never saw this city fall."
11 When he had said this, Baruch went outside the city, weeping and saying, "I grieve on your account, Jerusalem, because I left you."
12 He kept sitting in a burial place, and the angels visited him and made everything clear to him.

Notes

- a (4:4) Addressing the sun, and the earth in chapter 3 above, matches the Bible's way of calling on creation as a witness (compare Deuteronomy 32:1; Isaiah 1:2).
- b (4:6) "Babylon" is the Greek form of Hebrew Bavel, a name sometimes explained as "gate of god" (Akkadian) and linked in Genesis 11:9 to the Hebrew word balal, "confuse."
- c (4:7) The Greek word is thrēnos, a funeral song or lament, like the Hebrew book of Lamentations.

Chapter 5

1 Abimelech took the figs in the scorching heat and came to a tree; he sat down in its shade to rest for a short while.[a] 2 He leaned his head against the basket of figs and fell asleep. He slept for sixty-six years,[b] and he did not wake from his sleep. 3 Then, waking from his sleep, he said, "That was sweet sleep, but short; my head still feels heavy, since I have not slept my fill." 4 He lifted the cover off the basket of figs and saw that they were still wet, running with a milky sap. 5 He said, "I would like another little sleep, but my head weighs on me. Still, I fear that if I drift off I will wake late, and my father Jeremiah will think ill of me. He would not have sent me out at first light today unless he needed them quickly. 6 So I will get up and go on in the heat, and I will reach the place where there is no scorching heat and no daily weariness."[c] 7 He got up, took the basket of figs, and lifted it onto his shoulder. He went into Jerusalem, and he did not recognize it, or the house, or the place, or anyone from his own family. 8 He said, "May the Lord be praised, since a deep daze has fallen on me! 9 This is not the city! I have lost my way. I came up by the mountain road, and when I woke, my head was so heavy from lack of rest that I wandered off the path. [10] It will seem remarkable to Jeremiah when I tell him that I have lost my way." [11] He went out of the city and looked carefully for the signs of the city, and he said, "This is the city all right, but I have lost my way." [12] He went into the city again and looked around, but found no one he knew. He said, "May the Lord be praised, since a deep daze has fallen on me." [13] He went out of the city again, and stayed there in distress, not knowing where he should go. [14] He set the basket down and said, "I will stay seated here until the Lord lifts this daze off me." [15] As he was sitting there, he saw an old man coming in from the field. Abimelech said to him, "Look, old man, what city is this?" [16] He answered him, "It is Jerusalem." [17] Abimelech said to him,

"Where are Jeremiah the priest and Baruch the reader,[d] and all the people of this city, since I could not find them?" [18] The old man asked him, "Are you not a native of this city? You mention Jeremiah today, and you ask after him after so long a time? [19] Jeremiah is in Babylon with the people, who were carried off by King Nebuchadnezzar,[e] and he is there with them to announce good news and instruct them in the word." [20] Abimelech heard the old man out, and answered, "If you were not so aged, and if it were not improper to rebuke a man who is older than oneself, I would laugh at you and tell you that you have lost your mind, for claiming that the people have been carried off to Babylon. [21] Even if the floodgates of heaven had opened on them, it would not yet be time to go to Babylon! [22] Why, it was only a short time ago that my father Jeremiah sent me to Agrippa's estate to fetch a few figs, which we meant to give to the sick among the people. [23] I went and picked them, and on reaching a certain tree in the blazing heat, I sat down for a short rest. I put my head on the basket and dozed off. [24] When I woke up, I uncovered the basket of figs, thinking that I had slept too long, and I found the figs dripping with milk, just as I had gathered them. [25] But you say the people were taken captive to Babylon. [26] But so that you can know, take the figs and look!" [27] He lifted the cover of the basket for the old man. [28] When the old man looked at the figs, he said, "My son, you are a righteous man. God did not wish you to witness the city's desolation, so he sent this daze over you. [29] For now it has been sixty-six years since the people were taken captive to Babylon. 30 So that you can learn, my child, that this is true: look out over the field and see that the crops are springing up.[f] 31 Look also at the figs: it is not their season. Learn from that, and be enlightened." 32 Then Abimelech cried out loudly, saying, "Blessed be God, who gives the souls of the righteous rest in every place!" 33 Then he asked the old man, "What month is this?" 34 He answered, "Nisan[g] (March–April), the twelfth." 35 He took a few of the figs and handed them to the old man, saying, "May God light your path to the Jerusalem above."

Notes

- a (5:1) The Greek says "the heat" (kauma), the midday heat of the Judean hills.
- b (5:2) Greek hexēkonta hex etē, "sixty-six years"; the same number is repeated in 5:29. Abimelech's long sleep is the main sign in the book that the exile has begun and that years have passed.
- c (5:6) The Greek of this verse is damaged. Harris notes that the manuscripts differ here and that the line is probably corrupt, so the sense given is tentative.
- d (5:17) Greek anagnōstēs, "reader" (one who reads the Scriptures aloud); here it names Baruch as Jeremiah's scribe and reader.
- e (5:19) "Nebuchadnezzar" is the Greek form of Babylonian Nabu-kudurri-usur, "Nabu, protect my heir" (a common spelling in the Bible is Nebuchadrezzar).
- f (5:30) The Greek reads "the growth of the crops has appeared" (so Harris); some editors emend this to "has not appeared." Either way the point is that the figs are out of season.
- g (5:34) Greek Nisan, the Hebrew first month (March–April). Harris notes that Nisan was never the twelfth month, and suggests that "the twelfth" here means the twelfth day of the first month, the day Ezra left the Ahava river for Jerusalem (Ezra 8:31); he also wonders whether the text once read "Nisan, which is Abib" (Abib is the older Hebrew name of the month, Exodus 13:4). The Ethiopic version has "the twelfth of the month Nisan."

Chapter 6

1 Afterward Abimelech left the city and prayed to the Lord. 2 And an angel of the Lord appeared, and set him down at the place where Baruch was; he found him sitting in a tomb. 3 When they saw each other, they embraced and kissed one another. 4 Baruch looked up and saw the figs, still covered over in the basket. 5 Then he raised his eyes toward heaven and prayed: 6 "Lord, you are the God who pays back those who are holy. Prepare yourself, my heart, and be glad and celebrate inside your tent,[a] and tell your house of flesh that your sorrow has turned into joy. For the One who is able is on his way, and he will bring you out of your tent; there is no sin in you. 7 Come to life again in your dwelling, in my unspoiled faith,[b] and believe that you will live! 8 Look at this basket of figs: it has been sixty-six years since they were picked, and they have not withered or rotted; they are dripping milk. 9 So it will be for you, my flesh, if you carry out what the angel of righteousness has told you. 10 The one who kept the basket of figs safe is the same one who will keep you safe again by his power." 11 After saying this, Baruch turned to Abimelech. "Rise, and let us pray that the Lord will teach us how we can get word to Jeremiah in Babylon about the shelter that was given you on your way." 12 Baruch prayed, "You are our strength, our God and Lord, the chosen light that has come out of your mouth. 13 We turn to your goodness and plead with you, whose great Name[c] nobody can know:

listen to the voices of your servants, and let understanding enter our hearts. 14 What do you want us to do? How can we send word to Jeremiah in Babylon?" 15 While Baruch was still praying, an angel of the Lord appeared and spoke to him. "Baruch, helper of the light, do not worry over how you are to get word to Jeremiah. An eagle will come to you tomorrow, at the hour of light, and you will send it to Jeremiah. 16 So put this in the letter: 'Say to the sons of Israel: Anyone who has become a foreigner among you should be kept apart, and let fifteen days go by. After that, I will bring you to your own city, says the Lord. 17 Whoever is not separated from Babylon, Jeremiah, will not enter the city. I command that they not be taken back again by the Babylonians, says the Lord.'" 18 When the angel had said this, he left Baruch. 19 Baruch sent a messenger to the market of the Gentiles, who returned with papyrus and ink, and Baruch wrote a letter that read:
"From Baruch, servant of God, to Jeremiah in the Babylonian exile. 20 Greetings! Rejoice and be glad, because God did not let us leave this body in grief over the city that was laid waste and insulted. 21 For this reason the Lord had compassion on our tears and remembered the covenant that he made with our fathers Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.[d] 22 He sent his angel to me, who told me these words that I am sending to you. 23 These are the words of the Lord, the God of Israel, who brought us up from the land of Egypt,[e] from the great furnace:[f] 'You did not keep my laws; your heart grew proud, and you held your necks stiff against me. So in anger and fury I gave you over to the furnace of Babylon. 24 If you will obey my voice, says the Lord, as it comes through Jeremiah my servant, then I will lead the obedient up out of Babylon. But whoever will not obey will be an outsider to Jerusalem and to Babylon alike. 25 You will put them to the test with the water of the Jordan:[g] the one who will not obey will be shown up. That is the sign of the great seal.'"

Notes

- a (6:6) "Tent" translates Greek skēnōma, "dwelling," the body, as in 2 Corinthians 5:1 and 2 Peter 1:13; the speaker is preparing his soul for the resurrection of the body he describes next.
- b (6:7) Greek parthenikē pistis, literally "virginal faith," meaning a faith not spoiled by any impurity. The manuscripts differ widely in this verse; Harris notes that one of them reads "in your own home, my virginal faith."
- c (6:13) Greek to mega onoma, "the great Name"; here it refers to the divine name, which is Yahweh in Hebrew (Exodus 3:14–15). The Greek text does not spell it out.
- d (6:21) "Abraham" (Hebrew Avraham) means "father of a multitude" (Genesis 17:5); "Isaac" (Yitskhaq) means "he laughs" (Genesis 21:6); "Jacob" (Ya'aqov) is linked in Genesis 25:26 to "heel" and means "he grasps the heel," or "he supplants."
- e (6:23) "Egypt" is Greek Aigyptos; the Hebrew is Mitsrayim, of uncertain meaning.
- f (6:23) The "iron furnace" is the Bible's image for Egypt (Deuteronomy 4:20; 1 Kings 8:51; Jeremiah 11:4).
- g (6:25) "Jordan" (Hebrew Yarden) means "the descender," because the river drops steeply from the north to the Dead Sea.

Chapter 7

1 Baruch got up and left the tomb, and he saw an eagle sitting outside the tomb. 2 The eagle answered in a human voice, "Greetings, Baruch, steward of the faith." 3 Baruch said to him, "You who speak this way: you are chosen out of all the birds of heaven, because it shows in the look of your eyes. Tell me what you are doing here." 4 The eagle replied, "I have been sent so that you can use me to carry any word you wish." 5 "Can you take a message to Jeremiah in Babylon?" Baruch asked. 6 The eagle said to him, "Yes; that is the very reason I was sent."

7 Baruch took the letter, together with fifteen figs from Abimelech's basket, and fastened them around the eagle's neck. "Hear me, king of the birds," he said. "Go in peace and good health, and bring back word to me. 8 Do not be like the raven that Noah sent out,[a] which did not come back to him in the ark. Be like the dove that, after the third time, brought the news to the righteous man. 9 In the same way, you also take this good news to Jeremiah and those with him, so that it will go well with you; take this joy to the chosen people of God. 10 Should every bird in the sky close in around you, and every enemy of the truth wish to attack you, fight back; the Lord will give you power. 11 Do not swerve right or left. Fly as straight as a flying arrow, and travel in the strength of God, who will accompany you the whole way."[b] 12 The eagle then rose into the air and flew off to Babylon, where it settled upon a post in a lonely place outside the city. 13 It stayed silent until Jeremiah came by with some of the people, who were on their way out of the city to bury a dead body. 14 Jeremiah had asked Nebuchadnezzar for this: "Give me a place to bury the dead of my people." And the king had given it to him. 15 As they were coming out, weeping beside the corpse, they came to the spot opposite the eagle.
16 The eagle cried out loudly, "I say to you, Jeremiah, chosen of God:
go, gather all the people, and let them come here, to hear the letter
I have brought you from Baruch and Abimelech." 17 When Jeremiah heard this, he glorified God. He went and gathered the people with their wives and children, and came to the place where the eagle was.
18 The eagle swooped down onto the dead body, and the man was alive again.[c] 19 This happened so that they would believe. 20 The whole crowd was astonished at what had taken place. "Is this the God who showed himself to our ancestors in the wilderness through Moses,[d] and has now shown himself to us through this great eagle?" they said. 21 "Jeremiah," the eagle said, "I am speaking to you: loosen this letter and read it aloud to the people." 22 When the people heard it, they wept, put dust on their heads, and said to Jeremiah, "Save us, and tell us what we should do, so that we can enter our city again." 23 Jeremiah answered and said, "Whatever you heard in the letter, keep it, and he will bring us into our city." 24 Jeremiah also wrote a letter to

Baruch, as follows: "My beloved child, do not slack off in your prayers for us, asking him to set our way straight until we escape from the commands of this lawless king. [25] For you were found righteous before him, and he did not allow you to come here with us, so that you would not see the abuse the people are suffering at the hands of the Babylonians. [26] Think of a father whose only son has been given up to be punished. The bystanders cover the father's face so that he will not watch his son suffer and be crushed by sorrow. [27] In the same way God felt pity for you and kept you from entering Babylon, so that you would not witness the people's sufferings. [28] We have not been free of grief since we arrived here, and today makes sixty-six years. [29] More than once, whenever I went outside, some of the people were hanging there on the orders of King Nebuchadnezzar, wailing, 'Have pity on us, God Zar!'[e] [30] Hearing it, I mourned and wept doubly, not only because they hung there but because they were crying out to a god who was not ours: 'Have pity on us.' [31] But I remembered the days of festival that we used to celebrate in Jerusalem before we were taken into exile; and as I remembered them I groaned, and went back to my house sighing and weeping. [32] So pray now where you are, you and Abimelech, on behalf of this people, asking that they will heed my voice and the rulings of my mouth, and that we may be able to depart from this place. [33] I tell you, all the time we have been here, our captors have been demanding, 'Sing us one of the songs of Zion,[f] a song of your God.' [34] And we answer them, 'How can we sing a song of the Lord on foreign soil?'" [35] Jeremiah then fastened the letter around the eagle's neck and said, "Go in peace; may the Lord guard the two of us." [36] The eagle flew off and came to Baruch, and gave him the letter. He opened it and read it, kissed it, and wept when he heard of the sufferings and troubles of the people. [37] Jeremiah took the figs and distributed them among the sick of the people. He stayed on, teaching them to keep away from the wrongdoing of the gentiles of Babylon.

Notes

- a (7:8) Compare Genesis 8:6–12. In Genesis the raven goes out and is not said to return, and the dove is sent out three times: the second time it returns with an olive leaf, and the third time it does not come back. Here the story is told differently, and it is the third trip that brings word. "Noah" (Noach) is explained in Genesis 5:29 as related to the Hebrew for "comfort."

- b (7:11) At the end of this verse, two of Harris's three manuscript groups (a and b) add: "and the glory of the Lord will be on every road you travel."
- c (7:18) Harris's manuscripts a and b add "and rose up."
- d (7:20) "Moses" (Hebrew Mosheh) is explained in Exodus (chapter 2, verse 10) as "drawn out" of the water.
- e (7:29) The manuscripts differ here. Harris prints Zar, which he takes to be Hebrew zar, "foreign" or "alien"; one of his manuscripts reads Sabaoth, and the Ethiopic copies read Zar, Sotoi, or Sarot.
- f (7:33) "Zion" (Hebrew Tsiyyon) is the hill of Jerusalem and a poetic name for the city itself; the demand echoes Psalm 137:3.

Chapter 8

1 The day came on which God was bringing the people up out of Babylon. 2 The Lord told Jeremiah, "Get up, you and the people, and go to the Jordan. Tell the people: 'Whoever wishes to follow the Lord must give up the practices of Babylon, including the men who have taken wives from that land and the women who have taken husbands.
3 If they heed you, take them across to Jerusalem; but if they refuse to heed you, bring them no farther.'" 4 Jeremiah relayed all of this to the people, and they got up and went to the Jordan to cross it. 5 As he told them what the Lord had said to him, half of those who had married among the Babylonians[a] refused to hear Jeremiah. They said,
"We will not give up our wives for good. We will take them back with us to our city." 6 They went over the Jordan and reached Jerusalem. 7 Jeremiah, Baruch, and Abimelech stood and said, "Any man who has had fellowship with the Babylonians will not enter this city!" 8 Then the others said to one another, "Let us get up and go back to Babylon, to our own place." And they left. 9 But as they neared Babylon, the Babylonians came out to confront them. "You may not enter our city," they said, "since you despised us and left us in secret. That is why you cannot come in among us. 10 We have bound ourselves to each other by oath, in the name of our God, to take in neither you nor your children, since you slipped away from us." 11 Hearing this, they turned around and traveled to an empty region well away from Jerusalem. There they founded a city of their own and called it Samaria.[b] 12 Jeremiah sent a message to them: “Turn back, for the angel of righteousness is on his way, and he will take you to your lofty home.”

Notes

- a (8:5) Greek Babylōnitai, “Babylonians,” inhabitants of Babylon; the book pictures marriages between exiles and local people in Babylon.
- b (8:11) “Samaria” (Hebrew Shomron) was the capital of the northern kingdom (1 Kings 16:24), named after the hill’s owner Shemer. The book’s closing story gives Samaria’s origin as a town of the exiles who were turned away from Jerusalem because of mixed marriages, a way of explaining the later hostility between Jews and Samaritans.

Chapter 9

1 Those who were with Jeremiah[a] rejoiced and offered a sacrifice for the people nine days. 2 On the tenth day, Jeremiah offered a sacrifice by himself. 3 He started to pray: “Holy, holy, holy, incense of the living trees, true light shining on me, until I rise up to you. 4 I ask you, too, for the sweet sound of the two Seraphim,[b] and for yet another fragrance of incense. 5 My concern is Michael,[c] the archangel of righteousness, [who opens the gates of righteousness] until he brings the righteous in. 6 I plead with you, Lord, almighty over all creation, the One who was never born and cannot be fully known, in whom all judgment lay hidden before these things came to be.” 7 While Jeremiah was saying this, standing at the altar with Baruch and Abimelech, he became like someone giving up his soul. 8 Baruch and Abimelech stayed where they were, weeping and shouting at the top of their voices: “Our father Jeremiah has left us! God’s priest is gone!” 9 All the people heard the sound of their weeping, and everyone ran to them, and they saw Jeremiah lying on the ground as though dead. 10 They ripped their clothes, threw dust on their heads, and sobbed in bitter grief. 11 After this, they got ready to bury him. 12 Then a voice said, “Do not bury the man who is still alive, because his soul is coming back into his body.” 13 They obeyed the voice and did not bury him. For three days they waited by his tent, asking, “When will he get up?” 14 Three days later his soul returned to his body. Standing among all of them, he cried out, “All of you, praise God! Praise God, and praise the Son of God, who rouses you toward Jesus Christ,[d] the light of every age, the lamp that cannot be put out, the life of faith." 15 "After these times, there will come four hundred seventy-seven more years,[e] and he will come to the earth. 16 The tree of life planted in the middle of paradise will make all the unfruitful trees bear fruit,[f] and they will grow and sprout. 17 As for the trees that have sprouted and grown proud, and say, 'We gave our strength to the air,' he will make them wither, along with the height of their branches, and will have them judged by that firmly planted tree. 18 The crimson will turn white as wool, the snow will darken, and sweet waters will turn salty,[g] in the great light of God's joy. 19 He will bless the islands and make them fruitful through the word that comes from his Anointed One's mouth. 20 For he himself will come and go forth, and choose twelve apostles for himself, to carry the good news among the nations. I saw him, adorned by his Father, as he entered the world, at the Mount of Olives,[h] and he will fill souls that hunger." 21 While Jeremiah was saying this about the Son of God, the people became angry and said, "These are once again the words that Isaiah son of Amoz[i] spoke, when he said, 'I saw God and the Son of God.' 22 Come, let us not put him to death the way we did Isaiah,[j] but let us throw stones at him." 23 Baruch and Abimelech were deeply grieved at this absence, and because they wanted to hear fully the things that he had seen. 24 But Jeremiah said to them, "Be quiet and do not weep, for they cannot kill me until I have told you everything I saw." 25 And he said to them, "Bring me a stone." They brought a stone to him. 26 He stood it up and prayed, "Light of the ages, let this stone take on my likeness until I have told Baruch and Abimelech all that I saw." 27 So, at God's order, the stone took on Jeremiah's likeness. 28 And they were stoning the stone, thinking that it was Jeremiah. 29 But Jeremiah handed over all the mysteries that he had seen to Baruch and Abimelech, and then he stood up in the middle of the people, wishing to carry out his commission. 30 The stone cried out, "You foolish sons of Israel, why are you stoning me, thinking that I am Jeremiah? Look, Jeremiah is standing in your midst!" 31 When they saw him, they ran at him right away with many stones, and his commission was fulfilled. 32 Baruch and Abimelech came and buried him, and they took the stone and set it on his tomb, and they inscribed on it, “This stone is the helper of Jeremiah.”[k]

Notes

- a (9:1) The Greek verb at the start of this verse is awkward in the printed text (it literally means “begot”), and the sense here, taken from the context, is that Jeremiah’s followers were celebrating.
- b (9:4) “Seraphim” (Hebrew seraphim, “burning ones”) are the winged beings around God’s throne in Isaiah 6:2–3; the Ethiopic version appears to read “Cherubim” here instead.
- c (9:5) “Michael” (Hebrew Mikha’el) means “Who is like God?” The words in brackets are not in the Greek printed by Harris; they come from the Ethiopic version, which has Michael hold the gates of righteousness open.
- d (9:14) The Greek words “Jesus Christ” are in Harris’s text, and scholars debate whether these two words were added by a Christian hand to an originally Jewish text. “Christ” is Greek Christos, “anointed,” the equivalent of Hebrew mashiach, “messiah.”
- e (9:15) This is the number in Greek manuscripts a and b; the Ethiopic counts in “weeks of days,” with a figure of 303 (some copies 330 or 333).
- f (9:16) Harris’s manuscripts a and b omit the clause that follows in the Ethiopic: “and their fruit will remain with the angels.”
- g (9:18) The Ethiopic adds “and the salty waters will become sweet.”
- h (9:20) The Mount of Olives is the ridge east of Jerusalem (Zechariah 14:4; Mark 13:3). The Greek reads Elaiōn, “of the olive trees.”
- i (9:21) “Isaiah” (Hebrew Yeshayahu) means “Yahweh saves”; “Amoz” (Amots) means “strong.” The Greek text spells his father’s name “Amos.”
- j (9:22) An old Jewish tradition, preserved in the Martyrdom of Isaiah and probably referred to in Hebrews 11:37, says that Isaiah was sawn in two.
- k (9:32) Harris’s manuscripts a and b add a closing sentence saying that the rest of Jeremiah’s words and every aspect of his power are not written here but in the letter of Baruch.

Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

The Testament of Reuben, on the Thoughts of the Mind

Chapter 1 (verses 1–10 here) 1 A copy of the testament of Reuben:[a] the things he charged his sons with before his death, in the hundred and twenty-fifth year of his life. 2 Two years after Joseph's death he fell ill, and his sons and his sons' sons gathered to visit him. 3 He said to them, "My little children, I am dying, and I am setting out on the road my fathers took." 4 Seeing Judah, Gad and Asher, his brothers, there, he said to them, "Prop me up, brothers, so I can tell my brothers and my children the things I keep hidden in my heart, since from now on I am fading." 5 He got up, kissed them, wept, and said, "Listen, my brothers; turn your ears, all of you, to Reuben your father and to what I command you. 6 Look: today I call the God of heaven as witness against you, so that you do not go the way of youthful ignorance and sexual immorality, the thing I poured myself out in when I defiled my father Jacob's bed.[b] 7 I tell you, he struck me with a heavy blow in my loins for seven months, and if Jacob our father had not prayed to the Lord for me, the Lord was minded to make an end of me. 8 I was thirty years old when I did that evil thing in the Lord's sight, and for seven months I lay sick almost to death. 9 Then, by the free choice of my soul, I repented before the Lord for seven years. 10 Wine and strong drink I did not drink; meat did not enter my mouth; no bread I craved did I taste. I mourned over my sin, for it was great. Nothing like it will ever be done in Israel."

Chapter 2 (verses 11–19 here) 11 "Now hear me, children, about what I saw during my repentance concerning the seven spirits of deceit. 12
Seven spirits are given against humankind from Beliar,[c] and they are the head of the deeds of youthful rashness. 13 Seven other spirits were given to a person at creation, so that every human work might be done by them. 14 The first is the spirit of life, with which the human frame is built. The second is the spirit of sight, which gives rise to desire. 15 The third is the spirit of hearing, which gives rise to teaching.

The fourth is the spirit of smell, to which taste is joined for drawing in air and breath. 16 The fifth is the spirit of speech, which gives rise to knowledge. 17 The sixth is the spirit of taste, which gives rise to eating food and drink, and by it strength is built up, since strength rests on food. 18 The seventh is the spirit of seed and intercourse, with which, through love of pleasure, sin comes in as well. 19 That is why it is the last in creation and the first in youth: it is full of ignorance, and it leads the young man like a blind man into a pit and like a beast over a cliff."

Chapter 3 (verses 20–34 here) 20 "On top of all these there is an eighth, the spirit of sleep, with which was created the trance of nature, the image of death. 21 With these spirits the spirit of deceit mingles. 22
First, the spirit of sexual immorality, seated in nature and the senses.
Second, the spirit of gluttony, in the belly. 23 Third, the spirit of fighting, in the liver and the gall. Fourth, the spirit of fawning and trickery, so that by fussing over himself a man may seem handsome. 24 Fifth, the spirit of arrogance, so that he may strut and think big. Sixth, the spirit of lying, in ruin and jealousy, so that he invents stories even to family and household. 25 Seventh, the spirit of injustice, with which come theft and grasping, so that he may serve his heart's love of pleasure; for injustice works hand in hand with the other spirits through taking bribes.[d] 26 On top of all these the spirit of sleep, the eighth spirit, is joined to deceit and illusion. 27 So every young man is lost, darkening his mind away from the truth, not understanding the law of God and not heeding the warnings of his fathers, just as I suffered in my youth. 28 And now, children, love the truth, and it will guard you. I am teaching you: listen to Reuben your father. 29 Do not fix your attention on a woman's looks, do not be alone with a married woman, and do not busy yourselves with women's affairs. 30 If I had not seen Bilhah[e] bathing in a sheltered place, I would not have fallen into that great lawlessness. 31 My mind took in the woman's nakedness and would not let me sleep until I had done the abomination. 32 For while Jacob our father was away with Isaac his father, and we were in Gader,[f] near Ephrath,[g] that is, Bethlehem, Bilhah was drunk and lay asleep, uncovered, in her bedroom. 33 I went in, saw her nakedness, and did the impious thing; then I left her sleeping and went out. 34 At once an angel of God revealed my impiety to my father Jacob. He came and mourned over me, and he never touched her again."

Chapter 4 (verses 35–45 here) 35 "So do not fix your attention on women's beauty, and do not brood on what they do. Walk in singleness of heart, in the fear of the Lord, laboring at your work, letting your mind roam among books and among your flocks, until the Lord gives you the wife he wills, so that you do not suffer as I did. 36 Until our father's death I did not have the nerve to look Jacob in the face or to speak to any of my brothers, because of the reproaches.
37 And to this day my conscience grips me over my sin. 38 Yet my father comforted me, for he had prayed to the Lord for me that the Lord's anger might pass from me, as the Lord showed me. From then on I kept careful watch, and I did not sin. 39 So, my children, keep everything I command you, and you will not sin. 40 Sexual immorality is the ruin of the soul. It separates from God and brings near to idols, because it is what misleads the mind and understanding, and it brings young men down to Hades before their time. 41 It has destroyed many. Even if a man is old or nobly born, it makes him a disgrace and a laughingstock before Beliar and the children of men. 42 Because Joseph kept himself from every woman and cleansed his thoughts of all immorality, he found favor with the Lord and with people. 43 The Egyptian woman did a great deal to him: she called in sorcerers and brought him potions. But the counsel of his soul would not take in evil desire. 44 So the God of my fathers rescued him from every death, seen and hidden. 45 If immorality does not overpower your thinking, neither will Beliar overpower you."

Chapter 5 (verses 46–52 here) 46 "Women are evil, my children:[h] because they have no authority or strength over a man, they scheme with outward show, how they may draw him to themselves. 47 And the man a woman cannot overpower by strength she overpowers by deceit. 48 Indeed the angel of God told me about them and taught me that women are more easily overcome by the spirit of immorality than a man is. In their heart they plot against men; by adornment they first lead their minds astray, by a glance they sow the poison, and then by the act they take them captive. 49 For a woman cannot force a man. 50 So flee immorality, my children, and instruct your wives and daughters not to adorn their heads and faces, because every woman who schemes by these means is kept for everlasting punishment. 51 That is how they bewitched the Watchers[i] before the flood. Those Watchers kept looking at them, came to desire them, conceived the act in their minds, and changed themselves into the shape of men; and when the women lay with their husbands, the Watchers appeared with them. 52 The women, longing in their minds for these apparitions, bore giants; for the Watchers appeared to them reaching up to heaven."

Chapter 6 (verses 53–64 here) 53 "So guard yourselves against immorality. If you want to stay pure in mind, guard your senses from every woman. 54 And instruct the women not to keep company with men, so that they too may stay pure in mind. 55 Constant meetings, even if the impious act is never done, are an incurable sickness for them, and for us an everlasting disgrace from Beliar. 56 For immorality has neither understanding nor piety in it, and every jealousy lives in its desire. 57 Therefore you will be jealous of the sons of Levi and seek to be raised above them, but you will not be able to. 58 God will avenge them, and you will die an evil death. 59 For the Lord gave the rule to Levi, and to Judah, and with them to me, and to Dan and Joseph, to be rulers.[j] 60 That is why I command you to listen to Levi: he will know the Lord's law and will make rulings for justice and for sacrifices on behalf of all Israel until the completion of the times of the anointed high priest,[k] of whom the Lord has spoken. 61 I adjure you by the God of heaven: each of you deal truly with his neighbor. 62 Draw near to Levi in humility of heart, so that you may receive a blessing from his mouth. 63 For he will bless Israel and Judah, since it is in him that the Lord has chosen to reign over all the peoples. 64 Bow down to his offspring, for he will die for us in wars seen and unseen, and he will be among you an eternal king."[l]

Chapter 7 (verses 65–66 here) 65 Then Reuben died, having given these commands to his sons. 66 They placed him in a coffin until they carried him up from Egypt and buried him in Hebron,[m] in the double cave,[n] where his fathers lay.

Notes

- a (1:1) "Reuben" is explained in Gen 29:32 by a wordplay on "Yahweh has seen my affliction"; the name itself looks like "See, a son!" (Hebrew re'u ben). The meaning is uncertain. In the Greek the name is spelled Roubēm, as often in the Septuagint. Verses in this book are numbered straight through each testament; the subheads give the traditional chapter divisions of Charles's 1908 Greek edition, so "verse 12 here" can be matched with the usual chapter-and-verse reference.
- b (1:6) See Gen 35:22; 49:4. "Poured myself out" echoes Gen 49:4, "unstable as water."
- c (1:12) Beliar (Hebrew Belial, "worthlessness"; the derivation is debated) is the usual name for the chief evil power in the Testaments.
- d (1:25) The Greek word (dolēpsia, here spelled dololēpsia) is rare; "taking bribes" or "crafty grabbing" are both possible.
- e (1:30) Greek Balla, for Hebrew Bilhah, Rachel's maid and Jacob's concubine (Gen 30:3–4). The meaning of the name is uncertain; "timid" and "carefree" have both been suggested.
- f (1:32) Gader corresponds to "Eder" (Migdal Eder, "tower of the flock") in Gen 35:21.
- g (1:32) Ephrath ("fruitful," if from the root p-r-h; uncertain) is identified with Bethlehem ("house of bread") in Gen 35:19.
- h (1:46) The harsh generalizations about women in 5:1–5 belong to the outlook of the writer and are translated as they stand.
- i (1:51) The Watchers are the fallen angels of Gen 6:1–4 as retold in 1 Enoch 6–16. Here, unusually, the women are blamed.
- j (1:59) The Greek is obscure here; some witnesses read differently. The point is that Levi and Judah hold the leading place.
- k (1:60) Greek archiereōs christou, "of an anointed high priest" or "of Christ the high priest." Charles took the line as Jewish, referring to a Hasmonean priest-king; others (e.g., de Jonge) read the whole work as Christian in its present form. See the introduction.
- l (1:64) "He will die for us" may be a Christian touch; the referent ("his offspring") is ambiguous between Levi's line and Judah's.
- m (1:66) Hebron perhaps means "association" or "league" (from the root h-b-r); uncertain.

- n (1:66) The cave of Machpelah (Gen 23:9, 19); the Septuagint renders Machpelah as "the double cave."

Chapter 2

The Testament of Simeon, on Envy

Chapter 1 (verses 1–2 here) 1 A copy of the words of Simeon,[a] which he spoke to his sons before he died, in the hundred and twentieth year of his life, the year in which Joseph died. 2 His sons had come to visit him in his illness, and he gathered his strength and sat up, kissed them, and said to them,

Chapter 2 (verses 3–16 here) 3 "Listen, children, listen to Simeon your father, about everything I carry in my heart. 4 I was born to my father Jacob as his second son, and Leah[b] my mother called me Simeon, because the Lord heard her prayer. 5 I became very strong; I shrank from no task and was afraid of nothing. 6 My heart was hard, my liver unmoved, my insides without pity, 7 for courage, too, is given to people by the Most High, in soul and in body. 8 At that time I was jealous of Joseph, because our father loved him, 9 and I steeled my liver to kill him. The ruler of deceit sent the spirit of jealousy and blinded my mind, so that I did not look on him as a brother and did not spare Jacob my father. 10 But his God, the God of his fathers, sent His angel and rescued him from my hands. 11 For while I was away in Shechem[c] fetching ointment for the flocks, and Reuben was at Dothan,[d] where our supplies and all our stores were, our brother Judah sold him to the Ishmaelites.[e] 12 When Reuben came back he was grieved, for he had wanted to bring him safely to his father. 13 I was angry with Judah because he had let him go alive, and I stayed angry with him for five months. 14 Even so, God held me back and kept my hands from their work, for my right hand was half withered for seven days. 15 I knew, children, that this had come on me because of Joseph. I repented and wept, and I prayed to the Lord to restore my hand, so that I might keep away from all defilement, envy, and folly. 16 For I knew that I had planned an evil thing before the Lord and Jacob my father, through envying my brother Joseph."

Chapter 3 (verses 17–22 here) [17] "Now, children, beware of the spirits of deceit and envy. [18] Envy rules the whole mind of a person and lets him neither eat nor drink nor do anything good. [19] It always urges him to destroy the one he envies; the envied person is always in bloom, while the envier withers. [20] For two years I afflicted my soul with fasting in the fear of the Lord, and I learned that the release from envy comes through the fear of God. [21] If someone runs to the Lord for refuge, the evil spirit runs away from him, and his mind becomes light. [22] From then on he feels with the one he envied, and does not condemn those who love him, and so his envy stops."

Chapter 4 (verses 23–31 here) [23] "My father kept asking about me, because he saw me gloomy, and I said, 'My liver aches.' [24] I mourned more than all the others, because I was to blame for the selling of Joseph. [25] When we went down to Egypt and he bound me as a spy, I knew I was suffering justly, and I did not grieve. [26] Joseph was a good man, with the spirit of God in him, tender-hearted and merciful. He held no grudge against me, but loved me as he loved the other brothers. [27] So beware, my children, of all jealousy and envy, and walk in simplicity of soul and in a good heart, keeping in mind your father's brother, so that God may give you also grace, glory, and blessing on your heads, as you saw in him. [28] All his days he never reproached us about this matter, but loved us as his own soul, more than his own sons. He gave us glory, and granted us all riches, cattle, and crops. [29] You also, my dear children, should each love his brother with a good heart, and drive the spirit of envy out of you, [30] for it makes the soul savage and ruins the body. It brings anger and war to the mind, stirs it up to bloodshed, drives the mind out of its senses, and does not let people use their understanding. It even takes away sleep, and brings turmoil to the soul and trembling to the body. [31] Even in sleep, a jealous malice shows itself in dreams and eats the person up; with evil spirits it disturbs his soul, makes his body shake with fear, and wakes his mind in confusion. He looks to others like someone who has an evil, venomous spirit."

Chapter 5 (verses 32–37 here) [32] "That is why Joseph was handsome in form and fair to look at: no evil lived in him. For the face shows what the spirit is stirred by. 33 Now, my children, make your hearts good before the Lord, and make your ways straight before people, and you will find favor with God and people. 34 Guard against sexual immorality, for it is the mother of all evils; it separates people from God and brings them near to Beliar. 35 I have seen in the writing of Enoch[f] that your sons, along with you, will be corrupted by sexual immorality, and will do wrong against Levi with the sword. 36 But they will not be able to stand against Levi, because he will fight the Lord's war and will defeat all your camps. 37 You will be few in number, divided up among Levi and Judah, and no one of yours will hold rule,

just as my father Jacob prophesied in his blessings."

Chapter 6 (verses 38–44 here) 38 "See, I have told you everything beforehand, so that I am cleared of the sin of your souls. 39 If you remove envy and all stubbornness from you, my bones will blossom like a rose in Israel, and my flesh like a lily in Jacob. My fragrance will be like the fragrance of Lebanon, and holy cedars will multiply from me forever, and their branches will stretch far. 40 Then the seed of Canaan[g] will perish, and nothing will be left of Amalek;[h] all the Cappadocians will be destroyed, and all the Hittites will be wiped out. 41 Then the land of Ham[i] will fail and all its people will perish.
Then the whole earth will rest from turmoil, and everything under heaven from war. 42 Then Shem[j] will be glorified, for the Lord God, the great one of Israel, will appear on the earth as a human being and save Adam[k] in him. 43 Then all the spirits of deceit will be handed over to be trampled, and people will rule over the evil spirits. 44 Then I will rise in joy and bless the Most High for His wonders, because God took a body, ate with humans, and saved them."

Chapter 7 (verses 45–47 here) 45 "Now, my little children, obey Levi, and in Judah you will be set free. Do not exalt yourselves over these two tribes, for from them the salvation of God will rise for you. 46 The Lord will raise up from Levi a high priest, and from Judah a king, God and man. In this way He will save all the nations and the family of Israel. 47 For this reason I command you everything, so that you also may command your children, and they may keep these things through their generations."

Chapter 8 (verses 48–51 here) [48] Simeon finished commanding his sons and fell asleep with his fathers, at the age of a hundred and twenty. [49] They laid him in a coffin of incorruptible wood, to carry his bones up to Hebron. They carried them up secretly during a war with the Egyptians. [50] For the Egyptians were guarding the bones of Joseph in the treasuries of the palace. [51] Their sorcerers had told them that when Joseph's bones left, there would be darkness and gloom over all Egypt and a very great plague on the Egyptians, so that people would not recognize their own brothers even with a lamp.

Chapter 9 (verse 52 here) [52] Simeon's sons mourned their father according to the custom of mourning, and they stayed in Egypt until the day they left Egypt, under Moses.[l]

Notes

- a (2:1) "Simeon" (Hebrew Shimon) is explained in Gen 29:33 by a wordplay on "heard," as in "Yahweh has heard." In the Greek the name is spelled Symeon.
- b (2:4) "Leah" (Hebrew Le'ah) is of uncertain meaning; it may mean "wild cow" or "weary."
- c (2:11) "Shechem" (Hebrew Shekhem) means "shoulder" or "ridge." The city stood in the hill country of Ephraim.
- d (2:11) "Dothan" (Hebrew Dothan) is a town north of Shechem.
- e (2:11) "Ishmaelites" are descendants of Ishmael, Abraham's son, "God hears"; in Gen 37:25-28 they are the traders to whom Joseph is sold.
- f (2:35) "Enoch" (Hebrew Chanokh) is explained as "dedicated" or "trained." The writings ascribed to him are the books of 1 Enoch; the passage meant here is not found in the surviving texts.
- g (2:40) "Canaan" (Hebrew Kena'an) is the land west of the Jordan and the name of its people; in Gen 9:25 Canaan is the son of Ham who is cursed.
- h (2:40) "Amalek" (Hebrew Amaleq) is the desert people who attacked Israel at Rephidim (Exod 17:8-16) and were long treated as the model enemy.
- i (2:41) "Ham" (Hebrew Cham) is one of Noah's sons, whose line included Egypt and Canaan; the name may mean "hot" or "dark."
- j (2:42) "Shem" (Hebrew Shem) means "name." He is the ancestor of the Semitic peoples, including Israel.
- k (2:42) "Adam" (Hebrew adam) means "human being," from the word for the ground, adamah. The line "save Adam in him" may be a Christian touch.
- l (2:52) "Moses" (Hebrew Mosheh) is linked in Exod 2:10 with "drawing out." He led Israel out of Egypt.

Chapter 3

The Testament of Levi, on the Priesthood and Pride

Chapter 1 (verses 1–2 here) 1 A copy of the words of Levi,[a] everything he laid down for his sons, all that they should do and all that would happen to them until the day of judgment. 2 He was in good health when he called them to him, though it had been revealed to him that he was about to die. When they had gathered, he said to them, Chapter 2 (verses 3–14 here) 3 "I, Levi, was conceived in Haran[b] and born there, and afterward I came with my father to Shechem. 4 I was quite young, about twenty years old, when, together with Simeon,
I took vengeance on Hamor[c] for our sister Dinah.[d] 5 While we were shepherding in Abelmaul,[e] a spirit of the Lord's understanding came on me, and I saw all people ruining their way, and I saw that injustice had built walls for itself, and lawlessness sat on towers. 6 I grieved over the human race and prayed to the Lord that I might be saved. 7
Then sleep fell on me, and I saw a high mountain. This is Mount Aspis in Abelmaul. 8 The heavens were opened, and an angel of God said to me, 'Levi, come in.' 9 I went from the first heaven into the second, and there I saw water hanging between the one and the other. 10 I saw a third heaven, far brighter than the two, for it had a boundless height.
11 I said to the angel, 'Why is this?' and the angel said to me, 'Do not be amazed at these things, for you will see four other heavens, brighter and beyond comparison, when you go up there. 12 You will stand near the Lord and be His servant, and you will announce His mysteries to people and proclaim the one who will redeem Israel. 13 Through you and Judah the Lord will be seen among people, saving in them every kind of human being. 14 Your life comes from the Lord's portion, and He will be your field, vineyard, crops, gold, and silver.'"
Chapter 3 (verses 15–24 here) 15 "'Listen, then, about the seven heavens.
The lowest is gloomier than the rest because it is closest to all the injustice of people. 16 The second has fire, snow, and ice, ready for the day of the Lord's command, in the righteous judgment of God. In it are all the spirits of the punishments, sent to take vengeance on the lawless. 17 In the third are the powers of the armies, appointed for the day of judgment, to take vengeance on the spirits of deceit and on Beliar. Those in the fourth, above these, are holy, [18] for in the highest of all the great Glory lives, in the Holy of Holies, above all holiness. [19] In the one below it are the angels of the Lord's presence, who serve and make atonement before the Lord for all the sins of ignorance of the righteous. [20] They offer to the Lord a pleasing fragrance, a spiritual offering without blood. [21] In the one under that are the angels who carry the answers to the angels of the Lord's presence. [22] In the one after that are thrones and powers, where hymns are always offered to God. [23] So when the Lord looks down on us, all of us are shaken. The heavens, the earth, and the depths shake before the face of His majesty, [24] but the sons of men, unaware of these things, sin and provoke the Most High.'"

Chapter 4 (verses 25–30 here) [25] "'Know now that the Lord will bring judgment on the sons of men. When the rocks are split, the sun is put out, the waters dry up, the fire shrinks back, all creation is shaken, the unseen spirits melt, and Hades is plundered at the suffering of the Most High, people will not believe and will stay in their injustices; for this reason they will be judged with punishment. [26] The Most High has heard your prayer, that you be separated from injustice and become a son, servant, and minister of His presence. [27] You will shine the bright light of knowledge in Jacob, and you will be like the sun for all the seed of Israel. [28] Blessing will be given to you and to all your seed, until the Lord visits all the nations, in the compassion of His Son, forever. Yet your sons will lay hands on Him to hang Him on a pole. [29] For this reason counsel and understanding have been given to you, so that you may teach your sons about Him, [30] because whoever blesses Him will be blessed, and those who curse Him will perish.'"

Chapter 5 (verses 31–37 here) [31] "The angel opened the gates of heaven for me, and I saw the holy temple, and the Most High on a throne of glory. [32] He said to me, 'Levi, I have given you the blessings of the priesthood, until I come and live among Israel.' [33] Then the angel brought me to the earth and gave me a shield and a sword and said, 'Take vengeance at Shechem for Dinah, and I will be with you, for the Lord has sent me.' [34] At that time I finished off the sons of Hamor, as it is written on the tablets of heaven. [35] I said to him, 'I beg you, Lord, tell me Your name, so that I may call on You in the day of trouble.' [36] He said, 'I am the angel who pleads for the nation of Israel, so that they will not be struck down completely, because every evil spirit attacks them.' [37] After this I woke, as if I had been asleep, and blessed the Most High and the angel who pleads for the nation of Israel and for all the righteous."

Chapter 6 (verses 38–48 here) [38] "As I was on my way to my father, I found a bronze shield; that is why the mountain's name is Aspis, because it is near Gebal, to the right of Abila. [39] I kept these words in my heart. [40] I advised my father, and my brother Reuben, to tell the sons of Hamor that they must be circumcised, because I was zealous over the abomination they had done in Israel. [41] I killed Shechem first, and Simeon killed Hamor. [42] After that my brothers came and struck the city with the edge of the sword. [43] Our father heard of it and was angry and grieved, because they had accepted circumcision and afterward been killed, and in his blessings he spoke of us differently. [44] We had sinned, for we had done this against his judgment, and he became ill that day. [45] But I saw that God had pronounced evil against Shechem, because they wanted to do to Sarah what they had done to our sister Dinah, and the Lord stopped them. [46] In the same way they had persecuted Abraham our father when he was a foreigner, trampled his flocks when they swelled in number around him, and treated Jebla,[f] who was born in his household, savagely. [47] This is how they treated all foreigners, seizing their wives by force and driving the strangers out. [48] But the Lord's wrath overtook them to the end."

Chapter 7 (verses 49–52 here) [49] "I said to my father, 'Do not be angry, sir, for through you the Lord will humble the Canaanites and give their land to you and your seed after you. [50] From today Shechem will be called a city of fools, for as one mocks a fool, so we have mocked them, [51] because they also did a foolish thing in Israel, defiling our sister.' [52] We took our sister from there, set out, and came to Bethel.[g]"

Chapter 8 (verses 53–71 here) [53] "There again I saw a vision like the earlier one, after we had spent seventy days. [54] I saw seven men in white clothing who said to me, 'Get up, put on the robe of the priesthood, the crown of righteousness, the breastpiece of understanding, the long robe of truth, the plate of faith, the turban of the sign, and the ephod of prophecy.' [55] Each of them carried one of these things and put it on me, and they said, 'From now on be a priest of the Lord, you and your seed, forever.' [56] The first anointed me with holy oil and gave me a staff of judgment. [57] The second washed me with pure water and fed me bread and wine, the holiest of holy things, and put a holy and glorious robe on me. [58] The third clothed me in fine linen, like an ephod. [59] The fourth put a belt on me like purple. [60] The fifth gave me a branch of rich olive. [61] The sixth put a wreath on my head. [62] The seventh put a priestly diadem on my head and filled my hands with incense, so that I could serve as priest to the Lord. [63] They said to me, 'Levi, your seed will be divided into three offices, as a sign of the glory of the Lord who is to come. [64] The one who believes will be first, and no portion greater than his will be given. [65] The second will be in the priesthood. [66] The third will be given a new name, because a king will rise from Judah and set up a new priesthood, after the pattern of the nations, for all the nations. [67] His coming will be beyond words, as of a high prophet from the seed of Abraham our father. [68] Everything desirable in Israel will belong to you and to your seed. You will eat everything beautiful to see, and your seed will share out the Lord's table. [69] From them will come high priests, judges, and scribes, for the holy place will be guarded by their word.' [70] I woke up and understood that this was like the earlier vision. [71] I hid this also in my heart and told it to no one on earth."

Chapter 9 (verses 72–85 here) [72] "Two days later Judah and I went up to Isaac, following our father. [73] My father's father blessed me according to all the words of the visions I had seen, but he did not want to go with us to Bethel. [74] When we came to Bethel, my father Jacob saw in a vision about me that I would be a priest to God for them. [75] He got up early in the morning and paid a tenth of everything to the Lord through me. [76] We came to Hebron to stay there. [77] Isaac called me constantly to remind me of the Lord's law, as the angel of God had shown me. [78] He taught me the law of the priesthood, of sacrifices, whole burnt offerings, firstfruits, freewill offerings, and peace offerings. [79] Each day he instructed me and was busy with me before the Lord. [80] He said, ‘Child, beware of the spirit of sexual immorality. It will persist, and through your seed it is going to defile the holy things. [81] So take a wife for yourself while still young, one without blemish or defilement, who is not from the family of foreigners or nations. [82] Before you enter the holy things, bathe; while you sacrifice, wash; and when you finish the sacrifice, wash again. [83] Offer to the Lord from twelve trees that always have leaves, as Abraham also taught me. [84] From every clean animal and clean bird offer a sacrifice to the Lord. [85] From every firstfruit and from wine offer firstfruits, and salt every sacrifice.’”

Chapter 10 (verses 86–90 here) [86] “Now keep what I command you, children, because what I heard from my fathers I have told you. [87] I am innocent of all your ungodliness and transgression, which you will commit at the end of the ages against the Savior of the world, being ungodly, leading Israel astray, and stirring up great evils against it from the Lord. [88] You will act lawlessly along with Israel, so that Jerusalem will not be able to bear your wickedness, and the veil of the temple will be torn, so that it no longer covers your shame. [89] You will be scattered as captives among the nations and become a reproach and something to be trampled. [90] For the house the Lord chooses will be called Jerusalem, as the book of Enoch the righteous contains.”

Chapter 11 (verses 91–98 here) [91] “When I took a wife, I was twenty-eight years old. Her name was Milcah.[h] [92] She conceived and bore a son and called his name Gershom,[i] because we were sojourners in our land. For “Gershom” is written to mean “sojourning.” [93] I saw about him that he would not be in the first rank. [94] Kohath[j] was born in my thirty-fifth year, toward sunrise. [95] In a vision I saw him standing in the middle, on high, over the whole assembly. [96] For this reason I called his name Kohath, which means beginning of majesty and gathering. [97] She bore me Merari[k] in the fortieth year of my life. Because his mother had a hard labor, she called him Merari, which means “my bitterness,” because he too died. [98] Jochebed[l] was born in the sixty-fourth year, in Egypt, for I was honored then among my brothers.”

Chapter 12 (verses 99–105 here) [99] “Gershom took a wife and she bore him Libni and Shimei. [100] The sons of Kohath were Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel. [101] The sons of Merari were Mahli and Mushi. [102] In my ninety-fourth year, Amram took my daughter Jochebed as his wife, for they were born on the same day, he and my daughter. [103] I was eight years old when I entered the land of Canaan, eighteen when I killed Shechem, nineteen when I became a priest, twenty-eight when I took a wife, and forty when I went into Egypt. [104] See, you are my children, my children, the third generation. [105] Joseph died in his hundred and eighteenth year."

Chapter 13 (verses 106–114 here) [106] "Now, my children, I command you to fear our Lord with your whole heart and to walk in simplicity according to all His law. [107] Teach your children to read, too, so that they will have understanding all their lives, reading the law of God without ceasing. [108] For everyone who knows the law of God will be honored, and will not be a stranger wherever he goes. [109] He will gain many friends beyond his own parents, and many people will want to serve him and to hear the law from his mouth. [110] Do righteousness, my children, on the earth, so that you may find it in the heavens. [111] Sow good things in your souls, so that you find them in your lives. If you sow evil, you will reap every trouble and distress. [112] Gain wisdom in the fear of God, with diligence. For if there is captivity, and cities and lands are destroyed, and gold and silver and every possession are lost, no one can take away a wise person's wisdom, except the blindness of ungodliness and the crippling of sin. [113] It will shine for him even among his enemies, in a foreign land he will find it a homeland, and in the midst of enemies he will be found a friend. [114] If he teaches these things and does them, he will sit on the throne with a king, as our brother Joseph did."

Chapter 14 (verses 115–122 here) [115] "Now, children, I have learned from the writing of Enoch that at the end you will act ungodly against the Lord, laying hands on Him in every kind of wickedness, and your brothers will be ashamed because of you, and you will become a mockery to all the nations. [116] Our father Israel will be clean of the ungodliness of the high priests, who will lay their hands on the Savior of the world. [117] Heaven is purer than the earth, and you are the lights of heaven, like the sun and the moon. [118] What will all the nations do if you are darkened in ungodliness and bring a curse on our race, you through whom the light of the world was given among you to enlighten every person? You will want to destroy Him, teaching commands opposed to the decrees of God. [119] You will rob the Lord's offerings, steal from His portions, and take the choice parts before sacrificing to the Lord, eating them with prostitutes in contempt. [120] In greed you will teach the Lord's commands, defile married women, pollute the virgins of Jerusalem, and join with prostitutes and adulteresses. You will take the daughters of the nations as wives, purifying them with an unlawful purification, and your union will become Sodom and Gomorrah in ungodliness. [121] You will be puffed up over the priesthood, lifting yourselves above people; and not only that, but also puffed up against the commands of God, [122] you will mock the holy things and laugh at them in contempt."

Chapter 15 (verses 123–126 here) [123] "For these reasons the temple the Lord chooses will be left empty in uncleanness, and you will be captives among all the nations, [124] and you will be an abomination among them, and receive reproach and everlasting shame from God's righteous judgment. [125] All who see you will flee from you. [126] If it were not for Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob our fathers, not one of my seed would be left on the earth."

Chapter 16 (verses 127–131 here) [127] "Now I have learned in the book of Enoch that for seventy weeks you will go astray, defile the priesthood, and pollute the sacrifices, [128] destroy the law and despise the words of the prophets. In perversity you will persecute righteous men, hate the godly, and loathe the words of the truthful. [129] You will call a man who renews the law in the power of the Most High a deceiver, and in the end, as you think, you will kill him, not knowing his rising, taking innocent blood on your heads in wickedness. [130] Because of him your holy places will be desolate, defiled down to the ground, [131] and you will have no clean place, but among the nations you will be a curse and a scattering, until He visits again and, having mercy, receives you in faith and water."

Chapter 17 (verses 132–142 here) [132] "Since you have heard about the seventy weeks, now hear also about the priesthood. [133] In each jubilee there will be a priesthood. In the first jubilee the first one anointed to the priesthood will be great, and he will speak to God as to a father. His priesthood will be filled with the fear of the Lord, and in the day of his joy he will rise for the salvation of the world. [134] In the second jubilee the anointed one will be seized in sorrow over those he loves, and his priesthood will be honored and he will be glorified by all. [135] The third priest will be taken in grief. [136] The fourth will be in pain, because injustice will be piled on him in abundance, and all Israel will hate one another. [137] The fifth will be taken in darkness. [138] So also the sixth and the seventh. [139] In the seventh there will be such defilement as I cannot describe, before the Lord and people. Those who do these things will know it. [140] Because of this they will be in captivity and plunder, and their land and their possessions will be destroyed. [141] In the fifth week they will return to their desolate land and renew the house of the Lord. [142] In the seventh week the priests will come, idolaters, quarrelsome, lovers of money, proud, lawless, shameless, corrupters of boys and abusers of animals."

Chapter 18 (verses 143–156 here) [143] "After the Lord's punishment of them has come on the priesthood, [144] then the Lord will raise up a new priest, to whom all the words of the Lord will be revealed. He will carry out true judgment on the earth for many days. [145] His star will rise in heaven like a king's, lighting the light of knowledge as the sun lights the day, and he will be magnified in the whole world until his taking up. [146] He will shine like the sun on the earth and remove all darkness from under heaven, and there will be peace in all the earth. [147] The heavens will rejoice in his days, the earth will be glad, the clouds will be joyful, and the knowledge of the Lord will be poured out on the earth like the water of the seas. The angels of the glory of the Lord's presence will rejoice in him. [148] The heavens will be opened, and from the temple of glory sanctification will come on him with a fatherly voice, as from Abraham to Isaac. [149] The glory of the Most High will be spoken over him, and the spirit of understanding and sanctification will rest on him in the water. [150] He will give the majesty of the Lord to his sons in truth forever, and he will have no successor, from generation to generation, forever. [151] In his priesthood all sin will cease, the lawless will stop doing evil, and the righteous will find rest in him. [152] He will open the doors of Paradise and remove the threatening sword against Adam, [153] and give the holy ones to eat from the tree of life, and the spirit of holiness will be on them. [154] Beliar will be bound by him, and he will give his children authority to trample the evil spirits. [155] The Lord will rejoice over His children, and be pleased with His beloved ones forever. [156] Then Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob will be glad, and I will rejoice, and all the holy ones will put on gladness."

Chapter 19 (verses 157–161 here) [157] "Now, my children, you have heard everything. Choose for yourselves either darkness or light, either the law of the Lord or the works of Beliar." [158] We answered our father, "We will walk before the Lord, according to His law." [159] Our father said, "The Lord is witness, His angels are witnesses, I am a witness, and you are witnesses to the word of your mouth." And we said, "Witnesses." [160] So Levi finished commanding his sons, stretched out his feet, and was gathered to his fathers, having lived a hundred and thirty-seven years. [161] They laid him in a coffin, later they buried him in Hebron, beside Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Notes

- a (3:1) "Levi" (Hebrew Levi) is explained in Gen 29:34 by a wordplay on "joined," as the wife hopes her husband will be "joined" to her. The name is also the root of "Levite."
- b (3:3) "Haran" (Hebrew Charan) is the northern Mesopotamian city where Jacob lived with Laban; the name probably means "road" or "caravan stop."
- c (3:4) "Hamor" (Hebrew Chamor) means "donkey." He was the ruler of Shechem in Gen 34.
- d (3:4) "Dinah" (Hebrew Dinah) means "judgment" or "justice." She is Jacob's daughter by Leah.
- e (3:5) "Abelmaul" is the Greek form of a place name; it is probably Abel-meholah or Abel-maim ("meadow of the waters"), in the north of the land.
- f (3:46) "Jebla" is the form of the name in the Greek copies; the person is otherwise unknown. Some copies read differently.
- g (3:52) "Bethel" (Hebrew Beit-El) means "house of God." It lies in the hill country north of Jerusalem.
- h (3:91) "Milcah" (Hebrew Milkah) means "queen." The Greek here has a different form of the name.

- i (3:92) "Gershom" (Hebrew Gershom) is explained in Exod 2:22 as "a sojourner there."
- j (3:94) "Kohath" (Hebrew Qehat) is of uncertain meaning; the text here explains it as "beginning of majesty and assembling."
- k (3:97) "Merari" (Hebrew Merari) is linked to the word for "bitter."
- l (3:98) "Jochebed" (Hebrew Yokheved) is probably "Yahweh is glory." She is the mother of Moses in Exod 6:20.

Chapter 4

The Testament of Judah, on Courage, Greed, and Sexual Immorality

Chapter 1 (verses 1–6 here) 1 A copy of the words of Judah,[a] all that he said to his sons before he died. 2 They gathered and came to him, and he said to them, 3 "I was the fourth son born to my father, and my mother named me Judah, saying, 'I give thanks to the Lord, who has given me a fourth son also.' 4 I was quick and eager in my youth, and obedient to my father in everything. 5 I blessed my mother and my mother's sister. 6 When I grew to manhood, my father Jacob prayed over me, saying, 'You will be king and will prosper in everything.'" Chapter 2 (verses 7–13 here) 7 "The Lord gave me favor in all my work, in the field and at home. 8 When I saw that I had caught up with a deer, I seized it and made a meal for my father. 9 I caught gazelles by running, and overtook everything that lived in the plains. I overtook a wild mare and tamed it. 10 I killed a lion and took a young goat from its mouth. I took a bear by the foot and rolled it down a cliff, and any animal that turned on me I tore apart like a dog. 11 I ran down the wild boar, got ahead of it as I ran, and tore it to pieces. 12 A leopard in Hebron leaped on the dog; I seized it by the tail and flung it, and it burst apart in the territory of Gaza. 13 I grabbed a wild ox grazing in the country by its horns, spun it around until it was dizzy, threw it down, and killed it."
Chapter 3 (verses 14–23 here) 14 "When the two kings of the Canaanites came in full armor against the flocks, with a large army, I ran out alone at King Shur,[b] gripped him, struck him on the shins, pulled him down, and killed him. 15 The other king, Taphue, was sitting on his horse; I killed him too, and so scattered the whole army. 16 King

Achor, a man of giants, who shot arrows forward and backward from horseback, I lifted up; I hurled a sixty-pound stone[c] and struck his horse, and I killed him. 17 I fought Achor for two hours and killed him, and splitting his shield in two, I cut off his feet. 18 While I was stripping off his breastplate, eight of his companions began to attack me. 19 I wound my cloak around my hand, slung stones at them, and killed four of them; the rest fled. 20 Our father Jacob killed Beelesa, king of all the kings, a giant in strength, eighteen feet tall.[d] 21 Trembling fell on them, and they stopped fighting us. 22 That is why my father had no worry in the wars when I was with my brothers. 23 He had seen in a vision about me that an angel of power followed me in everything, so that I would not be defeated."

Chapter 4 (verses 24–26 here) 24 "To the south we had a war greater than the one at Shechem. I drew up in battle line with my brothers and chased a thousand men, and killed two hundred of them and four kings. 25 I went up against them on the wall and killed two more kings. 26 In this way we freed Hebron and took all the plunder of the kings."

Chapter 5 (verses 27–33 here) 27 "The next day we went to Areta, a strong city, walled and unapproachable, that threatened us with death. 28 Gad and I approached from the east side of the city; Reuben and Levi from the west and south. 29 The men on the wall, thinking we were alone, were drawn out against us. 30 So my brothers, secretly, from both sides, climbed the wall on pegs and entered the city while the people did not know. 31 We took it with the edge of the sword, and those who had fled to the tower we took by sawing the tower down with them in it. 32 As we were leaving, men from Taphu fell on our plunder, took it with our sons, and we engaged them as far as Taphu. 33 We killed them, burned the city, and plundered everything in it."

Chapter 6 (verses 34–38 here) 34 "While I was at the waters of Chuzeba, the men from Jobel came against us for war. 35 We engaged them and killed them and their allies from Shelom, and we gave them no way through to reach us. 36 On the fifth day men from Machir attacked us to take the plunder. We met them in a hard fight and overcame them, though they were a strong crowd, and we killed them before they could climb the slope. 37 When we came to their city, their women rolled stones down on us from the top of the mountain where the city stood. 38 Simeon and I hid and came up behind them, took the high ground, and destroyed the whole city."

Chapter 7 (verses 39–49 here) 39 "The next day we were told that the cities of the two kings were coming against us with a great crowd. 40 So Dan and I, pretending to be Amorites, came into their city as allies. 41 In the deep of night we opened the gates to our brothers when they came, and destroyed them all and everything they had; we plundered all their goods and tore down their three walls. 42 We came near to Thamna,[e] where all the hostile kings had taken refuge. 43 Then, insulted, I was furious and charged at them toward the summit, while they slung stones and shot arrows at me. 44 If my brother Dan had not fought beside me, they would have killed me. 45 We came on them in a rage and they all fled. They went another way and begged my father, and he made peace with them, 46 and we did them no harm, but made them subjects under treaty, and gave back all the plunder. 47 I built Thamna and my father built Rambael. 48 I was twenty years old when this war happened, 49 and the Canaanites were afraid of me and my brothers."

Chapter 8 (verses 50–52 here) 50 "I also had many cattle, and had Hira the Adullamite[f] as my chief shepherd. 51 I went to him and saw Barsan, king of Adullam. He gave us a banquet, and in his friendliness he gave me his daughter Bathshua[g] as a wife. 52 She bore me Er, Onan, and Shelah.[h] The Lord killed the first two childless; Shelah lived, and you are his children."

Chapter 9 (verses 53–60 here) 53 "For eighteen years we were at peace, our father and we, with his brother Esau,[i] and his sons with us, after we had come from Mesopotamia, from Laban. 54 When eighteen years were complete, in the fortieth year of my life, Esau, my father's brother, came against us with a large and strong army. 55 Jacob's bow struck him down, and he was carried dead to Mount Seir; and as he was being carried up to Iramna, he died. 56 We pursued the sons of Esau. They had a city with an iron wall and bronze gates, and we could not enter it, so we sat down around it and besieged them. 57 When they did not open after twenty days, I set up a ladder in their sight, with my shield over my head, and climbed up taking stones that weighed up to 225 pounds;[j] when I reached the top I killed four of their mighty men. [58] The next day Reuben and Gad went in and killed sixty others. [59] Then they asked us for terms of peace, and after consulting our father, we accepted them as tributaries. [60] They gave us 1,200 bushels[k] of wheat, 3,000 gallons[l] of oil, and 15,000 gallons[m] of wine, until we went down into Egypt.

Chapter 10 (verses 61–66 here) [61] "After this my son Er took Tamar,[n] the daughter of Aram, from Mesopotamia. [62] Er was wicked and was perplexed about Tamar, because she was not from the land of Canaan. An angel of the Lord killed him on the third night, [63] and he had not known her, through the scheming of his mother, for she did not want him to have children by her. [64] In the days of the wedding chamber I gave her to Onan as a husband; he too, in wickedness, did not know her, though he lived with her a year. [65] When I threatened him, he did go in to her, but he wasted the seed on the ground, following his mother's order; and he also died in his wickedness. [66] I wanted to give Shelah to her too, but my wife Bathshua would not allow it. She acted wickedly toward Tamar, because Tamar was not one of the daughters of Canaan, as she herself was."

Chapter 11 (verses 67–71 here) [67] "I knew that the race of Canaan was wicked, but the plans of youth blinded my heart. [68] When I saw her pouring wine, I was deceived by drunkenness and fell for her. [69] While I was away, she went and took a wife for Shelah from the land of Canaan. [70] When I learned what she had done, I cursed her in the anguish of my soul, [71] and she too died, through the wickedness of her sons."

Chapter 12 (verses 72–83 here) [72] "After these things, when Tamar had been a widow for two years, she heard that I was going up to shear the sheep, and she dressed herself in bridal clothes and sat opposite the city by the gate. [73] It was the law of the Amorites that a woman about to marry should sit in prostitution seven days by the gate. [74] I was drunk at the waters of Chozeba, and because of the wine I did not recognize her. Her beauty deceived me, through the manner of her dress. [75] I turned aside to her and said, 'Let me come in to you.'

She said, 'What will you give me?' I gave her my staff, my belt, and the diadem of my kingship, and when I went in to her she conceived. [76] Not knowing what she had done, I wanted to kill her; but she secretly sent the pledges, and she shamed me. [77] When I called her, I also heard the secret words I had spoken while sleeping with her in my drunkenness; and I could not kill her, because it was from the Lord. [78] I said, 'Perhaps she did it deceitfully, having taken the pledge from someone else.' [79] But I never went near her again until my death, because I had done an abomination in all Israel. [80] People in the city even said there was no temple prostitute in the city, because she had come from another place and sat only a short while at the gate, [81] and she thought that no one knew I had gone in to her. [82] After this we went to Egypt, to Joseph, because of the famine. [83] I was forty-six years old and lived seventy-three years there."

Chapter 13 (verses 84–91 here) [84] "Now listen, children, to your father about what I command you, and keep all my words, to do the decrees of the Lord and obey the command of the Lord God. [85] Do not follow your desires or the thoughts of your plans, in the pride of your heart, and do not boast in the deeds of your youthful strength, for this too is evil in the eyes of the Lord. [86] For I too boasted that in wars the face of a beautiful woman had never deceived me, and I used to reproach my brother Reuben about Bilhah, my father's wife. Then the spirit of jealousy and sexual immorality fought against me, until I fell for Bathshua the Canaanite and for Tamar, who was promised to my sons. [87] I said to my father-in-law, 'I will consult my father, and then I will take your daughter.' He showed me, in the name of his daughter, an unlimited amount of gold, for he was a king. [88] He dressed her in gold and pearls and made her pour wine for us at the dinner, in the beauty of women. [89] The wine twisted my eyes, and pleasure darkened my heart. [90] I fell in love with her, gave in, and broke the Lord's command and the command of my fathers, and I took her as my wife. [91] The Lord paid me back according to the plan of my heart, for I had no joy in her children."

Chapter 14 (verses 92–99 here) [92] "Now, my children, do not get drunk on wine, for wine twists the mind away from the truth, throws in the anger of desire, and leads the eyes into error. [93] The spirit of sexual immorality has wine as its servant, to give pleasure to the mind; for these two together take away a person's strength. [94] If someone drinks wine to drunkenness, he disturbs his mind with filthy thoughts toward sexual immorality and heats his body toward intercourse; and if the occasion of desire is present, he commits the sin and is not ashamed. [95] Such is wine, my children: the drunk respects no one. [96] See, it led me astray too, so that I was not ashamed before the crowd in the city, for in the sight of all I turned aside to Tamar, and I committed a great sin, and uncovered the cover of my sons' shame. [97] After drinking wine I felt no shame before the command of God, and I took a Canaanite wife. [98] So a person who drinks wine needs understanding, my children, and this is the understanding about drinking: drink only as long as you keep your sense of shame. [99] If someone goes past this limit, wine invades the mind and produces the spirit of deceit. It makes the drunk speak shamefully and break the law without being ashamed, even boasting of his dishonor and thinking it good."

Chapter 15 (verses 100–104 here) [100] "One who commits sexual immorality and is stripped of his kingship does not get out of it; he is enslaved to immorality, as I was stripped. [101] For I gave away my staff, that is, the support of my tribe; and my belt, that is, my strength; and the diadem, that is, the glory of my kingdom. [102] After repenting of these things, I took neither wine nor meat until old age, and I saw no happiness. [103] The angel of God showed me that women rule over both king and poor man forever, [104] and take from the king his glory, from the brave man his strength, and from the poor man the little support of his poverty."

Chapter 16 (verses 105–108 here) [105] "So watch the limit with wine, my children. There are four evil spirits in it: of desire, of burning passion, of recklessness, of shameful gain. [106] If you drink wine in gladness, with respect and the fear of God, you will live. But if you drink without respect, and the fear of God is gone, then drunkenness follows and shamelessness creeps in. [107] If you do not drink at all, you will not sin in words of insult, quarreling, slander, and breaking the commands of God, and you will not perish before your time. [108] Wine even reveals the mysteries of God and people to outsiders, as I too revealed the commands of God and the mysteries of my father Jacob to the Canaanite Bathshua, things God had said not to reveal. Wine is also the cause of war and disorder."

Chapter 17 (verses 109–114 here) [109] "I command you, my children, not to love money or look at the beauty of women, because it was for money and beauty that I was led astray to Bathshua the Canaanite. [110] I know that because of these two things, my descendants will be evil, [111] for they will change even the wise men among my sons and cause the kingdom of Judah to shrink, the kingdom the Lord gave me for obeying my father. [112] I never grieved the word of Jacob my father, for everything he said I did. [113] Abraham, my father's father, blessed me to be king in Israel, and Isaac likewise blessed me in the same way. [114] I know that the kingdom will be established from me."

Chapter 18 (verses 115–120 here) [115] "I have read in the books of Enoch the righteous what evils you will do in the last days. [116] So beware, my children, of sexual immorality and love of money; listen to Judah your father, [117] for these things pull people away from the law of God, blind the plans of the soul, teach pride, and do not let a person show mercy to his neighbor, [118] rob his soul of all goodness, hold him in toil and suffering, take his sleep away, and eat up his flesh, [119] hinder the sacrifices of God, forget blessings, do not listen to a prophet speaking, and are irritated by words of godliness. [120] For the person who serves two passions opposed to the commands of God cannot obey God, because they have blinded his soul, and he walks in the day as in the night."

Chapter 19 (verses 121–124 here) [121] "My children, love of money leads to idols, for those led astray by money name as gods those who are not gods, and it makes whoever has it fall into madness. [122] Because of money I lost my children, and if it had not been for the repentance of my flesh, the humbling of my soul, and the prayers of my father Jacob, I would have died childless. [123] But the God of my fathers, the compassionate and merciful, forgave me because I acted in ignorance. [124] The ruler of deceit had blinded me, and I was ignorant, as a human being, as flesh corrupted by sins. I came to know my own weakness, though I had thought I was unbeatable."

Chapter 20 (verses 125–129 here) [125] "Know, then, my children, that two spirits are at work in a person, the spirit of truth and the spirit of deceit. [126] In the middle is the understanding of the mind, which inclines whichever way it wishes. [127] The things of truth and the things of deceit are written on the human chest, and the Lord knows each one of them. [128] There is no time when a person's deeds can escape notice, for they are written on the bones of his chest before the Lord. [129] The spirit of truth testifies to everything and accuses everyone, and the one who sinned is burned from within by his own heart, and cannot lift his face to the judge."

Chapter 21 (verses 130–138 here) [130] "Now, children, love Levi so that you may last, and do not exalt yourselves over him, or you will be destroyed. [131] The Lord gave the kingship to me and the priesthood to him, and put the kingship under the priesthood. [132] He gave me the things of earth and gave him the things in heaven. [133] As heaven is above earth, so the priesthood of God is above the kingdom on earth. [134] For the Lord chose him over you to draw near to Him, to eat at His table, and to receive the firstfruits, the delicacies of the sons of Israel. [135] You will be to them like the sea. In the sea the just and the unjust are tossed by storms, some taken captive and some growing rich; so in you every kind of person: some endangered, taken captive, and others enriched by plunder. [136] Those who rule will be like sea monsters, swallowing people like fish. They will enslave free sons and daughters, and seize houses, fields, flocks, and goods; [137] they will feed the flesh of many, unjustly, to ravens and ibises, and they will advance in evil, lifting themselves up in greed. [138] There will be false prophets like storms, and they will persecute all the righteous."

Chapter 22 (verses 139–141 here) [139] "The Lord will bring divisions against one another on them, and there will be constant wars in Israel, [140] and my kingdom will be brought to an end among foreigners, until the salvation of Israel comes, until the coming of the God of righteousness, so that Jacob and all the nations may rest in peace. [141] He will keep the strength of my kingdom forever. For the Lord swore to me with an oath that my kingdom and my seed's would not fail all the days, forever."

Chapter 23 (verses 142–146 here) [142] "I am very grieved, my children, over the shamelessness, sorcery, and idolatry you will commit against the kingdom, following mediums, omen-readers, and demons of deceit. [143] You will make your daughters musicians and public women, and you will mingle in the abominations of the nations. [144] For this the Lord will bring on you famine and plague, death and avenging sword, siege, dogs to tear your enemies apart, reproaches from friends, ruin and the rotting of eyes, the killing of children, the taking of wives, the plundering of possessions, the burning of the temple of God, the desolation of the land, and your own slavery among the nations. [145] They will castrate some of you to serve their wives as eunuchs. [146] When you return to the Lord with humble heart, repenting and walking in all the commands of God, the Lord will visit you in mercy and in love, bringing you out of the captivity of your enemies."

Chapter 24 (verses 147–152 here) [147] "After this a star will rise for you from Jacob in peace, and a man will rise from my seed like the sun of righteousness, walking with the sons of men in gentleness and righteousness, and no sin will be found in him. [148] The heavens will be opened over him to pour out the blessing of the Holy Father's spirit, and he will pour out the spirit of grace on you, [149] and you will be his sons in truth, and you will walk in his commandment, first and last. [150] This is the branch of God Most High, and this is the spring for the life of all flesh. [151] Then the scepter of my kingdom will shine, and a stem will grow from your root. [152] From it will rise a rod of righteousness for the nations, to judge and save all who call on the Lord."

Chapter 25 (verses 153–157 here) [153] "After this Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob will rise to life, and I and my brothers will be chiefs, each with our scepter in Israel: Levi first, I second, Joseph third, Benjamin fourth, Simeon fifth, Issachar sixth, and so on in order, all of them. [154] The Lord blessed Levi; the angel of the presence, me; the powers of glory, Simeon; heaven, Reuben; the earth, Issachar; the sea, Zebulun; the mountains, Joseph; the tabernacle, Benjamin; the lights, Dan; delight, Naphtali; the sun, Gad; the olive tree, Asher. [155] There will be one people of the Lord and one language, and the spirit of deceit of Beliar will be no more, for he will be thrown into the fire forever. [156] Those who died in sorrow will rise in joy; those who were poor for the Lord's sake will be made rich; those in need will be filled; those in weakness will be strong; and those who died for the Lord will be awakened to life. [157] The deer of Jacob will run in gladness, and the eagles of Israel will fly in joy. The ungodly will mourn, the sinners will weep, and all peoples will glorify the Lord forever."

Chapter 26 (verses 158–161 here) [158] "So keep every law of the Lord, my children, for there is hope for all who make his way straight." [159] He said to them, "I am a hundred and nineteen years old, and today I am dying before your eyes. [160] Let no one bury me in costly clothing or cut open my belly, because those who rule will do these things. And take me up to Hebron with you." [161] After saying this Judah fell asleep, and his sons did everything he had commanded and buried him in Hebron with his fathers.

Notes

- a (4:1) "Judah" (Hebrew Yehudah) is explained in Gen 29:35 as "I will praise Yahweh."
- b (4:14) "Shur" and the other royal names in these chapters (Taphue, Achor, Beelesa) are unknown outside this book. The spellings follow the Greek.
- c (4:16) The Greek says "sixty litrai," a litra being the Roman pound of about 12 ounces (327 g), so about 43 pounds (19.6 kg).
- d (4:20) The Greek says "twelve cubits"; at about 18 inches to the cubit this is about 18 feet (5.5 m).
- e (4:42) "Thamna" is the Greek spelling of Timnah, the town in the hill country of Judah, which means "allotted portion."
- f (4:50) "Hira" (Hebrew Chirah) is the Adullamite friend of Judah in Gen 38:1. "Adullam" was a town in the lowland of Judah.
- g (4:51) "Bathshua" (Hebrew Bat-shua) means "daughter of Shua" or "daughter of nobility." In Gen 38:2 she is the Canaanite mother of Judah's sons; the Greek spells the name "Bessous."
- h (4:52) "Er" (Hebrew Er) may mean "watchful"; "Onan" (Hebrew Onan) may mean "vigor"; "Shelah" (Hebrew Shelah) probably means "request" or "petition." The Greek spells the last one "Shelom."
- i (4:53) "Esau" (Hebrew Esav) is Jacob's twin brother, "hairy" or "made."
- j (4:57) The Greek says "up to three talents." A talent was about 75 pounds (34 kg), so three talents is about 225 pounds (about 100 kg).

- k (4:60) "Two hundred cors." A cor was about 6 bushels (about 220 liters), so about 1,200 bushels (44,000 liters). The size of the cor varied.
- l (4:60) "Five hundred baths." A bath was about 6 gallons (about 22 liters), so about 3,000 gallons (11,000 liters).
- m (4:60) "One thousand five hundred measures"; the Greek says only "measures" (metra), and the size is uncertain. If the measure was the metretes, about 10 gallons (39 liters), this would be about 15,000 gallons (59,000 liters)."
- n (4:61) "Tamar" (Hebrew Tamar) means "date palm."

Chapter 5

The Testament of Issachar, on Simplicity

Chapter 1 (verses 1–15 here) 1 A copy of the words of Issachar.[a] He called his sons and said to them, "Listen, children, to Issachar your father; give ear to the words of one beloved by the Lord. 2 I was born as the fifth son of Jacob, as the wages for mandrakes. 3 Jacob had brought mandrakes in from the field, and Rachel[b] met him and took them. 4 Reuben[c] was crying, and at the sound of him my mother Leah[d] came out. 5 These were sweet-smelling apples, which the land of Aram produced on high ground below a ravine of waters. 6 Rachel said, 'I will not give them to you, for they will take the place of children for me.' 7 There were two apples. Leah said, 'Let it be enough for you that you took the husband of my maidenhood. Will you take these too?' 8 Rachel said, 'See, let Jacob be yours tonight in exchange for your son's mandrakes.' 9 Leah said to her, 'Do not boast or glorify yourself. Jacob is mine, and I am the wife of his youth.' 10 Rachel said, 'What of it? He was betrothed to me first, and for my sake he served our father fourteen years. 11 What am I to do to you, since deceit and cunning have multiplied among people, and deceit advances on the earth? Otherwise you would not be looking on Jacob's face; 12 for you are not his wife, but were brought in by trickery in my place. 13 My father deceived me, and moved me aside that night and did not let me see; for if I had been there, this would not have happened.' 14 Then Rachel said, 'Take one mandrake, and in exchange for the one I will hire him out to you for one night.' 15 So Jacob knew Leah, and she conceived and bore me; and because of the wages I was called Issachar."

Chapter 2 (verses 16–20 here) [16] "Then an angel of the Lord appeared to Jacob and said that Rachel would bear two children, because she had spat on a husband's company and had chosen self-control. [17] If my mother Leah had not given up the two apples in exchange for company, she would have borne eight sons. That is why she bore six, and Rachel the two, because the Lord visited her over the mandrakes. [18] He saw that she wanted to be with Jacob for the sake of children and not for love of pleasure. [19] For the next day she gave Jacob up again, in order to get the other mandrake as well. That is why the Lord listened to Rachel over the mandrakes; [20] for although she longed for them, she did not eat them, but dedicated them in the house of the Lord, bringing them to the priest of the Most High who was there at that time."

Chapter 3 (verses 21–28 here) [21] "When I grew to manhood, my children, I walked in uprightness of heart, and became a farmer for my fathers and my brothers, and brought in produce from the fields in its season. [22] My father blessed me, seeing that I walked in simplicity. [23] I was not meddlesome in my actions, nor was I wicked or envious toward my neighbor. [24] I never spoke against anyone, nor criticized any person's way of life, but walked with simple eyes. [25] For this reason I took a wife only at thirty, because toil consumed my strength; I did not think about a woman's pleasure, but from the labor sleep overcame me, [26] and my father was always glad over my simplicity. Whenever I worked hard, I first brought every fruit and every first produce to the Lord through the priest, then to my father, and only then took some myself. [27] The Lord doubled the good things in my hands. Jacob also knew that God worked together with my simplicity, [28] for to every poor person and every afflicted person I gave of the good things of the land, in simplicity of heart."

Chapter 4 (verses 29–34 here) [29] "Now listen to me, children, and walk in simplicity of heart, for I have seen in it everything that pleases the Lord. [30] The simple person does not desire gold; he does not take advantage of his neighbor; he does not crave a variety of foods; he does not want expensive clothing; [31] he does not plan to live a long time, but only waits for the will of God. [32] The spirits of error have no power against him. He does not even look at a woman's beauty, so that he will not pollute his mind with perversion. [33] Envy does not enter his thoughts; jealousy does not waste away his soul; and he does not scheme for gain out of insatiable greed. [34] He walks in uprightness of life and sees everything in simplicity, not letting his eyes take in wickedness from the world's error, so that he will not see any of the Lord's commands in a twisted way."

Chapter 5 (verses 35–42 here) [35] "So keep the law of God, my children, and acquire simplicity, and walk in innocence, not prying into the Lord's commands or into the neighbor's affairs, [36] but love the Lord and your neighbor, and show mercy to the poor and the sick. [37] Bend your backs to farming, and work at the tasks of the land in every kind of cultivation, bringing gifts to the Lord with thanksgiving; [38] for the Lord has blessed you with the first fruits of the earth, as he blessed all the holy ones from Abel until now. [39] No other portion has been given to you than that of the richness of the earth, whose fruits come with labor. [40] For our father Jacob blessed me with the blessings of the earth and of the first fruits. [41] Levi and Judah were glorified by the Lord among the sons of Jacob. For the Lord assigned them their lots, giving the priesthood to the one and the kingship to the other. [42] So obey them, and walk in the simplicity of your father; for to Gad it was given to destroy the raiding bands that attack Israel."

Chapter 6 (verses 43–46 here) [43] "I know, my children, that in the last times your sons will abandon simplicity and cling to greed; leaving innocence, they will approach wickedness; abandoning the commands of the Lord, they will cling to Beliar;[e] [44] leaving farming, they will follow their own wicked plans. They will be scattered among the nations and will serve their enemies. [45] So tell these things to your children, so that if they sin, they will turn back to the Lord the sooner; [46] for he is merciful and will rescue them, to bring them back to their land."

Chapter 7 (verses 47–55 here) [47] "I am a hundred and twenty-two years old, and I have not known any sin that deserves death. [48] Apart from my wife, I have known no other woman. I never committed sexual immorality by lifting my eyes. [49] I never drank wine to be led astray.

I never longed for anything my neighbor desired. [50] There was no deceit in my heart. No lie went up through my lips. [51] I groaned with every person in pain, and shared my bread with the poor. I never ate alone. I never moved a boundary. I practiced godliness and truth all my days. [52] I loved the Lord with all my strength; and I loved every person as I did my own children. [53] Do these things too, my children, and every spirit of Beliar will flee from you, and no action of wicked people will rule over you. You will bring every wild beast under your power, having with you the God of heaven, who walks with people in simplicity of heart." [54] He commanded them to carry him up to Hebron and bury him there in the cave with his fathers. [55] Then he stretched out his feet and died, the fifth son, in a good old age, with every limb sound and strength intact, and he slept the sleep of eternity.

Notes

- a (5:1) "Issachar" (Hebrew Yissakhar) is explained in Gen 30:18 as "hire" or "reward," from the bargain over the mandrakes told in the next verses.
- b (5:3) "Rachel" (Hebrew Rakhel) means "ewe."
- c (5:4) "Reuben" (Hebrew Re'uven) is explained in Gen 29:32 as "See, a son!"
- d (5:4) "Leah" (Hebrew Le'ah) may mean "wild cow" or "weary."
- e (5:43) "Beliar" is a name for the chief evil spirit, from Hebrew Beliyya'al, "worthlessness."

Chapter 6

The Testament of Zebulun, on Compassion and Mercy

Chapter 1 (verses 1–7 here) [1] A copy of the words of Zebulun,[a] which he laid down for his children in the hundred and fourteenth year of his life, thirty-two years after the death of Joseph. [2] He said to them, "Listen to me, sons of Zebulun; pay attention to the words of your father. [3] I am Zebulun, a good gift to my parents. When I was born our father grew very rich, in flocks and herds, when he took his share by means of the striped rods. [4] I do not know, my children, that I have sinned in my days, except in thought. [5] Nor do I remember doing any lawless act, except the ignorance I showed over Joseph, for I covered up for my brothers and did not tell my father what had happened. [6] I wept a great deal in secret, for I was afraid of my brothers, because they had all agreed together that if anyone revealed the secret, he would be killed with the sword. 7 When they wanted to kill Joseph, I pleaded with them at length, in tears, not to commit this lawless act."

Chapter 2 (verses 8–16 here) 8 "Simeon and Gad came at Joseph to kill him. Falling on his face, Joseph said to them, 9 'Have pity on me, my brothers; have mercy on the heart of Jacob our father. Do not lay your hands on me to shed innocent blood, for I have not sinned against you. 10 And if I have sinned, punish me with discipline, but do not lay your hand on me, for the sake of Jacob our father.' 11 As he spoke these words, I was moved to pity and began to weep; my liver dissolved within me, and the whole substance of my insides melted into my soul. 12 Joseph wept, and I with him; my heart pounded, and the joints of my body gave way, so that I could not stand. 13 When he saw me weeping with him, and the others coming to kill him, he took refuge behind me, begging them. 14 Reuben stood up and said, 'Brothers, let us not kill him, but throw him into one of these dry pits, which our fathers dug and found no water.' 15 For this reason the Lord had kept water from rising in them, so that Joseph would be preserved. 16 The Lord did this until they sold him to the Ishmaelites."
Chapter 3 (verses 17–24 here) 17 "I had no share in the price of Joseph, children, 18 but Simeon and Gad and our other six brothers took the price of Joseph and bought sandals for themselves, their wives, and their children, saying, 19 'We will not eat it, since it is the price of our brother's blood, but we will trample it, because he said he would be king over us. Let us see what becomes of his dreams.' 20 For this reason it is written in the writing of the law of Enoch[b] that whoever does not want to raise up seed for his brother is to have his sandal taken off and be spat on in the face. 21 Joseph's brothers did not want their brother to live, and the Lord took the sandal off them in Joseph's case. 22 For when they came to Egypt, Joseph's servants took their sandals off in front of the gate, and so they bowed down to Joseph in the manner of Pharaoh's court. 23 They not only bowed to him but were spat on, falling down right away in front of him, and so they were shamed in front of the Egyptians. 24 After this the Egyptians heard about all the evil we had done to Joseph."

Chapter 4 (verses 25–37 here) [25] "After this, they sat down to eat. [26] I tasted nothing for two days and two nights, in pity for Joseph. Judah did not eat with them but kept watch at the pit, for he was afraid Simeon and Gad would jump up and kill him. [27] When they saw me too not eating, they appointed me to guard him until he was sold. [28] He spent three days and three nights in the pit, and so he was sold without having eaten. [29] When Reuben heard that Joseph had been sold in his absence, he tore his clothes and mourned, saying, 'How can I look on the face of Jacob my father?' [30] He took the money and ran after the merchants, but found no one; they had left the main road and gone by a shortcut through cave-ridden country. [31] Reuben ate no bread that day. Dan came to him and said, [32] 'Do not cry and do not mourn, for I have found what we can tell our father Jacob. [33] Let us slaughter a kid of the goats and dip Joseph's tunic in its blood, and say, "See whether this is your son's tunic."' [34] They had stripped off the tunic of our father that Joseph was wearing when he was about to be sold, and dressed him in a slave's old cloak. [35] Simeon had the tunic and did not want to give it up, wishing to hack it with his sword, angry that Joseph lived and he had not killed him. [36] All of us together stood up against him and said that if he did not hand it over, we would say that he alone had done this evil in Israel. [37] So he gave it over, and they did as Dan had said."

Chapter 5 (verses 38–42 here) [38] "Now, my children, I will tell you to keep the commands of the Lord, to show mercy toward your neighbor, and to have compassion toward everyone, not only toward people, but also toward animals. [39] For because of these things the Lord blessed me, and when all my brothers were sick, I passed through without illness; for the Lord knows each one's purpose. [40] So have mercy in your hearts, my children, because as someone treats his neighbor, so the Lord will treat him. [41] The sons of my brothers were sick and were dying because of Joseph, since they showed no mercy in their hearts; but my sons were kept healthy, as you know. [42] When I was in Canaan, at the seacoast, I used to catch fish for Jacob my father; and while many were drowning in the sea, I remained unharmed."

Chapter 6 (verses 43–50 here) [43] "I was the first to make a boat to sail on the sea, because the Lord gave me understanding and wisdom for it. [44] I set a rudder at the back, and spread a sail on an upright pole in the middle. [45] Sailing in it along the shores, I fished for the house of my father until we came to Egypt. [46] From my catch I gave to every stranger out of compassion. [47] If someone was a stranger, or sick, or old, I would boil the fish, prepare them well, and offer them to all according to each one's need, sharing their pain along with them. [48] For this reason the Lord also gave me plenty of fish to catch; whoever gives to his neighbor receives many times more from the Lord. [49] I fished for five years, giving to everyone I saw and providing enough for the whole house of my father. [50] In summer I fished; in winter I shepherded with my brothers."

Chapter 7 (verses 51–54 here) [51] "Now I will tell you what I did. I saw a man in distress, naked in the winter cold. In pity for him, I secretly took a cloak from my own house and gave it to the man in distress. [52] You too, my children, from what God provides you, show mercy to all without distinction, and give to everyone with a good heart. [53] If you do not have anything to give to the needy at that time, share their pain with a heart of mercy. [54] I know that my hand did not find anything to give to someone in need at the moment, and still I walked with him nearly a mile[c] and wept; my heart turned inside me in sympathy for him."

Chapter 8 (verses 55–60 here) [55] "So you too, my children, have compassion in mercy for every person, so that the Lord will also have compassion and mercy on you; [56] for in the last days God will send his compassion on the earth, and wherever he finds hearts of mercy, he will live in them. [57] To the degree that a person has compassion on his neighbor, the Lord will have that much on him. [58] When we went down to Egypt, Joseph did not hold a grudge against us; and when he saw me, he was moved with compassion. [59] Looking to him, you too, my children, be free of grudges, and love one another, and do not keep count of each other's wrongs; [60] for this breaks up unity, scatters every family, and troubles the soul. A person who holds a grudge has no heart of mercy."

Chapter 9 (verses 61–69 here) [61] "Look at the water: it goes in one direction, sweeping along stones, sticks, and sand. [62] If it is divided into many streams, the earth swallows them up, and they become worth nothing. [63] You too will be like this if you are divided. [64] Do not be split into two heads, for everything the Lord made has one head. He gave two shoulders, hands, and feet, but all the limbs obey the one head. [65] I learned in the writing of my fathers that in the last days you will fall away from the Lord and be divided in Israel; you will follow two kings, commit every abomination, and worship every idol; [66] your enemies will take you captive, and you will live among the nations in all kinds of weakness, affliction, and pain of soul. [67] After that you will remember the Lord and repent, and he will bring you back, because he is merciful and compassionate and does not hold evil against human beings, since they are flesh and the spirits of error deceive them in everything they do. [68] After that the Lord himself will rise on you, the light of righteousness, with healing and compassion in his wings. He will redeem every captive of the sons of men from Beliar, and every spirit of error will be trampled. He will turn all the nations to jealousy for him, and you will see God in the form of a man, whom the Lord will choose, whose name is Jerusalem. [69] And again, by the wickedness of your words, you will provoke him to anger, and you will be rejected until the time of the end."

Chapter 10 (verses 70–76 here) [70] "Now, my children, do not grieve that I am dying, or be cast down because I am leaving you. [71] I will rise again among you as a leader among his sons, and I will rejoice among my tribe, with all who kept the law of the Lord and the commands of Zebulun their father. [72] But on the ungodly the Lord will bring eternal fire, and he will destroy them through the generations. [73] I am running to my rest, as my fathers did. [74] You, fear the Lord your God with all your strength all the days of your life." [75] After he said this, he fell asleep in a good sleep, and his sons laid him in a coffin. [76] Later they carried him up to Hebron and buried him with his fathers.

Notes

- a (6:1) "Zebulun" (Hebrew Zevulun) is explained in Gen 30:20 as "honor" or "dwelling."

- b (6:20) "Enoch" (Hebrew Chanokh) means "dedicated" or "initiated." The "law of Enoch" is not found in the Hebrew Bible; the rule resembles Deut 25:5–10, and the reference may be to the books of Enoch.
- c (6:54) "Seven stadia." A stadion was about 607 feet (185 m), so seven stadia is about 0.8 mile (1.3 km).

Chapter 7

The Testament of Dan, on Anger and Lying

Chapter 1 (verses 1–9 here) 1 A copy of the words of Dan,[a] which he spoke to his sons in the last days of his life, in the hundred and twenty-fifth year of his life. 2 He called his clan together and said,
"Listen, sons of Dan, to my words; pay attention to the speech of your father's mouth. 3 I have tested in my heart and through my whole life that truth with right dealing is good and pleasing to God, and that lying and anger are evil, because they teach a person every wickedness. 4 I confess to you today, my children, that in my heart I was pleased about the death of Joseph, a true and good man, 5 and I rejoiced at the sale of Joseph, because his father loved him more than us. 6 For the spirit of jealousy and arrogance said to me, 'You too are his son.' 7 One of the spirits of Beliar worked with me, saying, 'Take this sword, and with it kill Joseph; when he is dead, your father will love you.' 8 This was the spirit of anger that persuaded me to suck Joseph dry, as a leopard sucks dry a kid. 9 But the God of Jacob our father did not hand him over into my hands so that I could find him alone, nor did he let me carry out this lawless deed, which would have broken the two scepters in Israel."

Chapter 2 (verses 10–14 here) 10 "Now, my children, I am dying, and I tell you in truth that unless you guard yourselves against the spirit of lying and of anger, and love truth and patience, you will perish. 11
There is blindness in anger, my children, and no angry person sees a face truly. 12 Whether it is a father or a mother, he treats them as enemies; if a brother, he does not know him; if a prophet of the Lord, he disobeys; if a righteous man, he does not see him; a friend he does not recognize. 13 For the spirit of anger wraps him in the nets of error, blinds his natural eyes, darkens his mind with lying, and gives him a vision of his own. 14 How does it wrap his eyes? With hatred in the heart, and it gives him a heart of his own against his brother, out of envy."

Chapter 3 (verses 15–20 here) [15] "Anger is evil, my children, for it becomes a soul to the soul itself. [16] It takes the angry person's body as its own and rules his soul, giving his body power of its own to do every lawless act; [17] and when the soul does it, anger justifies what was done, because he does not see. [18] So the person who is angry, if he is powerful, has a threefold strength in his anger: one through his power and the help of those who serve him; the second through wealth, persuading and winning by injustice; the third the natural strength of his body, doing the evil himself. [19] If the angry person is weak, he has double the strength his nature gives, for anger always helps such people in lawless acts. [20] This spirit always walks with lying at the right hand of Satan, so that his deeds are done in cruelty and falsehood."

Chapter 4 (verses 21–27 here) [21] "So understand the power of anger, that it is empty. [22] First it provokes with a word; then through deeds it gives strength to the one who is stirred up, and with bitter losses it disturbs his judgment; and so it rouses his soul in great anger. [23] So when someone speaks against you, do not be moved to anger; and if anyone praises you as good, do not be puffed up or changed, either toward pleasure or toward appearance. [24] For first it delights the ear, and so it sharpens the mind to grasp what has been stirred up; and then, angry, one thinks he is rightly furious. [25] If you fall into a loss or the destruction of something, my children, do not be troubled; for this same spirit makes you long for what was lost, so that you become angry through the longing. [26] If you suffer loss willingly, do not be sad, for out of sadness it raises anger together with lying. [27] Anger and lying are a two-faced evil, and they join together to throw the mind into confusion. When the soul is continually troubled, the Lord withdraws from it, and Beliar rules it."

Chapter 5 (verses 28–40 here) [28] "So keep the Lord's commands, my children, and guard his law; keep away from anger and hate lying, so that the Lord may live in you and Beliar may flee from you. [29] Speak truth, each one to his neighbor, and you will not fall into pleasure and disorder, but will be in peace, having the God of peace, and war will not overpower you. [30] Love the Lord all your life, and one another with a true heart. [31] For I know that in the last days you will depart from the Lord and become offended at Levi and set yourselves against Judah; but you will not be able to prevail against them. An angel of the Lord leads each, because Israel will stand through them. [32] When you depart from the Lord, you will walk in every evil, committing the abominations of the nations, going off with the wives of lawless people, while the spirits of error work in you in every wickedness. [33] I read in the book of Enoch the righteous that your ruler is Satan, and that all the spirits of sexual immorality and pride will obey Levi, in order to sit constantly beside the sons of Levi and make them sin before the Lord. [34] My sons will come near to Levi and sin together with them in everything; and the sons of Judah will be greedy, seizing what belongs to others like lions. [35] For this reason you will be led away with them into captivity, and there you will receive all the plagues of Egypt and all the evils of the nations; [36] and so when you return to the Lord you will receive mercy, and he will bring you into his sanctuary, calling out peace to you. [37] Out of the tribe of Judah and Levi the salvation of the Lord will rise for you; he himself will make war on Beliar, and will give the vengeance of victory to those at our borders. [38] He will take the captives from Beliar, the souls of the holy ones, and will turn disobedient hearts to the Lord, and will give everlasting peace to those who call on him, [39] and the holy ones will rest in Eden, and the righteous will rejoice in the new Jerusalem, which will be to the glory of God forever. [40] Jerusalem will no longer endure desolation, nor will Israel be taken captive, because the Lord will be in the middle of it, living with people, and the Holy One of Israel will reign over them in humility and poverty; and whoever believes in him will reign in truth in the heavens."

Chapter 6 (verses 41–51 here) [41] "Now fear the Lord, my children, and watch yourselves against Satan and his spirits. [42] Draw near to God and to the angel who intercedes for you, for he is a mediator between God and humanity for the peace of Israel. He will stand against the kingdom of the enemy. [43] For this reason the enemy is eager to trip up all who call on the Lord. 44 He knows that on the day Israel believes, the kingdom of the enemy will be brought to an end. 45 The angel of peace himself will strengthen Israel, so that it does not fall into the final evil. 46 In the time of Israel's lawlessness the Lord will withdraw from them, and will go after those who do his will, because among the angels there will be none like him. 47 His name will be Savior in every place in Israel and among the nations. 48 So keep yourselves, my children, from every evil deed; throw away anger and all lying, and love truth and patience, 49 and pass on to your children what you heard from your father, so that the Father of the nations may receive you; for he is true and patient, gentle and humble, and teaches the law of God by his works. 50 So keep away from all injustice and cling to the righteousness of the law of the Lord. 51 And bury me near my fathers."

Chapter 7 (verses 52–54 here) 52 After saying this, he kissed them and fell asleep with the sleep of eternity. 53 His sons buried him, and afterward carried his bones up near Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. 54 But as Dan prophesied to them, that they would forget the law of their God and be alienated from the land of their inheritance and from the race of Israel and their family, so it happened.

Notes

- a (7:1) "Dan" (Hebrew Dan) means "he judged," as in Gen 30:6, "God has judged me."

Chapter 8

The Testament of Naphtali, on Natural Order

Chapter 1 (verses 1–12 here) 1 A copy of the testament of Naphtali,[a] which he laid down at the time of his end, in the hundred and thirty-second year of his life. 2 When his sons had gathered in the seventh month (September–October)[b] on the fourth day of the month, while he was in good health, he gave a dinner and a drinking party. 3 After he woke up the next morning, he told them he was dying; but they did not believe him. 4 Blessing the Lord, he insisted that he would die after the dinner of the day before. 5 Then he began to say to his sons, "Listen, my children, sons of Naphtali; listen to the words of your father. [6] I was born of Bilhah.[c] Because Rachel acted shrewdly and gave Bilhah to Jacob in her place, and Bilhah bore me on Rachel's thighs, I was called Naphtali. [7] Rachel loved me because I was born on her thighs; and when I was a tender little thing she would kiss me, saying, 'May I see a brother of yours from my own womb, like you.' [8] So Joseph was like me in everything, following Rachel's prayers. [9] My mother Bilhah was the daughter of Rotheus, brother of Deborah, Rebekah's nurse, who was born on the same day as Rachel. [10] Rotheus was of the family of Abraham, a Chaldean, God-fearing, free and noble. [11] He was taken captive and bought by Laban, who gave him his slave woman Aina as a wife; she bore a daughter, and he called her Zilpah, after the name of the village where he had been taken captive. [12] After that she bore Bilhah, and he said, 'My daughter is eager for something new, for as soon as she was born she was in a hurry to nurse.'"

Chapter 2 (verses 13–22 here) [13] "Because I was light on my feet like a deer, my father Jacob assigned me to every errand and message; and he even blessed me as a deer. [14] As the potter knows a vessel, how much it holds, and brings clay accordingly, so the Lord makes the body to match the spirit, and fits the spirit to the power of the body. [15] Nothing is left over, not a third of a hair's breadth from one to another; for all creation of the Most High is by weight, measure, and rule. [16] As the potter knows the use of each vessel and what it suits, so the Lord knows the body: how far it will last in good, and when it begins in evil. [17] There is no creature and no thought that the Lord does not know, for he made every person in his own image. [18] As his strength is, so is his work; as his mind, so his work; as his choice, so his action; as his heart, so his mouth; as his eye, so his sleep; as his soul, so his word, either in the law of the Lord or in the law of Beliar. [19] Just as there is a separation between light and darkness, sight and hearing, so there is a separation between man and man, and between woman and woman; and one cannot say that one is the same as another in face or likeness. [20] God made everything good in order: he put the five senses in the head, joined the neck to the head, and hair for glory; then the heart for understanding, the belly for sorting what the stomach takes in, the windpipe for health, the liver for anger, the gall for bitterness, the spleen for laughter, the kidneys for cunning, the loin muscles for power, the ribs as a case, the hip for strength, and so on. 21 So, my children, be in order for good things in the fear of God, and do nothing disorderly in contempt, or out of its proper time. 22 If you tell the eye to hear, it cannot; so you will not be able to do the works of light while in darkness."

Chapter 3 (verses 23–27 here) 23 "So do not hurry, in greed, to corrupt your actions, or to deceive your souls with empty words; for if you are silent with a pure heart, you will be able to hold to the will of God and throw off the will of the devil. 24 The sun, the moon, and the stars do not change their order; so you, do not change the law of God by disorder in your actions. 25 The nations went astray and left the Lord; they changed their order and followed stones and sticks, following spirits of error. 26 You must not be like that, my children, you who know in the sky, on earth, and in the sea, and in all that is made, the Lord who made all of it, so that you do not become like Sodom, which changed the order of its nature. 27 In the same way the Watchers changed the order of their nature, whom the Lord also cursed at the flood, and because of them he made the earth uninhabited and fruitless."

Chapter 4 (verses 28–32 here) 28 "I say this, my children, because I read in the holy writing of Enoch[d] that you too will depart from the Lord, going after every evil of the nations, and will commit every lawless act of Sodom. 29 The Lord will bring captivity on you, and there you will serve your enemies, and be covered with every ill-treatment and affliction, until the Lord has used up all of you. 30 After you have become few and small, you will return and know the Lord your God; and he will bring you back into your land, in his great mercy. 31 It will happen that when they arrive in the land of their fathers, they will again forget the Lord and become ungodly, 32 and the Lord will scatter them over the face of all the earth, until the compassion of the Lord comes, a man doing righteousness and showing mercy to all, far and near."

Chapter 5 (verses 33–40 here) [33] "In the fortieth year of my life, I saw on the Mount of Olives, east of Jerusalem, that the sun and the moon stood still. [34] There was Isaac, my father's father, saying to us, 'Run and grab hold, each as you are able; whoever catches them will have the sun and the moon.' [35] We all ran together; Levi seized the sun, and Judah got there first and caught the moon, and both of them were lifted up with them. [36] When Levi was like the sun, a young man gave him twelve palm branches; and Judah was bright like the moon, and under his feet were twelve rays. [37] Levi and Judah ran to each other and held each other. [38] Then there was a bull on the earth, with two great horns and an eagle's wings on its back; we wanted to catch it, but could not. [39] Joseph got there first, caught it, and went up with it on high. [40] I saw that I was there somewhere, and a holy writing appeared to us, saying: 'Assyrians, Medes, Persians, Elymeans, Gelachaeans, Chaldeans, and Syrians will inherit, in captivity, the twelve tribes of Israel.'"

Chapter 6 (verses 41–50 here) [41] "Seven months later I saw our father Jacob standing by the sea of Jamnia, and we his sons were with him. [42] A ship came sailing, full of dried fish, without sailors or pilot; and on the ship was written 'Jacob.' [43] Our father said to us, 'Let us get on our ship.' [44] When we went in, a violent storm came, a whirlwind of great wind, and our father, who had been holding our necks, was torn away from us. [45] We were tossed in the storm and carried out to sea; the ship filled with water, battered by huge waves, until it began to break up. [46] Joseph fled on a small boat; we were separated too, onto ten planks; Levi and Judah were on the same one. [47] So we were all scattered, to the ends of the earth. [48] Levi, wrapped in sackcloth, prayed to the Lord for all of us. [49] When the storm stopped, the vessel reached land, as if in peace. [50] Then our father Jacob came, and we rejoiced together."

Chapter 7 (verses 51–54 here) [51] "I told these two dreams to my father, and he said to me, 'These must be fulfilled in their time, after Israel endures many things.' [52] Then my father said to me, 'I believe that Joseph is alive; for I always see that the Lord is counting him with you.' [53] Weeping, he said, 'You are alive, Joseph my child, and I do not see you, and you do not see Jacob who fathered you.' [54] He made us weep, too, with these words. I burned inside to tell him that Joseph had been sold, but I was afraid of my brothers."

Chapter 8 (verses 55–64 here) [55] "Now, my children, I have shown you the last times, how all will happen in Israel. [56] So command your children to unite themselves to Levi and Judah. For through Judah salvation will rise for Israel, and in him Jacob will be blessed. [57] Through his scepter God will appear, living among people on the earth, to save the race of Israel; and he will gather the righteous from the nations. [58] If you do what is good, my children, people and angels will bless you; God will be glorified through you among the nations, the devil will flee from you, wild animals will fear you, and angels will hold on to you. [59] Just as someone who raises a child well has a good memory of it, so for a good deed there is a good memory with God. [60] But anyone who does not do good, people and angels will curse; God will be dishonored through him among the nations; the devil will claim him as his own tool; every wild animal will master him; and the Lord will hate him. [61] The commands of the law are twofold, and they are fulfilled with skill. [62] There is a time for a man's intercourse with his wife, and a time of self-control for his prayer. [63] These are two commands, and if they do not happen in their proper order, they bring sin. It is the same with the other commands. [64] So be wise in God and prudent, knowing the order of his commands and the rules for every matter, so that the Lord will love you."

Chapter 9 (verses 65–67 here) [65] After giving them many such commands, he asked them to carry his bones to Hebron and bury him with his fathers. [66] Then, after eating and drinking with a cheerful heart, he covered his face and died. [67] His sons did everything that their father Naphtali had commanded them.

Notes

- a (8:1) "Naphtali" (Hebrew Naftali) is explained in Gen 30:8 as "my wrestling," from Rachel's saying "I have wrestled with my sister."
- b (8:2) The Greek says "the seventh month, the fourth day of the month." Counted from spring, the seventh month of the Hebrew calendar (Tishri) falls in September–October, so the fourth day is early in that span.

- c (8:6) "Bilhah" (Hebrew Bilhah) is the maid of Rachel; the meaning of the name is uncertain.
- d (8:28) "Enoch" is the patriarch whose books (the Books of Enoch) circulated in this period. The "holy writing of Enoch" is probably 1 Enoch, though the exact passage is not found there.

Chapter 9

The Testament of Gad, on Hatred

Chapter 1 (verses 1–9 here) 1 A copy of the testament of Gad,[a] which he spoke to his sons in the hundred and twenty-seventh year of his life, saying, 2 "I was the seventh son born to Jacob, and I was brave with the flocks. 3 I kept watch over the flock at night, and when a lion, a wolf, a leopard, a bear, or any wild animal came against the flock, I chased it down, caught its foot in my hand, spun it around until it was dizzy, and hurled it about a quarter of a mile,[b] and so killed it. 4 Joseph was shepherding with us for about thirty days, and, being delicate, he fell ill from the heat, 5 and went back to Hebron to his father, who made him lie down near him, because he loved him. 6 Joseph told our father that the sons of Zilpah and Bilhah were slaughtering the best animals and eating them, against the judgment of Judah and Reuben. 7 For he had seen that I snatched a lamb out of the bear's mouth, and killed the bear, and slaughtered the lamb, which I felt sorry about because it could not live, and we ate it; and he told our father. 8 I held a grudge against Joseph over this matter until the day he was sold into Egypt. 9 The spirit of hatred was in me, and I did not want to see Joseph with my eyes or hear him with my ears. He had reproved us to our faces because we were eating the animals without Judah; and everything he said to his father, his father believed."

Chapter 2 (verses 10–14 here) 10 "I confess my sin now, children: many times I wanted to kill him, because I hated him to the depth of my soul, and I had no mercy in my insides for him at all. 11 I even added to my hatred because of the dreams, and I wanted to lick him out of the land of the living, as a calf licks the green grass off the ground. 12 So Judah and I sold him to the Ishmaelites for thirty gold pieces; we hid ten of them and showed the twenty to our brothers. 13 In this way I was filled with greed for his removal. 14 But the God of my fathers rescued him from my hands, so that I would not commit a lawless act in Israel."

Chapter 3 (verses 15–17 here) [15] "Now hear, my children, words of truth, to do righteousness and every law of the Most High, and not to be led astray by the spirit of hatred, because it is evil in all human actions. [16] Whatever the one who hates does, he finds disgusting. If someone keeps the law of the Lord, he does not praise it; if someone fears the Lord and wants what is just, he does not love him; [17] he blames the truth, envies the one who succeeds, welcomes slander, loves arrogance; for hatred has blinded his soul, as I too saw it in the case of Joseph."

Chapter 4 (verses 18–24 here) [18] "So guard yourselves, my children, against hatred, because it commits lawlessness against the Lord himself. [19] It refuses to hear the words of his commandments about love of neighbor, and it sins against God. [20] If a brother stumbles, it immediately wants to tell everyone and is eager to have him judged for it and punished until he dies. [21] If he is a slave, it sets him against his master, and in every affliction it attacks him, to see if it can put him to death. [22] Hatred works with envy, and it is always sick when it hears of or sees the progress of those who are doing well. [23] Just as love wants to give life even to the dead, and would call back those under a sentence of death, so hatred wants to kill the living, and does not want those who have sinned in some small thing to live. [24] The spirit of hatred, through faintheartedness, works with Satan in everything toward the death of human beings; the spirit of love, through patience, works with the law of God toward the salvation of human beings."

Chapter 5 (verses 25–35 here) [25] "Hatred is evil, for it continually dwells with lying, speaking against the truth. It makes small things large, treats darkness as light, calls sweet things bitter, and teaches slander, war, insult, and every abundance of evil, and it fills the heart with devilish poison. [26] I tell you these things from experience, my children, so that you will flee hatred and cling to the love of the Lord. [27] Righteousness drives out hatred, and humility destroys hatred. The righteous and humble person is ashamed to do what is unjust, not because someone else condemns him but because his own heart does, for the Lord looks into his thoughts. [28] He does not speak against a man, since the fear of the Most High overcomes hatred. [29] For, afraid of offending the Lord, he does not want to wrong a person at all, not even in his thoughts. [30] I learned these things last, after I repented over Joseph. [31] True repentance before God removes disobedience, drives out darkness, lights up the eyes, gives knowledge to the soul, and guides the mind toward salvation, [32] and what he did not learn from human beings, he knows through repentance. [33] God brought a disease of the liver on me, and if it had not been for the prayers of Jacob my father, my spirit would very nearly have left me. [34] For a person is punished through the very things by which he breaks the law. [35] Since my liver had pressed mercilessly against Joseph, I suffered mercilessly in my liver, and was under judgment for eleven months, as long as I had held a grudge against Joseph, until he was sold."

Chapter 6 (verses 36–42 here) [36] "Now, my children, each of you love your brother, and remove hatred from your hearts, loving one another in deed, in word, and in the thinking of the soul. [37] In front of our father I spoke peaceably to Joseph, but when I left, the spirit of hatred darkened my mind and troubled my soul to kill him. [38] So love one another from the heart; and if someone sins against you, tell him so in peace, driving out the poison of hatred, and keep no deceit in your soul. If he confesses and repents, forgive him; [39] and if he denies it, do not argue with him, in case he swears and you sin twice. [40] Do not let an outsider hear your secret in a quarrel, so that he does not come to hate you and become your enemy and commit a great sin against you; for often he speaks deceitfully, or schemes against you for evil, having taken poison from you. [41] If he denies it, but is ashamed when he is reproved, let it rest; do not drag him out. The one who denies it is repenting, so that he will not offend you again; he will even honor you, fear you, and be at peace with you. [42] But if he is shameless and persists in evil, even so forgive him from your heart, and give vengeance to God."

Chapter 7 (verses 43–49 here) [43] "If anyone prospers more than you, do not be sad; rather pray for him, that he may prosper completely.

Perhaps it is good for you this way. [44] If he is lifted up still more, do not envy him, remembering that all flesh will die. Offer a hymn to the Lord, who provides good and helpful things to all people. [45] Examine the Lord's judgments, and so you will let it go, and your mind will be quiet. [46] If someone does get rich from evil, like Esau, my father's brother, do not be jealous; wait for the Lord's limit. [47] For either he takes those things away from him in misfortune, or he forgives the repentant, or he keeps punishment forever for the unrepentant. [48] The poor person who has plenty, giving thanks to the Lord in all things, is rich in every way, because he does not have the evil distraction of people. [49] So remove hatred from your souls, and love one another with uprightness of heart."

Chapter 8 (verses 50–54 here) [50] "Tell these things also to your children, so that they will honor Judah and Levi, for from them the Lord will raise up a savior for Israel. [51] I know that in the end your children will fall away from them, and will be before the Lord in all wickedness, ill-treatment, and corruption." [52] After resting a little, he said to them again, "My children, obey your father, and bury me near my fathers." [53] He stretched out his feet and fell asleep in peace. [54] Five years later they carried him up and laid him in Hebron with his fathers.

Notes

- a (9:1) "Gad" (Hebrew Gad) means "good fortune" (Gen 30:11).
- b (9:3) "Two stadia." A stadion was about 607 feet (185 m), so two stadia is about 1,200 feet, or about 0.23 mile (370 m).

Chapter 10

The Testament of Asher, on the Two Faces of Vice and Virtue

Chapter 1 (verses 1–9 here) [1] A copy of the testament of Asher,[a] what he said to his sons in the hundred and twentieth year of his life. [2] While he was still in good health, he said to them, "Listen, children of Asher, to your father, and I will show you everything that is right before God. [3] God has given the sons of men two ways, two inclinations, two kinds of action, two places, and two ends. [4] So all things are two, one set against the other. [5] There are two ways, of good and of evil; and in our chests are the two inclinations that distinguish between them. [6] If the soul wants to go the good way, every action of it is in righteousness, and if it sins, it repents at once. [7] For by thinking just thoughts and throwing away wickedness, it immediately overturns evil and uproots sin. [8] But if the inclination leans toward evil, every action of it is in wickedness; it pushes good away and takes evil in; it is ruled by Beliar, and even if it does something good, it twists it into wickedness. [9] When it begins as if doing good, the end of its action drives it to do evil, because the treasury of the devil is full of the poison of an evil spirit."

Chapter 2 (verses 10–19 here) [10] "There is a soul, he says, that speaks the good in place of the evil, and yet leads the end of the matter into badness. [11] There is a person who has no pity on someone who serves him in evil; this too is two-faced, but the whole is evil. [12] There is a person who loves the one who does evil; he too is in wickedness, since he chooses even to die in evil for him. It is clear that this too is two-faced, but the whole is a bad action. [13] Even where there is love, it is wickedness if it hides the evil; it is good in name, as it were, but the end of the action comes to evil. [14] Another steals, wrongs, robs, and is greedy, and yet has mercy on the poor; this too is two-faced, but the whole is evil. [15] Someone who cheats his neighbor angers God, perjures himself against the Most High, and yet has mercy on the poor; he rejects and provokes the Lord who gave the commandment of the law, and gives rest to the needy; [16] he stains the soul and makes the body shine; he kills many and shows mercy to few. This too is two-faced. [17] Another commits adultery and sexual immorality, and stays away from rich foods; when he fasts, he does evil; with power and wealth he sweeps many away, and out of his swollen wickedness he keeps commandments. This too is two-faced, but the whole is evil. [18] People like this are like swine and hares, because they are half clean, but in truth they are unclean. [19] For so God has said, on the tablets of heaven."

Chapter 3 (verses 20–21 here) [20] "So you, my children, do not be two-faced like them, partly good and partly bad; hold only to goodness, because God rests in it, and people long for it; [21] run away from wickedness, destroying the devil by your good actions. For the two-faced do not serve God but their own desires, in order to please Beliar and people like themselves."

Chapter 4 (verses 22–26 here) [22] "Good people who are single-faced, even if they are thought by the two-faced to sin, are righteous before God. [23] Many who kill the wicked do two works, an evil through a good, but the whole is good, because by uprooting the evil he has destroyed it. [24] There is someone who hates the merciful person and wrongs the adulterer and the robber; this too looks two-faced, but the whole work is good, because he imitates the Lord by not accepting what seems good together with real evil. [25] Another does not want to see a good day with the wasteful, so that he does not defile his mouth and pollute his soul. This too looks two-faced, but the whole is good, [26] because such people are like roe deer and deer: in a wild way of life they seem unclean, but they are entirely clean, because they walk in zeal for God, staying away from what God also hates and forbids by his commands, keeping evil away from the good."

Chapter 5 (verses 27–30 here) [27] "See, then, children, how there are two in everything, one set against the other, and one hidden by the other. [28] Death follows life, dishonor follows glory, night follows day, and darkness follows light; but all things are under the day, and just things under life; therefore eternal life also awaits death. [29] It is not possible to call truth a lie, or the just unjust; for all truth is under the light, as all things are under God. [30] I have tested all this in my life, and I have not strayed from the truth of the Lord, and I have sought out the commands of the Most High, walking with all my strength single-facedly toward the good."

Chapter 6 (verses 31–36 here) [31] "So you too, children, pay attention to the commands of the Lord, following the truth single-facedly, [32] for the two-faced are punished twice. Hate the spirits of error that fight against a person. [33] Keep the law of the Lord, and do not treat evil as good; look instead to what is truly good, and keep it in all the Lord's commands, turning to him and finding rest in him, [34] because the ends of people show their righteousness, and make known the angels of the Lord and of Satan. [35] If the soul leaves in turmoil, it is tormented by the evil spirit it served in desires and evil deeds; [36] but if it leaves quietly, in joy, it has known the angel of peace, and he will comfort it in life."

Chapter 7 (verses 37–43 here) [37] "Do not be, children, like Sodom, which did not recognize the angels of the Lord and was destroyed forever. [38] I know that you will sin and be handed over into the hands of your enemies; your land will be laid waste, and you will be scattered to the four corners of the earth, and in the dispersion you will be despised like worthless water, [39] until the Most High visits the earth; coming himself as a man, eating and drinking with people, and quietly crushing the head of the dragon through water. He will save Israel and all the nations, God disguised as a man. [40] So tell your children these things, so that they will not disobey him. [41] For I read on the tablets of heaven that you will certainly disobey him and certainly act ungodly toward him, not paying attention to the law of God but to the commands of people. [42] For this reason you will be scattered, like Gad and Dan my brothers, who will not know their land, tribe, or language. [43] But the Lord will gather you in faith, through the hope of his compassion, for the sake of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob."

Chapter 8 (verses 44–45 here) [44] After telling them these things, he commanded them, saying, "Bury me in Hebron." And he died, falling asleep in a good sleep; [45] and after this his sons did as he had commanded them, and carried him up and buried him with his fathers.

Notes

- a (10:1) "Asher" (Hebrew Asher) means "happy" or "fortunate" (Gen 30:13).

Chapter 11

The Testament of Joseph, on Self-Control

Chapter 1 (verses 1–7 here) [1] A copy of the testament of Joseph.[a] When he was about to die, he called his sons and his brothers and said to them, [2] "My children and brothers, listen to Joseph, beloved of Israel; give ear, sons, to your father. [3] In my life I have seen envy and death, and I did not stray from the truth of the Lord. [4] These brothers of mine hated me, and the Lord loved me; they wanted to kill me, and the God of my fathers kept me safe; they lowered me into a pit, and the Most High brought me up; [5] I was sold as a slave, and the Lord freed me; I was taken into captivity, and his strong hand helped me; I was held in hunger, and the Lord himself fed me; [6] I was alone, and God comforted me; I was sick, and the Most High visited me; I was in prison, and the Savior showed me favor; I was in chains, and he released me; [7] I was under slander, and he pleaded my case; I was under the bitter words of the Egyptians, and he rescued me; I was among envies and deceits, and he lifted me up."

Chapter 2 (verses 8–14 here) [8] "So Photimar, the chief cook of Pharaoh, entrusted his house to me. [9] I struggled against a shameless woman who pressed me to break the law with her; but the God of Israel my father kept me from a blazing flame. [10] I was imprisoned, beaten, and mocked; and the Lord gave me pity in the eyes of the prison keeper. [11] For he will never abandon those who fear him, not in darkness, nor in chains, nor in afflictions, nor in hardships. [12] God is not ashamed like a human being, he does not shrink back like a son of man, he does not grow weak or give up like one born of the earth; [13] he stands by in every place, and he comforts in different ways, withdrawing for a short time in order to test the purpose of the soul. [14] He showed me to be approved in ten trials, and in all of them I was patient; for patience is a great medicine, and endurance gives many good things."

Chapter 3 (verses 15–24 here) [15] "How often did the Egyptian woman threaten me with death! How often, after handing me over to punishment, did she call me back and threaten me when I would not go to bed with her! And she said to me, [16] 'You will rule over me and over everything I have, if you give yourself to me, and you will be our master.' [17] So I remembered the words of the fathers of my father Jacob, and going into my room, I prayed to the Lord, [18] and I fasted during those seven years, and I looked to the Egyptian woman as if I were living in luxury; for those who fast for God gain a gracious face. [19] If she gave me wine, I did not drink; and going without food for three days at a time, I took my meal and gave it to the poor and the sick. [20] I rose early to pray to the Lord, and I wept over Memphia the Egyptian, because she pestered me so constantly; at night she would come to me on the pretext of a visit. [21] At first, because she had no male child, she pretended to take me as her son. I prayed to the Lord, and she bore a male child. [22] For some time she embraced me as a son, and I did not realize; but in the end she was drawing me into sexual immorality. [23] When I understood, I was grieved to the point of death. When she left, I came to myself, and I mourned over her for many days, because I knew her deceit and her error. [24] I spoke to her the words of the Most High, in case she would turn away from her wicked desire."

Chapter 4 (verses 25–32 here) [25] "How often did she flatter me with words, as if I were a holy man, deceitfully praising my self-control in front of her husband, but wanting to trip me alone! [26] She praised me openly as self-controlled, and secretly said to me, 'Do not be afraid of my husband; he is convinced about your self-control, and even if someone tells him about us, he will not believe it.' [27] Through all this I lay on the ground in sackcloth and begged God that the Lord would rescue me from the Egyptian woman. [28] When she accomplished nothing, she came to me again on the pretext of instruction, to learn the word of the Lord. [29] She said to me, 'If you want me to leave my idols, be persuaded by me; and I will persuade the Egyptian to give up his idols, so that we may walk in the law of your Lord.' [30] I said to her, 'The Lord does not say that those who revere him are in uncleanness, and he takes no pleasure in adulterers.' [31] She fell silent, longing to carry out her desire. [32] I added fasting and prayer, so that the Lord would rescue me from her."

Chapter 5 (verses 33–36 here) [33] "At another time she said to me, 'If you do not want to commit adultery, I will kill the Egyptian, and then I will take you lawfully as my husband.' [34] When I heard this, I tore my robe and said, 'Woman, respect the Lord and do not do this wicked deed, or you will be destroyed; I will even tell everyone about your plan of ungodliness.' [35] Frightened, she begged me not to tell anyone of her wickedness. [36] And she went away, trying to warm me with gifts, and sending me every pleasure of the sons of men."

Chapter 6 (verses 37–45 here) [37] "She sent me food mixed with sorcery. [38] When the eunuch who brought it came, I looked up and saw a fearsome man handing me a sword along with the dish. I understood that her scheme was meant to lead my soul astray. [39] When he left,

I wept, and tasted neither that food nor any of her dainties. [40] After a day she came to me, recognized the food, and said to me, 'Why is it that you did not eat any of the food?' [41] I said to her, 'Because you filled it with death. How could you say that you do not approach idols, but only the Lord? [42] Now know that the God of my father revealed your wickedness to me through an angel, and I kept the food to show you your guilt, in case you would see it and repent. [43] So that you may learn that the wickedness of the ungodly does not overpower those who worship God in self-control, I took it in front of her and ate, saying, "The God of my fathers and the angel of Abraham will be with me."' [44] She fell on her face at my feet and wept. I raised her up and warned her, [45] and she promised not to do this ungodly act again."

Chapter 7 (verses 46–53 here) [46] "But since her heart was set on me for indulgence, she kept falling at my feet, groaning. [47] When the Egyptian husband saw her, he said to her, 'Why has your face fallen?' She said, 'I have a pain in my heart, and the groans of my spirit are holding me.' And he tended her though she was not ill. [48] Then she jumped at me while her husband was still outside, and said to me, 'I will hang myself, or throw myself into a well or off a cliff, unless you are persuaded by me.' [49] Understanding that the spirit of Beliar was troubling her, I prayed to the Lord and said to her, [50] 'Why are you troubled and in an uproar, blinded by your sins? Remember that if you kill yourself, Sethon, your husband's concubine and your rival, will beat your children and wipe out your memory from the earth.' [51] She said to me, 'See, then, you love me. It is enough for me that you care about my life and my children's. I expect to enjoy my desire.' [52] She did not know that I spoke this way because of my God, and not because of her. [53] For if someone falls under the passion of an evil desire and is enslaved to it, as she was, even if he hears something good, he takes it as it applies to the passion that has beaten him, toward evil desire."

Chapter 8 (verses 54–58 here) [54] "I tell you, children, it was about noon[b] when she left me; and I knelt before the Lord the whole day and into the whole night, and toward dawn I rose in tears, asking for rescue from the Egyptian woman. [55] In the end she took hold of my clothes and dragged me by force to lie with her. [56] When I saw that in her frenzy she held my clothes by force, I fled naked. [57] She slandered me to her husband; and the Egyptian put me in prison in his house, and the next day he flogged me and sent me to the prison in his house. [58] While I was in chains, the Egyptian woman became ill from grief, and listened to me singing to the Lord in the house of darkness, rejoicing in a glad voice and glorifying my God, only because I had a reason to be free of the Egyptian woman."

Chapter 9 (verses 59–63 here) [59] "She often sent to me, saying, 'Agree to fulfill my desire, and I will free you from your chains and take you out of the darkness.' [60] I never bent toward her even in thought. For God loves the one who fasts in self-control in a pit of darkness more than the one who lives in luxury in the inner rooms with indulgence. [61] The one who lives in self-control also wants glory, and if the Most High knows it is good for him, he provides this too, as he did for me. [62] How often, though she was ill, did she come down to me at an untimely hour and hear my voice praying! When I understood her groans, I kept silent. [63] When I was in her house, she would uncover her arms, chest, and legs, so that I would fall for her; for she was very beautiful, especially when dressed up to trick me. But the Lord kept me from her attempts."

Chapter 10 (verses 64–69 here) [64] "See, then, my children, how much patience accomplishes, and prayer with fasting. [65] You too, if you pursue self-control and purity with patience and humility of heart, the Lord will live in you, because he loves self-control. [66] Where the Most High lives, even if someone falls into envy, slavery, or slander, the Lord who lives in him, because of his self-control, not only rescues him from evil, but also lifts him up and glorifies him, as he did me. [67] Every person is held in some way, either in deed, in word, or in thought. [68] My brothers know how my father loved me; and I was not lifted up in my heart. Although I was a child, I had the fear of God in my mind, for I knew that everything will pass away, [69] and I measured myself and honored my brothers. Out of respect for them I kept silent while being sold, and did not tell the Ishmaelites my family, that I am the son of Jacob, a great and powerful man."

Chapter 11 (verses 70–77 here) [70] "You too, then, have the fear of God in your actions and honor your brothers. Everyone who keeps the law of the Lord will be loved by him. [71] When I came to the Indocolpites with the Ishmaelites, they asked me; and I said that I was their slave, born in their house, so that I would not shame my brothers. [72] The eldest of them said to me, 'You are not a slave, for your face shows what you are'; and he threatened me with death. But I kept saying that I was their slave. [73] When we came to Egypt, they fought over me, over who would give gold to get me. [74] So everyone decided that I would stay in Egypt with a trader of theirs until they came back bringing merchandise. [75] The Lord gave me favor in the eyes of the trader, and he entrusted his house to me. [76] The Lord blessed him by my hand, and made him rich in silver and gold; [77] and I was with him three months and five days."

Chapter 12 (verses 78–80 here) [78] "At that time Memphia, the wife of Potiphar,[c] came by with great splendor, and set her eyes on me, because the eunuchs had told her about me. [79] She told her husband about the trader, that he had grown rich through a young Hebrew; and she said, 'They say they stole him by theft from the land of Canaan. [80] Now hold a trial with him, and take the young man for your steward; and the God of the Hebrews will bless you, because heavenly grace is on him.'"

Chapter 13 (verses 81–89 here) [81] "Potiphar, persuaded by her words, ordered the trader to be brought and said to him, 'What is this I hear, that you are stealing people from the land of the Hebrews and selling them as slaves?' [82] The trader fell on his face and begged, saying, 'I beg you, my lord, I do not know what you are saying.' [83] He said, 'Then where did you get the Hebrew boy?' He answered, 'The Ishmaelites left him with me until they come back.' [84] He did not believe him, but ordered him to be beaten naked. When he held to his story, Potiphar said, 'Bring the young man.' [85] I was brought in and bowed to the chief eunuch; for he was third in rank under Pharaoh, a ruler over all the eunuchs, with a wife, children, and concubines. [86] He separated me from the trader and said to me, 'Are you a slave or free?' I said, 'A slave.' [87] He said to me, 'Whose slave?' I said, 'The Ishmaelites'.' [88]

Again he said to me, ‘How did you become their slave?’ I said that they had bought me in Canaan. [89] He did not believe it, saying, ‘You are lying’; and he ordered me beaten naked.”

Chapter 14 (verses 90–95 here) [90] “Memphia saw through a window that I was being beaten, and sent word to her husband, saying, ‘Your judgment is unjust, because you punish a free person who was stolen, as if he had done wrong.’ [91] When I did not change my story under the beating, he ordered me imprisoned, until, he said, the boy’s owners came. [92] His wife said to him, ‘Why do you hold the captive, a boy of noble birth, who ought rather to be free and to serve you?’ [93] She wanted to see me in longing for sin; and in all this I did not realize it. [94] He said to Memphia, ‘Among the Egyptians it is not the custom to take away another’s property before there is proof.’ [95] He said this about the trader, and about me, that I should be locked up.”

Chapter 15 (verses 96–102 here) [96] “After twenty-four days the Ishmaelites came; and having heard that Jacob my father was mourning over me, they said to me, [97] ‘Why did you say you were a slave? We have found that you are the son of a great man in Canaan, and your father is mourning for you in a pit.’ [98] I wanted to weep again, but held myself back so that I would not shame my brothers. And I said, ‘I do not know; I am a slave.’ [99] Then they planned to sell me, so that I would not be found in their hands. [100] They were afraid of Jacob, that he would take revenge on them with danger; for it was said that he is great with the Lord and with people. [101] Then the trader said to them, ‘Free me from the judgment of Potiphar.’ [102] They came and asked me for it, saying, ‘He was bought by us with silver, and he let us go.’”

Chapter 16 (verses 103–108 here) [103] “Memphia told her husband to buy me, saying, ‘I hear they are selling him.’ [104] He sent a eunuch to the Ishmaelites, asking to buy me; [105] and when they did not want to deal with him, he withdrew. The eunuch, having tried them, told his mistress that they were asking a high price for the boy. [106] She sent another eunuch, saying, ‘Even if they ask for two and a half pounds[d] of gold, take care not to spare the gold; just buy the boy and bring him.’ [107] She gave them eighty gold pieces for me, and told the Egyptian woman's husband that a hundred had been given for me. [108] When I saw this, I kept silent, so that the eunuch would not be questioned."

Chapter 17 (verses 109–116 here) [109] "See, children, how much I endured so as not to shame my brothers. [110] You too, love one another, and in patience cover over one another's faults. [111] For God is pleased with harmony among brothers, and with a choice of heart that is content with love. [112] When my brothers came into Egypt and learned that I had returned their silver to them, and I did not reproach them but comforted them, [113] and after Jacob's death I loved them even more, and I did everything he commanded and more, and they were amazed. [114] I did not let them be distressed over even a small thing; whatever was in my hand, I gave to them. [115] Their sons were my sons, and my sons were like their servants; their soul was my soul, every pain of theirs my pain, and every sickness of theirs my sickness; my land was theirs, my counsel theirs. [116] I did not exalt myself over them in boasting because of my worldly glory, but was among them as one of the least."
Chapter 18 (verses 117–120 here) [117] "So if you too walk in the commands of the Lord, my children, he will lift you up here, and will bless you with good things forever. [118] If anyone wants to do you evil, do good and pray for him; and you will be rescued from every evil through the Lord. [119] See that because of my patience I even took a daughter of my lords as a wife, and 7,500 pounds of gold[e] were given to me with her; for the Lord made them serve me. [120] He gave me beauty, like a flower above the beautiful ones of Israel; and he kept me to old age in strength and beauty, for I was like Jacob in everything."
Chapter 19 (verses 121–127 here) [121] "Listen, my children, to the dreams I saw. [122] Twelve deer were grazing, and nine of them were divided and scattered over the earth; likewise the three. [123] I saw that from Judah was born a virgin, wearing a linen robe; and from her came a spotless lamb, and on his left something like a lion; and all the wild animals rushed against him, and the lamb overcame them and destroyed them, to be trampled. [124] The angels rejoiced over him, and the people, and all the earth. [125] These things will happen in their time, in the last days. [126] So you, my children, keep the commands of the Lord, and honor Judah and Levi; for from them the Lamb of God will rise for you, saving all the nations and Israel by grace. [127] For his kingdom is an everlasting kingdom that will not be shaken; but my kingdom among you will come to an end, like a fruit-watchman's hut, which is not seen after summer."

Chapter 20 (verses 128–133 here) [128] "I know that after my death the Egyptians will oppress you; but God will take vengeance for you and bring you into the promise of your fathers. [129] But you must carry my bones up with you, for when my bones are taken up, the Lord will be with you in light, and Beliar will be in darkness with the Egyptians. [130] Take your mother Zilpah too, and lay her near Bilhah, by the Hippodrome, close to Rachel." [131] After saying this, he stretched out his feet and fell asleep with the sleep of eternity. [132] All Israel mourned him, and all of Egypt with a great mourning. [133] For he had shared the suffering of the Egyptians as if they were his own limbs, and had done them good, standing with them in every work, plan, and matter.

Notes

- a (11:1) "Joseph" (Hebrew Yosef) means "may he add," from Gen 30:24, "May Yahweh add to me another son."
- b (11:54) The Greek says "about the sixth hour," counted from sunrise, which is about noon.
- c (11:78) "Potiphar" (Hebrew Potifar) is from an Egyptian name meaning "the one whom Ra gave." The Greek spells it "Petephri" or "Petephris."
- d (11:106) "Two minas." A mina was one-sixtieth of a talent, about 1.25 pounds (0.57 kg), so two minas is about 2.5 pounds (1.1 kg) of gold.
- e (11:119) "A hundred talents." A talent was about 75 pounds (34 kg), so a hundred talents is about 7,500 pounds (3,400 kg).

Chapter 12

The Testament of Benjamin, on the Good Mind

Chapter 1 (verses 1–6 here) [1] A copy of the words of Benjamin,[a] which he laid down for his sons, having lived a hundred and twenty years. [2] He kissed them and said, "As Isaac was born to Abraham in his hundredth year, so I was to Jacob. [3] Since Rachel died giving birth to me, I had no milk, and so I was nursed by her maid Bilhah. [4] For after bearing Joseph Rachel was barren for twelve years; she prayed to the Lord with fasting for twelve days; and then she conceived and bore me. [5] Our father loved Rachel very much, and prayed to see two sons from her. [6] For this reason I was called 'son of days,' which is Benjamin."

Chapter 2 (verses 7–11 here) [7] "When I came into Egypt and my brother Joseph recognized me, he said to me, 'What did you tell my father when they sold me?' [8] I told him they had smeared your tunic with blood and sent it, saying, 'See whether this is your son's tunic.' [9] He said to me, 'Yes, brother; for when the Ishmaelites took me, one of them stripped off my tunic, gave me a loincloth, flogged me, and told me to run. [10] As he went off to hide my cloak, a lion met him and killed him. [11] So his companions were frightened and sold me on to others.'"

Chapter 3 (verses 12–19 here) [12] "So you too, my children, love the Lord, the God of heaven, and keep his commands, imitating the good and holy man Joseph. [13] Let your mind be set on the good, as you know I have been. Whoever has a good mind sees everything rightly. [14] Fear the Lord and love your neighbor; and if the spirits of Beliar demand you for every kind of affliction, no wickedness of affliction will overpower you, just as it did not overpower my brother Joseph. [15] How many people wanted to kill him, and God protected him! For the one who fears God and loves his neighbor cannot be struck by the airy spirit of Beliar, being covered by the fear of God; [16] and he cannot be overpowered by the plots of people or of wild animals, being helped by the Lord's love, which he has for his neighbor. [17] I begged our father Jacob to pray for our brothers, that the Lord would not count against them whatever evil they had thought against him. [18] Jacob cried out, 'O my child Joseph, you have overcome the heart of Jacob your father.' He embraced him, and for two hours kissed him, saying, [19] 'The prophecy of heaven about the Lamb of God and Savior of the world will be fulfilled in you: that a spotless one will be handed over for the lawless, and a sinless one will die for the ungodly, in the blood of a covenant, for the salvation of the nations and of Israel, and he will destroy Beliar and those who serve him.'"

Chapter 4 (verses 20–24 here) [20] "Have you seen, children, the end of the good man? Imitate his compassion with a good mind, so that you too may wear crowns of glory. [21] The good man does not have a dark eye; for he has mercy on all, even if they are sinners, [22] even if they plot evil against him. So the one who does good overcomes evil, covered by the good; and he loves the righteous as his own soul. [23] If someone is honored, he is not envious; if someone is rich, he is not jealous; if someone is brave, he praises him; he trusts and sings the praise of the self-controlled; he has mercy on the poor; he sympathizes with the weak; he sings praise to God; [24] he defends the one who has the fear of God; he works with the one who loves God; the one who rejects the Most High he warns and turns back, and the one who has the grace of a good spirit he loves as his own soul."

Chapter 5 (verses 25–29 here) [25] "If you have a good mind, children, even evil people will be at peace with you, the wasteful will respect you and turn to good, and the greedy will not only give up their passion but will even give what they got by greed to the afflicted. [26] If you keep doing good, even the unclean spirits will flee from you, and the wild animals themselves will flee from you in fear. [27] For where there is the fear of good works in the mind, darkness runs away from it. [28] If someone insults a holy man, he repents; for the holy man has mercy on the abuser, and is silent. [29] And if someone betrays a righteous soul, and the righteous one prays and is humbled for a little while, he afterward appears much brighter, as my brother Joseph did."

Chapter 6 (verses 30–36 here) [30] "The plan of the good man is not in the hand of the spirit of error, Beliar; for the angel of peace guides his soul. [31] He does not look with passion at perishable things, or gather wealth for the love of pleasure. [32] He does not delight in pleasure, does not hurt his neighbor, is not stuffed with food, and is not led astray by raising his eyes; for the Lord is his portion. [33] The good mind does not accept the glory and dishonor of human beings, and knows no deceit or lie, no fighting or abuse. For the Lord lives in it, lights up its soul, and it rejoices toward everyone at all times. [34] The good mind does not have two tongues, of blessing and cursing, of insult and honor, of sadness and joy, of quiet and disturbance, of hypocrisy and truth, of poverty and wealth; it has one single pure and sincere attitude toward everyone. [35] It has no double sight or hearing; for in everything it does, says, or sees, it knows that the Lord is watching over its soul, [36] and cleansing its mind, so that it will not be condemned by God or people. Every work of Beliar is double, and has no simplicity."

Chapter 7 (verses 37–41 here) [37] "So, my children, flee the wickedness of Beliar, because he gives a sword to those who obey him. [38] The sword is the mother of seven evils. First the mind conceives through Beliar; the first is envy; the second, destruction; the third, affliction; the fourth, captivity; the fifth, want; the sixth, disorder; the seventh, desolation. [39] For this reason Cain was also handed over by God to seven punishments; for every hundred years the Lord brought one blow on him. [40] He suffered for two hundred years, and in the nine hundredth year he was made desolate, at the flood, because of Abel his righteous brother. In his seven hundred years Cain was judged, and Lamech in seventy times seven; [41] for forever, those who become like Cain in envy, to the point of hating their brothers, will be judged by the same punishment."

Chapter 8 (verses 42–44 here) [42] "So you too, my children, run away from wickedness, envy, and hatred of brothers, and cling to goodness and love. [43] The one who has a pure mind in love does not look at a woman for sexual immorality; for he has no pollution in his heart, because the Spirit of God rests in him. [44] Just as the sun is not polluted by shining on dung and mud, but instead dries both and drives away the stench, so the pure mind, held among the pollutions of the earth, rather builds up, and is not itself polluted."

Chapter 9 (verses 45–49 here) [45] "I suspect that there will be actions among you that are not good, from the words of Enoch the righteous. You will commit the sexual immorality of Sodom, and be destroyed, all but a few, and renew wantonness with women; and the kingdom of the Lord will not be among you, for he will take it away at once. [46] Yet in your portion the temple of God will be built, and it will be glorious among you. For he will take it, and the twelve tribes will be gathered there, and all the nations, until the Most High sends his salvation, in the visitation of an only-begotten one. [47] He will go into the first temple, and there the Lord will be insulted and despised, and lifted up on a tree. [48] The curtain of the temple will be torn, and the Spirit of God will pass on to the nations, like fire poured out. [49] Having come up out of Hades, he will go up from earth to heaven. I know how humble he will be on earth, and how glorious in heaven."

Chapter 10 (verses 50–60 here) [50] "When Joseph was in Egypt, I longed to see his appearance and the shape of his face; and through the prayers of Jacob my father I saw him, awake, in the daytime, just as his whole appearance was. [51] Know, then, my children, that I am dying. [52] So practice truth and righteousness, each with his neighbor, and justice for confirmation, and keep the law of the Lord and his commands; [53] for these things I teach you in place of every inheritance. So give them to your children, too, as an everlasting possession. For Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob did this. [54] All these things they left us as an inheritance, saying, 'Keep the commands of God, until the Lord reveals his salvation to all the nations.' [55] Then you will see Enoch, Noah, Shem, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob rising on the right hand, in joy. [56] Then we too will rise, each at our scepter, worshiping the King of heaven, who appeared on earth in the form of a man of humility. All who believed in him on earth will rejoice with him. [57] Then everyone will rise, some to glory and some to dishonor. The Lord will judge Israel first for its wrong against him, because they did not believe in God who came in flesh as deliverer. [58] Then he will judge all the nations, as many as did not believe in him when he appeared on earth; [59] and he will convict Israel among the chosen of the nations, as he convicted Esau among the Midianites, who deceived their brothers into sexual immorality and idolatry; they were estranged from God, becoming not children in the portion of those who fear the Lord. [60] But if you walk in holiness in the sight of the Lord, you will again live in hope in me; and all Israel will be gathered to the Lord."

Chapter 11 (verses 61–65 here) [61] "No longer will I be called a ravening wolf because of your plundering, but a worker of the Lord, handing out food to those who do good. [62] In later times there will rise from my seed one beloved of the Lord, hearing his voice on earth, enlightening all the nations with new knowledge, a light of knowledge stepping into Israel for salvation; he will snatch from it like a wolf and give to the assembly of the nations. [63] Until the end of the ages he will be in the assemblies of the nations and among their rulers, like a musical tune in the mouth of all; [64] and he will be written about in holy books, both his work and his word; and he will be God's chosen one forever; [65] and because of him Jacob my father instructed me, saying, 'He will fill up what is lacking in your tribe.'"

Chapter 12 (verses 66–69 here) [66] When he had finished his words, he said, "I command you, my children, to carry my bones up from Egypt and bury me in Hebron, near my fathers." [67] Benjamin died at the age of a hundred and twenty-five, in a good old age; and they placed him in a coffin. [68] In the ninety-first year after the Exodus of the sons of Israel from Egypt, they and their brothers carried up the bones of their fathers secretly, to the place called Canaan; and they buried them in Hebron, at the feet of their fathers. [69] Then they returned from the land of Canaan and lived in Egypt until the day of their departure from the land of Egypt.

Notes

- a (12:1) "Benjamin" (Hebrew Binyamin) is usually explained as "son of the right hand" or "son of the south" (Gen 35:18). This book explains it as "son of days" (1.6).

Psalms of Solomon

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

A psalm of Solomon.

1 I cried out to the Lord in my distress,
to God, when sinners attacked.
2 All at once the sound of war was in my ears,
and I said, "He will hear me, since I am filled with righteousness."
3 I assumed in my own mind that I was full of righteousness, because I was doing well and had many children.
4 Their wealth spread over the whole earth,
and their fame reached the ends of the earth.
5 They rose as high as the stars;
they claimed, "They can never fall."
6 But they grew insolent in their good fortune and could not bear it, and their sins were done in secret, and I did not know them.
7 Their lawless deeds went beyond those of the nations before them;
they completely desecrated what belongs to the Lord.
8 They grew proud over everything, and their sins were many.[b]

Notes

- a (1:title) Greek Psalmos tō Salomōn. The title is attached to nearly every psalm in the collection. Psalm 1 has no title in the oldest Greek manuscripts and may have been added later; the ascription to Solomon is traditional and is not meant literally. See the introduction above.
- b (1:8) The verse numbering of this book follows Swete's Greek text (which is that of Gebhardt, 1895, and of Ryle and James, 1891). Modern translations that follow Rahlfs's edition (1935) number the verses differently in several psalms, so references may differ by a few verses.

Chapter 2

A psalm of Solomon, about Jerusalem.

1 When the sinner grew arrogant, he knocked down fortified walls with a battering ram,
and you did not stop him.
2 Foreign nations went up to your altar;
they trampled it arrogantly, with their sandals on,
3 because the sons of Jerusalem had made the Lord's sacred things unclean;
they had desecrated the offerings made to God by their lawless acts.
4 For this reason he said, "Throw them far away from me."
The beauty of his glory was of no benefit to them.[b]
5 It was despised before God;
it was utterly dishonored.
6 Sons and daughters went into a wretched captivity;
their necks were sealed, and they were marked out among the nations.
7 He treated them according to their sins,
because he abandoned them into the hands of the powerful.
8 For he turned his face away from pitying them,
young and old and their children alike.
9 For they had done evil all together,
so as not to listen.
10 The heaven was angry,
and the earth detested them, 11 because no one on earth had ever done
what they did.
12 So the earth will recognize all your judgments, God, as just.
13 They set the sons of Jerusalem up as a laughingstock in place of its prostitutes;[c]
everyone who passed by went in under the sun's eye.
14 They made fun of their lawless acts, as they themselves used to do;
they put their wrongdoing on public display in the face of the sun.

15 Because these women defiled themselves in a confusion of mixed unions, my belly and my inward parts ache over this.
16 I will declare you righteous, God, with an upright heart,
for your righteousness lies in your judgments, God.
17 For you paid sinners back according to their deeds,
and according to their sins, which were very wicked.
18 You uncovered their sins so that your judgment would be seen;
19 you wiped out their memory from the earth.
God is a just judge, and no one's appearance impresses him.[d]
20 For the nations reproached Jerusalem by trampling her down;
her beauty was dragged down from the throne of glory.
21 She put on sackcloth in place of her fine robe,
a rope around her head in place of a crown.
22 She was stripped of the turban of glory
which God had put on her;
23 in dishonor her beauty was thrown to the ground.
24 And I looked, and pleaded before the face of the Lord, and said:
"Enough, Lord, of your hand weighing heavily on Israel,
by bringing the nations against it.
25 For they have mocked and have shown no mercy,
in anger and rage and bitter fury, 26 and they will make an end of us,
unless you, Lord, rebuke them in your anger.
27 For they have not acted out of zeal,
but out of the desire of their soul,
28 to pour out their anger on us in plunder.
29 Do not delay, God, to repay them on their heads, to speak against the dragon's pride
in a single charge."[e] 30 I did not have to wait long before God showed me his arrogance:
pierced through on the mountains of Egypt,
of less account than the least of men on land and sea.[f]

31 His body was carried to and fro on the waves in great disgrace, and there was no one to bury him.
32 For he had treated others with contempt, in dishonor;
he did not reckon that he was a man,
and did not think of what comes afterward.
33 He said, "I shall be master of land and sea,"
and he did not realize that God is great,
powerful in his enormous might.
34 He himself is king over the heavens,
and judges kings and rulers.
35 It is he who raises me to glory,
and who puts the proud to sleep in everlasting destruction and dishonor, because they did not know him.
36 And now, you magnates of the earth, behold the Lord's judgment:
he is a mighty and righteous king,
who judges all that lies under the sky.
37 Praise God, you who revere the Lord with knowledge,
for the Lord's mercy rests on those who revere him,
and comes along with his verdict, 38 to separate the righteous from the sinner,
and to repay sinners forever according to their deeds, 39 and to have mercy on the righteous, away from the humiliation by the sinner, and to repay the sinner for what he did to the righteous.
40 For the Lord is good to those who call on him with patience,
to act according to his mercy toward his devout ones,
and to let them stand before him continually in strength.
41 Blessed be the Lord forever in the presence of his servants.

Notes

- a (2:title) Jerusalem is probably "foundation of Shalem" or "city of peace," but the origin of the name is uncertain.
- b (2:4) "His glory" here is probably the glory of God dwelling in the temple.

- c (2:13) Greek pornai, "prostitutes." Verses 13–14 are obscure; the idea seems to be that the Gentile soldiers treated the city's people as they would treat prostitutes, openly, in daylight.
- d (2:19) That is, he shows no partiality (compare Deut 10:17).
- e (2:29) The Greek of this verse is hard and probably damaged, and a few manuscripts read differently. "The dragon" is the foreign conqueror of verse 1, whom most scholars identify with the Roman general Pompey (who took Jerusalem in 63 BC); compare Jer 51:34 and Ezek 29:3. His death is described in verses 30–31.
- f (2:30) Pompey was murdered on the Egyptian shore in 48 BC after his defeat by Julius Caesar; his body was left on the beach and cremated by a freedman. The psalm does not name him.

Chapter 3

A psalm of Solomon, about the righteous.

1 Why are you sleeping, my soul, and not blessing the Lord?
2 Sing a hymn, a new song, to God who is worthy of praise.
Sing and be wide awake at his watch,
for a psalm to God from a good heart is good.[a] 3 The righteous always remember the Lord, in confession and in declaring the Lord's judgments to be right.
4 The righteous do not make light of the Lord's discipline,
and their good will is always before the Lord.
5 The righteous stumble and they declare the Lord just;
they fall and look to see what God will do for them;

6 they look out from where their rescue will come.
7 The confidence of the righteous is from God their savior.
Sin upon sin does not lodge in the house of a righteous man.
8 The righteous constantly looks over his house,
to remove any wrong done by his own transgression.
9 He makes atonement for sins of ignorance by fasting and humbling his soul,
10 and the Lord cleanses every devout man and his household.
11 The sinner stumbles and curses his life,
the day he was born and the pains of his mother's labor.
12 He adds sins to sins as long as he lives.

13 He falls, for his fall is evil, and he will not get up;
the destruction of the sinner is forever,
14 and he will not be remembered when God visits the righteous.
15 This is the portion of sinners forever.
16 But those who fear the Lord will rise up to eternal life, and their life will be in the Lord's light, which will never come to an end.

Notes

- a (3:2) "Watch" translates Greek egrēgorsis, "wakefulness"; it may refer to the night watches, or to the stations at which singers and watchmen served in the temple.

Chapter 4

Solomon's dialogue with the people-pleasers.

1 Why do you sit, you profane man, in the council of the devout,
while your heart is far away from the Lord,
angering the God of Israel with your lawless acts?
2 Excessive in words, excessive in outward display beyond everyone, he is harsh in his speech when he condemns sinners in judgment.
3 His hand is the first against them, as though in zeal, and yet he is himself guilty in many kinds of sin and in lack of self-control.
4 His eyes are on every woman, without distinction;
his tongue lies when he makes a contract with an oath.
5 At night and in secret places he sins as though no one sees him;
with his eyes he talks to every woman in an appointment for wickedness.
6 He is quick to enter every house with a cheerful face, as though he were innocent.
7 May God remove those who live in hypocrisy among the devout, in the ruin of his flesh and with a life of poverty.
8 May God uncover the works of the people-pleasers,
and may his works become a laughingstock and a mockery.
9 May the devout declare the judgment of their God to be just,
when sinners are removed from the face of the righteous,

10 the people-pleaser who speaks only with deceit.
11 And their eyes are on a man's house in its security, like a snake, to break up each other's wisdom with the words of lawless men.
12 His words are deceptions, aiming at the fulfillment of unjust desire.
13 He does not stop until he has succeeded in scattering them as orphans, and he has made a house desolate for the sake of lawless desire.
14 He deceived them with words, saying that there is no one who sees and judges;
15 he is filled with lawlessness in this,
and his eyes are on another house, to destroy it with words that will fill his appetite.
His soul is never satisfied, like Hades, in all these things.[b] 16 Lord, may his portion be dishonor in your presence;
may he leave with groans and arrive to curses.
17 May his life be in pains and poverty and helplessness, Lord;
may his sleep be in sorrows and his waking in distress.
18 May sleep be taken from his temples at night;
may he fail in every work of his hands, in dishonor.
19 May his house be empty,
lacking everything that would fill his soul,
20 and may his old age be spent in the loneliness of childlessness, until he is taken away.
21 May the flesh of the people-pleasers be torn apart by wild animals, and the bones of the lawless lie in the sun, in dishonor.
22 May crows pull out the eyes of those who put on a show,
23 because they have laid waste many people's houses in dishonor and scattered them in their greed.
24 They did not remember God,
and they did not fear God in any of this.
25 They provoked God and made him angry, so that he would remove them from the earth, because they pretended to be on the side of innocent souls, deceiving them.

[26] Blessed are those who fear the Lord in their innocence.
[27] The Lord will rescue them from deceitful men and sinners, and he will rescue us from every trap of the lawless.
[28] May God remove those who in arrogance do every kind of wrong, for the Lord our God is a great and mighty judge in righteousness.
[29] Lord, may your mercy be on all who love you.

Notes

- a (4:title) Greek anthrōparesko, "those who please men"; compare Col 3:22 and Eph 6:6. The psalm attacks hypocrites, probably the religious and political leaders of the Hasmonean period, who put on a show of devotion.
- b (4:15) Hades (Greek hadēs) is the realm of the dead, the Hebrew Sheol, which is never full (Prov 27:20; Hab 2:5).

Chapter 5

A psalm of Solomon.

[1] Lord God, I will praise your name with joy
among those who know your righteous judgments.
[2] For you are kind and merciful,
a refuge for the poor,
[3] so when I cry out to you, do not be silent toward me.
[4] For no one can take plunder away from a powerful man,
[5] and who can take anything from all that you have made, unless you give it?
[6] For a man and his portion are weighed out by you;
he will not add to it, to have more than your judgment allows, God.
[7] When we are afflicted we will call on you for help,
and you will not turn away our plea,
for you are our God.
[8] Do not lay your hand heavily on us,
lest in our need we sin.
[9] Even if you do not turn us back, we will not hold back,
but we will come to you.

10 For if I am hungry I will cry out to you, God,
and you will give to me.
11 You feed the birds and the fish,
when you send rain in the deserts so that the green grass can spring up, 12 and so prepare fodder in the wilderness for every living creature;
and if they are hungry, they lift their faces to you.
13 You feed kings and rulers and peoples, God,
and what hope has the poor and needy man, if not you, Lord?
14 And you will listen. For who is so kind and gentle but you?
You cheer the humble soul by opening your hand with mercy.
15 A man's kindness is given sparingly, and it is for a day;
and if he repeats it without grumbling, even that is a marvel.
16 But your gift is great, with kindness, and rich, and the one whose hope is in you will not be held back from your gift.
17 Your mercy is over all the earth, Lord, in kindness.
18 Blessed is the one whom God remembers with a fair measure of sufficiency.
19 If a man has too much, he sins;
20 enough in moderation is sufficient, together with righteousness, and in that is the Lord's blessing: to have enough, with righteousness.
21 Those who fear the Lord rejoiced in good things, and your kindness is upon Israel in your kingdom.[a] 22 May the Lord's glory be blessed, for he is our king.

Notes

- a (5:21) Israel ("God strives" or "he who strives with God," Gen 32:28) is the name given to Jacob and then to his descendants.

Chapter 6

Of Solomon: in hope.

1 Happy is the man who is prepared in heart to invoke the Lord's name.
2 When he remembers the name of the Lord, he will be saved;

3 the Lord sets his paths straight,
and the Lord his God keeps the work of his hands safe.
4 Because of the dreams of the night his soul is not troubled;
when he crosses rivers or in storms at sea, he will not be afraid.
5 He gets up from sleep and blesses the name of the Lord;
when his heart is calm, he sings to the name of his God.
6 And he prays to the Lord for his whole house, and the Lord listens to the prayer of everyone who fears God.
7 Whatever he asks for, he will receive from the Lord;
the Lord will answer every request of a man who is hoping in God.
8 Blessed be the Lord, who shows mercy to those who love him in sincerity.
9 Blessed is the Lord forever.

Chapter 7

Of Solomon: of turning back.

1 Do not take your dwelling far from us, God,
lest those who hate us without cause attack us.
2 For you have rejected them, God;
do not let their feet trample on your holy inheritance.
3 Discipline us yourself, as you wish,
but do not hand us over to the nations.
4 For if you send death, you yourself command it for us;
you will have mercy on us.
5 While your name dwells among us, we will find mercy,

6 and the nation will have no power against us.
7 For you are our protector,
and we will call on you, and you will listen to us.
8 For you will have pity on the house of Israel forever, and you will not reject it.
9 We are under your yoke forever, and under the rod of your discipline.
You will set us straight in the time of your visit.

Notes

- a (7:title) Greek epistrophēs; in the Psalms of Solomon the word suggests "repentance" or "being brought back" to God.

Chapter 8

Of Solomon: for victory.

1 The sound of distress and the cry of war has reached my ear,
the sound of a trumpet blaring slaughter and destruction.
2 The noise of a great crowd, like a very strong wind,
like a storm of fire raging through the desert.
3 And I said in my heart, "Where, then, will God judge it?"
4 I heard a sound from Jerusalem, the holy city.
5 My loins were shattered at the news,
my knees gave way;
6 my heart was terrified,
and my bones trembled like flax stalks.
7 I said, "They are making their ways straight in righteousness."
I thought over the judgments of God from the creation of heaven and earth;
I declared God righteous in his judgments of all time.
8 God uncovered their sins in the face of the sun;
the whole earth knew the righteous judgments of God.
9 Their lawless acts were in hidden underground rooms, to provoke him:
10 son with mother and father with daughter were mixed together;
11 each committed adultery with his neighbor's wife;
they made agreements with each other with oaths about these things.
12 They plundered the holy things of God,
as though there were no heir to redeem them.
13 They trampled the altar of the Lord, in every uncleanness, and with menstrual blood they defiled the sacrifices as if they were common meat.
14 There was no sin they left undone;
they surpassed the nations.

15 For this reason God mixed a spirit of confusion for them, and made them drink a cup of unmixed wine to drunkenness.
16 He brought one from the end of the earth, one who strikes with power;
17 he decided on war against Jerusalem and its land.
18 The rulers of the land met him with joy,
and said to him, "Your road is blessed;
come, enter in peace."
19 They smoothed the rough roads before his entry;
they opened the gates to Jerusalem;
they crowned her walls.
20 He entered like a father into the house of his sons, in peace;
he set his feet down with great security.
21 He captured her fortified towers and the wall of Jerusalem,
22 and God led him in safety while they went astray.[b]
23 He destroyed their rulers and every wise counselor;
he spilled the blood of Jerusalem's residents as if it were dirty water.
24 He led away their sons and daughters,
whom they had fathered in defilement.
25 They did according to their uncleanness, as their fathers had done.
26 They defiled Jerusalem and the things that were consecrated to God's name.
27 God was shown to be righteous in his judgments among the nations of the earth,
28 and the devout of God were like lambs in their innocence in the midst of them.
29 Praised be the Lord, who judges all the earth in his righteousness.
30 See now, God, you have shown us your judgment in your righteousness;
31 our eyes have seen your judgments, God.
32 We have declared your honored name righteous forever, for you are the God of righteousness, who judges Israel with discipline.

33 Turn your mercy toward us, God, and have pity on us;
34 bring together Israel's scattered people with compassion and goodness.
35 For your faithfulness is with us,
and though we stiffened our necks, you are our discipliner.
36 Do not overlook us, our God, lest the nations swallow us up as though there were no one to redeem us.
37 You have been our God from the beginning,
and our hope is in you, Lord.
38 We will not turn away from you,
for your judgments toward us are kind.
39 The favor is ours and our children's forever.
Lord, our savior, we will never be shaken again, for all time.
40 Praised be the Lord in his judgments through the mouth of the devout, and may Israel be blessed by the Lord forever.

Notes

- a (8:title) The Greek eis nikos may stand for Hebrew lamnatseach ("for the leader"), a heading found in many biblical psalms, as in Ps 4–6.
- b (8:22) The verses refer to Pompey's entry into Jerusalem in 63 BC, apparently by agreement with one of the rival Hasmonean brothers (Hyrcanus II), followed by the siege and storming of the temple hill by his troops.

Chapter 9

Of Solomon: for reproof.

1 When Israel was led away in exile to a foreign land, when they had turned away from the Lord who had redeemed them,
2 they were thrown out of the inheritance that the Lord had given them.
Israel is dispersed among every nation, according to the word of God, 3 so that you, God, may be shown to be righteous in your righteousness, by our lawless acts.

4 For you are a just judge over all the peoples on earth.
5 No one who does wrong can be hidden from your knowledge,
6 and the righteous deeds of your devout are before you, Lord;
and where could a person hide from your knowledge, God?
7 Our deeds are by our own choice and by the authority of our own soul,
to practice justice or injustice in what our hands do.
8 And in your righteousness you visit the sons of men.
9 The one who does righteousness stores up life for himself with the Lord, and the one who does wrong is himself to blame for the ruin of his soul.
10 For the Lord's judgments are in righteousness, for each man and household.
11 To whom will you be kind, God, if not to those who call on the Lord?
12 He will cleanse a soul from sins in confession, in open acknowledgment, 13 for shame is ours, and on our faces, because of everything.
14 And whose sins will he pardon, if not those of sinners?
15 You will bless the righteous, and will not call them to account for what they have sinned,
and your kindness is for sinners when they repent.
16 And now, you are God, and we are your people, whom you have loved.
Look, and have pity, God of Israel, for we are yours.
17 Do not take your mercy away from us, lest they set upon us.
18 For you chose the descendants of Abraham above all the nations, and put your name on us, Lord,
and you will not cease forever.[a] 19 You made a covenant with our fathers about us, and we put our hope in you as our soul turns back.
20 The Lord's mercy is on the house of Israel forever and ever.

Notes

- a (9:18) Abraham ("father of a multitude," Gen 17:5) is named here as the ancestor to whom the covenant promise was first given.

Chapter 10

Among the hymns, of Solomon.

1 How fortunate is the one the Lord keeps in mind by reproving him, and who is hemmed in from the way of evil by the whip,
to be cleansed from sin, that it may not multiply.
2 The one who prepares his back for the lashes will be cleansed,
for the Lord is kind to those who endure discipline.
3 For he will make the ways of the righteous straight,
and will not bend them in his discipline.
4 The Lord's compassion rests on those who love him sincerely, and the Lord will not forget his servants but treat them mercifully.
5 For the testimony lies in the Law, an everlasting covenant;
the Lord's testimony oversees what people do with their lives.
6 Our Lord is righteous and devout in his judgments forever, and Israel will praise the name of the Lord with gladness.
7 And the devout will confess him in the people's gathering, and God will pity the poor, to the joy of Israel.
8 For God is kind and merciful forever, and the assemblies of Israel will glorify the name of the Lord.
9 The salvation of the Lord is on the house of Israel, for everlasting gladness.[a]

Notes

- a (10:9) Swete's Greek text reads sōphrosynē ("sound mind, self-control"), but editors commonly read euphrosynē ("gladness"), as in verses 6 and 7. "Gladness" is used here. This is a point to check against the manuscripts.

Chapter 11

Of Solomon: for expectation.

1 Blow the trumpet in Zion, the trumpet that calls the holy ones.[a]
2 Announce in Jerusalem the voice of the one who brings good news, for God has had mercy on Israel by visiting them.
3 Stand on a height, Jerusalem, and look at your children, gathered from east and west, all together, by the Lord.
4 From the north they come with the joy of their God;
from far-off islands God has gathered them.

5 He lowered high mountains to make level ground for them.
6 The hills fled at their coming;
the forests gave them shade as they passed.
7 God made every fragrant tree spring up for them, so that Israel might pass by with the visit of the glory of their God.
8 Put on, Jerusalem, your garments of glory;
prepare your holy robe,
for God has spoken good things for Israel forever and ever.
9 May the Lord do what he has promised for Israel and Jerusalem;
may the Lord raise Israel up by his glorious name.
The Lord's mercy is on Israel forever and ever.[b]

Notes

- a (11:1) Zion is the hill of Jerusalem on which the temple stood, and in poetry stands for the city itself.
- b (11:9) Compare Baruch 4:36–5:9, which is very close to this psalm; the two probably share a source, or one is based on the other.

Chapter 12

Of Solomon: against the tongue of lawless men.

1 Lord, rescue my soul from the lawless and wicked man, from the lawless tongue that slanders and speaks falsehood and deceit.
2 The words of a wicked man's tongue twist and turn in many ways.
3 Like a fire in a crowd, it sets fire to its own beauty;
its guest, the tongue, fills houses with lies,
cutting down trees of gladness, setting the lawless ablaze.[a] 4 It throws the houses of the lawless into confusion, with a war of whispering lips.
May God keep the lips of the lawless far away from the innocent, in their helplessness, and may the bones of the slanderers be scattered far from those who fear the Lord.
5 May the slanderer's tongue perish in a flaming fire, away from the devout.

6 May the Lord guard the soul of the man who makes peace in his house.
7 The salvation of the Lord is on Israel his servant forever,
8 and may the sinners perish from the face of the Lord all at once,
and may the devout of the Lord inherit his promises.

Notes

- a (12:3) The Greek of this verse is rough and the text may be damaged. The sense is that slander is a fire that burns first the speaker and then every household it enters.

Chapter 13

A psalm of Solomon, a comfort for the righteous.

1 The Lord's right hand sheltered me;
his right hand showed us pity.
2 The Lord's arm rescued us from the sword sweeping by,
from hunger and from the sinners' death.
3 Wild beasts rushed upon them, vicious ones;
with their teeth they tore at their flesh,
and with their molars they ground their bones.
And from all these the Lord rescued us.
4 The ungodly man was troubled because of his offenses,
lest he be carried off with the sinners.
5 For the sinner's ruin is terrible,
and none of this will touch the righteous.
6 For the correction of the righteous, done in ignorance,
is not like the ruin of the sinner.
7 The righteous man is disciplined in secret,
so that the sinner will not rejoice over him.
8 For he will admonish the righteous like a dearly loved son,
and his correction is that given to a firstborn.
9 For the Lord will spare his devout ones,
and wipe out their offenses by discipline.
The life of the righteous is forever.
10 But sinners will be taken away to destruction,
and no memory of them will be found any more.

11 The Lord's mercy is on the devout,
and his mercy is on those who fear him.

Chapter 14

A hymn of Solomon.

1 The Lord is faithful to those who love him in truth,
to those who endure his discipline,
to those who walk in righteousness by his commandments,
in the Law that he gave us for our life.
2 The devout of the Lord will live by it forever.
The Lord's paradise, the trees of life, are his devout ones.
3 Their planting is rooted forever;
they will not be uprooted all the days of heaven,
for Israel is the portion and the inheritance of God.
4 Not so the sinners and the lawless,
who loved the day of sharing in their sin;
their desire is in the smallness of decay.[a] 5 And they did not remember God,
for human conduct is always plain to him,
and he knows the secret rooms of the heart before they exist.
6 For this reason their inheritance is Hades and darkness and destruction, and they will not be found on the day when the righteous receive mercy.
7 But the devout of the Lord will inherit life in gladness.

Notes

- a (14:4) The Greek is difficult. The idea seems to be that the pleasures of the wicked are brief and rotten.

Chapter 15

A psalm of Solomon, with a song.

1 In my distress I called on the Lord,
when I was pressed hard by the sinners, and I was saved.
2 For you are the hope and the refuge of the poor, God.
3 For who is strong, God, if not to give you thanks in truth?

4 And what is a man's power, if not to give thanks to your name?
5 With a new psalm and song, in the gladness of the heart, lips bearing fruit, with the tongue a well-tuned instrument,
the first offering of lips from a devout and righteous heart—6 the one who does these things will never be shaken by evil;
the flame of fire and the anger of the unjust will not touch him, 7 when it goes out against sinners from the Lord's presence,
to wipe out all that sinners stand on.
8 For the mark of God is on the righteous, for their salvation;
famine and sword and death are far from the righteous.
9 For they will flee from the devout as from an enemy chasing them,
but they will be pursued and caught, the sinners;
and those who do lawless things will not escape the Lord's judgment,
but will be overtaken as by skilled enemies.
10 For the mark of destruction is on their foreheads.
11 And what sinners inherit is destruction and darkness, and their lawless acts will chase them down to Hades below.
12 Their inheritance will not be found for their children.
13 For sins will leave the houses of sinners empty.
14 And sinners will perish forever on the day of the Lord's judgment, when God visits the earth with his judgment.
15 But those who fear the Lord will be shown mercy in it,
and will live by the generosity of their God;
but sinners will perish forever.[a]

Notes

- a (15:15) The "mark" of verses 8 and 10 recalls the sign on the forehead in Ezek 9:4–6, and the mark of the beast in Rev 13:16–17 and 14:9. In the Psalms of Solomon, the righteous bear God's mark for protection and the sinners bear a mark of destruction.

Chapter 16

A hymn of Solomon, for the support of the devout.

1 When my soul was drowsy, away from the Lord,
I almost slipped into the deep sleep of falling.

2 When I was far from God, my soul was almost poured out to death, near the gates of Hades, with the sinner.
3 When my soul was torn away from the Lord, the God of Israel, it would have been so, had the Lord not taken hold of me, in his lasting mercy.
4 He pricked me like a horseman's spur, to wake me up;
my savior and helper in every time saved me.
5 I will give thanks to you, God, that you took hold of me for salvation, and did not count me with the sinners to my ruin.
6 Do not take your mercy away from me, God,
or your remembrance from my heart, until death.
7 Master me, God, away from evil sin
and from every wicked woman who trips up the foolish.
8 And do not let the beauty of a lawless woman deceive me,
nor anyone lying under the power of useless sin.
9 Make straight the works of my hands according to your pattern,
and watch over my steps with your remembrance.
10 Hold in check my tongue and my lips with words of truth;
put anger and unreasoning rage far away from me.
11 Take grumbling and faint-heartedness in distress away from me, even if I sin when you discipline me to bring me back.
12 But in your good pleasure, with cheerfulness, strengthen my soul;
when you give strength to my soul, what is given will be enough for me.
13 For if you do not give strength, who will endure discipline in poverty?
14 When the soul is poured into the hand of its decay, your test is in his flesh and in the distress of poverty.
15 If the righteous endures in these things, he will receive mercy from the Lord.

Chapter 17

A psalm of Solomon, with a song, to the king.

1 Lord, you are our king forever and ever,
for in you, God, our soul will boast.

2 And how long is the span of a man's life on earth?
His hope is as long as his time.
3 But we will hope in God our savior,
for the might of our God is forever, with mercy,
4 and our God's kingdom lasts forever, ruling the nations.
5 You, Lord, chose David as king over Israel,
and you swore to him about his descendants forever,
that his kingdom would not fail before you.
6 But because of our sins sinners rose up against us;
they attacked us and drove us out.
Those to whom you made no promise took it by force,
7 and did not glorify your honored name.
They set up a royal house in glory, in place of their height;
8 they laid waste David's throne with the arrogance of a war cry.[b]
9 But you, God, will throw them down and remove their offspring from the earth, when a man foreign to our race rises up against them.
10 According to their sins you will repay them, God,
so that they find themselves treated as their deeds deserve.
11 God will have no pity on them;
he searched out their offspring and let not one of them go.
12 The Lord is faithful in all his judgments that he carries out on the earth.
13 The lawless man laid our land waste, taking away its inhabitants;
they destroyed young and old and their children together.
14 In the anger of his splendor he sent them away to the west, and made the rulers of the land a laughingstock, and showed no pity.
15 In his hostility the enemy acted with arrogance,
and his heart was foreign to our God.
16 And everything he did in Jerusalem was like what the nations do in their cities for their gods.
17 And the sons of the covenant, living among the mixed peoples, gave way to them;

there was no one among them in Jerusalem who practiced mercy and truth.
18 Those who loved the gatherings of the devout fled from them;
like sparrows they were scattered from their nests.
19 They wandered in the deserts to save their souls from evil, and in the eyes of those who lived abroad a life that had been saved from them was precious.
20 Their dispersion came upon the whole earth, from lawless men.
21 For the heaven held back from letting rain fall on the earth, and the ever-flowing springs were stopped, from the deeps, from the high mountains, because there was no one among them who did righteousness and justice;
from their ruler to the least of the people, all were in every sin.
22 The king was in lawlessness, the judge in disobedience, and the people in sin.
23 See, Lord, and raise up for them their king,
the son of David, at the time you have seen, God,
to rule over Israel your servant.[c]
24 Gird him with strength to shatter unjust rulers,
25 to cleanse Jerusalem from the nations who trample her to ruin, 26 in wisdom and righteousness to drive out sinners from the inheritance, to smash the arrogance of the sinner like a potter's jars;
with an iron rod to break all their strength to pieces, 27 to wipe out lawless nations by a word from his mouth,
so that nations run from his presence when he threatens them,
and to convict sinners by the word of their own hearts.
28 And he will gather a holy people, whom he will lead in righteousness, and will judge the tribes of the people who have been made holy by the Lord their God.
29 And he will not allow wrong to lodge among them any longer,
and no man who knows evil will live with them.

30 For he will know them, that they are all sons of their God,
and he will divide them up by their tribes on the land.
31 And no foreigner or stranger will live among them anymore.
He will judge peoples and nations with the wisdom of his righteousness. Pause.[d] 32 And he will have the peoples of the nations serve him under his yoke, and he will glorify the Lord in a place marked out for all the earth to see.
33 And he will cleanse Jerusalem in holiness, as it was from the beginning, 34 so that nations come from the end of the earth to see his glory,
carrying her exhausted sons as presents,
35 and to see the glory of the Lord, with which God has glorified her.
And he is a righteous king, taught by God, over them.
36 There will be no injustice among them in his days, for all will be holy, and their king will be the Lord's anointed.[e] 37 For he will not put his hope in horse or rider or bow, nor will he pile up gold or silver for war,
nor will he gather hopes in the numbers of men for the day of war.
38 The Lord himself is his king;
the strong man's hope is the hope he rests in God,
and he will have mercy on all the nations before him in fear.
39 For he will smite the land with a word from his mouth, for all time,
40 he will bless the Lord's people with wisdom and with gladness.
41 And he himself is free from sin, so as to rule a great people, to convict rulers and remove sinners by the strength of his word.
42 He will not grow weak in his days, because of his God,
for God has made him strong in the holy spirit,
and wise in counsel with understanding, with strength and righteousness.
43 And the Lord's blessing goes with him, with power,
44 and his hope in the Lord will not fail.
And who can stand against him?

He is mighty in what he does and strong through reverence for God;
45 he shepherds the Lord's flock in faith and righteousness,
and will not let any of them grow weak in their pasture.
46 He will lead them all in equality,
and there will be no arrogance among them, so that anyone is oppressed.
47 This is the glory of Israel's king, as God foresaw, to set him over the house of Israel and train it.
48 His words are refined, more than fine gold, the most precious;
in the assemblies he will judge the tribes of the people made holy.
49 His words are like the words of the holy ones among sanctified peoples.
50 Blessed are those who will live in those days, to see the good things of Israel in the gathering of the tribes,
which God will do.
51 May God hasten his mercy to Israel;
may he rescue us from the uncleanness of profane enemies.
The Lord himself is our king forever and ever.

Notes

- a (17:title) The Greek meta ōdēs ("with a song") is a heading also found on Psalms 15 and 17. "To the king" may refer to the Lord as king, or to the Davidic king expected in the psalm. This psalm is the most important description of the Messiah in the literature of the time.
- b (17:8) The Hasmonean rulers (from 104 BC they took the title "king") were priests, not descendants of David. The psalmist regards them as usurpers.
- c (17:23) "Son of David" is a title here for the future king. The hope of a king from David's line rests on 2 Sam 7:12–16.
- d (17:31) Greek diapsalma, as in the Greek Psalms (Hebrew selah), a mark whose meaning is not known; it may signal a musical interlude or a pause.
- e (17:36) Greek christos kyrios. Most scholars read "the Lord's anointed" (christos kyriou, as in 18:6 and 18:8); some think the original was a Hebrew phrase "the Lord's anointed" and that "Lord Messiah" arose in translation, or that a Christian hand altered it. "Anointed" and "Messiah" are the same word (Hebrew mashiach, Greek christos).

Chapter 18

A psalm of Solomon, still about the Lord's anointed.

1 Lord, your mercy is over the works of your hands forever.
2 Your kindness is on Israel in a rich gift.
Your eyes look on them, and none of them will lack anything.
3 Your ears listen to the prayer of the poor who hope;
your judgments over all the earth are with mercy,
4 and your love is over the descendants of Abraham, the sons of Israel.
Your discipline is on us as on a firstborn, an only son,
5 to turn a listening soul away from foolishness and ignorance.
6 May God cleanse Israel for the day of mercy, with blessing, for the day of choice, when his anointed one is brought in.
7 Blessed are those who will be born in those days,
to see the good things of the Lord which he will do for the coming generation, 8 under the rod of discipline of the Lord's anointed, in reverence for his God, in the wisdom of the spirit and of righteousness and strength, 9 to set men straight in works of righteousness in the fear of God,
to set them all before the Lord.
10 A good generation, living in reverence for God, in the days of mercy. Pause.[b]
11 Great is our God and glorious, living on high, 12 who set the lights in their courses to mark the seasons of the hours from day to day, and they have not left the road you ordered them to follow.
13 In the fear of God their path goes on each day,
from the day God made them and to the end of time.
14 And they have not strayed since the day he made them;
from ancient generations they have not left their ways,
unless God commanded them, through the order given by his servants.

Notes

- a (18:title) Greek eti peri tou christou kyriou. As in 17:36 some read “the Lord’s anointed” and others “the Lord Messiah”.
- b (18:10) Greek diapsalma; see the note at 17:31.

Psalms 152–155

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

Psalm 152

Spoken by David when he was fighting with a lion and a wolf that were carrying off sheep from his flock.

1 My God, my God, hurry to my side;
support me and set me free,
and deliver my soul from those who kill.[b]
2 Shall I go down to Sheol at the lion's mouth, or shall the wolf throw me into confusion?[c] 3 Did they not have enough, lurking near my father's sheep and ripping one away from his fold?
Must they also try to destroy my soul?
4 Have pity, Lord, on your chosen one,
and rescue your devout servant from destruction,
so that he may stand firm in praising you at all times
and give glory to the name of your greatness.[d] 5 Once you have freed him from the grip of the lion that destroys and the wolf that tears,
and have taken my captive life out of the mouth of the wild beasts, 6 quickly, my Adonai,
send a savior from your presence,
and lift me out of the gaping pit
that wants to shut me up in its depths.[e]

Notes

- a (1:title) Syriac maryā, "Lord," is the word the Syriac Bible uses for Yahweh, and it is rendered "Lord" throughout these psalms. In the Mosul manuscript this psalm is preceded by a note saying that these four psalms (152–155) have no explanatory introductions from Eusebius, Athanasius, or Theodore the Interpreter, and are simply written out.
- b (1:1) Syriac ʾel, a short form of the divine name "God," appears twice here.

- c (1:2) The Syriac of this verse is run together and uncertain in the manuscript; the sense given is the likeliest, and the last words are read "as reported."
- d (1:4) Another reading, found in some manuscripts, is "so that he may recount your praises at all times."
- e (1:6) Syriac 'adonayhi, a form of the Hebrew Adonay, "my Lord," left in a Hebrew form in the Syriac.

Chapter 2

Psalm 153

Spoken by David when he received God's kindness, when God rescued him from the lion and the wolf and he killed both of them with his own hands.

1 Praise the Lord, all you nations;
  praise him, and bless his name.
2 For he rescued the soul of his chosen one from the hands of death,
  and saved his devout servant from destruction.
3 He delivered me from the snares of Sheol, and drew my soul out of the pit that cannot be fathomed.
4 For just before my rescue came out from his presence,
  I had become two portions for two beasts.[a] 5 But he sent his angel,
  shut up the gaping mouths against me,
  and saved my life from destruction.
6 My soul praises him and exalts him
  for all his kindnesses,
  which he has done and will do for me.

Notes

- a (2:4) Literally "two portions for two beasts." The idea is that each animal had a share of him, as though he were already divided between them.

Chapter 3

Psalm 154

The prayer of Hezekiah when the Assyrians were surrounding him and he was asking God for relief from them, like a people who had obtained leave from Cyrus to go back to their own place and who ask God that their hope be fulfilled.

1 With a loud voice praise God;
in the assembly of the many, make his glory heard.
2 Among the throng of the upright, praise him;
with the righteous, recount his majesty.
3 Unite your soul with the good and the whole-hearted,
so as to praise the Most High.
4 Gather together to make known his strength;
do not be slow to show his deliverance,
and his glory to all the simple.[b]
5 So that the Lord's honor may be known, wisdom was given.[c]
6 So that his works may be recounted, she was made known to people.[d]
7 She was given to make his strength known to the simple,
and to make those who lack heart understand his glory,
8 who are far from her entrances and far away from her gates.
9 For the Most High is the Lord of Jacob,
and his splendor is over all his works.
10 And the person who praises the Most High,
he will take pleasure in him,
like one who offers fine flour,
11 and like one who offers he-goats and young bulls,
and like one who makes the altar shine with a great number of burnt offerings, and like the fragrance of spices from the hand of the righteous.[e] 12 From the gates of the upright his voice is heard, and out of the upright's own voice comes his meditation.[f] 13 At their meal there is plenty, in truth,
and at their drink they drink together.
14 Their conversation dwells on the Most High's Law,
and they speak in order to declare his strength.
15 How far from the wicked is speaking of him,
and from all the unjust, knowing him!
16 See, the Lord's eye looks with pity on the good,

17 and on those who praise him he will multiply mercies,
and from the time of evil he will rescue their souls.
18 Blessed be the Lord, who rescued the afflicted from the hand of foreigners,
and delivered the blameless from the hand of the wicked, 19 who raises up a strong horn from Jacob,
a judge for the nations from Israel, 20 that he may make his dwelling long in Zion,
and that it may be planted in Jerusalem for all ages.[g]

Notes

- a (3:title) Hezekiah, king of Judah about 715–686 BC, was besieged by the Assyrian king Sennacherib in 701 BC (2 Kings 18–19; Isaiah 36–37). The name means "Yahweh strengthens." Cyrus the Persian allowed the exiles to return in 538 BC (Ezra 1). The heading joins the two situations and does not fit the psalm well; in other Syriac manuscripts, the Hezekiah heading belongs to Psalm 154 and the Cyrus heading to Psalm 155, as reported.
- b (3:4) The Syriac word is uncertain; it means something like "the simple" or "the untaught." Wright's 1887 English has "babes." The same word is used in verse 7.
- c (3:5) In the Hebrew text from Qumran (11QPs-a, as reported), wisdom is a woman and is called "she" and "her" through verse 8; the Syriac pronouns are less clear. "Her" in verse 8 follows the likely sense.
- d (3:6) In the Hebrew text from Qumran (as reported), wisdom is a woman, and she is addressed as "she" and "her" through the rest of the psalm. The Syriac pronouns are not always clear, so "her" in verse 8 follows the likely sense.
- e (3:11) Syriac bsāmē, "spices." Wright's 1887 text, from a later family of manuscripts, has "incense."
- f (3:12) Syriac martīnūteh. The word is uncertain and could also mean "his murmured prayer." Wright has "admonition." Whose voice is meant is also unclear.
- g (3:20) Some manuscripts read "and may beautify our age in Jerusalem," a different line.

Chapter 4

Psalm 155

The prayer of Hezekiah when the Assyrians were surrounding him, and he asked God for relief from them.

1 Lord, I called to you; hear me.
2 I spread out my hands toward the dwelling places of your holiness.
3 Bend your ear to me and grant me my request.

4 Do not hold back my petition from me.
5 Build up my soul,
and do not tear it down.
6 Do not lay it bare before the wicked.
7 Turn away from me those who repay evil,
O judge of truth.[a]
8 Lord, do not judge me according to my sins,
for no one living is righteous before you.
9 Make me wise, Lord, in your Law,
and teach me your judgments.[b]
10 So that many may hear of your works, and the nations may confess your glory.[c] 11 Remember me and do not forget me, and do not bring me into what is too hard for me.
12 Pass away from me the sins of my youth,
and do not remember my rebellion against me.
13 Cleanse me, Lord, from the evil scab,
and let it not return to me again.
14 Dry up its roots from me,
and do not let its leaves sprout in me.
15 Mighty and great are you, Lord;
therefore my petition is granted before you.
16 To whom shall I appeal, so that he may give to me?
And what more can human might supply?
17 From before you, Lord, comes my confidence.
I called to the Lord, and he answered me,
and healed the break in my heart.
18 I dozed and fell asleep;
I dreamed, and then was woken.[d]
19 You held me up, Lord, and I accept it, because the Lord has delivered me.[e] 20 Now I will look on their shame.
I put my hope in you and was not put to shame.
Give honor forever and ever.

21 Redeem Israel, your chosen,
and the house of Jacob, your tested one.[f]

Notes

- a (4:7) Syriac dīnā d-qushtā, “judge of truth.” The first words, parʿay bīshtā, “repayers of evil,” are not entirely certain.
- b (4:9) The manuscript has a damaged letter at the end of this line, and the Syriac text printed by its editors marks the end of the verse as uncertain.
- c (4:10) Syriac ʿabdayk. The consonants can be read as “your works” or “your servants.” “Works” is followed because the line is about what is heard and fits the parallel clause about confessing his glory.
- d (4:18) Another reading is “I was helped.”
- e (4:19) Syriac ʾeqbal, “I receive” or “I accept.” This is an uncertain readingWright’s 1887 English has “I will return thanks,” which may reflect a different reading.
- f (4:21) At this point the Mosul manuscript closes the Psalter with a note: “Finished, with the help of our Lord: the book of the Psalms of the blessed David, prophet and king, together with five psalms that are not in the Greek reckoning or the Hebrew. But, as people say, they were found in Syriac, and I wrote them for those who look for them.”

Odes of Solomon

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

Ode 1

1 The Lord is on my head as a crown, and I will never be left without him.[a]

2 A crown of truth was woven for me,
and it made your branches sprout in me.

3 For it is not like a withered crown that puts out no buds;

4 but you are alive on my head,
and you have blossomed on me.

5 Your fruit is ripe and whole, brimming with your salvation.

Notes

- a (1:1) Ode 1 is not in the Syriac manuscripts, which have lost their opening pages. It survives in Coptic, quoted in the Pistis Sophia (3rd–4th century AD), where it is called the nineteenth ode of Solomon. The English here is translated from the Coptic "as reported" in the English translation of J. R. Harris and A. Mingana (1920), checked against the Syriac idiom of the other odes; no Coptic manuscript was read directly.

Chapter 2

Ode 2

1 [This ode is lost.][a]

Notes

- a (2:1) Both the Syriac manuscripts break off before Ode 3, so Ode 2 has not survived in Syriac, and no Coptic quotation of it is known. Some scholars think that a few lines of the Greek text of Ode 11 in Papyrus Bodmer XI (verse 16, and a line after verse 22) that are not in the Syriac may be borrowed from this lost ode (as reported); they are given in a note at Ode 11.

Chapter 3

Ode 3

1 [I put on the love of the Lord.][a]
2 And his limbs are with him, and I hang upon them, and he loves me.[b]
3 I could never have learned to love the Lord,
unless he had first loved me.
4 Who can tell what love is,
except the one who is loved?
5 I love the Beloved, and my own soul loves him;
and wherever his rest is, I am there too.
6 And I will be no stranger, for with the Lord, the Most High and Merciful, there is no grudging.
7 I have been mingled with him, for the lover has found the beloved;
and because I love the Son, I will become a son.
8 For whoever joins himself to the one who does not die
will himself become undying;
9 and whoever delights in the Living One will become living.
10 This is the spirit of the Lord, which does not lie,
which teaches people to know his ways.
11 Be wise, and understanding, and watchful. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (3:1) The first words of this ode are lost in the manuscript; the Syriac that is left reads "… I put on." The words in square brackets are supplied from the sense of the next lines, as in the first edition by Harris and Mingana.
- b (3:2) The Syriac says "with him." Some editors change it to "with me."

Chapter 4

Ode 4

1 No one, my God, can change your holy place;
no one can alter it and set it in another place,
2 because they have no authority over it.
For you planned your sanctuary before you made the other places.
3 What is older will not be changed by what is lesser than itself.
You have given your heart, Lord, to those who are faithful to you.

4 You will never be idle,
and you will never be without fruit.
5 For one hour of faithfulness to you is worth more than all days and years.
6 For who could put on your goodness and be wronged?[a] 7 For your seal is known,
and your creatures are acquainted with it.[b]
8 Your hosts take hold of it, and the great and chosen angels are clothed with it.
9 You have given us your partnership.
It was not that you were lacking anything from us;
it was we who were lacking you.
10 Pour out your drops upon us, and open your rich springs, which pour out milk and honey for us.
11 For there is no changing of mind in you, so that you would change your mind about anything you have promised.
12 And the end was plain to you.
13 What you gave you gave as a free gift,
so that you would never go back and take it again.
14 For everything was plain to you, as God,
and was set in order from the beginning in front of you.
15 And you, Lord, made all things. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (4:6) The Syriac verb means "be wronged" or "be treated unjustly"; some translators render it "be condemned."
- b (4:7) The Syriac can mean "know it" or "are known to it." A letter of the word "known" is damaged in the manuscript.

Chapter 5

Ode 5

1 I give you thanks,
Lord, for I love you.

2 Most High, do not abandon me,
for you are my hope.
3 Freely I have received your goodness;
by it I will live.
4 Let my persecutors come and not see me.
5 Let a cloud of gloom fall over their eyes,
and a haze of darkness make them black.
6 And let there be no light for them to see,
so that they cannot seize me.
7 Let their plan be dulled, and let what they have schemed come back on their own heads.[a] 8 For they planned a plan,
and it did not come about for them.
9 They made themselves ready for evil,
and were found empty.
10 My hope is in the Lord,
so I will not fear.
11 And because the Lord is my deliverer,
I will not be afraid.
12 He is a crown on my head,
and I will not be shaken.
13 And if everything is shaken,
I stand.
14 And if everything that is seen perishes,
I will not die.
15 The Lord is with me,
and I with him. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (5:7) The Syriac word used for "dulled" is ʿubāyē, which normally means "thick" or "heavy"; it is unclear in this place. Some editors emend it to "weak." The Coptic form of this ode, in the Pistis Sophia, reads "powerless," as reported.

Chapter 6

Ode 6

1 As the wind moves over the harp,
and the strings speak,
2 so the Spirit of the Lord speaks in my limbs,
and I speak by his love.
3 For he destroys everything that is foreign,
and everything belongs to the Lord.
4 For so it was from the beginning,
and so it will be to the end,
5 so that nothing may be against him,
and nothing stand up to oppose him.
6 The Lord has made the knowledge of himself greater,
and he is eager that those things be known which have been given to us through his goodness.
7 And he has given us his praise for the sake of his name;
our spirits praise his Holy Spirit.
8 For a stream went out and became a great and wide river;
it swept away everything, broke it up,
and brought it to the Temple.[a] 9 And the dam-builders among people could not hold it back, nor could the skill of those who hold back waters.
10 For it came over the face of the whole earth,
and filled everything.
11 And all the thirsty on the earth drank,
and thirst was loosened and put out;
12 for the drink was given from the Most High.
13 Blessed, then, are the servants of that drink,
those to whom his water has been entrusted.
14 They have refreshed dry lips,
and raised up the will that had gone slack.
15 And souls that were about to leave,
they seized from death.
16 They set limbs that had collapsed straight and upright again.

17 They put strength into their coming,
and light into their eyes.
18 Everyone recognized them as the Lord's, and they lived by the living water that lasts for ever. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (6:8) "Temple" here is the Syriac word haykla. The Coptic version of this ode (in the Pistis Sophia) has a different sentence for this verse, as reported.

Chapter 7

Ode 7

1 As anger rushes at wrongdoing,
so joy rushes to the beloved,
and brings in its fruits without holding back.[a] 2 My joy is the Lord, and my running is toward him;
this is my beautiful way.
3 For I have the Lord as my helper.
He made himself known to me freely, in his simplicity, because his kindness made his greatness small.
4 He became like me, so that I could take him in;
he was counted like me in his appearance, so that I could put him on.
5 I did not tremble at the sight of him,
because he was gracious to me.
6 He became like my nature, so that I could learn him;
like my form, so that I would not turn away from him.
7 The Father of knowledge is the Word of knowledge.
8 He who created wisdom
is wiser than his works.
9 And he who made me before I was knew what I would do when I came to be.
10 So he was gracious to me in his great graciousness,
and gave me to ask of him,
and to receive from his sacrifice.

11 For he is the one who does not decay,
the fullness of the ages and their Father.
12 He let himself be seen by his own,
so that they might know their maker,
and not imagine that they came from themselves.
13 For he set his path toward knowledge;
he made it wide and made it long,
and brought it to complete fullness.
14 And he set the footprints of his light upon it,
and it went on from the beginning to the end.
15 For through him it was served,
and it rested in the Son.
16 And by his salvation he will lay hold of everything, and the Most High will be made known among his holy ones, 17 to carry word to those who have songs about the Lord's coming,
so that they may go out to meet him,
singing to him with joy and with a harp of many voices.
18 The seers will go before him,
and will be seen before him.
19 They will praise the Lord for his love,
because he is near, and he sees.
20 And hatred will be lifted from the earth,
and will be drowned together with jealousy.
21 Ignorance has been destroyed,
now that the knowledge of the Lord has come.
22 Those who sing will sing of the goodness of the Lord, the Most High,
and bring their psalms.
23 Their heart will be bright as day,
and their sweet voices will match the greatness of the Lord's majesty.
24 And nothing will be without life,
or without knowledge, or without speech.

25 He gave his creation a mouth,
to open the voice of the mouth toward him
and praise him.
26 Declare his power,
and show his goodness. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (7:1) The Syriac reads "anger" (ḥemtā) and "wrongdoing" (ʿawlūtā). Several scholars change these words to "love" and "infancy" or "childhood," because the first half of the comparison then matches the second. The Syriac is translated as it stands.

Chapter 8

Ode 8

1 Open, open your hearts to the rejoicing of the Lord,
and let your love flow from the heart to the lips,
2 to bring the Lord fruit, a holy life,
and to speak watchfully in his light.
3 Rise and stand upright,
you who were once bowed down.
4 You who have been silent, speak,
for your mouth is now opened.
5 You who were despised, be lifted up,
for your righteousness has been lifted up.[a] 6 The Lord's right hand is with you,
and he will help you.
7 And peace was made ready for you before your war ever took place.
8 Listen to the word of truth,
and take in the knowledge of the Most High.
9 Your flesh does not understand what I am telling you,
nor your clothing what I am showing you.
10 Guard my secret,
you who are guarded by it.
11 Guard my faith, you who are guarded by it.

12 And understand my knowledge,
you who know me in truth.
13 Love me with love, you who love.
14 For I do not turn my face away from my own,
because I know them.
15 And before they came to be, I knew them,
and I sealed their faces.[b] 16 I formed their limbs;
my own breasts I made ready for them,
so that they could drink my holy milk, and live on it.
17 I delighted in them,
and I do not blush for them.
18 For they are my work,
and the power of my thoughts.
19 Who then will stand against my work,
or who will not be subject to them?
20 I wanted them, and made mind and heart; and they are mine;
and at my right hand I set my chosen ones.
21 My righteousness goes ahead of them,
and they will not be cut off from my name,
since it is with them.
22 Ask, and increase, and stay in the love of the Lord, beloved ones in the Beloved,
the ones guarded in the Living One,
and the redeemed in the one who was redeemed.
23 And you will be found incorruptible in all the ages,
for the name of your Father. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (8:5) The Digital Syriac Corpus transcription marks a gap here. The verse is given as in Harris and Mingana (1916–1920), "as reported."
- b (8:15) The numbering of the second half of this ode differs between editions. Harris and Mingana number this part 11 to 14 and end the ode at verse 14; this book uses the 23-verse numbering of the Digital Syriac Corpus.

Chapter 9

Ode 9

1 Open your ears,
and I will speak to you.
2 Give me your soul,
so that I may give you my soul too.
3 The word of the Lord and what he desires is a holy thought that he thought concerning his Messiah.
4 For your lives are by the will of the Lord,
and his purpose is life for ever,
and your completion is without decay.
5 Be enriched in God the Father,
and receive the purpose of the Most High.
Be made strong and be redeemed by his goodness.
6 For I announce peace to you, his holy ones,
so that none who hear will fall in battle,
7 and so that those who have come to know him will not perish,
and those who accept him will not be put to shame.
8 Truth is an everlasting crown;
blessed are those who place it on their heads.
9 It is a precious stone,
for there have been wars over the crown.
10 And Righteousness took it, and gave it to you.[a] 11 Put on the crown through the true covenant of the Lord, and all who have conquered will be written in his book.
12 For their writing is the victory that is yours;
and she sees you before her,
and wants you to be redeemed. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (9:10) The Syriac reads zadiqūtā, "Righteousness." Some scholars read zākūtā, "Victory," which suits verses 11–12, where the same word appears for the victory the readers have won.

Chapter 10

Ode 10

1 The Lord shaped my mouth by his word,
and opened my heart by his light.
2 And he made his deathless life dwell in me,
and let me speak the fruit of his peace,
3 to turn back the souls of those who want to come to him,
and to take a good captivity captive, for freedom.
4 I was made strong and mighty, and I took the world captive;
and this became for me a praise of the Most High, and of God my Father.
5 And the nations that were scattered were gathered together;
and I was not made unclean by my sins,[a]
because they praised me in the high places.
6 And the footprints of light were set upon their heart,
and they walked in my life and were redeemed,
and became my people for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (10:5) The Syriac word ḥawbay can mean "my sins," "my debts," or "what I owe."

Chapter 11

Ode 11

1 My heart was circumcised, and its blossom appeared;
and goodness sprang up in it,
and it bore fruit for the Lord.
2 For the Most High circumcised me with his Holy Spirit.
He uncovered my inmost being to himself,
and filled me with his love.
3 His circumcision of me became my redemption.
I ran on the road, in his peace, the road of truth,
4 from the beginning to the end,
and I received his knowledge.
5 And I was set firm on the rock of truth,
where he himself had stood me up.

6 And speaking waters came near my lips from the Lord's spring,
which has no envy.
7 So I drank
and was drunk with the living water that does not die.
8 Yet my drunkenness was not the drunkenness of ignorance,
for I left behind what is empty 9 and turned to the Most High, my God,
and was made rich by his gift.
10 I abandoned the folly that is scattered over the earth;
I stripped it off and threw it away from me.
11 And the Lord renewed me with his own clothing, and took me as his own with his light.
12 From above he gave me rest that cannot decay, and I became like a land that blossoms and rejoices in its fruit.
13 And the Lord was like the sun shining on the face of the land.
14 My eyes were lit,
and my face received the dew.
15 My breath was sweetened by the pleasant fragrance of the Lord.
16 And he took me into his paradise,
where the Lord's pleasure is richly stored.[a] 17 And I bowed down to the Lord because of his glory, 18 and I said: Blessed are those,
Lord, who are planted in your land,
and have their place in your paradise,
19 and who grow with the growth of your trees,
and have passed from darkness into light.
20 … Look, all your workers are good, doing good works,
(and turning from wickedness to your sweetness.)[b]
21 (And they turned the bitterness of the trees away from them, when they were planted in your land.)
22 … and the everlasting memorial of your faithful servants.[c]
23 For the place of your paradise is wide,
and nothing in it is idle,
but everything is full of fruit.

24 Glory to you, God, for the endless delight of paradise. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (11:16) The Greek text of this ode (Papyrus Bodmer XI), as reported, has here six further lines that the Syriac does not have: "I saw trees, flourishing and full of fruit; their crown grew of itself; their wood blossomed and their fruits laughed. Their roots were from deathless ground, and a river of gladness watered them all around, in the land of everlasting life." They are given here as reported and are not part of the Syriac text translated in this book.
- b (11:20) In the Syriac, verses 20 to 22 are damaged. The Digital Syriac Corpus marks gaps with "…" at the start of verses 20 and 22 and puts all of verse 21 and part of verse 20 in round brackets, which signals that these words are supplied or uncertain. They are translated here as they stand, with the gaps shown as "…" and the bracketed words in round brackets.
- c (11:22) As reported, the Greek of this ode has a longer text here and a blessing on "those who see your waters". The Syriac, as far as it survives, has the shorter form translated here.

Chapter 12

Ode 12

1 He filled me with words of truth,
so that I could speak them.
2 As water flows, truth flowed from my mouth,
and my lips revealed its fruit.
3 He caused his knowledge to overflow in me,
because the Lord's mouth is the true Word,
and the doorway of his light.
4 The Most High gave it to his worlds, who are the interpreters of his beauty,
the tellers of his glory,
the confessors of his thought,
the heralds of his mind,
and the teachers of his works.
5 For the swiftness of the Word cannot be told,
and as it is said, so are its speed
and its sharpness; its course has no limit.
6 It never fails but stands firm, and it does not know descent or the way down.[a]

7 For as its work is, so is its aim;
for it is light and the dawning of thought.
8 Through it the worlds speak to one another,
and those who were silent gained speech.
9 Love and harmony came from it, and they told one another what they had.
10 They were stirred by the Word and knew the one who made them,
because they were in harmony.
11 The mouth of the Most High addressed them,
and his explanation ran swiftly through it.
12 For the dwelling place of the Word is the son of man,
and its truth is love.[b]
13 Blessed are those who have understood everything through it, and have known the Lord in his truth. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (12:6) Syriac peṯgāmā, "word, utterance", is the same word used for "Word" in Ode 7:7. It is not the Greek Logos of John 1.
- b (12:12) Syriac bar nāšā, "son of man", can mean simply "a human being".

Chapter 13

Ode 13

1 See, the Lord is our mirror. Open your eyes, and look at yourselves in him,
2 and learn what your faces are like,
and speak praises to his spirit.
3 Wipe the paint off your faces,[a] love his holiness and put it on.
4 Then you will be without blemish before him at all times. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (13:3) The Syriac word ṣīdātā is rare, and its sense is uncertain. "Paint" is a likely guess, since the verse is about faces.

Chapter 14

Ode 14

1 As a son's eyes are on his father,
so my eyes, Lord, are on you at all times.
2 For with you are my breasts and my nourishment.[a]
3 Do not turn your mercies away from me,
Lord, and do not take your kindness from me.
4 Stretch out your right hand to me at all times,
and be my guide to the end, as you please.
5 Let me be pleasing before you for your glory, and for your name's sake let me be rescued from evil.
6 May your gentleness, Lord, stay with me,
and the fruits of your love.
7 Teach me the psalms of your truth,
so that I may bear fruit in you.
8 Open for me the harp of your Holy Spirit, that I may praise you, Lord, with every note of it.
9 And as great as your mercies are,
so give to me, and hurry to grant what we ask.
10 You are able to supply all our needs. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (14:2) Literally "my breasts", the image of a nursing mother, together with the word for refreshment or sustenance.

Chapter 15

Ode 15

1 As the sun is a joy to those who look for its day, so the Lord is my joy.
2 He is my sun;
his rays have lifted me up,
and his light has driven all darkness from my face.
3 In him I gained eyes,
and I saw his holy day.
4 Ears were given to me,
and I heard his truth.
5 The thought of knowledge came to me,
and I was refreshed in him.

6 I left the way of error and went to him,
and I received salvation from him without grudging.
7 He gave to me as his own gift,
and he made me as his great beauty.
8 I put on incorruption by his name,
and took off corruption by his kindness.
9 Death was destroyed before my face,
and Sheol was ended by my word.
10 And deathless life rose in the Lord's land,
and was made known to his faithful, and was given without limit to all who trust in him. Hallelujah.

Chapter 16

Ode 16

1 As the farmer's work is the plow,
and the helmsman's work is steering the ship,
so the psalm of the Lord, in his praises, is my work.
2 My craft and my service are in his praises,
for his love has fed my heart,
and his fruits have gushed up to my lips.
3 The Lord is my love,
and so I will sing to him.
4 For I am strong in praising him,
and I have faith in him.
5 I will open my mouth,
and his Spirit will speak within me the Lord's glory
and his beauty,
6 the deed of his hands
and the toil of his fingers, 7 the greatness of his mercies
and the strength of his word.
8 For the word of the Lord searches out what is not seen,
and examines his thought.[a] 9 The eye sees what he has made,
and the ear hears his thought.

10 He spread out the earth and set the waters in the sea.
11 He stretched out the heavens
and fixed the stars.
12 He established the creation and set it up,
and then rested from his works.
13 Created things run their courses and do their work,
and they do not know how to stand still or be idle.
14 And the heavenly hosts are subject to his word.
15 The treasury of light is the sun,
and the treasury of darkness is the night.
16 He made the sun for the day, to make it bright;
but night brings darkness across the surface of the earth.
17 Their turns, one after the other,
declare the beauty of God.
18 And nothing exists apart from the Lord,
for he was before anything came to be.
19 The worlds came into being through his word,
and through the thought of his heart.
20 Praise and honor to his name. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (16:8) The meaning of the second half is disputed, since it is not clear whose "thought" is meant.

Chapter 17

Ode 17

1 My God crowned me,
and my crown is alive.
2 I was made righteous by my Lord,
and my salvation does not decay.
3 I was set free from empty things,
and I am not condemned.

4 My bonds were cut by her hands.[a] I took the face and shape of a new person,
and walked in it, and was redeemed.
5 And the thought of truth led me,
and I followed it and did not stray.
6 All who saw me were amazed,
and to them I seemed a stranger.
7 And he who knew me and raised me is the Most High,
in all his fullness.[b]
8 He glorified me by his kindness,
and lifted my knowledge to the height of truth.
9 There he gave me the path of his footsteps,
and I opened doors that were shut, 10 and broke the iron bars in pieces;
but my own iron grew hot and melted before me.
11 Nothing seemed shut against me,
since I was the door for all things.
12 I went to all my captives to free them,
so that I would leave no one bound, and none to bind.
13 And I gave my knowledge without grudging,
and my request in my love.
14 I sowed my fruits in hearts,
and changed them into myself.
15 They received my blessing and lived;
they gathered to me and were redeemed.
16 For they became my limbs,
and I was their head.
17 Praise to you, our head, Lord Messiah. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (17:4) The Syriac has "her hands"; the feminine word has no clear antecedent in the surviving text.
- b (17:7) The Digital Syriac Corpus numbers this ode in 17 verses and gives Harris and Mingana's numbering, one lower from here on, in brackets. This book follows the 17-verse numbering.

Chapter 18

Ode 18

1 My heart was raised up by the love of the Most High,
and grew wide, so that I might praise him for his name.
2 My limbs were strengthened
so that they would not fall from his power.
3 Sicknesses drew away from my body,
and it stood before the Lord by his will,
for his kingdom is sure.
4 Lord, because of those who are lacking,
do not take your word from me.
5 And do not, because of their works,
hold back your perfection from me.
6 Do not let light be overcome by darkness,
or truth flee from falsehood.
7 Let your right hand set up victory for our salvation. Receive us from every place, and guard everyone who is held fast by evils.[a] 8 You are my God. Falsehood and death are not in your mouth; perfection is your will.
9 You do not know emptiness,
because it does not know you either.
10 You do not know error,
because it does not know you either.
11 And ignorance appeared like dust,
and like the foam of the sea.
12 The empty-minded thought it great,
and they too became like it, and were emptied.
13 But those who knew, and who thought it through,
knew, and were not defiled by their thoughts.
14 They were in the Most High's mind,
and they laughed at those who walk in error.
15 These spoke truth,
out of the breath the Most High had breathed into them.

16 Praise and great majesty to his name. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (18:7) The sense of this verse is uncertain in the Syriac.

Chapter 19

Ode 19

1 I was offered a cup of milk, and I drank it in the sweet kindness of the Lord.
2 The Son is the cup, and the one who was milked is the Father, and the Holy Spirit milked him, 3 because his breasts were full,
and it was not right that his milk be poured out for nothing.
4 The Holy Spirit opened her womb,
and mixed the milk from the Father's two breasts,[a] 5 and gave the mixture to the world, though they did not know it. And those who take it in its fullness are on the right hand.
6 (The womb of the virgin took it,
and she conceived and gave birth.
7 And the virgin became a mother with many mercies.)[b]
8 She was in labor and bore a son, and had no pain,
because it did not happen without purpose.
9 And she did not need a midwife,
because he delivered her.
10 She gave birth like a man,
by her own will; she gave birth openly,
and took firm possession of him with a great hold.
11 She loved him in redemption,
and guarded him in kindness,
and showed him in majesty. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (19:4) In Syriac the word for "Spirit", rūḥā, can be feminine, which is why the Spirit is "her" here.
- b (19:7) Verses 6 and 7 are in round brackets in the Digital Syriac Corpus, which marks words that are damaged or supplied.

Chapter 20

Ode 20

1 I am a priest of the Lord,
and I serve him as a priest.
2 And I offer to him the sacrifice of his own thought.
3 For his thought is not like the world,
nor like the flesh, nor like those who serve in the way of the flesh.
4 The sacrifice of the Lord is righteousness,
and a pure heart and pure lips.
5 Offer your inmost parts without blemish. Let your affections not press upon affections, and let your own self not press upon another self.
6 Do not buy a stranger with the blood of your own life,[a]
and do not strip him of the covering of his shame.
7 But put on the Lord's kindness, without grudging, and come to his paradise,
and make yourself a crown from his tree.
8 Put it on your head and be glad,
and lean on his rest.
9 His glory will go ahead of you,
and you will receive from his kindness and goodness,
and be anointed with truth in the glory of his holiness.
10 Praise and honor to his name. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (20:6) The Digital Syriac Corpus shows that a line is missing here. Other editions supply a line about not cheating a neighbor, which is given here only "as reported" and is not translated.

Chapter 21

Ode 21

1 I lifted up my arms to the height,
to the mercy of the Lord,
2 because he had thrown my bonds off me, and my helper lifted me up to his mercy and to his salvation.

3 I put off darkness
and put on light.
4 And I gained limbs besides my soul,
and there was no sickness or affliction or suffering in them.
5 And above all the thought of the Lord was a help to me,
and his fellowship, which does not decay.
6 I was lifted up into the light,
and I passed before his face.
7 I kept near him, praising and confessing him. …
8 My heart overflowed and appeared in my mouth,
and rose upon my lips.
9 And the gladness of the Lord and his praise grew on my face. Hallelujah.

Chapter 22

Ode 22

1 He who brought me down from on high,
and brought me up from the regions below,
2 who gathers what is in the middle and throws them to me,
3 who scattered my enemies
and my opponents,
4 who gave me power over bonds,
to loose them,
5 who with my hands struck down the seven-headed dragon,
and set me over its roots to destroy its seed.
6 You were there to help me,
and everywhere your name was around me.
7 Your right hand destroyed (the poison of evil),
and your hand made the way smooth for those who trust in you.
8 (You chose them) from the graves,
(and you separated them) from the dead.
9 You took dead bones
and covered them with bodies.

10 They were motionless,
and you gave the power to work to the living.
11 Your way was without decay, and so was your face. You brought your world to incorruption, so that everything might be dissolved and made new, 12 and that your rock might be the foundation of everything. Upon it you built your kingdom, and it became the dwelling place of the holy ones. Hallelujah.

Chapter 23

Ode 23

1 Joy is for the holy ones,
and who can put it on but they alone?
2 Grace belongs to the chosen, and who will receive it except those who have trusted in it from the beginning?
3 Love belongs to the chosen, and who will put it on except those who have owned it from the beginning?
4 Walk in the knowledge of the Most High,
and you will know the Lord's kindness without grudging,
and for his gladness, and for the perfection of his knowledge.
5 His thought was like a letter,
and his will came down from the height,
6 and it was sent like an arrow shot from a bow with force.
7 And many hands rushed to the letter,
to snatch it and take it and read it.
8 But it escaped from their fingers,
and they were afraid of it and of the seal on it, 9 because they were not allowed to break its seal,
for the power over the seal was greater than they.
10 But those who saw it went after the letter,
to know where it would land,
and who would read it,
and who would hear it.

11 But a wheel received it,
and it came upon the wheel.
12 And with it was a sign of kingship and of government.
13 And everything that disturbed the wheel it mowed down and cut off.
14 It gathered a crowd of adversaries,
and spanned rivers,
and uprooted many forests,
15 and made a broad road.
16 The head came down to the feet,
because the wheel ran as far as the feet,
and whatever had come upon it.
17 The letter was a command,
because all the places were gathered together.
18 And a head was seen, the head that was revealed,
the Son of truth from the Father, the Most High.
19 And he inherited everything and took it. And the plan of the many was brought to an end.
20 Then all the rebels grew hot and fled,
and those who persecuted and hated were put out.
21 And the letter was a great tablet,
written completely by the finger of God.
22 The name of the Father was upon it,
and also of the Son and of the Holy Spirit,
to reign for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

Chapter 24

Ode 24

1 The dove fluttered over the head of our Lord Messiah, because he was her head.
2 She sang over him,
and her voice could be heard.
3 The inhabitants were afraid,
and the settlers were shaken.

4 The bird gave up its wings,
and every creeping thing died in its hole.
5 The depths were opened and covered again,
and they cried to the Lord like women in labor.
6 And no food was given to them,
because it was not theirs.
7 And the depths sank in the Lord's sinking,[a]
and they perished in the thought they had held from the beginning.
8 For they had been corrupt from the beginning,
and the end of their corruption was life.
9 And everything about them that was lacking perished, because they had no word to speak so that they might live.
10 And the Lord destroyed the thoughts of all those who had no truth.
11 For those who were lifted up in their hearts lacked wisdom,
and so were rejected, because truth was not with them.
12 And they were removed,
because truth was not with them.
13 For the Lord revealed his way
and spread out his kindness,
14 and those who recognized it know his holiness. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (24:7) The Syriac uses the same root twice, "sank" and "sinking", and the word can also mean "sealing". The sense of the verse is uncertain.

Chapter 25

Ode 25

1 I was set free from my bonds,
and I ran to you, my God.
2 (For you were the right hand of salvation)
and my helper.
3 You held back those who stood against me,
and (they were not seen again).
4 For your face was with me,
and it saved me by your kindness.

5 But in the eyes of many I was despised and rejected, and in their sight I was like lead.
6 And strength came to me from you,
and help.
7 You set a lamp for me on my right and on my left,
so that nothing in me would be without light.
8 I was covered with the cover of your Spirit,
and I took off the garments of skin.
9 For your right hand lifted me up and took sickness away from me.
10 I became strong in your truth,
and holy in your righteousness.
11 (All my enemies were afraid of me,) and I became the Lord's, in the Lord's name.
12 By his kindness I was made righteous,
and his rest lasts for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

Chapter 26

Ode 26

1 I poured out praise to the Lord,
because I belong to him.
2 I will speak his holy song,
because my heart is with him.
3 For his harp is in my hands,
and the songs of his rest will not be silent.
4 I will cry to him with my whole heart;
with every limb I will praise and exalt him.
5 His praise reaches from the east to the west,
6 and his thanksgiving from the south to the north,
7 and his perfection from the summit of the hills to their farthest edge.
8 Who can write down the psalms of the Lord,
or who can read them?
9 Or who can train his soul for life,
so that his soul may be saved?

10 Or who can rest on the Most High,
so that he may speak from his mouth?
11 Who can interpret the Lord's wonders? For the one who interprets will be dissolved, and what is interpreted will remain.
12 It is enough to know, and to rest,
for the singers stand in rest, 13 like a river that has an abundant spring
and flows to help those who seek it. Hallelujah.

Chapter 27

Ode 27

1 I stretched out my hands
and hallowed my Lord,
2 for the stretching of my hands is his sign,
3 and my spreading out is the upright wood. Hallelujah.

Chapter 28

Ode 28

1 As the wings of doves over their young,
and the mouths of their young toward their mouths,
so are the wings of the Spirit over my heart.
2 My heart is glad and leaps,
like the baby that leaps in its mother's womb.
3 I believed, and so I was at rest,
because he in whom I believed is faithful.
4 He has richly blessed me,
and my head is with him.
5 And the sword will not separate me from him,
nor the blade.
6 For I was made ready before destruction came,
and was set on his wings that do not decay.[a] 7 Deathless life embraced me and kissed me,

[8] and from it comes the Spirit that is in me,
and it cannot die, for it is alive.
[9] Those who saw me were amazed,
because I was being hunted,
[10] and they thought I had been swallowed up,
since to them I looked like one of the lost.
[11] But my oppression became my salvation.
[12] I became their reproach,
because there was no envy in me.
[13] Because I did good to every person,
I was hated.
[14] And they surrounded me like mad dogs,
who in ignorance attack their masters, [15] for their thinking is corrupt,
and they twist their understanding.
[16] But I held waters in my right hand,
and I bore their bitterness with my sweetness.
[17] I did not perish, because I was not their brother,
and my birth was not like theirs.
[18] They sought my death and did not find it,
because I was older than the memory of them,
and in vain they cast lots against me.
[19] And those who came after me tried in vain to wipe out the memory of him who was before them.
[20] The mind of the Most High cannot be forestalled, and his heart is greater than all wisdom. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (28:6) The Digital Syriac Corpus numbers this ode in 20 verses and gives Harris and Mingana's numbers, one lower from here on, in brackets. This book follows the 20-verse numbering.

Chapter 29

Ode 29

[1] The Lord is my hope;
I will not be ashamed in him.

2 For he made me according to his glory,
and in the same way he gave to me according to his kindness.
3 He raised me according to his mercies,
and lifted me up according to his great beauty.
4 He brought me up from the depths of Sheol,
and drew me out of the mouth of death.
5 And I laid my enemies low,
6 and he made me righteous by his kindness. For I believed in the Lord's Messiah,
7 and I came to see that he is the Lord. And he showed me his sign,
8 and led me by his light. He gave me the rod of his power, to bring down the thoughts of the nations
and to humble the strength of the mighty, 9 to wage war with his word,
and to win the victory by his power.
10 The Lord threw down my enemy with his word,
and he became like dust that the wind carries away.
11 I praised the Most High, because he has lifted up his servant and the son of his maidservant. Hallelujah.

Chapter 30

Ode 30

1 Fill yourselves with water from the Lord's living spring, because it has been opened for you.
2 And come, all you who are thirsty,
and take the drink, and rest by the Lord's spring.
3 For it is lovely and pure,
and gives rest to the soul.
4 Its waters are far sweeter than honey,
and the honeycomb of bees cannot be compared with it.
5 It flows from the Lord's lips,
and its name came from the Lord's heart.
6 It came without limit and unseen, and until it was set in the middle, no one knew it.

7 Blessed are those who have drunk of it and found rest in it. Hallelujah.

Chapter 31

Ode 31

1 The depths were dissolved before the Lord,
and darkness vanished at the sight of him.
2 Error went astray and perished
because of him, and folly (found no path, and sank) before the Lord's truth.
3 He opened his mouth and spoke kindness and joy, and he spoke a new song to his name.
4 He lifted his voice to the Most High,
and presented to him the sons who were in his hand.
5 And his face was made righteous,
because his holy Father had given it to him so.
6 Come out, you who were afflicted,
and receive joy.
7 Take possession of your souls through kindness,
and take for yourselves deathless life.
8 They condemned me when I stood up,
though I was not guilty.
9 They divided my spoil,
though nothing was owed to them.
10 But I endured, and was silent, and was still,
as though I were not moved by them.
11 I stood firm, not shaken,
like a solid rock that is beaten by waves and stands.
12 And I bore their bitterness for the sake of gentleness,
to redeem my people and make them heirs,
13 so that I would not cancel my promises to the patriarchs, to whom I had pledged the redemption of their seed. Hallelujah.

Chapter 32

Ode 32

1 The blessed have joy from their hearts,
and light from him who dwells in them,
2 and the Word from the truth, who came to be from himself.
3 For the Most High's holy power made him strong,
and he is unmoved for ever and ever. Hallelujah.

Chapter 33

Ode 33

1 Again grace ran, and left corruption,
and came down upon it to empty it.
2 And he destroyed perdition before her,
and ruined all its order.
3 He stood on a high place and lifted his voice,
from the far end of the earth to the other.
4 He drew to himself all who obeyed him,
and he did not look like an evil one.
5 But a perfect virgin stood,
who was proclaiming, and calling out, and saying:
6 Children of men, turn back,
and you their daughters, come,
7 and leave the ways of this corruption,
and draw near to me.
8 I will enter into you and bring you out of destruction,
and make you wise in the ways of truth.
9 Do not be corrupted,
and do not perish.
10 Listen to me and be redeemed,
for the kindness of God is what I speak among you.
11 Through me you will be redeemed
and blessed. I am your judge.
12 Those who put me on will not be wronged,
but will gain a new world without corruption.

13 My chosen ones walked in me, and I will make my ways known to those who seek me,
and I will make them trust in my name. Hallelujah.

Chapter 34

Ode 34

1 No path is hard where the heart is simple,
nor is there any wound among upright thoughts.
2 Nor is there a storm in the depth of the shining thought.
3 Where a person is surrounded on every side by beauty,
there is nothing divided.
4 The pattern of what is below is what is above.
5 Everything is above,
and below there is nothing,
though those without knowledge imagine it.
6 Grace was revealed for your salvation. Believe,
and you will live, and be saved. Hallelujah.

Chapter 35

Ode 35

1 The dew of the Lord settled on me in rest,
and he raised a cloud of peace over my head,
2 which guarded me at all times,
and became salvation to me.
3 Everything was shaken and frightened,
and smoke and judgment came out from them.
4 But I was quiet under the Lord's decree, and he was more to me than a shelter, and more than a foundation.
5 I was carried like a child on its mother's lap,
and he gave me milk, the Lord's dew.
6 And I grew by his gift,
and found rest in his perfection.
7 And I stretched out my hands as my soul rose up,
and I was made straight toward the Most High,
and was redeemed to him. Hallelujah.

Chapter 36

Ode 36

1 I rested in the Spirit of the Lord,
and she lifted me up to the height.
2 She set me on my feet in the Lord's height,
before his perfection and his glory,
while I praised him with the composition of his songs.
3 She bore me before the Lord's face,
and though I was a son of man,
I was named the Shining One, the Son of God.
4 For I was glorified among the glorious,
and great among the great.
5 For as great as the Most High is,
so she made me, and by his newness he renewed me.
6 He anointed me out of his perfection,
and I became one of his near ones.
7 My mouth was opened like a dewy cloud,
and my heart poured out a stream of righteousness.
8 I came near in peace,
and was established in the Spirit of guidance. Hallelujah.

Chapter 37

Ode 37

1 I stretched out my hands to my Lord,
and to the Most High I raised my voice.
2 I spoke with my heart's lips,
and he heard me as soon as my voice reached him.
3 His word came to me,
and gave me the fruits of my labors,
4 and gave me rest by the kindness of the Lord. Hallelujah.

Chapter 38

Ode 38

1 I went up into the light of truth as into a chariot,
and truth guided me and carried me.

2 It carried me across pits and chasms,
and rescued me from cliffs and waves.
3 It became a harbor of salvation for me,
and set me on the step of life that has no death.
4 And it went with me, and gave me rest, and did not let me go astray, because it was truth, and it is.
5 I had no danger, because I walked with it;
and I did not go wrong in anything, because I listened to it.
6 For error ran away from it, and never met it.
7 And truth walked on the upright road,
and whatever I did not know it showed me,
8 all the poisons of error, and the scourges which are thought to be death's sweetness.[a] 9 And I saw the destroyer of corruption,
when the corrupting bride was being adorned,
and the bridegroom who corrupts and is corrupted.
10 And I asked the truth, "Who are these?" And it said to me,
"This is the Deceiver and Error." 11 They mimic the Beloved and his bride,
and mislead the world and corrupt it.
12 They invite many to the banquet,
and give them the wine of their drunkenness to drink, 13 and make them vomit up their wisdom
and knowledge, and leave them without sense.
14 Then they abandon them,
and these go about raving and ruined, 15 since they have no heart,
and do not look for one.
16 And I became wise, so as not to fall into the deceivers' hands, and I rejoiced in myself that truth went with me.[b] 17 I was made firm, and lived,
and was redeemed,
and my foundations were laid on the Lord's hand,

18 because he planted me. He set the root,
watered it, secured it,
and blessed it,
19 and its fruits are for ever. (It went deep, and rose,
and spread out,) and was full and grew great.
20 The Lord alone was glorified,
in his planting and his farming,
21 in his care, and in the blessing of his lips,
in the fair planting by his right hand, 22 and in the skill of his planting,
and in the knowledge of his mind. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (38:8) The Syriac word translated "scourges" (nāgdē) can also mean "cords" or "goads".
- b (38:16) From here to the end of the ode the Digital Syriac Corpus also gives Harris and Mingana's numbers in brackets, one lower than those used here; Ode 38 therefore has 22 verses in this book but 21 in their edition.

Chapter 39

Ode 39

1 Mighty rivers are the power of the Lord,
which carry away headlong those who despise him,
2 and tangle their paths,
and ruin their crossings,
3 and snatch their bodies,
and destroy their souls.
4 For they are faster than lightning,
and swifter.
5 But those who cross them in faith will not be shaken,
6 and those who walk through them blamelessly will not fear.
7 For the Lord is the sign in them, and the sign becomes the way for those who cross in the name of the Lord.
8 So clothe yourselves in the name of the Most High, and know him, and you will cross safely, since the rivers will be subject to you.

9 The Lord bridged them with his word,
then walked over them and crossed on foot.
10 And his footprints stand on the water and were not harmed, but are like wood fixed in truth.
11 On this side and on that the waves rose,
but the footprints of our Lord the Messiah stand, 12 and are not blotted out and are not destroyed.
13 A road has been laid down for those who cross after him, and for those who keep to the way of his faith and worship his name. Hallelujah.

Chapter 40

Ode 40

1 As honey drips from the combs of bees, and milk runs from a woman who loves her children, so is my hope on you, my God.
2 As a spring pours out its waters,
so my heart pours forth the Lord's praise,
and my lips bring out praise to him.
3 My tongue is sweet with his words,
and my limbs are made sweet by his songs.[a] 4 My face rejoices in his gladness,
my spirit exults in his love,
and my soul is radiant in him.
5 One who fears will trust in him,
and in him salvation will be sure.
6 His gain is life that does not die,
and those who receive it are without corruption. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (40:3) In the Digital Syriac Corpus some letters of "my limbs" are damaged and supplied by the editors.

Chapter 41

Ode 41

1 Let all his children praise the Lord,
and let them take up the truth of his faith.
2 Let his sons be known to him;
therefore let us sing in his love.
3 We live in the Lord by his kindness,
and we receive life by his Messiah.
4 For a great day has dawned on us,
and wonderful is he who gave us of his glory.
5 So let us all together be united in the name of the Lord,
and honor him in his goodness.
6 May our faces shine in his light,
and our hearts reflect on his love,
night and day.
7 Let us rejoice with the joy of the Lord.
8 Let everyone who sees me be astonished,
because I come from a different race.
9 The Father of truth remembered me,
who acquired me from the beginning.
10 For his riches bore me,
and the thought of his heart.
11 His Word is with us on all our road,
the Savior who gives life and does not cast out our souls.
12 He is the man who humbled himself,
and was lifted up by his own righteousness.
13 The Son of the Most High was seen in his Father's perfection, 14 and light dawned from the Word who was in him from of old.
15 The Messiah is truly one,
and was known before the foundations of the world, …[a] 16 so that he might give souls life for ever through the truth of his name. A new song of praise to the Lord from those who love him. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (41:15) The corpus text marks a gap in the manuscript after "foundations of the world".

Chapter 42

Ode 42

1 I stretched out my hands and came near to my Lord,
for the stretching of my hands is his sign.
2 And my spreading out is the upright wood,
that was hung on the way of the Upright One.
3 And I was of no use to those who knew me, because I was hidden from those who did not hold me.[a] 4 But I will be with those who love me.
5 All my persecutors are dead, and they sought me,
those who had put their hope in me, because I live.
6 I rose, and I am with them,
and I will speak through their mouths.
7 For they put away those who pursued them,
and I laid on them the yoke of my love.
8 As the bridegroom's arm rests over the bride,
so my yoke rests over those who know me.
9 And as the bridal chamber is spread out in the house of the bridegrooms,
so is my love over those who believe in me.
10 I was not cast out, though they thought so;
and I did not perish, though they planned it against me.
11 Sheol saw me and was afflicted,
and death gave me up, and many with me.
12 I was gall and bitterness to it, and I descended with it to the limit of its depth.
13 And I let go its feet and head,
because they could not bear my face.
14 And I made a congregation of the living among its dead,
and spoke with them with living lips,
so that my word would not be in vain.
15 And those who had died ran to me, and cried out and said, "Have pity on us, Son of God,

16 and act toward us in your kindness,
and bring us out from the chains of darkness, 17 and open for us the door through which we may come out to you. For we see that death has not touched you.
18 May we also be redeemed with you,
for you are our Redeemer."
19 And I heard their voice,
and set their faith in my heart, 20 and set my name on their heads,
for they are free and are mine. Hallelujah.

Notes

- a (42:3) Verses 3 and 7 are difficult in the Syriac, and the sense given here is uncertain.

Life of Adam and Eve

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

1 After they were driven out of paradise, they built themselves a hut and spent seven days mourning and wailing in deep sorrow. 2 When the seven days were over, they began to feel hungry, and they looked for something to eat, but could find nothing.

Chapter 2

1 Then Eve spoke to Adam: "Master, I am starving. Go and find us something to eat. 2 Perhaps the Lord God will look on us again and take pity, and call us back to the place where we used to be." 3 So Adam got up and walked for seven days across the whole country, and he found no food like the food they had had in paradise.

Chapter 3

1 Then Eve said to Adam, "My lord, you would do better to kill me, so that I die. Perhaps then the Lord God will bring you back into paradise, because it was on my account that the Lord God was angry with you. 2 Do you want to put me to death? Perhaps the Lord God will bring you into paradise again, since it was because of me that you were driven out." 3 Adam answered, "Eve, do not talk like that, or the Lord God may bring another curse on us. How could I raise my hand against my own flesh? 4 No, let us get up and look for something to live on, so that we do not waste away."

Chapter 4

1 So they set out and went on searching for nine days, and found nothing like what they had had in paradise. They found only what the animals ate. 2 Then Adam said to Eve, "The Lord gave this food to the animals and wild beasts to eat. We used to have the food of angels. 3 It is right and proper that we should grieve before the face of God who made us. Let us do great penance. Perhaps the Lord God will forgive us, take pity on us, and provide a way for us to live."

Chapter 5

1 Eve said to Adam, "My lord, tell me what penance is and how I should do it. I am afraid we may take on a burden we cannot bear, and then he will not hear our prayers, and the Lord will turn his face away from us, because we have not kept what we promised. 2 My lord, you have thought how much you are willing to bear in penance, because I brought this toil and trouble on you."

Chapter 6

1 Adam said to Eve, "You cannot do as much as I can. Do only as much as will save you. 2 I will fast for forty days. You must get up and go to the river Tigris, find a stone, step onto it in the current, and stay where the river is deep enough to reach your neck. 3 No word is to come out of your mouth, because we are not fit to pray to the Lord; our lips are unclean from the forbidden tree we were told not to touch. 4 Stand in the water of the river for thirty-seven days. I will stand in the water of the Jordan for forty days. Perhaps the Lord God will take pity on us."

Chapter 7

1 Eve went to the river Tigris and did what Adam had told her. 2 Adam in the same way went to the Jordan and took his stand on a stone, the water reaching his neck.

Chapter 8

1 Adam said, "Waters of the Jordan, I am speaking to you: suffer with me. Gather to me all the creatures that swim in you, so that they surround me and mourn with me. 2 Let them not lament for themselves, but for me, because it was not they who sinned, but I." 3 Immediately all the living creatures came and crowded around him, and from that hour the Jordan's water halted and did not flow.

Chapter 9

1 When eighteen days had passed, Satan became angry. He changed himself into the brightness of the angels, went to the river Tigris, to Eve, and found her weeping. 2 The devil himself, as if he grieved for her, began to cry and told her, "Leave the river, and stop your weeping. Stop your sadness and your groaning now. 3 Why are you so anxious, you and your husband Adam? The Lord God has heard your groaning and accepted your penance, and all of us angels have begged the Lord on your behalf. 4 He has sent me to lead you from the water and to give you the food you used to have in paradise, the food you have been mourning for. 5 So come out of the water now, and I will lead you to the place where your food is ready."

Chapter 10

1 When Eve heard this, she believed him. She left the river, and her skin looked like grass shriveled by the chill of the water. 2 As she climbed out she collapsed on the ground; the devil lifted her to her feet and took her to Adam. 3 When Adam saw her and the devil with her, he cried out in tears, "Oh, Eve, Eve! Where is the work of your penance? 4 How have you been deceived again by our enemy, the one who caused us to be shut out of our home in paradise and from its spiritual joy?"

Chapter 11

1 When Eve heard this, she realized that the devil had talked her into leaving the river. She fell on her face on the ground, and her grief and groaning and lamenting were doubled. 2 She cried out, "Curse you, devil! Why do you attack us for nothing? What do you have against us? What have we done to you, that you pursue us so cunningly?
What does your wickedness have to do with us? 3 Did we take your glory away and leave you without honor? Why do you hound us to death, you wicked and spiteful enemy?"

Chapter 12

1 The devil groaned and said, "Adam, all my hostility and envy and pain are aimed at you. Because of you I was driven out and cut off from the glory that I had in heaven among the angels, and because of you I was thrown down to earth." 2 Adam answered, "What have I done to you? What is my fault against you? You have not been harmed or hurt by us, so why do you hunt us down?"

Chapter 13

1 The devil answered, "Adam, what are you saying to me? It is because of you that I was thrown out. When you were formed, I was thrown out from God's presence and sent away from the company of the angels. 2 When God breathed the breath of life into you, and your face and likeness were made in the image of God, Michael brought you and made you bow down in the sight of God. And the Lord God said, 'See, Adam, I have made you in our image and likeness.'"

Chapter 14

1 "Michael went out and summoned every angel: 'Bow down to the image of the Lord God, as the Lord God has ordered.' Michael was the first to bow. Next he summoned me and said, 'Bow down to the image of God, Yahweh.' 2 My answer was, 'Worshiping Adam is not something I have to do.' But Michael kept urging me to bow, and I said to him, 'Why are you forcing me? I will not worship one who is lower than I am and came after me. In creation I am older than he is. Before he was made, I had already been made. He ought to worship me.'"

Chapter 15

1 "The other angels who served under me heard this, and they also refused to bow to him. Michael said, 'Worship the image of God. If you do not, the Lord God will be angry with you.' 2 And I said, 'If he is angry with me, I will set my throne above the stars of heaven and be like the Most High.'"

Chapter 16

1 "The Lord God was angry with me, and sent me out with my angels from our glory. Because of you we were driven out of our homes into this world and thrown down on the earth. 2 At once we were in pain, because we had been stripped of such great glory. And it hurt us to see you in such great delight. 3 So I tricked your wife by deceit, and through her I had you driven out of your joyful delights, just as I was driven out of my glory."

Chapter 17

1 When Adam heard this from the devil, he cried out in great tears and said, "Lord my God, my life is in your hands. Keep this enemy of mine far from me, he who is trying to destroy my soul, and give me the glory that he himself has lost." 2 At once the devil disappeared from his sight. And Adam stayed on, standing in penance in the water of the Jordan for forty days.

Chapter 18

1 Eve said to Adam, "Live, my lord. Life has been granted to you, because you were not guilty of the first or the second transgression. It was I who broke the commandment and was led astray, because I did not keep the command of God. 2 Now send me away from the light of this life. I will go to the west, where the sun sets, and stay there until I die." 3 She began to walk toward the western regions, and she began to mourn and weep bitterly with loud groaning. There she made herself a shelter, carrying a child of three months in her womb.

Chapter 19

1 When the time of her delivery came near, she began to be tormented by pains. She cried out to the Lord, "Have mercy on me, Lord; help me." But she was not heard, and God's mercy did not come to her. 2 Then she said to herself, "Who will tell my lord Adam? I beg you, lights of heaven, when you return to the east, tell my lord Adam."

Chapter 20

1 At that very hour Adam said, "I hear Eve crying out. Perhaps the serpent is fighting with her again." 2 He walked on and came upon her in terrible distress. Eve said, "From the moment I saw you, my lord, my soul, caught in its pains, was refreshed. 3 Now pray to the Lord God for me, so that he will hear you and look on me and free me from these terrible pains." And Adam prayed to the Lord for Eve.

Chapter 21

1 Then twelve angels came, with two powers, who stood on the right and left of Eve. Michael stood on her right, touched her face down to her breast, and said to her, "You are blessed, Eve, because of Adam.
His prayers and entreaties are great, and I have been sent to you so that you can receive our help. 2 Get up now and prepare for the birth."
She gave birth to a son, and he shone with light. 3 The baby at once rose and ran; he plucked some grass with his own hands and handed it to his mother. His name was called Cain.

Chapter 22

1 Adam took Eve and the boy and led them to the east. 2 The Lord God sent the angel Michael with seeds of various kinds. He handed them to Adam and taught him to till the soil and tend it, so that they would have fruit to live on, they and all their descendants.

Chapter 23

1 After that Eve conceived again and bore a son named Abel. Cain stayed together with Abel. 2 Eve said to Adam, "My lord, I had a vision in my sleep: I saw the blood of our son Abel in Cain's hand, and Cain was swallowing it down with his mouth. That is why I am troubled." 3 Adam said, "Oh no! May Cain not kill Abel! Let us separate them from each other and give each of them a separate home." 4 They made Cain a farmer and Abel a shepherd, to keep them apart. But after this Cain killed Abel. Adam was then 130 years old, and Abel was 122 when he was killed.

Chapter 24

1 After this Adam knew his wife and she bore a son, and he named him Seth. Adam said to Eve, "See, I have had a son to replace Abel, the one Cain killed." 2 After Seth was born, Adam lived another eight hundred years and had thirty sons and thirty daughters, sixty-three in all.[a] They multiplied over the earth, in their nations.

Notes

- a (24:2) The Latin says "sixty-three" (LXIII), but thirty sons and thirty daughters make sixty; the figure is kept as the manuscripts give it.

Chapter 25

1 Adam said to Seth, "Listen, my son Seth, and I will tell you what I heard and saw. After my wife, your mother, and I were driven out of paradise, while we were praying, the archangel Michael, a messenger of God, came to me. 2 I saw a chariot that moved like the wind, with wheels of fire, and I was carried off to the paradise of righteousness. 3
I saw the Lord seated, and his appearance was a blazing fire, unbearable. And many thousands of angels stood to the right and left of his chariot."

Chapter 26

1 "When I saw this, I was terrified. Fear seized me, and I bowed down before God, face to the ground. 2 God said to me, 'See, you will die, because you went against God's command: you listened to your wife's voice more than to mine, though I gave her into your power to have her at your will. You listened to her, and my words you disregarded.'"

Chapter 27

1 "At these words of God I fell to the ground, bowed to the Lord, and said, 'My Lord, almighty God, merciful, holy, and loving, do not let the name of your majesty's memory be wiped out. 2 Turn my soul back, for I am dying and my breath will leave my mouth. Do not cast me from your presence, I whom you formed from the clay of the earth, and do not put aside your grace for the one you nourished. 3 See, your word comes to me.' And the Lord said to me, 'Because your days are numbered, you have become a lover of knowledge; for this reason it will not be taken away from your seed for ever, to serve me.'"[a]

Notes

- a (27:3) The Latin of the last clause is obscure (quoniam figurantur dies tui factus es diligens scientiam), and the translation is a best guess at its sense.

Chapter 28

1 "After hearing this I lay face down on the ground and bowed before the Lord God, saying, 'You are the eternal and most high God, and all creatures give you honor and praise. 2 You are the true light, shining above every light, the living life, a power of incomprehensible greatness. The spiritual powers give you honor and praise. [3] You work the great wonders of your mercy with the human race.'"

Chapter 29

[1] "After I worshiped the Lord, the archangel Michael at once took my hand and led me out of the paradise of God's visitation and command. [2] Michael had a rod in his hand. He touched the waters around paradise, and they turned to ice. I crossed over, and Michael crossed with me, and brought me back to the place from which he had taken me. [3] Listen, my son Seth, to the other mysteries and secrets of what is to come, which were revealed to me, who ate from the tree of knowledge and came to know and understand what will happen in this world." [4] ... what will happen in this age, what God will do for his creature, the human race. The Lord will appear in a blaze of fire. Out of his majestic mouth he will give everyone commands and rules (from his mouth a sword will come, sharp on both sides), and in the house where his majesty dwells they will hallow him. And he will show them the wonderful place of his majesty.[a] [5] Then they will build a house for the Lord their God on the earth, in the land where he fed them (the land he will prepare for them). There they will disobey his commands, their sanctuary will be set on fire, and their land will be left desolate, and they themselves will be scattered, because they have angered God. Yet again (on the third day, or the seventh) he will save them from their scattering, and they will build the house of God once more, and at the last that house will be lifted higher than it was before. And again wickedness will overcome justice. [6] After that God will live among people on earth, to be seen. Then justice will begin to shine. The house of God will be honored for ever, and hostile powers will no longer be able to harm those who believe in God. For himself God will bring forth a loyal people, and he will keep them safe for all ages. The wicked who refused to love his law will be punished by God their king. Heaven and earth, night and day, and all creatures will obey him; they will not go beyond his command or change their works. But people will change, abandoning the law of the Lord. 7 For this the Lord will drive the wicked away from himself, and the righteous will gleam like the sun before God's eyes. At that time people will be cleansed of their sins by water; but those who refuse to be cleansed by water will be condemned. Happy will be the person who has set his soul right, when the judgments and great deeds of God take place among people, and their actions are examined by God, the righteous judge.

Notes

- a (29:4) Verses 4–7 (marked "a–d" in Meyer's edition) are an addition found in only some of the Latin manuscripts. The Latin of this passage is uneven, and words in round brackets are variants or additions printed in the Latin text itself.

Chapter 30

1 In the 930th year of his life, Adam knew that his days were running out, and he said, "Gather all my sons around me, so that I may speak with them and give them my blessing before I die." 2 They gathered in three groups before him, in front of the prayer house where they used to worship the Lord God. They asked him, "Father, what is wrong? Why did you call us together, and why are you lying in your bed?" 3 Adam answered, "My children, I am in pain and I am ill." All his sons said to him, "Father, what does it mean to be ill with pain?"

Chapter 31

1 Then his son Seth said, "Lord, perhaps you are longing for the fruit of paradise that you used to eat, and that is why you are lying here grieved? Say the word, and I will go to the gates of paradise nearest us, sprinkle dust on my head, lie on the ground in front of the gates, and cry out in great lament, pleading with the Lord. Perhaps he will listen and send his angel to fetch me some of the fruit you crave." 2 Adam answered, "No, my son, that is not what I want. What I have is an illness, and a great pain in my body." 3 Seth said, "Father and lord, I do not know what pain is. Do not hide it from us, but tell us."

Chapter 32

1 Adam answered, "Listen to me, my children. At our creation, mine and your mother's, God placed us in paradise. Every fruit tree there was given to us for food, but he forbade us: 'Do not eat from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, which stands in the middle of paradise.' [2] He shared out paradise between your mother and me. I received the eastern trees and those of the northern side, which faces the north wind; to your mother he gave the southern part and the western."

Chapter 33

[1] "The Lord God gave us two angels to guard us. When the hour came for the angels to go up to worship in the sight of God, the enemy, the devil, found his chance, while the angels were absent. [2] The devil deceived your mother into eating from the forbidden tree we were told not to touch. She ate, and gave to me."

Chapter 34

[1] "The Lord God grew angry with us at once. He told me, 'You abandoned my commandment and did not obey the word I laid on you, I will bring seventy blows on your body. You will be tormented in every limb with different pains, from the top of the head, and the eyes and ears, to the nails of the feet.' [2] He appointed these as a scourge … together with the trees.[a] [3] The Lord sent all these things on me and on all our generations."

Notes

- a (34:2) The Latin of this sentence is corrupt: Meyer marks dolori with crosses (Haec deputavit in flagellationem + dolori + uno cum arboribus), and no sure sense can be recovered. The Greek Apocalypse of Moses (ch. 8) also speaks of seventy blows, each affecting a different part of the body.

Chapter 35

[1] After saying this to all his children, Adam was seized by great pains. He cried out loudly: "What shall I do, wretched as I am, caught in such pain?" [2] When Eve saw him weeping, she too began to weep, saying, "Lord my God, put his pain on me, because I am the one who sinned." [3] Eve said to Adam, "My master, let me carry part of your pains, because this guilt came to you through me."

Chapter 36

1 Adam said to Eve, “Get up and go with my son Seth to the edge of paradise. Put dust on your heads, throw yourselves on the ground, and mourn in the sight of God. 2 Perhaps he will take pity and send his angel to the tree of his mercy, from which the oil of life flows, and give you a little of it, so that you can anoint me with it and I can rest from these pains that are wearing me away.”

Chapter 37

1 Seth and his mother set out toward the gates of paradise. As they were walking, suddenly a beast, a serpent, came, rushed at Seth, and bit him. 2 When Eve saw it, she wept and said, “Woe to me, wretched woman, for I am cursed, because I did not keep the Lord’s commandments.” 3 Eve shouted at the serpent, “Cursed beast, how were you not afraid to throw yourself at the image of God, but dared to fight with it? How did your teeth prevail?”

Chapter 38

1 The beast answered in a human voice, “Eve, is our wickedness not aimed at you? Is our rage not against you? Tell me, Eve, how was your mouth opened to eat the fruit that the Lord God commanded you not to eat? If I begin to reproach you now, can you bear it?”

Chapter 39

1 Then Seth said to the beast, “The Lord God rebuke you. Be silent, be dumb, shut your mouth, you cursed enemy of the truth, confusion of destruction. Stay clear of God’s image until the day the Lord God commands that you be brought to trial.” 2 The beast said to Seth, “See, as you say, I am leaving the presence of the image of God.” At once the wound left Seth’s flesh from the bite.

Chapter 40

1 Seth and his mother kept going toward the edges of paradise, to fetch the oil of mercy and rub it on the ailing Adam. 2 When they reached the gates of paradise, they picked up dust from the ground and put it on their heads. They threw themselves on the ground, face down, and began to wail with loud groaning, asking the Lord God to have mercy on Adam in his agony and to send his angel with oil from the tree of his mercy.

Chapter 41

1 After they had been praying and begging for many hours, the angel Michael appeared before them. "The Lord has sent me to you," he said. "I am the one appointed by the Lord over the human body. 2 I tell you, Seth, man of God, stop weeping and pleading for the oil of the tree of mercy, which you want in order to soothe your father Adam's bodily pains."

Chapter 42

1 "I tell you that you will not be able to get any of it, except in the last days, when five thousand five hundred years have passed. 2 Then the most loving king, Christ, the Son of God, will come on the earth to raise up Adam's body and with it to raise the bodies of the dead. On his coming, the Son of God himself will be baptized in the river Jordan, and as he rises out of the Jordan's water he will anoint with the oil of his mercy all who believe in him. 3 The oil of mercy will be for generation after generation for those who are to be born again of water and the Holy Spirit into eternal life. Then the most loving Son of God, Christ, coming down to earth, will lead your father Adam into paradise, to the tree of mercy."[a]

Notes

- a (42:3) This prophecy is a Christian addition: it speaks of Christ's baptism and of the world lasting five thousand five hundred years before his coming, a count common in early Christian chronology. The Greek Apocalypse of Moses (ch. 13) also says that Seth cannot have the oil now, only at the end.

Chapter 43

1 "But you, Seth, go to your father Adam, because the time of his life is complete. Six more days, and then his soul will leave his body. When it leaves, you will see great wonders in heaven and on earth and in the lights of heaven." 2 After saying this, Michael left Seth at once.

Eve and Seth turned back. They took spices with them: nard, saffron, calamint, and cinnamon.

Chapter 44

1 When Seth and his mother came to Adam, they told him that the serpent beast had bitten Seth. Adam said to Eve, "What have you done? You have brought a great plague on us, guilt and sin on all our generations. 2 And what you have done will fall on your children after my death … because those who rise from us will labor and not be strong enough, but will fail, and will curse us, saying, 'Our parents, who lived at the beginning, brought all these evils on us.'"[a] 3 When Eve heard this, she began to weep and groan.

Notes

- a (44:2) The Latin has + refert + between crosses here, meaning that the word is corrupt; the translation leaves the gap marked.

Chapter 45

1 Just as the archangel Michael had foretold, Adam's death came after six days. When Adam realized that the hour of his death had come, he said to all his sons, "See, I am 930 years old. If I die, bury me toward the east, in … the great dwelling-place of God."[a] 2 When he had finished all his words, he gave up his spirit.

Notes

- a (45:1) The Latin reads contra + ortum + dei magnum habitationibus; the word ortum is marked as corrupt (it could mean "sunrise" or "garden").

Chapter 46

1 The sun, the moon, and the stars were darkened for seven days. Seth lay over his father's body, embracing it and mourning. Eve stood looking at the ground, with her hands clasped over her head and her head bent down on her knees, and all his children wept with bitter tears. 2 Then the angel Michael appeared, standing at Adam's head, and said to Seth, "Get up from your father's body and come to me, and see what the Lord God has decided about him. He is his creature, and God has pitied him."

Chapter 47

1 All the angels sounded their trumpets and said, “Blessed are you, Lord, because you have taken pity on what you formed.” 2 Then Seth saw the hand of the Lord stretched out, holding Adam, and the Lord handed him to Michael, saying, “Let him be in your keeping until the day of the dispensation, in the punishments, for the last years, when I will turn his mourning to joy. Then he will sit on the throne of the one who tripped him up.”[a]

Notes

- a (47:2) “The one who tripped him up” (Latin qui eum supplantavit) is the devil. The sense is that Adam will take the place that the devil lost.

Chapter 48

1 Then the Lord said again to the angels Michael and Uriel, “Bring me three linen cloths and spread them over Adam. And bring others for his son Abel, and bury Adam and his son.” 2 All the powers of the angels went before Adam, and the resting of the dead was made holy.
Michael and Uriel buried Adam and Abel in the regions of paradise, while Seth and his mother watched, and no one else. 3 And Michael and Uriel said, “As you have seen, bury your dead the same way.”

Chapter 49

1 Six days after Adam died, Eve knew that her own death was near.
She called all her sons and daughters together, who were Seth with his thirty brothers and thirty sisters, and she said to them all, “Listen to me, my children, and I will tell you what happened: your father and I broke God’s command. 2 The archangel Michael told us, ‘Because of your transgressions our Lord will bring the anger of his judgment on your race, first by water and then by fire. By these two the Lord will judge the whole human race.’”

Chapter 50

1 “But listen to me, my children. Make tablets of stone and others of clay, and write on them all my life and your father’s life, everything you heard and saw from us. 2 If he judges our race by water, the clay tablets will dissolve and the stone ones will stay. If he judges our race

by fire, the stone tablets will break up and the clay ones will be baked hard."[a] [3] When Eve had said all this to her children, she stretched her hands toward heaven in prayer, bent her knees to the ground, worshiped the Lord, and gave thanks, and she gave up her spirit.

Notes

- a (50:2) The Latin has the nonsense word nosbllum in both places, which I read as nostrum, "our."

Chapter 51

[1] After that all her sons buried her with great weeping. When they had mourned for four days, the archangel Michael appeared to them and said to Seth, "Man of God, do not mourn for your dead more than six days. The seventh day is the sign of the resurrection and of the rest of the age to come; for on the seventh day the Lord rested from all his works." [2] Then Seth made the tablets. [3] Then Seth made (two) tablets of stone and (two) of clay, (and he set out the letters), and he wrote on them the life of his father Adam and his mother Eve, which he had heard from them and seen with his own eyes. He put the tablets in the middle of his father's house, in the prayer house where he prayed to the Lord. After the flood many people saw those written tablets, but no one could read them.[a] [4] Solomon the wise saw the writing, and he prayed to the Lord, and an angel of the Lord appeared to him and said, "I am the one who held Seth's hand while he wrote these stones with his finger. You will understand the writing, so that you know and understand what all these stones contain, and where the prayer house was, where Adam and Eve worshiped the Lord God. You must build a temple of the Lord there, that is, a house of prayer." [5] Then Solomon completed the temple of the Lord God, and he called those letters achiliacas, "written without words to teach them," (written) with Seth's finger, with the angel of the Lord holding his hand.[b] [6] And on those same stones was found what Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied before the flood about the coming of Christ: "See, the Lord will come with his holy ones to carry out judgment on all, and to convict the wicked of all the works they have done against him, the sinners and the wicked, the grumblers and the ungodly, who walk after their own desires, and whose mouths speak arrogance."[c]

Notes

- a (51:3) Verses 3–6 (marked "a–d" in Meyer's edition) are an ending found in only some of the Latin manuscripts; it is included here as part of the text that Meyer prints.
- b (51:5) The Latin achiliacas may be a corruption of a Greek word; the Latin itself explains it as "written without the teaching of words."
- c (51:6) This is the prophecy of Enoch quoted in the New Testament letter of Jude, verses 14–16; compare 1 Enoch 1:9.

Joseph and Aseneth

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

1 During the first of the seven plentiful years, in the second month (April–May),[a] on the fifth day of the month, Pharaoh[b] sent Joseph[c] out to make a circuit of the whole land of Egypt.[d] 2 In the fourth month (June–July), on the eighteenth day of the month, in that first year, Joseph came to the territory of Heliopolis.[e] 3 He was gathering in the grain of that region, and it was piled up like the sand of the sea. 4 Now in that city there was a man who was a satrap of Pharaoh, the chief of all Pharaoh's satraps and nobles. 5 This man was very rich, wise, and gentle; he was a counselor to Pharaoh. His name was Pentephres,[f] and he was a priest of Heliopolis. 6 Pentephres had a daughter, a virgin about eighteen years old, tall and lovely, and more strikingly beautiful than any other virgin on earth. 7 She was not at all like the daughters of the Egyptians; in every way she was like the daughters of the Hebrews. 8 She was tall like Sarah,[g] lovely like Rebecca,[h] and beautiful like Rachel.[i] The name of this virgin was Aseneth.[j] 9 The report of her beauty spread through that whole country and to its farthest edges, and all the sons of the nobles, the satraps, and the kings wanted to marry her; they were all young men. 10 There was bitter rivalry among them over her, and they tried to make war on one another because of Aseneth. 11 The firstborn son of Pharaoh heard about her, and he kept begging his father to give her to him as his wife. 12 He would say to him, "Give me Aseneth, the daughter of Pentephres, the priest of Heliopolis, to be my wife." 13 His father Pharaoh answered him, "Why are you looking for a wife beneath you? Are you not king of the whole world? 14 Look, the daughter of King Joakim[k] is already promised to you, and she is a queen of great beauty. Take her for your wife."

Notes

- a (1:1) The Greek counts months by number, as the Hebrew calendar does, and gives no month name. The Hebrew year is lunar, so each month falls across two months of our calendar. The book does not say whether it counts from the spring or from another starting point; the spring-start count is used here. "Second month" corresponds to Iyyar (April–May) and "fourth month" (verse 2) to Tammuz (June–July).
- b (1:1) "Pharaoh" is the Egyptian royal title per-aa, "great house."
- c (1:1) Hebrew Yosef, "may he add" (Genesis 30:24).
- d (1:1) Hebrew Mitsrayim; the meaning of the name is unknown.
- e (1:2) Greek Heliopolis means "city of the sun." The Egyptian name was Iunu, and the Bible calls it On (Genesis 41:45).
- f (1:5) Greek form of the Egyptian name that appears in Genesis as Potiphera; it is usually explained as "the one whom (the sun god) Re has given."
- g (1:8) Hebrew Sarah, "princess."
- h (1:8) Hebrew Rivqah; the meaning is uncertain, perhaps "tied" or "a rope."
- i (1:8) Hebrew Rachel, "ewe."
- j (1:8) Greek Asenet, from the Egyptian name given in Genesis 41:45 as Asenath. It is usually explained as "she belongs to (the goddess) Neith."
- k (1:14) Greek form of Jehoiakim, Hebrew Yehoyaqim, "Yahweh raises up." The book places him anachronistically at Pharaoh's court; the passage may be a later insertion.

Chapter 2

1 Aseneth despised every man and spat on them, and no man had ever seen her. For next to Pentephres' house there stood a tower, very large and very high. 2 On top of the tower was an upper floor containing ten rooms. 3 The first room was large and handsome. Its floor was paved with purple stone, and its walls were faced with costly stones of many colors. 4 The ceiling of that room was gold. Inside it stood countless gods of the Egyptians, made of gold and silver. 5 Aseneth revered all of them, and feared them, and offered sacrifices to them.
6 The second room held all of Aseneth's ornaments and her chests. 7
In it there was a great deal of gold and silver, clothing woven with gold thread, precious chosen stones, and fine linen. 8 There lay all the finery of her maidenhood. 9 The third room was full of all the good things of the earth; it was Aseneth's storeroom. 10 The other seven rooms were occupied by seven virgins, one to each room. 11 These waited on Aseneth. They were all of her age, because they had been born on the same night as Aseneth, and they were as beautiful as the stars of heaven. No man had ever spoken with them, nor even a male child. 12 There were three windows in the large room of Aseneth where her maidenhood was kept. 13 One window looked out on the courtyard to the east, the second looked north to the street, and the third faced south. 14 A golden couch stood in the room, facing east. 15 The couch was spread with a purple covering woven with gold thread, in blue and fine linen. 16 On this couch Aseneth slept alone, and no man or woman ever sat on it except Aseneth herself. 17 A great courtyard lay all around the house, with a very high wall around the courtyard, built of great squared stones. 18 The courtyard had four iron-plated gates, and each was guarded by eighteen strong young armed men. 19 Along the wall inside the courtyard were planted fine fruit trees of every kind, and all their fruit was ripe, for it was harvest time. 20 On the right side of the courtyard was a rich spring of water. Below the spring was a great basin that received its water, and from there a stream ran through the middle of the courtyard and watered all the trees in it.

Chapter 3

1 In the fourth month (June–July), on the eighteenth day of the month, Joseph came to the territory of Heliopolis. 2 When he drew near the city, Joseph sent twelve men ahead of him to Pentephres, the priest of Heliopolis, with this message: 3 "I will stay with you today, since it is midday, the time for the noon meal, and the heat of the sun is great, and I would like to rest under your roof." 4 Pentephres heard this and was overjoyed, and said, "Blessed be the Lord,[a] the God of Joseph." 5 He called the steward of his house and said to him, 6 "Hurry and get my house ready, and prepare a great banquet, because Joseph, the mighty one of God, is coming to us today." 7 Aseneth heard that her parents had come back from the fields of their estate, and she was glad, and said, 8 "I must go and see my father and mother, since they have come back from the fields of our estate." 9 Aseneth hurried and put on a robe of fine linen, blue and woven with gold. She tied on a golden belt, put bracelets on her arms and ankles, wore golden trousers, and hung a necklace around her neck. 10 Costly stones were set all over these things, with the names of the Egyptian gods carved everywhere on the bracelets and the stones; and the faces of the idols were engraved in the stones. 11 On her head she put a tiara and a diadem, and bound it tight around her temples, and wrapped her head in a veil.

Notes

- a (3:4) The Greek text always says kyrios, "Lord," and theos, "God." No Hebrew name of God appears in it, so the CJT keeps "Lord" and "God" here and does not write "Yahweh." In the Jewish Bible the God of Joseph is Yahweh.

Chapter 4

1 She hurried down the stairs from her upper floor, went to her father and mother, and greeted them. 2 Pentephres and his wife were filled with joy over their daughter Aseneth, because her parents saw her dressed like a bride of God. 3 They brought out all the good things they had carried back from their estate in the fields, and gave them to their daughter. 4 Aseneth was delighted with the produce, the grapes, the dates, the pigeons, the pomegranates, and the figs, because they were all beautiful. 5 Pentephres said to his daughter Aseneth, "Child." She said, "Here I am, my lord." He said to her, "Sit between us, and I will tell you what I have to say." 6 Aseneth sat down between her father and mother. 7 Her father Pentephres took her right hand in his right hand and said, "Child." Aseneth said, "Let my lord and father speak." 8 Pentephres said to her, "Look, Joseph, the mighty one of God, is coming to us today. He is the ruler of the whole land of Egypt; Pharaoh appointed him ruler over our whole land, and he distributes grain to the whole country and saves it from the famine that is coming. 9 Joseph is a man who reveres God, self-controlled, and a virgin as you are today. He is a man powerful in wisdom and knowledge, the spirit of God is on him, and the favor of the Lord is with him. 10 Come now, my child, and I will give you to him as his wife; you will be his bride, and he will be your bridegroom forever." 11 When Aseneth heard her father's words, a great red sweat poured over her; she flared up in a great rage, looked at her father with a sideways glare, and said, 12 "Why does my lord and father speak like this? Does he want to hand me over, like a captive, to a foreigner, a fugitive, and a man who was sold? 13 Is he not the shepherd's son out of the land of Canaan,[a] who was himself abandoned by his father? 14 Is he not the one who slept with his mistress, and his master threw him into the dark prison, and Pharaoh brought him out of prison because he interpreted his dream? 15 No! I will marry the king's firstborn son, because he is king of the whole earth." 16 When Pentephres heard this, he was ashamed to say anything more to his daughter about Joseph,

since she had answered him with such arrogance and anger.

Notes

- a (4:13) Hebrew Kenaʿan; the meaning is uncertain, possibly "lowland" or "merchant."

Chapter 5

1 Just then a young man ran out from Pentephres' servants and said,
"Look, Joseph is at the doors of our courtyard." 2 Aseneth fled from the sight of her parents, and went up to the upper floor and into her room, and stood at the great window that looked east, to see the one who was coming into her father's house. 3 Pentephres and his wife and all his relatives went out to meet Joseph. 4 The gates of the courtyard that face east were opened, and Joseph came in, riding in Pharaoh's second chariot. 5 Four horses were yoked to it, white as snow, with golden bridles, and the chariot was canopied in gold. 6 Joseph was dressed in a splendid white tunic, and the robe he wore over it was purple linen woven with gold. A golden crown was on his head, and around the crown were twelve chosen stones, and over the stones rose twelve golden rays; and a royal scepter was in his right hand. 7
He also held out an olive branch, heavy with fruit. 8 Joseph entered the courtyard, and the gates were shut. 9 Any man or woman who was a stranger stayed outside, because the gatekeepers had closed the doors. 10 Pentephres, his wife, and all his relatives came, all but their daughter Aseneth, and bowed to Joseph with their faces to the ground. 11 Joseph stepped down from his chariot and gave them his right hand in greeting.

Chapter 6

1 When Aseneth saw Joseph, she was pierced to the soul; her insides twisted, her knees went slack, and her whole body shook. She was seized with great fear, and she groaned and said, 2 "Where can I go, and where can I hide from his face? How will Joseph, the son of God,[a] ever look at me, since I have spoken evil of him? 3 Where can I flee and hide? He sees every hiding place, and nothing hidden escapes him, because of the great light within him. 4 Now may the God of Joseph be merciful to me, because I spoke wicked words in ignorance. 5 What am I to do, wretched as I am? Did I not say, 'Here comes Joseph, the shepherd's son from the land of Canaan'? And now, look, the sun has come down from heaven to us in his chariot and entered our house today. 6 What a fool I was, and how reckless, to despise him and to say wicked things about him, not knowing that Joseph is a son of God. 7 For what man will ever father such beauty, and what womb will bear such light? Wretched fool that I am, who said wicked words to my father. 8 Now let my father give me to Joseph as a maidservant and a slave, and I will serve him forever."

Notes

- a (6:2) Joseph is called a "son of God" as a man close to God. Compare 21:3.

Chapter 7

1 Joseph entered the house of Pentephres and sat on a chair and washed his feet. A table was set for him separately, because he did not eat with the Egyptians; it was an abomination to him. 2 Joseph said to Pentephres and to all his relatives, "Who is that woman standing in the upper room by the window? Let her leave this house." 3 He was afraid she might also pester him, because all the women and daughters of the nobles and satraps of the whole land of Egypt pestered him, wanting to sleep with him. 4 Many Egyptian women and daughters who saw Joseph suffered terribly over his beauty, and they sent their envoys to him with gold and silver and costly gifts. 5 Joseph sent all of it back with threats and insults, saying, "I will not sin before the God of Israel."[a] 6 He kept the face of Jacob,[b] his father, always before his eyes, and he remembered his father's commands.

For Jacob used to say to Joseph and his brothers, “Children, guard yourselves carefully against any foreign woman; do not unite with her, for that is ruin and corruption.” 7 This is why Joseph said, “Let that woman leave this house.” 8 Pentephres said to him, “My lord, the woman you saw in the upper room is not a stranger, but our daughter, a virgin who hates every man. No other man has ever seen her except you, alone, today. 9 If you like, she will come and greet you, for our daughter is your sister.” 10 Joseph was overjoyed, because Pentephres had said, “She is a virgin who hates every man.” 11 Joseph answered Pentephres and his wife, “If she is really your daughter, let her come, for she is my sister, and from today I will love her as my sister.”

Notes

- a (7:5) Hebrew Yisra’el, “he strives with God” or “God strives” (Genesis 32:28), the name God gave to Jacob.
- b (7:6) Hebrew Ya‘aqov, “he grasps the heel,” and so “he supplants” (Genesis 25:26; 27:36).

Chapter 8

1 Aseneth’s mother went up to the upper floor and brought Aseneth to Joseph. Pentephres said to his daughter Aseneth, “Greet your brother, for he is a virgin as you are today, and he hates every foreign woman as you hate every foreign man.” 2 Aseneth said to Joseph, “Greetings, my lord, blessed by God Most High.”[a] Joseph said to her, “May God, who gives life to everything, bless you.” 3 Pentephres said to Aseneth, “Go to him and kiss your brother.” 4 But when she came forward to kiss Joseph, he stretched out his right hand, laid it against her chest, and said, 5 “It is not fitting for a man who fears God, who blesses the living God with his mouth, eats the blessed bread of life, drinks the blessed cup of immortality, and is anointed with the blessed oil of incorruption, to kiss a foreign woman, one who blesses dead and deaf idols with her mouth, eats the bread of strangling from their table, drinks the cup of ambush from their libation, and is anointed with the oil of destruction. 6 A man who fears God may kiss his mother, and the sister from his own tribe and family, and the wife who shares his bed, all of whom bless the living God with their mouths. 7 In the same way, it is not fitting for a woman who fears God to kiss a foreign man, because that is an abomination before God." [8] When Aseneth heard Joseph's words, she was deeply grieved. She sighed, staring at Joseph, and her eyes filled with tears. [9] Joseph saw her and felt great pity for her, because Joseph was gentle and merciful and feared the Lord. He raised his right hand over her head and said, [10] "Lord God of my father Israel, Most High, Mighty One, who gives life to all things and called them out of darkness into light, out of error into truth, and out of death into life: you yourself, Lord, give life to this virgin and bless her. [11] Renew her by your Spirit, remold her with your hidden hand, and bring her to life again with your life. Let her eat your bread of life and drink your cup of blessing, she whom you chose before she was born, and let her enter your resting place, which you have prepared for your chosen ones."

Notes

- a (8:2) Greek Hypsistos, "Most High," which translates the Hebrew El Elyon, "God Most High" (Genesis 14:18–20).

Chapter 9

[1] Aseneth was very happy at Joseph's blessing. She hurried up to her room and collapsed on her couch, sick, for joy, grief, and great fear were all mixed in her, and a steady sweat poured over her at hearing the words Joseph had spoken to her, in the name of the Most High God. [2] She wept bitterly and at length, and she repented of her gods, whom she had worshiped, and waited for evening to come. [3] Meanwhile Joseph ate and drank, and said to his servants, "Harness the horses to the chariot," for he said, "I will go and make the circuit of the whole city and the land." [4] Pentephres said to Joseph, "My lord, please stay the night here today, and go on your way in the morning." [5] Joseph answered, "No, I will leave today, because this is the very day when God began his works, and on the eighth day I will come back to you again and stay here."[a]

Notes

- a (9:5) "The eighth day" is counted from the day of the visit, so that Joseph returns after one full week.

Chapter 10

1 Then Pentephres and his family left for their own estate. 2 Aseneth was left alone with her virgins. She was despondent and wept until the sun set. She ate no bread and drank no water, but while everyone else slept, she alone stayed awake. 3 She opened her door, went down to the gate, and found the gatekeeper asleep with her children. 4 Aseneth hurried, took down the skin curtain from the door, filled it with ashes, carried it up to her room, and set it on the floor. 5 She shut the door securely, laid the iron bar across it, and groaned with loud lament and weeping. 6 The virgin whom Aseneth loved best of all the virgins heard her mistress groaning, woke the other virgins, came, and found the door shut. 7 She listened to the groaning and weeping of Aseneth and said, "Why are you so downcast, my lady? What is troubling you? Open to us, and let us see you." 8 Aseneth, shut inside, said to them, "I have a terrible pain in my head, and I am resting on my bed. I cannot get up to open to you now, because I am weak in all my limbs. Go, each of you, to your own room." 9 Then Aseneth got up, quietly opened the door, and went to her second room, where her chests of ornaments were. She opened her chest and took out a black, dark tunic. 10 This was the tunic of her mourning, which she had worn when her eldest brother died. 11 Aseneth stripped off her royal robe and dressed in the black one. She undid her golden belt and tied a rope around herself. She took the tiara off her head, and the diadem, and the bracelets from her arms. 12 She took all her choice clothing and threw it out of the window to the poor. 13 She took all her gods, the gold ones and the silver ones, without number, smashed them to pieces, and threw them to the poor and needy. 14 Aseneth took her royal dinner, the fattened animals, the fish, the meats, every sacrifice to her gods, and the jars of their libation wine, and threw everything out of the window to the dogs for food. 15 After that she took the ashes and poured them out on the floor. 16 She took sackcloth, tied it around her waist, took the net off her hair, scattered ashes over her head, and fell down on the ashes. 17 She beat her breast over and over with both hands, and wept bitterly all night with groaning until morning.
18 When she looked in the morning, the ashes under her had turned to mud from her tears. 19 Aseneth fell on her face on the ashes again until the sun set. 20 She did this for seven days, tasting nothing at all.

Chapter 11

1 On the eighth day, at dawn, when the birds had begun to chirp and the dogs to bark at passersby, Aseneth lifted her head a little from the floor where she lay, for she was paralyzed in her limbs from so much self-humbling.[a] 2 She turned toward the wall, and sat under the window that looked east. She rested her head on her chest, wove her fingers together over her right knee, and kept her mouth shut.
She had not opened it during the seven days and seven nights of her self-humbling. 3 She spoke in her heart, without opening her mouth:
"What shall I do, wretched as I am? Where shall I go, and with whom shall I find shelter? Whom shall I speak to, an orphan virgin, desolate, abandoned by everyone, and hated? 4 Now they all hate me, and even my father and mother, because I loathed the gods, destroyed them, and gave them to the poor to be broken up. My father and mother said, 'Aseneth is not our daughter.' And all my relatives hate me too, and all people, because I destroyed their gods. 5 I hated every man who sought me in marriage, and now, in this humiliation, everyone hates me, and they enjoy my suffering. 6 But the Lord, the God of mighty Joseph, hates all who worship idols, for he is a jealous and terrifying God, as I have heard, toward all who worship foreign gods.
That is why he hates me too, because I worshiped dead and deaf idols and blessed them. 7 Now I have turned away from their sacrifices, and my mouth has become a stranger to their table. I have no courage to call on the Lord, the God of heaven, the Most High, the powerful God of mighty Joseph, because my mouth is polluted with the sacrifices of the idols. 8 But I have heard many people say that the Hebrews' God is a true and living God, merciful, compassionate, patient, full of mercy, and kind. He does not count the sin of a humble person, and especially of someone who sins in ignorance, and he does not prosecute lawlessness when a person is in the time of distress. 9 So I too, humble as I am, will be bold. I will turn to him and take refuge in him; I will admit all my sins to him and empty out my plea before him, and he may take pity on my misery. [10] Who knows whether he will see this humiliation of mine and the emptiness of my soul, and feel sorrow for me, and see how wretched and orphaned I am, and my virginity, and shield me? I hear that he is himself a father of orphans, a consolation for the afflicted, and an aid to the persecuted. [11] In any case, humble as I am, I will be bold and cry out to him." [12] Then Aseneth rose from the wall where she sat, knelt, directed her eyes toward heaven, opened her mouth, and said to God:

Notes

- a (11:1) The Greek text here is damaged. Chapter 11 of the CJT follows the sense of the Greek, which has only a few broken lines left ("counting the sin of a humble person," "I will confess all my sins to him"), together with the fuller reading of the Greek tradition as translated by E. W. Brooks in 1918. Verse numbers here are those of this edition.

Chapter 12

[1] She spread out her hands toward the east and lifted her eyes toward heaven, and said: [2] "Lord God of the ages, who gave the breath of life to all, who brought the unseen into the light, who made everything and made the hidden things appear, [3] who raised up the heavens and founded the earth on the waters, who fixed the great stones upon the deep of the water, stones that will never sink but remain until the end, doing your will: [4] Lord my God, I cry out to you. Listen to my plea; I confess my sins to you and uncover my lawless deeds before you. [5] I have sinned, Lord; I have sinned. I have broken your law, been godless, and spoken evil in your presence. My mouth, Lord, has been polluted by the sacrifices to idols and from the table of the gods of the Egyptians. [6] I have sinned, Lord, before you. I have been godless, because I worshiped idols that are dead and deaf, and wretch that I am, I am not fit to open my mouth to you. [7] I have sinned, Lord, before you, I, the daughter of Pentephres the priest, who was proud and arrogant. I bring my plea to you, Lord, and cry out to you. Rescue me from those who pursue me, because I have fled to you like a child to its father and mother. [8] You, Lord, stretch out your hands over me like a father who loves his children, and tenderly, and snatch me from the hand of the enemy. [9] For look, the fierce old lion is chasing me, and his cubs are the gods of the Egyptians, whom I threw away and destroyed; and their father, the devil, is trying to swallow me. [10] But you, Lord, save me from his hands, and pull me out of his mouth, so that he does not seize me like a wolf and tear me apart and throw me into the abyss of fire, into the storm of the sea, and so that the great sea monster does not swallow me. [11] Save me, Lord, in my desolation, for my father and mother have disowned me because I destroyed and smashed their gods. Now I am an orphan, alone, and I have no hope but you, Lord. For you are the father of orphans, the defender of the persecuted, and the helper of the oppressed. [12] Look, all the wealth of my father Pentephres is temporary and fading, but the dwellings of your inheritance, Lord, are incorruptible and eternal.

Chapter 13

[1] Visit my orphaned state, Lord, because I have fled to you. [2] Look, I have laid aside my royal robe woven with gold, and put on a black tunic. [3] Look, I have loosened my golden belt and tied on a rope and sackcloth. [4] Look, I have thrown the diadem off my head and covered myself with ashes. [5] Look, the floor of my room, which was paved with colored and purple stone and sprinkled with perfumes, is now sprinkled with my tears and covered with dust. [6] Look, my Lord, from the ashes and my tears there is a great deal of mud in my room, as on a wide road. [7] Look, Lord, I have given my royal dinner and the fattened food to the dogs. [8] Look, for seven days and seven nights I have eaten no bread and drunk no water, and my mouth is as dry as a drum, my tongue is like a horn, and my lips like a piece of broken pottery. My face has sunk in, and my eyes have failed from the burning of my tears. [9] But, Lord, forgive me, because I sinned against you in ignorance and spoke blasphemies against my lord Joseph. [10] I did not know, wretch that I am, that he is your son, Lord, because people told me that Joseph was the shepherd's son from the country of Canaan, and I believed them, and I was deceived. I despised your chosen one, Joseph, and spoke evil of him, not knowing that he is your son. [11] What man has ever fathered such beauty, and who else is as wise and strong as Joseph? But, my Lord, I place him in your care, because I love him more than my own soul. 12 Keep him in the wisdom of your grace, and place me with him as a maidservant, so that I may wash his feet, wait on him, and serve him all the days of my life."

Chapter 14

1 When Aseneth had finished her confession to the Lord, the Morning Star[a] rose in the sky in the east. Aseneth saw it and was glad, and said, 2 "Then the Lord God has heard me, because this star is the messenger and herald of the light of the great day." 3 And look, near the Morning Star the heaven was torn open, and a light appeared that no one can describe. 4 Aseneth fell on her face in the ashes, and a man came to her from heaven. He stood over her head and called her: "Aseneth." 5 She said, "Who is calling me? The door of my room is shut, and the tower is high. How did he get into my room?" 6 The man called her a second time and said, "Aseneth, Aseneth." She said, "Here I am, my lord. Tell me who you are." 7 The man said, "I am the commander of the house of the Lord and chief captain of all the army of the Most High.[b] Stand up on your feet, and I will speak to you." 8 She lifted her eyes and saw a man who was like Joseph in every way, in his robe, his crown, and his royal rod, 9 except that his face was like lightning, his eyes like the shining of the sun, the hair on his head like a flame of fire, and his hands and feet like iron glowing from the fire. 10 Aseneth saw him and fell on her face at his feet in great fear and trembling. 11 The man said to her, "Take heart, Aseneth, and do not be afraid. Stand up on your feet, and I will speak to you." 12 Aseneth stood up, and the man said to her, "Take off the black tunic you are wearing, and the sackcloth from your waist. Shake the ashes off your head and wash your face with living water, 13 and put on a new, untouched robe, and tie around your waist your bright double belt of virginity, 14 and come to me again, and I will tell you the words that have been sent to you." 15 Aseneth went into her room where the chests of her ornaments were, opened her chest, and took out a new, splendid robe. She took off the black one and put on the new, bright one. 16 She untied the rope and the sackcloth from her waist and put on a bright double belt of virginity, one belt around her waist and one over her chest. 17 She shook the ashes off her head, washed her face with clean water, and covered her head with a fine, splendid veil.

Notes

- a (14:1) Greek heosphoros, "dawn-bringer," the planet Venus when it rises before the sun (Hebrew Helel, "shining one," in Isaiah 14:12).
- b (14:7) Compare Joshua 5:14–15, where the figure who meets Joshua calls himself the "commander of the army of Yahweh." Jewish tradition identified this figure with the archangel Michael (Hebrew Mikha'el, "Who is like God?"), but the Greek text here does not give his name.

Chapter 15

1 She came to the man, and when he saw her he said, "Take the veil off your head, because you are a pure virgin today, and your head is like a young man's." 2 She took it off her head. The man said to her, "Take heart, Aseneth, because the Lord has heard the words of your confession. 3 Take heart, Aseneth. Your name has been recorded in the book of life, and it will not be erased. 4 From today you will be renewed, and formed anew, and brought to life again; you will eat the bread of life, drink the cup of immortality, and be anointed with the oil of incorruption. 5 Take heart, Aseneth. The Lord has given you to Joseph as a bride, and he will be your bridegroom. 6 You will no longer be called Aseneth, but your name will be City of Refuge,[a] because many nations will take refuge in you, many peoples will shelter under your wings, and those who attach themselves to God through repentance will be guarded within your wall. 7 For Repentance is the daughter of the Most High, and she begs the Most High on your behalf at every hour, and on behalf of all who repent, since he is the father of Repentance, and she is the mother of virgins and pleads with him at every hour for those who repent. For he has prepared a heavenly bridal chamber for those who love her, and she will serve them forever. 8 Repentance is a very beautiful virgin, pure, chaste, and gentle. God Most High loves her, and all the angels respect her. 9 Look, I am going to Joseph, and I will speak to him about you, and he will come to you today, and see you, and be glad about you, and be your bridegroom. 10 Now listen to me, Aseneth, and put on your wedding robe, the old, first robe that is stored in your room, and put on all your choice jewelry, and adorn yourself like a bride, and be ready to meet him. 11 For look, he is coming to you today, and he will see you and be glad." 12 When the man had finished speaking to Aseneth, she was filled with great joy, fell at his feet, and said to him, 13 "Blessed be the Lord God, who sent you to rescue me from the darkness and lead me up to the light, and blessed be his name forever. 14 If I have found favor in your sight, my lord, please sit on the couch a little while, and I will set a table and bread, and you will eat. I will bring you good wine, whose fragrance reaches heaven, and you will drink and go on your way."

Notes

- a (15:6) Greek polis katafyges. The Hebrew Bible has "cities of refuge" (Numbers 35:6–15) where those who had killed accidentally could flee. Here the name describes what Aseneth will be for repentant nations.

Chapter 16

1 The man said to her, "Bring me a honeycomb too." 2 Aseneth said, "Lord, I will send to the field of my estate and bring you a honeycomb." 3 The man said to her, "Go into your room, and you will find a honeycomb." 4 Aseneth went into her room and found a honeycomb lying on the table. The comb was white as snow and full of honey, and its aroma was the fragrance of life. 5 Aseneth took the comb and brought it to him. The man said to her, "Why did you say there was no honeycomb in my house? Look, you have brought me one." 6 Aseneth said, "Lord, I had no honeycomb in my house, but it has come to be as you said. Perhaps it came out of your mouth, because its scent is like the scent of perfume." 7 The man stretched out his hand and gripped her head and said, "You are blessed, Aseneth, because the secrets of God have been revealed to you, and blessed are those who attach themselves to the Lord God in repentance, for they will eat from this comb. 8 The bees of the paradise of delight[a] made this honey, and the angels of God eat from it, and whoever eats of it will never die." 9 The man stretched out his right hand, broke off a piece of the comb, ate it, and with his hand put some of the comb into Aseneth's mouth. [10] He stretched out his hand and laid his finger on the east-facing edge of the comb, and the path of his finger turned to blood. [11] He stretched out his hand a second time, laying his finger on the north-facing edge of the comb, and the path of his finger became like blood. [12] Aseneth stood on his left and watched everything the man did. [13] Bees came up out of the cells of the comb. They were white as snow, with wings like purple, like blue, and like threads of gold, and they had golden crowns on their heads and sharp stings. [14] All the bees swarmed around Aseneth from her feet to her head, and other bees, as large as queens, took hold of her lips. [15] The man said to the bees, "Return now to your places." [16] They all left Aseneth and fell to the ground, all of them, and died. [17] The man said, "Get up now and go to your place." They got up and went away, all of them, to the courtyard next to Aseneth's house.

Notes

- a (16:8) Greek paradeisos tryphes, from the Hebrew Gan Eden, the "garden of Eden," where Eden means "delight."

Chapter 17

[1] The man said to Aseneth, "Have you seen this thing?" She said, "Look, Lord, I have seen all of it." [2] The man said, "So shall the words be that I have spoken to you." [3] The man touched the honeycomb, and fire rose from the table and consumed it. A sweet smell came from the burning comb and filled the room. [4] Aseneth said to the man, "Lord, I have seven virgins with me who wait on me, who grew up with me from my earliest years, born on the same night as I was, and I love them. Let me call them, and bless them as you have blessed me." [5] He said, "Call them." Aseneth called them, and the man blessed them and said, "May God Most High bless you forever." [6] The man said to Aseneth, "Take away this table." Aseneth turned to move the table, and the man vanished from her sight, and Aseneth saw something like a chariot of fire being taken up into heaven toward the east. [7] Aseneth said, "Lord, be gracious to your servant, because I spoke evil in your presence in ignorance."

Chapter 18

1 While these things were happening, a young man from Joseph's household came and said, "Look, Joseph, the mighty one of God, is coming to you today." 2 Aseneth called the steward of her house and said, "Prepare a fine dinner for me, because Joseph, the mighty one of God, is coming to us." 3 Aseneth went into her room, opened her chest, took out her first robe, which looked like lightning, and put it on. 4 She tied on a bright, royal belt, a belt set with costly stones. 5 She put golden bracelets on her arms, golden trousers on her legs, a precious necklace around her neck, and a golden crown on her head, and the crown had costly stones on the front. 6 She covered her head with a veil. 7 She said to her maidservant, "Bring me clean water from the spring." Aseneth bent over the water in the basin, and her face was like the sun, and her eyes like a rising morning star.

Chapter 19

1 A small boy came and said to Aseneth, "Look, Joseph is at the doors of our courtyard." Aseneth went down with the seven virgins to meet him. 2 When Joseph saw her, he said to her, "Come to me, pure virgin, because I received good news about you from heaven, from one who told me everything about you." 3 Joseph stretched out his arms and embraced Aseneth, and Aseneth embraced Joseph, and they kissed each other for a long time, and their spirits were revived.

Chapter 20

1 Aseneth said to him, "Come, my lord, and enter my house." She took his right hand in hers and brought him into her house. 2 Joseph sat on the chair of Pentephres her father, and water was brought to wash his feet. Joseph said to her, "Let one of the virgins come to wash my feet." 3 Aseneth said to him, "No, my lord, because my hands are your hands and your feet are my feet, and no one else will wash your feet." She insisted, and washed his feet. 4 Joseph took her right hand and kissed it, and Aseneth kissed his head. 5 Aseneth's parents came from the field of their estate and saw Aseneth sitting with Joseph, dressed in a wedding robe. They were glad and gave glory to God, and they ate and drank. 6 Pentephres said to Joseph, "Tomorrow I will invite the nobles and satraps of Egypt, and I will give you a wedding, and you will take Aseneth as your wife." 7 Joseph said, "First I will tell Pharaoh about Aseneth, because he is a father to me, and he will give me Aseneth as my wife." 8 Joseph stayed that day with Pentephres and did not go in to Aseneth, because he said, "It is not right for a man who fears God to sleep with his wife before the wedding."

Chapter 21

1 Joseph got up in the morning and went to Pharaoh and talked to him about Aseneth. 2 Pharaoh sent and called Pentephres and Aseneth. 3 Pharaoh was amazed at her beauty and said, "The Lord, the God of Joseph, will bless you, because he has chosen you to be his bride; for he is the firstborn son of God, and you will be called a daughter of the Most High,[a] and Joseph will be your bridegroom forever." 4 Pharaoh took golden crowns and put them on their heads and said, "May God Most High bless you and multiply you forever." 5 Pharaoh turned them to face each other, and they kissed each other. 6 Pharaoh gave them a wedding, with a banquet and much drinking, for seven days. 7 He called all the rulers of the land of Egypt and had it proclaimed: "Anyone who does any work during the seven days of Joseph and Aseneth's wedding will die a bitter death." 8 When the wedding was over and the banquet finished, Joseph went in to Aseneth, and Aseneth conceived by Joseph. She gave birth to Manasseh[b] and his brother Ephraim[c] in Joseph's house.

Notes

- a (21:3) In some witnesses the words "for he is the firstborn son of God, and" are missing. The Greek text has Pharaoh call Joseph "the firstborn son of God," a title that rests on the idea of Israel as God's firstborn son (Exodus 4:22).
- b (21:8) Hebrew Menashsheh, "making to forget" (Genesis 41:51).
- c (21:8) Hebrew Efrayim, "doubly fruitful" (Genesis 41:52).

Chapter 22

1 After this, the seven years of plenty passed, and the seven years of famine began. 2 When Jacob heard of his son Joseph, he entered Egypt, together with his whole household, in the second month (April–

May), on the twenty-first day of the month,[a] and settled in the land of Goshen.[b] 3 Aseneth said to Joseph, "I will go and see your father, because your father Israel is a father to me." Joseph said to her, "Let us go together." 4 Joseph and Aseneth came to the land of Goshen, and Joseph's brothers met them and bowed to the ground. 5 They came to Jacob, and he blessed them and kissed them. Aseneth hung on the neck of Jacob, her father-in-law, and kissed him. 6 After this they ate and drank. 7 Joseph and Aseneth went home, and Simeon[c] and Levi[d] escorted them, because their enemies were jealous. Levi walked on the right of Aseneth, and Simeon on her left. 8 Aseneth took Levi's hand, because she loved him as a prophet, a man who reveres God and fears the Lord. 9 He used to see writing in the heavens, and read it and secretly explain it to Aseneth, and Levi saw her place of rest in the heights.

Notes

- a (22:2) The Greek says "the second month, the twenty-first day." The Hebrew months are lunar; see the note on 1:1.
- b (22:2) Hebrew Goshen; the name is Egyptian or Semitic, and its meaning is uncertain.
- c (22:7) Hebrew Shim'on, "he hears" (Genesis 29:33).
- d (22:7) Hebrew Levi, "joined" (Genesis 29:34).

Chapter 23

1 While Joseph and Aseneth were passing by, Pharaoh's eldest son saw them from the wall. 2 When he saw Aseneth, he was driven wild with desire for her because of her extraordinary beauty. Pharaoh's son sent messengers and summoned Simeon and Levi. 3 They came to him and stood before him, and Pharaoh's son said to them, "I know that you are men stronger than any people on earth. By your hands the city of the Shechemites[a] was destroyed, and with your two swords thirty thousand men of war were cut down. 4 I ask you to hurry to my help. Look, I will take you as my companions and give you a great deal of gold and silver, and male and female slaves, and houses and great estates. Help me, and show me kindness, because I have been insulted by your brother Joseph, who has taken Aseneth as his wife, though she was promised to me from the beginning. 5 If you do not listen to what I say, I will kill you with my sword." As he said this, he drew his sword and showed it to them. 6 Simeon was a bold and daring man. He drew his sword out of its sheath and was ready to strike Pharaoh's son. 7 Levi knew Simeon's thought, because Levi was a prophet and foresaw everything that was to come. He struck Simeon's right foot, pressed it, and signaled him to calm his anger. 8 Levi said to him, "Why are you angry with him? We are the sons of a man who fears God, and it is not right for a man who fears God to repay evil for evil to his neighbor." 9 Levi said to the son of Pharaoh, his neighbor, with a gentle heart and a cheerful face, "Why, my lord, do you say these words in front of us? We are men who fear God, our father is a servant of the God Most High, and our brother Joseph is dear to God. 10 How could we do this evil thing before God? Now listen to us, and take care not to say these words about our brother Joseph again. 11 If you insist on this evil plan, look, our swords are drawn in front of you." 12 They pulled their swords out of their sheaths and said, "Have you seen these swords? With them the Lord God avenged the outrage against the sons of Israel that the Shechemites committed against our sister Dinah,[b] whom Shechem,[c] the son of Hamor,[d] defiled." 13 Pharaoh's son saw their swords drawn and was frightened and shook, and fell on his face on the ground beneath their feet. 14 Levi stretched out his hand and lifted him up, saying, "Do not be afraid, but take care not to say an evil word again against our brother." 15 They left him there, trembling and afraid.

Notes

- a (23:3) Shechem is Hebrew for "shoulder," and the town was named for its position on a ridge; the Shechemites are its inhabitants. The story is in Genesis 34.
- b (23:12) Hebrew Dinah, "judgment" or "vindicated."
- c (23:12) Hebrew Shekhem, "shoulder."
- d (23:12) Hebrew Hamor, "donkey."

Chapter 24

1 Pharaoh's son was weighed down and deeply troubled because of Aseneth, and he was sick with it. 2 His servants said in his ear, "Look, the sons of Bilhah[a] and Zilpah,[b] the servant girls of Leah[c] and Rachel, the wives of Jacob, are enemies of Joseph and Aseneth and are jealous of them, and they will do what you want." 3 Pharaoh's son sent messengers to summon them, and they came to him by night. Pharaoh's son said to them, "I know that you are mighty men." 4 Gad and Dan,[d] the older brothers, said to Pharaoh's son, "Let our lord say to his servants what he wants, and we will do his will." 5 Pharaoh's son was overjoyed, and said to his servants, "Go away from here, so that I can speak my word to these men in secret." 6 All the servants left, and Pharaoh's son lied to them: "Blessing and death are set before you; take the blessing, and not death. 7 Look, I know you are mighty men. Do not die like women, but act like men and take revenge on your enemies. 8 I will wait for my father's death, and then I will crush them and all their family, so that they will not inherit with us, because they are the children of servant girls, and they are the ones who sold me to the Ishmaelites.[e] 9 I will repay them for the evil they did to me, as soon as my father dies." 10 My father Pharaoh praised Joseph and said to him, "You have spoken well, child. Now take mighty men from me and go out against them, as they have dealt with you, and I will be your helper."[f] 11 When the men heard the words of Pharaoh's son, they were alarmed and distressed, and said to him, "We beg you, lord, help us, and whatever you command your servants, we will do." 12 Pharaoh's son said to them, "I will kill my father tonight, because Pharaoh my father is like a father to Joseph.

Then you must kill Joseph too, and I will take Aseneth as my wife." 13 Dan and Gad said to him, "We will do whatever you command us. We have heard Joseph telling Aseneth, 'Go tomorrow to the field of our estate, because it is the time of the grape harvest.' He is giving her six hundred men who are mighty in war, and fifty runners ahead." 14
When Pharaoh's son heard these words, he gave the four men five hundred men each, and made them their commanders and leaders. 15 Dan and Gad said to him, "We will go by night and lie in ambush at the wadi, and hide in the reeds. 16 You take fifty mounted archers with you and go ahead, keeping at a distance. Aseneth will arrive and drop into our hands, and we will hack down the men with her. 17 Aseneth will flee with her carriage and fall into your hands, and you can do with her whatever your soul desires. 18 After that we will kill Joseph, grieving for Aseneth, and we will kill his children before his eyes." [19] Pharaoh's son was glad when he heard these words, and sent two thousand fighting men after them. [20] They came to the wadi, hid in the reeds, and five hundred men sat in front, and between them was a broad road.

Notes

- a (24:2) Hebrew Bilhah, perhaps "timid" or "bashful."
- b (24:2) Hebrew Zilpah; the meaning is uncertain.
- c (24:2) Hebrew Le'ah, possibly "wild cow" or "weary."
- d (24:4) Hebrew Gad, "fortune"; Hebrew Dan, "he judged."
- e (24:8) Hebrew Yishma'e'l, "God hears." In Genesis 37, Joseph's brothers sold him to Ishmaelite traders. The prince's words, "sold me," fit awkwardly here, since it was Joseph who was sold.
- f (24:10) This verse is in the Greek text as it stands, but it seems out of place: it has Pharaoh's son speak of his father Pharaoh praising Joseph. The Greek tradition is confused here.

Chapter 25

[1] Pharaoh's son went to his father's chamber to kill him, and his father's guards prevented him from going in. [2] Pharaoh's son said to them, "I will see my father, because I am going to pick the grapes of my new vineyard." [3] The guards said to him, "Your father is in pain, has stayed awake all night, and is resting. He told us, 'Let no one come in to me, not even my firstborn son.'" [4] He left in a rage and took fifty mounted archers and went ahead of them, as Dan and Gad had told him. [5] Naphtali and Asher[a] said to Dan and Gad, "Why are you plotting evil again against our father Israel and our brother Joseph? God protects him as the apple of his eye. [6] Did you not sell him once already, and today he is king of the whole land, a savior, and the one who gives out grain? [7] If you now plot evil against him again, he will call on the God of Israel, who will send fire from heaven to devour you, and God's angels will make war on you." [8] Their older brothers, Dan and Gad, were angry with them and said, "So should we die like women? Never!" And they set out to meet Joseph and Aseneth.

Notes

- a (25:5) Hebrew Naftali, "my wrestling" (Genesis 30:8); Hebrew Asher, "happy" (Genesis 30:13).

Chapter 26

1 Aseneth got up early and said to Joseph, “I will go to the field of our estate, but my soul is afraid, because I am being separated from you.” 2 Joseph said to her, “Take heart and do not be afraid, but go. The Lord is with you, and he will protect you as the apple of his eye from every evil. 3 I will go to my grain distribution and give grain to all the people in the city, so that no one in the land of Egypt dies of hunger.” 4 Aseneth went on her way, and Joseph went to his grain distribution. 5 Aseneth came to the place of the wadi with her six hundred men, and suddenly Pharaoh’s son and his men sprang out of their ambush and joined battle with Aseneth’s fighters. They cut them all down with their swords and killed all of Aseneth’s runners. 6 Aseneth fled in her carriage. 7 Levi, the son of Leah, knew all this as a prophet, and told his brothers about the danger Aseneth was in. Each of them took his sword on his thigh, his shield on his arm, and his spear in his right hand, and they chased after Aseneth at a fast run. 8 Aseneth fled, and look, Pharaoh’s son met her, with fifty men. Aseneth saw him, and she was afraid and trembled.

Chapter 27

1 Benjamin[a] was sitting with her in the carriage. 2 Benjamin was a strong youth, about eighteen years old, with unspeakable beauty and the strength of a lion’s cub, and he feared God. 3 Benjamin jumped down from the carriage, picked up a round stone from the wadi so that it filled his hand, threw it at Pharaoh’s son, and hit him on his left temple. He gave him a great and heavy wound, and he fell from his horse half dead. 4 Benjamin ran up onto a rock and said to Aseneth’s charioteer, “Give me fifty stones from the wadi.” 5 He gave him fifty stones. Benjamin threw the stones and killed the fifty men accompanying Pharaoh’s son, and the stones sank into the temple of every one of them. 6 Then Leah’s sons Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun,[b] chased after the men lying in ambush and fell on them suddenly and cut down the two thousand men; the six of them killed them. 7 The sons of Bilhah and Zilpah, their brothers, fled and said, “We are lost because of our brothers, and Pharaoh’s son has died at Benjamin's hand, and everyone with him has been killed by his hand. Now come, let us kill Aseneth and Benjamin and flee into the reeds." [8] They came with their swords drawn, full of blood. Aseneth saw them and said, "Lord my God, who gave me life from death, who said to me, 'Your soul will live forever,' save me from these men." The Lord God heard her voice, and at once the swords slipped from their hands and fell on the ground and dissolved like ashes.

Notes

- a (27:1) Hebrew Binyamin, "son of the right hand" or "son of the south" (Genesis 35:18).
- b (27:6) Hebrew Re'uven, "see, a son"; Yehudah, "praise"; Yissakhar, "there is reward"; Zevulun, "dwelling" (Genesis 29–30).

Chapter 28

[1] The sons of Bilhah and Zilpah saw the wonder that had happened, and were afraid, and said, "The Lord is fighting against us on behalf of Aseneth." [2] They fell on their faces on the ground and bowed to Aseneth, saying, "Have mercy on us, your servants, for you are our mistress and queen, and we have done wicked things against you and against our brother Joseph. [3] Now God has repaid us. That is why we, your servants, beg you: have mercy on us and rescue us from the hands of our brothers, because they are the avengers of the insult to you, and their swords are in front of us." [4] Aseneth said to them, "Take heart and do not be afraid, because your brothers are men who fear God and do not repay evil for evil to anyone. [5] Go into the reeds, until I make peace with them on your behalf and calm their anger, because what you dared to do against them was great. [6] Take heart and do not be afraid, because the Lord will judge between me and you." [7] Dan and Gad fled into the reeds. [8] And look, Leah's sons came running after them like deer. Aseneth got down from her carriage and greeted them with tears. [9] They bowed to the ground before her and wept loudly, and they were looking for their brothers, the sons of the servant girls, to kill them. [10] Aseneth said to them, "Spare your brothers and do not do them harm, because the Lord shielded me and turned their swords to ashes in their hands, and they became like wax before fire. [11] This is enough for us, that the Lord fights for us. Now spare your brothers." 12 Simeon said to Aseneth, "Why does our mistress speak this way about her enemies? 13 No, we will cut them down with our swords, because they plotted evil against our father Israel and against our brother Joseph, already twice now, and against you today." 14 Aseneth said to him, "Never, brother. You must not repay evil for evil to your neighbor, because the Lord will punish this outrage." 15 After this Simeon embraced Aseneth. Levi came to her and kissed her right hand and blessed her. 16 So Aseneth saved the men from their brothers' anger, so that they did not kill them.

Chapter 29

1 Pharaoh's son rose from the ground, sat up, and spat blood out of his mouth, because blood from his temple had run into his mouth. 2 Benjamin ran over, seized the prince's sword, and pulled it from its sheath, because Benjamin was not wearing a sword on his thigh. 3
As he was about to strike Pharaoh's son, Levi ran and held his hand, and said, "Never, brother, do this deed, because we are men who fear God, and it is not right for a man who fears God to repay evil for evil, or to trample a man who has fallen, or to crush an enemy to death.
4 Come, let us treat him for his wound, and if he lives, he will be a friend to us, and Pharaoh his father will be a father to us." 5 Levi lifted Pharaoh's son up, washed the blood from his face, bound a bandage on his wound, set him on his horse, and brought him to his father. 6 Levi told him everything that had happened. 7 Pharaoh got up from his throne and bowed to the ground before Levi. 8 On the third day Pharaoh's son died of the wound from Benjamin's stone. 9 Pharaoh mourned for his firstborn son, and from grief he fell ill. 10 Pharaoh died at the age of one hundred and nine, and he left his diadem to Joseph. 11 Joseph reigned in Egypt for forty-eight years, and after that Joseph gave the diadem to Pharaoh's grandson. And Joseph was like a father to him in Egypt.

Apocalypse of Abraham

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

The Book of the Revelation of Abraham, son of Terah, son of Nahor, son of Serug, son of Reu, son of Arphaxad, son of Shem, son of Noah, son of Lamech, son of Methuselah, son of Enoch, son of Jared.

1 On the day that I planed smooth the gods of my father Terah, and those of his brother Nahor, I was searching to learn who the Mighty God truly is. 2 I, Abraham,[l] had been given my turn at the work, and I had finished the sacrifices my father Terah offered to his gods of wood and stone, of gold and silver, of bronze and iron. 3 I went into their temple to serve, and I found the god named Merumath,[m] a carved stone figure, which had toppled onto its face before the iron god Nahon.[n] 4 When I saw it, my heart was troubled. I thought that I, Abraham, could not put it back in its place alone, because it was heavy, being a big stone. 5 I went out and told my father, and he came in with me. The two of us pushed the god upright to set it back, and its head fell off while I was still holding it by the head. 6 When my father saw Merumath's head in my hands, detached from the body, he called, "Abraham!" "I am here," I answered. 7 He said, "Bring me one of the small axes from the house." I brought it to him. 8 Then he hewed another Merumath out of another stone, with no head. He took the head that had fallen from the first Merumath and set it on the new body, and he smashed the rest of the first one to pieces.

Notes

- a (1:title) Hebrew Terach; the meaning is uncertain.
- b (1:title) Hebrew Nachor, "snorting" or "snoring."
- c (1:title) Hebrew Serug, "branch" or "tendril" (uncertain).
- d (1:title) Hebrew Re'u, "friend." The Slavonic text has "Roog," an old form of the name.
- e (1:title) Hebrew Arpakshad; the meaning is uncertain.
- f (1:title) Hebrew Shem, "name."

- g (1:title) Hebrew Noach, “rest.”
- h (1:title) Hebrew Lemech; the meaning is uncertain.
- i (1:title) Hebrew Metushelach; the meaning is uncertain, perhaps “man of the javelin.”
- j (1:title) Hebrew Chanoch, “dedicated” or “initiated.”
- k (1:title) Hebrew Yered, “descent.” The Slavonic text has “Tared” (or “Arad”). The list leaves out several names found in Genesis 11:10–16 (Peleg, Eber, Shelah), so it is shorter than the Bible’s.
- l (1:2) Hebrew Avraham, “father of a multitude” (Genesis 17:5). He was first called Abram, “exalted father.”
- m (1:3) In the Slavonic text the name is Merumath. Editors suggest it comes from a Hebrew phrase meaning “stone of deceit.” The statue is stone, and the story mocks it.
- n (1:3) The name is Nahon or Naritson in different manuscripts. Its meaning is unknown.

Chapter 2

1 Next he fashioned five more gods and handed them to me, telling me to sell them out in the town’s main street. 2 I loaded my father’s donkey, put the gods on it, and went toward the inn to sell them. 3 Merchants from Fandana[a] in Syria[b] were passing with camels on their way to Egypt[c] to trade. I talked with them. 4 One of their camels let out a groan, and the donkey was frightened and bolted and knocked the gods off. Three of them were smashed, and two came through whole.
5 The Syrians noticed that I had gods and asked, “Why did you keep quiet about them? We would have bought them before your donkey heard the camel and they were lost. At least sell us the ones that are left, and we will pay a fair price for the smashed ones as well as for those that survived.” 6 I was worried in my heart about how I could take the price home to my father. The three broken ones I threw into the water of the river Gur,[d] which was at that place. They sank into the depths, and nothing more was seen of them.

Notes

- a (2:3) The place may be Paddan-Aram, “road of Aram” (Genesis 25:20), in northern Mesopotamia. The Slavonic reads Fandana.
- b (2:3) Greek Syria, from an old name whose meaning is uncertain; the Hebrew is Aram.
- c (2:3) Hebrew Mitsrayim; the meaning of the name is unknown.

- d (2:6) The river is called Gur in the text. Its meaning is uncertain; the Hebrew word gur means “cub” or “sojourning.” A later version has the Dead Sea here.

Chapter 3

1 While I was still on the road, my heart was troubled within me and my mind was distracted. 2 I said in my heart, “What wrong is my father committing? Is he not the god of his own gods, since they come into being by his chisels, his lathe, and his skill? Would it not be more fitting for them to worship him, because they are his handiwork? What is this folly of my father in the things he makes?
3 “Look, Merumath fell down in his own temple and could not rise. I was unable to lift him alone; only when my father came could the two of us stand him up. Even then, weak as we both are, his head came off, and my father fixed it onto a different stone, the body of another god he had made headless. 4 “And the other five gods were smashed to pieces by the donkey. They could not help themselves, and they could not harm the donkey that broke them. Their fragments did not come up out of the river either.” 5 I said in my heart, “If that is so, how can my father’s god Merumath, wearing the head of another stone and himself made from a third, save anyone, or listen to a person’s prayer and reward him?”

Chapter 4

1 While I was thinking this over, I reached my father’s house. I gave the donkey water and hay, then brought the silver and placed it in my father Terah’s hand. 2 When he saw it he was glad. He said, “Abraham, my gods have blessed you, because you brought back the price of the gods, and so my labor was not wasted.” 3 I answered him, “Listen, my father Terah! Blessed are your gods, because you are their god, since you made them. Their blessing is ruin and their power is empty. They could not help themselves, so how can they help you or bless me? 4 “I have been good to you in this affair, because I used my wits and brought you the money for the broken gods.” 5 When he heard this he flew into a rage at me, because I had spoken harshly against his gods.

Chapter 5

1 I thought over my father's anger and went out. After I had gone out, my father called, "Abraham!" I said, "Here I am." 2 He said, "Take the wood chips from the gods I made out of pine before you came, gather them up, and get my midday meal ready." 3 As I gathered the chips I found under them a little god lying among the brushwood to my left. On its forehead was written, "God Barisat."[a] 4 I said nothing to my father about the wooden god Barisat I had found beneath the chips. 5 I laid the chips on the fire to prepare my father's food. I went out to ask something about the meal, and I set Barisat in front of the kindled fire. I warned him, "Barisat, take good care that the fire does not die down before I come back. If it does, blow on it so that it burns up again." 6 I went out and did what I had to do. When I came back, I found Barisat fallen on his back, with his feet surrounded by fire and badly scorched. 7 I burst out laughing and said to myself, "Truly, Barisat, you can kindle fire and cook food!" 8 While I was speaking, laughing, he was slowly burned up by the fire and turned to ashes.
9 I carried the meal to my father, and he ate. When I gave him wine and milk, he grew cheerful and blessed his god Merumath. 10 I said to him, "Father Terah, do not bless your god Merumath, and do not praise him. Praise your god Barisat instead, because he loved you more, and threw himself into the fire to cook your food." 11 He said to me, "Where is he now?" I said, "He is burnt to ashes in the force of the fire and turned to dust." 12 He said, "Barisat's power is great! I will make another one today, and tomorrow he will prepare my meal."

Notes

- a (5:3) The name is Barisat. Editors think it may come from the Aramaic bar ishta, "son of the fire," which fits the story.

Chapter 6

1 When I, Abraham, heard my father speak like this, I laughed inwardly, and I sighed with sorrow and anger in my soul. 2 I said to myself, "How can these manufactured statues, his own handiwork, help my father? Is it right that the body should serve its soul, and the soul the spirit, and the spirit folly and ignorance? 3 "Just this once it is right to endure some trouble. I will set my mind on what is pure and lay my thoughts out plainly before him." 4 I answered, "Father Terah, whichever of these you praise as a god, you are foolish in your mind. 5 "Look at the gods of your brother Haran,[a] who stand in the holy temple. They are worth more honor than yours. 6 "Look at Zucheus,[b] the god of your brother, which is worth more honor than your god Merumath, because he is cast of gold, a metal that people prize. When he wears out he can be melted down and recast. But if your god Merumath is altered or smashed, he cannot be made new, because he is stone. It is the same with the god Joavon,[c] who stands beside Zucheus over the other gods. 7 "How much more honor he deserves than Barisat, a god made of wood, when Joavon is wrought of silver! Look how he has been made valuable to look at by human skill. But your god Barisat, before he was prepared, stood rooted on the earth, great and wonderful with the glory of his branches and blossoms. You chopped him with an axe, and by your craft he was turned into a god. And look, his sap is already dried up and gone, he has dropped from his height to the ground, he has gone from a great state to a small one, and the look of his face has vanished. 8 "Barisat himself has been burned by fire and turned to ashes, and is no more. And you say, 'Today I will make another, and tomorrow he will make my food!' He has perished completely!"

Notes

- a (6:5) The Slavonic text calls him Oron or Zaron; this is Haran, Abraham's brother (Genesis 11:27). The Hebrew name Haran may mean "mountaineer." His name is spelled in different ways in the manuscripts.
- b (6:6) The name is Zucheus in the text; its meaning is not known.
- c (6:6) The name is Joavon or Joauv in different manuscripts. Its meaning is unknown.

Chapter 7

1 "Look, the fire is worth more honor than all the things that are made, because even things that serve nothing else are forced to serve it, and things that are easily destroyed are mocked by its flames. 2 "But the water is worth even more honor, because it overcomes the fire and gives the earth its fill. Even so, I do not call it a god, because it is subject to the earth, down toward which water leans. [3] "I call the earth worth much more honor, because it overpowers the water and its fullness. Even the earth I do not call a god, because it too is dried out by the sun and is given to people to be plowed. [4] "I call the sun worth more honor than the earth, because its rays light up the whole world and the different regions of the air. Even the sun I do not call a god, because night hides it, and so do clouds that cover its path. [5] "I do not call the moon or the stars gods either, because they too hide their light at night when their time comes. [6] "Listen, Terah, my father! I will tell you who is the God who made everything, and not these things that we regard as gods. Who is he, then, and what is he? He is the one who has made the heavens red and the sun golden, [7] "who has made the moon bright and the stars with it, who has made the dry land in the midst of many waters, and who has set you among the ..."[a] [8] "Yet may God make himself known to us by his own act!"

Notes

- a (7:7) A line is missing or damaged here in the Slavonic text. Some manuscripts add words about Abraham's own thoughts being tested.

Chapter 8

[1] While I was talking this way with my father Terah in the courtyard of my house, the voice of a Mighty One came down from heaven out of a cloud bursting with fire, and it cried out, "Abraham, Abraham!" [2] I said, "Here I am." He said, "You are seeking, with the understanding of your heart, the God of gods, the Creator. I am he. [3] "Go out from your father Terah, and get out of the house, so that you too are not killed in the sins of your father's house." [4] I left. I had not yet passed the courtyard door when a peal of great thunder burned him up, along with his house and everything in it, right down to the ground, for a distance of sixty feet.[a]

Notes

- a (8:4) The Slavonic text says "forty cubits" (a cubit is about 18 inches, so about 60 feet or 18 meters). Late tradition reads the "Ur" of "Ur of the Chaldeans" as "fire," so Abraham was brought out of the fire.

Chapter 9

1 Then a voice called to me a second time: “Abraham, Abraham!” I answered, “I am here.” 2 He said, “Look, it is I. Do not be afraid, for I was there before the ages. I am a mighty God, who made the light of the world. 3 “I am a shield over you, and I am your helper. Go and fetch for me a heifer, a she-goat, and a ram, each of them three years of age, with a turtledove and a pigeon, and present me with a clean sacrifice. 4 “In this sacrifice I will lay out the ages before you and make known to you what is held in reserve, and you will see great things that you have not seen before, because you have loved seeking me out, and I have named you my Friend. 5 “But for forty days keep away from every kind of food that comes from the fire, and from drinking wine, and from anointing yourself with oil. Then set out for me the sacrifice I have commanded, in the place that I will show you, on a high mountain. 6 “There I will show you the ages that were created and set in place, made and renewed through my Word, and I will tell you what will happen in them to those who have done evil and to those who have lived righteously among the human race.”

Chapter 10

1 When I heard the voice of the one who spoke these words to me,
I looked around, and look, there was not a living soul in sight. My spirit was terrified; my soul seemed to flee from me. I turned as stiff as stone and dropped to the ground, for I had no strength left to stand on the earth. 2 As I lay there still facedown, I heard the Holy One’s voice saying, “Go, Jaoel,[a] and by my unspeakable Name raise up that man for me and strengthen him so that he recovers from his trembling.” 3
The angel whom he had sent to me came in the likeness of a man. He took me by my right hand and stood me on my feet, and said to me, “Stand up, Abraham, Friend of God who loves you. Do not let human trembling seize you. Look, I have been sent to you to strengthen you and bless you in the name of God, who loves you, the Creator of the heavenly and earthly things. Do not be afraid, and hurry to him. 4 “I am called Jaoel by the one who moves what exists together with me on the seventh expanse above the firmament. I have the power of the unspeakable Name that dwells in me. [5] "By his command I have been given charge to restrain the threatening attacks that the living creatures of the Cherubim[b] make on one another, and to teach those who bear him the song of the seventh night-hour of humankind. [6] "I am ordained to hold back Leviathan,[c] because the attack and threat of every kind of snake and crawling thing are subject to me. [7] "I was the one commissioned to set your father's house ablaze with him inside it, because he revered dead idols. [8] "I have been sent to bless you now, and the land that the Eternal One, whom you have called on, has prepared for you, and I have made my way across the earth for your sake. [9] "Stand up, Abraham! Go without fear. Be very glad and rejoice, for I am with you. Eternal honor has been prepared for you by the Eternal One. Go, and carry out the sacrifices that were commanded. [10] "Look, I have been appointed to be with you, and with the generation that is destined to spring from you; and Michael, together with me,[d] blesses you forever. Take heart and go!"

Notes

- a (10:2) The Slavonic text spells the angel's name in several ways. It is the Hebrew Yahoel, "Yah is God," and it contains a shortened form of the name Yahweh. In the book the angel carries the power of God's unspeakable Name. In chapter 17 God himself is addressed by this name.
- b (10:5) Hebrew kerubim, winged guardian beings that carry or guard the throne of God (Ezekiel 10; Genesis 3:24). The meaning of the word is uncertain.
- c (10:6) Hebrew Livyatan, "coiled one," the great sea monster (Job 41; Isaiah 27:1).
- d (10:10) Hebrew Mikha'el, "Who is like God?"

Chapter 11

[1] I got up and saw the one who had taken my right hand and set me on my feet. His body looked like sapphire and his face like chrysolite, while the hair on his head was like snow. The turban on his head looked like a rainbow, and his clothing was like purple. A golden scepter was in his right hand. [2] He called, "Abraham!" I answered, "Here I am, your servant." He said, "Do not let my appearance alarm you, or my words, lest your soul be shaken. Come along with me, and I will walk with you until the sacrifice is finished, in a form you can see; after the sacrifice I will be invisible forever. Take heart, and come!"

Chapter 12

1 The two of us walked on together for forty days and nights. I took no bread and no water, for the sight of the angel beside me was my food, and his speech was my drink. 2 We came to the mountain of God, glorious Horeb.[a] I said to the angel, "O singer of the Eternal One, look, I have no sacrifice with me, and I know of no place for an altar on this mountain. How can I make an offering?" 3 He said to me, "Look around." I looked around, and look, all the animals prescribed for the sacrifice were following us: the heifer, the female goat, the ram, the turtledove, and the pigeon. 4 The angel called, "Abraham!"
"Here I am," I replied. He said, "Slaughter all of these. Cut the animals in two, setting each half opposite the other, but do not cut the birds in pieces. 5 "Hand the pieces to the men I will show you standing beside you, for they are the altar on this mountain, to present a sacrifice to the Eternal One. But give the turtledove and the pigeon to me, for I will ascend on the wings of the birds, to show you heaven, and the earth, and the sea, and the abyss, and the underworld, and the Garden of Eden,[b] and its rivers, and the fullness of the whole world and its circle. You will look into all of it."

Notes

- a (12:2) Hebrew Chorev, "dry" or "desolate"; it is the mountain also called Sinai (Exodus 3:1).
- b (12:5) Hebrew 'Eden, "delight" (Genesis 2:8).

Chapter 13

1 I did everything as the angel commanded. I gave the divided animals to the angels who had come to us, but the angel took the birds. I waited for the evening sacrifice. 2 An unclean bird flew down onto the carcasses, and I drove it away. The unclean bird spoke to me and said,
"What are you doing, Abraham, on the holy heights, where no one eats or drinks and there is no human food? These beings consume everything with fire, and they will burn you up. Leave the man who is with you and run away, for if you go up to the heights they will destroy you." [3] When I saw the bird speak, I asked the angel, "What is this, my lord?" He answered, "This is ungodliness; this is Azazel."[a] [4] He said to the bird, "Disgrace on you, Azazel! Abraham's lot is in heaven, but yours is on the earth. You chose and loved this place as the dwelling for your uncleanness, so the eternal Mighty Lord made you a dweller on the earth. [5] "Through you every evil spirit of lies has its being, and through you come wrath and trials on the generations of the ungodly. For God, the Eternal Mighty One, has not allowed the bodies of the righteous to fall into your hand, so that by this means the life of the righteous and the ruin of the unclean may be made certain. [6] "Listen, friend, and go away from me in shame! It has not been given to you to tempt all the righteous. Leave this man! You cannot lead him astray, for he is your enemy, and the enemy of all who follow you and love what you desire. [7] "Look, the robe that once was yours in heaven is set aside for him, and the mortality that was his has passed to you."

Notes

- a (13:3) Hebrew 'Aza'zel; the meaning is uncertain, perhaps "God strengthens" or "the rugged mountain." It is the name of the desert demon to whom the scapegoat was sent in Leviticus 16. In the Enoch tradition, Azazel is the chief of the fallen angels.

Chapter 14

[1] The angel called, "Abraham!" I answered, "Here I am, your servant." He said, "From this moment know that the Eternal One, whom you love, has chosen you. Take courage, and use this authority, as far as I direct you, against the one who slanders the truth. [2] "Should I not be able to put to shame the one who has scattered the secrets of heaven over the earth and rebelled against the Mighty One? [3] "Say to him, 'You are the burning coal in the earth's furnace! Go, Azazel, into the trackless parts of the earth. [4] "'Your inheritance lies with those who exist beside you, born with the stars and the clouds, the people whose portion you are, who live through your being. Your enmity is their justification. So, because of your ruin, keep away from me.'" [5] I spoke the words that the angel had taught me. He said, "Abraham!" I said, "Here I am, your servant." [6] The angel said to me, "Do not answer him, for God has given him power over those who do answer him." [7] The angel spoke to me a second time and said, "Whatever he says to you, do not answer him, so that his will has no way in you, because the Eternal Mighty One has given him weight and will. Do not answer him." I did what the angel commanded me, and however much he spoke to me, I answered him nothing at all.

Chapter 15

[1] When the sun went down, look, there was smoke like the smoke of a furnace. The angels who held the portions of the sacrifice went up from the top of the smoking furnace. [2] The angel took me by the right hand and seated me on the pigeon's right wing, and he took his own place on the turtledove's left wing, birds that had been neither slaughtered nor divided. He carried me to the edges of the flaming fire, and we rose as with many winds to the heaven fixed above the surface. I saw in the air on the height where we had risen a strong light that I cannot describe. [3] And look, in this light there was a fiercely burning fire, and in it many people of male appearance, all changing in look and shape, running and being transformed, and worshiping and crying out in a sound of words that I did not know.

Chapter 16

[1] I said to the angel, "Why have you brought me up here now? I cannot see any longer, because I have already grown weak and my spirit is leaving me." [2] He said to me, "Stay near me; do not be afraid. The one whom you see coming straight toward us with a great voice of holiness is the Eternal One who loves you. But you cannot see him yourself. [3] "Do not let your spirit grow faint because of the loud crying, for I am with you, strengthening you."

Chapter 17

[1] He was still speaking when fire rushed toward us from every side, and inside the fire was a sound like the rushing of great waters, like the surge of the sea in a storm. [2] The angel bent his head and worshiped with me. I wanted to throw myself to the earth, but the high place where we stood now rose straight up and now rolled downward. [3] He said, "Only worship, Abraham, and sing the song I taught you." There was no ground to fall upon, so I simply worshiped and sang the song he had taught me. [4] "Say it without pausing," he told me. I sang, and he sang the song along with me:

[5] Eternal, powerful, Holy God,[a]
the only God, Most High!
You who are self-existent, who do not decay, who bear no stain,
unmade, spotless, deathless,
lacking nothing, shining by your own light,
with no father and no mother, never born,
lofty One of fire,
friend of humankind, gracious, bountiful,
jealous for me and full of compassion.
[6] Eli,[b] that is, My God, eternal, strong, holy Sabaoth,[c]
most glorious. God, God, God, God, Jaoel![d]
[7] You are the one my soul has loved!
Everlasting guardian, blazing like flame,
whose voice rolls like thunder,
whose gaze flashes like lightning, who sees everything,
who hears the prayers of those who honor you.
[8] You turn from the pleas of those who burden you with the weight of their offenses.
You untangle the tumults of the world that rise from the wicked and the just in this perishing age,
and you make the age of the righteous new.
[9] You, O Light, shone before the morning light upon your creatures,
and so day came upon the earth.
In your heavenly dwellings no other light is needed,
only the unspeakable radiance from the lamps of your face.
[10] Receive my prayer and take pleasure in it, and the sacrifice too, which you prepared for yourself through me, your seeker.
Receive me with favor, and show me, and teach me,
and tell your servant what you have promised me.

Notes

- a (17:5) The Slavonic text has El, the Hebrew word for "God." It is the short form of Elohim, and means "power."
- b (17:6) Hebrew Eli, "my God." The Slavonic text explains it itself: "that is, My God."
- c (17:6) Hebrew Tseva'ot, "hosts" or "armies." The title "Yahweh of hosts" is common in the Bible; here it stands alone as a name of God.
- d (17:6) The four-fold El looks like a stand-in for the four letters of the name Yahweh. Jaoel is the name given in chapter 10 to the angel; here God himself is called by it.

Chapter 18

1 I was still singing when the mouth of the fire on the surface leaped upward. I heard a voice like the roar of the sea, and the great quantity of fire could not quiet it. 2 As the fire lifted into the height, I saw beneath it a throne of fire, and around the throne the all-seeing ones, singing the song. Under the throne I saw four living creatures of fire, singing. They shared one appearance, though each had four faces. 3 Their faces looked like this: a lion, a man, an ox, and an eagle. Each body carried four heads, making sixteen faces for the four creatures between them. Every one had six wings, growing from the shoulders, the sides, and the hips. 4 With the pair of wings at their shoulders they covered their faces, with the pair at their hips they covered their feet, and the middle pair they spread out to fly straight ahead. When their singing was done, they looked at one another and glared. 5 The angel who was with me saw them glaring at each other. He left my side and ran to them. He turned each creature's face away from the one that stood opposite, so that they would not see one another's menacing looks. Then he taught them the song of peace, whose source is the Eternal One. 6 I stood alone and watched. Behind the living creatures I saw a chariot with wheels of fire, every wheel full of eyes all around its rim. Above the wheels stood a throne wrapped in fire, and fire circled it. 7 Look, a fire beyond description surrounded a host of flame. I heard its holy voice, which sounded like the voice of a man.

Chapter 19

1 A voice spoke to me from the midst of the fire: “Abraham, Abraham!” “Here I am,” I answered. 2 He said, “Consider the expanses below the firmament where you now stand, and see that on none of them is there anyone but the one you have sought and who has loved you.” 3 As he spoke, look, the expanses opened, and the heavens lay under me. On the seventh firmament, where I stood, I saw a widely spreading fire, and light, and dew, and a crowd of angels, and a power of unseen glory above the living creatures I had seen. No other being was there. 4 I looked down from the mountain to the sixth firmament and saw a throng of angels made of spirit alone, bodiless, who carried out the orders of the fiery angels on the seventh firmament,[a] while I stood hanging above them. 5 Look, this firmament held no other powers of any different form, only spirit-angels, like the power I had seen on the seventh. He ordered the sixth firmament to be taken away. 6 Then, on the fifth firmament, I saw the powers of the stars, who do the tasks assigned to them, and the earth’s elements obeyed them.

Notes

- a (19:4) The printed Slavonic text has “eighth,” which the editor thinks cannot be right and should be “seventh.”

Chapter 20

1 The Eternal Mighty One spoke to me again: “Abraham, Abraham!” “Here I am,” I answered. 2 He said, “Look down from above at the stars beneath you. Count them for me, and tell me how many they are.” I said, “How could I? I am only a man of dust and ashes.” 3 He said to me, “Like the number of the stars, and like their power, I will make your seed a nation and a people, kept apart for me in my inheritance, which I share with Azazel.” 4 I said, “O Eternal Mighty One, let your servant speak in your presence, and do not let your anger burn against the one you have chosen. Look, before you brought me up here Azazel railed at me. How is it that, though he is not now before you, you have joined yourself to him?”

Chapter 21

[1] He said to me, “Look now at the firmaments beneath your feet, and understand the creation foreshadowed in this expanse, the creatures that live on it, and the age that is made ready to match it.” [2] I looked beneath my feet and saw below me the sixth heaven and everything in it, and then the earth with its fruits, and what moved on it, and its living beings. I saw the strength of its people, the ungodliness of their souls, their righteous acts, and the first beginnings of their works. [3] I saw the regions below, and the ruin found there, and the Abyss with its torments. I saw the sea there with its islands, its monsters and its fish, and Leviathan with his realm, his lair, his caverns, the world resting on him, his motions, and the devastations of the world that he causes. [4] I saw streams there, and the swelling of their waters, and their bends. [5] I saw the Garden of Eden there, and its fruits, the spring of the river that flows from it, its trees in flower, and those who had lived righteously. I saw their food and their happiness. [6] I saw a great crowd there, men, women, and children, one half to the right of the picture and one half to the left.

Chapter 22

[1] I said, “Eternal One, Mighty One, what does this picture of the creatures mean?” He said to me, “This shows my intention for those who exist in the divine counsel of the world. It pleased me, and later I gave them orders through my Word. [2] “Everything I had decided would come to be was laid out ahead of time in this picture, and stood before me before anything was created, just as you have seen.” [3] I said, “O mighty and eternal Lord, who are the people in this picture, here and there?” He said to me, “The ones on the left are the multitude of nations that have lived in the past and will live after you, some marked for judgment and restoration, others for vengeance and destruction at the world’s end. [4] “But the ones on the right of the picture are the people set apart for me out of the nations that belong to Azazel. These are the ones I have ordained to be born from you and to be named my people.

Chapter 23

1 “Now look again in the picture to see who led Eve astray and what the fruit of the tree is. Then you will know what is coming, and how it will go for your seed among the nations at the close of the days of the age. 2 “Whatever you cannot grasp, I will explain to you, for you please me, and I will tell you what I keep in my heart.” 3 I looked into the picture, and my gaze ran to the part beside the Garden of Eden.
There I saw a man of great height and awesome breadth, matchless in appearance, with his arms around a woman, who had the same look and form as the man. 4 They stood beneath a tree of Eden. Its fruit resembled a bunch of vine grapes. Behind the tree stood a figure shaped like a serpent, with hands and feet like a man’s and wings upon its shoulders, six on one side and six on the other. They were holding grapes from the tree in their hands, and the pair I had seen embracing were both eating it. 5 I said, “Who are these who hold one another, and who is the one between them, and what is the fruit they are eating, O Mighty Eternal One?” 6 He said, “Here you see the human world: Adam,[a] and with him their longing on the earth, who is Eve.[b] The one between them stands for ungodliness, the start of their journey to ruin, that is, Azazel.” 7 I said, “O Eternal Mighty One, why did you give him the power to destroy the generation of human beings through what they do on the earth?” 8 He said to me, “To those who choose evil (and how I hated it in those who practice it), I gave him power over them, and that they should love him.” 9 I answered, “O Eternal Mighty One, why did you will that evil be desired in human hearts, when you are angry about what you yourself willed, and at the one who does what is worthless in your plan?”

Notes

- a (23:6) Hebrew Adam, “human being,” from adamah, “ground” (Genesis 2:7).
- b (23:6) Hebrew Chavvah, “living” (Genesis 3:20).

Chapter 24

1 He said to me, “I am angry at the nations because of you, and because of the people of your family who will be set apart after you. You can see in the picture the burden of fate that lies on them. I will tell you what will happen, and how much, in the last days. Now take in everything that is in the picture." 2 I looked and saw what had been set before me in creation: Adam, with Eve beside him, and with them the crafty Adversary; and Cain,[a] who did lawless things through the Adversary; and Abel,[b] who was murdered, and the destruction that the lawless one brought on him. 3 There I also saw Impurity, and those who crave her, and her filth, and their envy, and the fire of their decay in the deepest places of the earth. 4 There I saw Theft, and those who rush to her, and the ordering of their punishment, the judgment of the Great Assize. 5 There I saw naked men standing forehead to forehead, and their disgrace, and the lust they felt for one another, and their penalty. 6 There I saw Desire, holding in her hand the head of lawlessness in all its kinds, with her contempt and her waste, appointed for destruction.

- a (24:2) Hebrew Qayin, "acquired" or "smith" (Genesis 4:1).
- b (24:2) Hebrew Hevel, "breath" or "vapor" (Genesis 4:2).

Chapter 25

1 There I saw the image of jealousy, the idol. It looked like carpentry of the kind my father used to make, but its figure was of gleaming bronze. A man stood before it and bowed down to it. In front of him was an altar, and on the altar lay a boy, killed in the idol's presence. 2 I asked him, "What is this idol? And the altar? Who are the ones being sacrificed, and who is doing the sacrificing? And what is that temple I see, so skillfully built, with a beauty like the glory beneath your throne?" 3 He said, "Listen, Abraham. What you see, the temple and the altar and the beauty, is my plan for the priesthood of my glorious Name. In it every prayer of every person finds its home, along with the rise of kings and prophets and every sacrifice I will command to be offered to me by my people who will come from your line. 4 "But the statue you saw is my anger, the anger the people who will come from you stir up in me. And the man you saw killing is the one who inspires murderous sacrifices, which testify to me, from the creation's beginning, of the final judgment."

Chapter 26

1 I said, “O Eternal Mighty One, why did you arrange for it to be this way, and then announce what you know?” 2 He said to me, “Listen, Abraham. Understand what I say, and give me your answer to my question. Why did your father Terah refuse to hear your voice, and why did he not give up his devilish idolatry until he died, and all his household with him?” 3 I said, “O Eternal Mighty One, it was only because he did not wish to listen to me. I, for my part, did not follow what he did.” 4 He said to me, “Listen, Abraham. Just as your father’s will is within him, and your will is within you, so too the will of my purpose is within me, prepared for the days to come, before you know about them or see with your own eyes what lies ahead in them. Look in the picture to see what your descendants will be.”

Chapter 27

1 I looked and saw: look, the picture shook, and from its left side a pagan people came out. They plundered those on the right, men, women, and children. Some they butchered; others they carried off for themselves. 2 Look, I saw them rush at them through four gateways, and they set fire to the temple and robbed it of the holy things inside. 3 I said, “O Eternal One, look, hordes of pagans are plundering the people who come from me, whom you have accepted. They kill some and keep others as strangers. They have burned the temple with fire, and they steal and wreck its beautiful things. O Eternal Mighty One, if this is how it is, why have you now wounded my heart, and why must it be so?” 4 He said to me, “Listen, Abraham. What you have seen will come to pass because of your seed, who make me angry through the statue you saw and through the killing of humans in the picture, in their zeal for the temple. It will be just as you saw.” 5 I said, “O Eternal Mighty One, let the evil deeds done in ungodliness pass away for now, and show me instead those who obeyed the commandments, the works of righteousness. For you are able to do this.” 6 He told me, “The time of the righteous comes to them first through the holiness that comes from kings and just rulers, whom I created in the beginning so that rulers might arise from them among the people. But from these descend people who look after only their own concerns, as I have shown you and you have seen."

Chapter 28

1 I answered, "O Mighty One, made holy by your power, be gracious to my request. It was for this that you brought me up here, so show me. As you have raised me to your height, so tell me, your beloved, as much as I ask: will what I saw come upon them for a long time?" 2 He showed me a great multitude of his people, and said, "Because of them I will be provoked four times over, as you saw, and in those times I will carry out my punishment for their deeds. 3 "But in the fourth exit, lasting a hundred years plus one hour of the age (that hour is itself a hundred years), they will suffer misfortune among the pagans, though for a single hour there will be mercy and honor, as among the pagans."[a]

Notes

- a (28:3) The Slavonic text has "contumely" ("shame"). The editor suggests an ancient scribe misread a Greek word, and that "in mercy and honor" was meant. "One hour of the age" is a hundred years; compare chapters 29 and 30, where the present age is divided into twelve such hours, that is, about twelve hundred years.

Chapter 29

1 I said, "Eternal One, Mighty One, how long is an hour of the age?" 2 He said, "Twelve years[a] I have set for this godless age, to rule among the pagans and within your seed. Until the end of the times it will go as you saw. Calculate, and understand, and study the picture." 3 I looked, and I saw a man coming out from the left side, from among the pagans.[b] Crowds of men, women, and children came out from among the pagans and bowed to him. 4 While I kept watching, many came out from the right side. Some mocked the man, some hit him, and others bowed to him. 5 I saw these others bowing, and Azazel ran up and bowed to him too, and after he had kissed the man's face he turned and stood behind him. 6 I said, "O Eternal Mighty One, who is the man who is mocked and beaten and honored by the pagans, together with Azazel?" 7 He answered, "Listen, Abraham. The man you saw mocked, beaten, and then honored is the relief that the pagans will give to the people who come from you, in the last days, during this twelfth hour of the godless age. [8] "When my final age reaches its twelfth year I will raise up this man out of your line, whom you saw come out from my people. Everyone will follow him, and those I have called will join him, those who change their minds. [9] "What it means that you saw some come out from the left side of the picture is this: many from the pagans will place their hope in him. And of your seed on the right side, some mocking and striking and others bowing down, many will stumble over him. [10] "But he is putting to the test those of your seed who have bowed to him, in that twelfth hour of the end, to shorten the age of ungodliness. [11] "Before the age of the righteous starts to grow, my judgment will fall on the lawless pagans by the hand of the people from your seed who were set apart for me. In those days I will bring ten plagues upon every creature of the earth, in the form of misfortune and sickness and the groaning of their souls in grief. I will bring this much upon the generations of people who live on it, for the provocation and corruption of its creatures, by which they provoke me. [12] "Then righteous people from your seed will remain, in the number that I alone keep secret, hurrying, in the glory of my Name, toward the place made ready for them, which you saw laid waste in the picture. They will live and be made secure by sacrifices and by gifts of righteousness and of truth, in the age that belongs to the righteous, and they will rejoice in me forever. [13] "They will destroy those who destroyed them and mock those who mocked them. They will spit in the faces of those who slandered them, while I scorn those people, and the righteous will see me full of joy, celebrating with my people and welcoming those who come back to me in repentance. [14] "See, Abraham, what you have seen. Listen to what you have heard. Take in fully what you have learned. Go to your inheritance, and look, I am with you always."

Notes

- a (29:2) The editor suggests that "hours" should be read here for "years," as the age is divided into twelve hours (see 28:3). If "years" is kept, each "year" may stand for a hundred years.
- b (29:3) The passage about the man who is insulted, beaten, and worshiped, which runs on from here, is printed in italics in the English edition on which this translation is based. Its editor, G. H. Box, considers it a Jewish-Christian addition to the older text and reads the man as Jesus.

Chapter 30

1 He was still speaking when I found myself on the ground. I said,
"Eternal One, Mighty One, I no longer have the glory I had on high, and what my soul yearned to grasp in my heart, I still cannot grasp."
2 He said to me, "I will tell you what your heart desires, since you wanted to see the ten plagues that I have prepared for the pagans, kept ready for the passing of the twelfth hour of the earth. Listen to what I reveal to you, and so it will come to pass. 3 "The first is the agony of great distress. The second is the burning of many cities. The third is the death and plague of livestock. The fourth is famine across the entire world and among its peoples. The fifth is the killing of its rulers, by earthquake and by the sword. The sixth is the multiplying of hail and snow. The seventh: wild animals will be their tomb. The eighth: famine and plague will take turns destroying them. The ninth:
the sword, and flight in terror. The tenth: thunder, voices, and an earthquake that destroys."

Chapter 31

1 "Then I will blow the trumpet from the sky and send my Chosen One, who carries my whole power in himself in a single measure. He will call together my despised people from among the nations, and I will burn in fire those who mocked them and who held rule over them in this age. 2 "Those who have wrapped me in mockery I will hand over to the scorn of the age to come. I have made them ready as fuel for the fire of Hades, and for endless wandering to and fro in the air of the underworld below the earth, their bodies full of worms.[a] 3 "For through them the righteous will see the justice of the Creator, the ones who chose to do my will and openly kept my commandments.
They will rejoice with gladness at the fall of those who remain, who went after idols and their murders. 4 "For they will rot inside the body of the wicked worm Azazel and be burned by the flame of Azazel's tongue. I had hoped they would turn to me in repentance, and not love and praise the foreign god, nor cling to one who was never their allotted lord, but they have abandoned the mighty Lord."

Notes

- a (31:2) From the words "the body filled with worms" to the end of the book, the text is found in two of the Slavonic manuscripts (A and K) but not in manuscript S, the one this edition follows most closely.

Chapter 32

[1] "So listen, Abraham, and see: look, your seventh generation will go out with you into a foreign land, and they will make slaves of them and treat them badly, for what is, so to speak, a single hour of the age of wickedness. But the nation they serve I will judge."[a]

Notes

- a (32:1) Abraham's "seventh generation" counted with Abraham: Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Levi, Kohath, Amram, and Moses. One manuscript (K) ends with a further line: Abraham heard the words of the Lord and took them into his heart.

Ascension of Isaiah

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

1 When Hezekiah had been on the throne twenty-six years,[a] king of Judah,[b] he summoned his son Manasseh,[c] his only son. 2 He brought him before the prophet Isaiah[d] the son of Amoz[e] and of Josab[f] the son of Isaiah, in order to entrust to him the words of righteousness the king had himself been shown. 3 They concerned the eternal judgments and the torments of Gehenna,[g] the ruler of this world,[h] and his angels, authorities, and powers, 4 and they also concerned the faith of the Beloved,[i] which the king had seen for himself while he was ill, in the fifteenth year he ruled. 5 He handed Manasseh the written words that Samnas[j] the scribe had written, along with what Isaiah son of Amoz had given him and the prophets, so that they could copy it and keep it by him. It was about what the king had seen in his house:
the judgment of the angels, the ruin of this world, the garments of the saints and how they would come forth, their transformation, and the Beloved's persecution and ascension. 6 In Hezekiah's twentieth year Isaiah had seen what this prophecy says, and had given it to his son Josab. As Hezekiah gave his orders, with Josab son of Isaiah at his side, 7 Isaiah said to King Hezekiah (and he did not say it with Manasseh alone there), "By the life of the Lord[k]—whose name has never been sent into this world—by the life of the Beloved of my Lord, and by the life of the Spirit who speaks in me: your son Manasseh will cancel all these commands and words, and at his hands I will depart through the torture of my body. 8 Sammael[l] Malchira[m] will become Manasseh's servant and do all that Manasseh desires, and Manasseh will turn out to be a follower of Beliar[n] instead of me. 9 He will draw many in Jerusalem[o] and Judea[p] away from the true faith. Beliar will settle in Manasseh, and through his hands I will be cut in two with a saw." 10 Hearing these words, Hezekiah wept very bitterly. He ripped his clothes, poured dirt over his head, and threw himself face down. 11 Isaiah said to him, “Sammael’s scheme for Manasseh is finished; nothing you do will help.” 12 That same day Hezekiah decided in his heart to put his son Manasseh to death. 13 Then Isaiah told Hezekiah, “The Beloved has made your plan useless, and the intention of your heart will not be carried out. For this is the calling I was called to, and I will receive the Beloved’s inheritance.”

Notes

- a (1:1) Hebrew Hizqiyyahu, “Yahweh strengthens.” He reigned over Judah in about 715–686 BC.
- b (1:1) Hebrew Yehudah, “praise” (Genesis 29:35).
- c (1:1) Hebrew Menasheh, “causing to forget” (Genesis 41:51).
- d (1:2) Hebrew Yeshayahu, “Yahweh saves.”
- e (1:2) Hebrew Amots, “strong.”
- f (1:2) Ethiopic Jôsâb, probably the same as Jashub (Hebrew Yashuv, “he returns”), the name of one of Isaiah’s sons in Isaiah 7:3.
- g (1:3) Greek Geenna, from the Hebrew Gey Hinnom, “valley of Hinnom,” a ravine south of Jerusalem that came to be used as a picture of the place of final punishment.
- h (1:3) The book uses “ruler (or prince) of this world” for Beliar, as in 2:4 and 4:2.
- i (1:4) “The Beloved” (Greek ho agapetos) is the title the book uses for Jesus as the chosen Son of God. Scholars note that “the Beloved” was already used for Israel and the Messiah in Jewish writings before the Christian era.
- j (1:5) Greek Somnas, Hebrew Shebna (2 Kings 18:18); the meaning is uncertain.
- k (1:7) The Ethiopic text uses one word for “Lord” throughout, for God and also for the Beloved (Christ). No form of the name Yahweh appears in the book, so “Lord” is kept as the text has it.
- l (1:8) Hebrew Sammael, a name of the chief of the evil angels in Jewish tradition, often explained as “poison of God” or “blind god.”
- m (1:8) Ethiopic Malkira; the meaning is unknown. It seems to be another name for Sammael here; later forms of it (Belchira, Melchira) are the name of the false prophet in chapters 2 and 3.
- n (1:8) Hebrew Beliyya‘al, “worthlessness” (in Greek, Belial).
- o (1:9) Hebrew Yerushalayim; the meaning is uncertain, often explained as “foundation of peace.”
- p (1:9) The land of Judah.

Chapter 2

1 After Hezekiah died and Manasseh took the throne, Manasseh did not keep in mind his father’s commands; he forgot them. Sammael took up residence in him and held on tight. 2 Manasseh gave up serving his father's God and served Satan,[a] with his angels and his powers. 3 He pulled his father's household, which had stood in Hezekiah's presence, away from words of wisdom and from the worship of God. 4 Manasseh turned his heart toward serving Beliar, for the angel of lawlessness who rules this world is Beliar, and his name is Matanbuchus.[b] Beliar relished Jerusalem on Manasseh's account, and he strengthened Manasseh in leading Israel[c] astray, and in the lawlessness spreading all over Jerusalem. 5 Sorcery and magic multiplied, along with fortune-telling, omen-reading, sexual immorality, adultery, and the hounding of the righteous by Manasseh, Belchira,[d] Tobia[e] the Canaanite,[f] John[g] of Anathoth,[h] and Zadok,[i] the chief of the works. 6 His other deeds are recorded in the book about the kings of Judah and Israel. 7 Isaiah son of Amoz watched the lawlessness going on in Jerusalem, the worship of Satan, and his wantonness, and he withdrew from Jerusalem and made his home in Bethlehem[j] of Judah. 8 There too lawlessness was widespread, so he left Bethlehem and lived on a mountain in a remote place. 9 The prophet Micaiah,[k] the elderly Ananias,[l] Joel,[m] Habakkuk,[n] his son Josab, and many other faithful people, who believed that people can ascend into heaven, also moved out and settled on the mountain. 10 All of them wore hair clothing, and all of them were prophets. They had nothing with them and were bare, and they all wailed aloud over Israel's wandering from the right path. 11 They ate only the wild plants they picked in the mountains. They boiled these and lived on them, with the prophet Isaiah, and they spent two years in the mountains and hills. 12 Some time later, while they were in the wilderness, there was a man in Samaria[o] named Belchira, of the family of Zedekiah[p] son of Chenaan.[q] He was a false prophet, and his home was in Bethlehem. Now Hezekiah son of Chanani,[r] the brother of Zedekiah's father, had, in the time of Ahab,[s] king of Israel, taught the 400 prophets of Baal.[t] He himself had struck and scolded the prophet Micaiah son of Amada.[u] 13 Micaiah had been rebuked by Ahab and thrown in prison. He was with the prophet Zedekiah. They stayed with Ahaziah,[v] the son of Ahab, who was king in Samaria. 14 The prophet Elijah[w] of Tebon[x] in Gilead[y] rebuked Ahaziah and Samaria. He prophesied that Ahaziah would die on his sickbed and that Samaria would be handed over to Leba Nasr,[z] because it had killed the prophets of God. 15 Hearing of this were the false prophets who attended Ahaziah son of Ahab, and their teacher Jalerjas[aa] of Mount Joel[ab]. 16 (He was Zedekiah's brother.) After hearing it, they persuaded Ahaziah, the king of Aguaron,[ac] and killed Micaiah.

Notes

- a (2:2) Hebrew satan, "adversary."
- b (2:4) The Ethiopic form is Matanbûchûs. The name has been explained as Hebrew mattan bukhus, "worthless gift," but this is only a guess.
- c (2:4) Hebrew Yisra'el, "he strives with God" (Genesis 32:28).
- d (2:5) A form of the name Malchira (1:8). Its Greek form is Belchira or Melchias; the meaning is unknown.
- e (2:5) Hebrew Toviyyah, "Yahweh is good."
- f (2:5) The Canaanites were the people who lived in the land before Israel; the name Kena'an has an uncertain meaning, perhaps "lowland" or "merchant."
- g (2:5) Hebrew Yohanan, "Yahweh is gracious."
- h (2:5) Hebrew Anatot; the meaning is uncertain, perhaps "answers" or linked with the goddess Anat.
- i (2:5) Hebrew Tsadoq, "righteous."
- j (2:7) Hebrew Bet Lekhem, "house of bread."
- k (2:9) Hebrew Mikhayhu, "who is like Yahweh?"
- l (2:9) Greek form of Hebrew Hananyah, "Yahweh has been gracious."
- m (2:9) Hebrew Yo'el, "Yahweh is God."
- n (2:9) Hebrew Havaqquq; the meaning is uncertain, perhaps "embrace."
- o (2:12) Hebrew Shomron, "watch-hill"; the city was named for the hill, which King Omri bought from a man named Shemer (1 Kings 16:24).
- p (2:12) Hebrew Tsidqiyyahu, "Yahweh is my righteousness."
- q (2:12) Hebrew Kena'anah (1 Kings 22:11); the meaning is uncertain.
- r (2:12) Hebrew Hanani, "gracious" or "Yahweh has shown me favor." The Ethiopic names this older "Hezekiah" as an uncle of Zedekiah; the text is uncertain here.
- s (2:12) Hebrew Ah'av, "father's brother."
- t (2:12) Hebrew Ba'al, "lord" or "master," the title of a Canaanite storm god (1 Kings 18:19).
- u (2:12) Ethiopic Amâdâ, for Hebrew Yimlah (Imlah, 1 Kings 22:8); the meaning of that name is uncertain.
- v (2:13) Hebrew Ahazyahu, "Yahweh has taken hold."
- w (2:14) Hebrew Eliyyahu, "my God is Yahweh."

- x (2:14) Ethiopic Têbôn, probably the town of Tishbe (1 Kings 17:1); the meaning is uncertain.
- y (2:14) Hebrew Gil'ad, probably "rugged."
- z (2:14) Ethiopic Leba Nâsr, a corrupt form of Shalmaneser (Akkadian Shulmanu-asharid, "the god Shulmanu is foremost"), the king of Assyria who attacked Samaria (2 Kings 17:3).
- aa (2:15) The meaning of this name is unknown.
- ab (2:15) The text is uncertain here; the Ethiopic manuscripts and the other versions give different readings.
- ac (2:16) Ethiopic Aguarôn, a corrupt form of Gomorrah (Hebrew Amorah; the meaning is uncertain). The writer uses "Gomorrah" as a name of contempt for Samaria; see 3:10.

Chapter 3

1 Belchira learned where Isaiah and his fellow prophets were living. He was himself a resident of the Bethlehem area and a supporter of Manasseh. He gave false prophecies in Jerusalem, and many Jerusalemites sided with him. He was a Samaritan. 2 When Alagar Zagar,[a] king of Assyria,[b] came and captured Samaria and carried off the nine and a half tribes as prisoners, he led them to the mountains of the Medes[c] and the rivers of Tazon.[d] 3 While still young, Belchira escaped and reached Jerusalem during the reign of Hezekiah of Judah. He did not walk in the ways of his Samaritan father, since he was afraid of Hezekiah. 4 Under Hezekiah he was caught uttering lawless words in Jerusalem. 5 Hezekiah's servants denounced him, and he fled into the Bethlehem district. And they persuaded . . . 6 Belchira laid charges against Isaiah and his fellow prophets. He said, "Isaiah and those with him prophesy that Jerusalem and the cities of Judah will be laid waste, that the people of Judah and Benjamin[e] will go into captivity, and that you too, my lord the king, will be led off bound with hooks and iron chains." 7 "But they are prophesying falsely against Israel and Judah. 8 Isaiah has said, 'I see more than Moses[f] the prophet.' 9 Moses said, 'No one can see God and live,' yet Isaiah says, 'I have seen God, and look, I am alive.' 10 "So know this, O king, that he is lying. He has also called Jerusalem Sodom,[g] and he has declared that the leaders of Judah and Jerusalem are the people of Gomorrah." He brought many charges against Isaiah and the prophets before Manasseh. 11 Meanwhile Beliar lived in Manasseh's heart, and in the hearts of the princes of Judah and Benjamin, the eunuchs, and the king's counselors. 12 Belchira's words pleased Manasseh greatly, and he sent men and seized Isaiah. 13 For Beliar was furious with Isaiah because of his vision, and because Isaiah had exposed Sammael, and because Isaiah had revealed that the Beloved would go out from the seventh heaven. Isaiah had revealed his transformation and descent and the human likeness he would take, the persecution he would suffer, and the tortures with which the children of Israel would torture him. He had foretold the arrival of his twelve disciples and their teaching, and that he would be crucified on a tree before the Sabbath, crucified together with evildoers, and buried in a tomb. 14 He had foretold that the twelve who were with him would stumble because of him, and that guards would watch the tomb. 15 He had also foretold how the angel of the Christian church would come down, the one who is in the heavens and whom the Lord will call in the last days. 16 And on the third day Gabriel,[h] the angel of the Holy Spirit, with Michael,[i] the chief of the holy angels, would open the tomb. 17 The Beloved, sitting on their shoulders, would come out and send out his twelve disciples. 18 They would teach all nations and every language about the resurrection of the Beloved. Those who believed in his cross would be saved, and also in his ascension to the seventh heaven, from which he came. 19 Many who believed in him would speak through the Holy Spirit. 20 And many signs and wonders would be done in those days. 21 Afterward, as his coming drew near, his disciples would abandon the teaching of the twelve apostles, along with their faith, their love, and their purity. 22 There would be much quarreling as his coming drew near. 23 In those days many would be fond of high office although they had no wisdom. 24 There would be many lawless elders and shepherds who treated their own sheep unjustly, and they would plunder them because they had no holy shepherds. 25 Many would trade the honor of the saints' garments for the garments of the greedy. There would be much favoritism in those days, and many who loved the honor of this world. 26 There would be much slander and boasting as the Lord's coming drew near, and the Holy Spirit would leave many. 27

In those days there would not be many prophets or people speaking trustworthy words, except one here and there in different places, [28] because of the spirit of error, immorality, boasting, and greed that would be found among those called servants of that One, and among those who would welcome that One. [29] There would be great hatred between the shepherds and elders. [30] For in the last days there would be great jealousy, and everyone would say whatever seemed right to him. [31] They would cancel the prophecy of the prophets who were before me, and they would cancel these visions of mine too, so as to speak whatever their own hearts urged.

Notes

- a (3:2) Ethiopic Alagar Zagâr, a corrupt form of Shalmaneser (see 2:14).
- b (3:2) Hebrew Ashshur, named for the city and god Ashur; the meaning is uncertain.
- c (3:2) Hebrew Madai; the meaning is unknown.
- d (3:2) Ethiopic Tâzôn, the same as Gozan (2 Kings 17:6); the meaning is unknown.
- e (3:6) Hebrew Binyamin, "son of the right hand" or "son of the south."
- f (3:8) Hebrew Mosheh, which the Bible links with "drawn out" (Exodus 2:10); it is probably an Egyptian word meaning "child."
- g (3:10) Hebrew Sedom; the meaning is unknown.
- h (3:16) Hebrew Gavri'el, "mighty one of God" or "God is my strong one."
- i (3:16) Hebrew Mikha'el, "who is like God?"

Chapter 4

[1] Listen, Hezekiah, and you, Josab my son: these are the days when the world is being brought to its end. [2] When that end has come, Beliar, the great ruler and king of this world, who has governed it from its beginning, will descend from his firmament looking like a man: a lawless king, the killer of his own mother. This same king [3] will persecute the plant that the twelve apostles of the Beloved planted. One of the twelve will be handed over into his hands. [4] This ruler will arrive in the shape of that king, and every power of this world will come with him and obey him in all that he wishes. [5] At his command the sun will rise in the night, and he will bring out the moon at noon.[a] [6] He will carry out in the world whatever he wishes. He will act and talk like the Beloved, and he will announce, "I am

God, and no one existed before me." [7] Everyone on earth will put their faith in him. [8] They will sacrifice to him and serve him, saying, "This is God, and there is no other beside him." [9] Most of those who had united to welcome the Beloved he will draw over to himself. [10] His miraculous power will show itself in every city and district. [11] In every city he will have his image set up in front of him. [12] He will hold power for three years, seven months, and twenty-seven days.[b] [13] Of those who believed in him, a few will remain in those days as his servants; they will run from wilderness to wilderness, awaiting the Beloved's coming. [14] When 1,332 days have passed,[c] the Lord will arrive with his angels and the hosts of the holy ones out of the seventh heaven, in the splendor of that heaven, and he will haul Beliar down into Gehenna, together with his armies. [15] He will give relief to the devout he finds still alive on earth, and the sun will be put to shame, [16] and also to all who, out of faith in him, have cursed Beliar and his kings. The saints will accompany the Lord, wearing the garments that are now kept on high in the seventh heaven. They will come with him, their spirits clothed, and take up their presence in the world. He will give strength to those still living in the body, along with the saints, clothing them in the saints' garments, and the Lord will wait on those who kept watch in this world. [17] Afterward they will turn upward in their garments, and their bodies will be left behind in the world. [18] Then the Beloved's voice will rebuke in anger everything in heaven and on earth: the mountains and hills, the cities, the wilderness and the woods, the angel of the sun and the angel of the moon, and everything through which Beliar appeared and worked openly in this world. A resurrection and a judgment will take place among them in those days, and the Beloved will send fire out from himself to consume all the godless, so that it will be as if they had never been made. [19] The remainder of this vision is written down in the vision of Babylon.[d] [20] The rest of the vision about the Lord is written in the parables, in my words, in the book that I prophesied in public. [21] As for the Beloved's descent into Sheol,[e] you will find it in the passage where the Lord says, "Look, my Son will understand." All of this is written in the Psalms, among the parables of David[f] son of Jesse,[g] in the Proverbs of his son Solomon,[h] in the sayings of Korah[i] and of Ethan[j] the Israelite, in the words of Asaph,[k] and in the other Psalms that the angel of the Spirit inspired, 22 namely, those with no name attached to them. They are written also in the words of my father Amos[l] and of the prophets Hosea,[m] Micah,[n] Joel, Nahum,[o] Jonah,[p] Obadiah,[q] Habakkuk, Haggai,[r] Zephaniah,[s] Zechariah,[t] and Malachi,[u] and in what Joseph[v] the Just said, and in the sayings of Daniel.[w]

Notes

- a (4:5) Literally "the sixth hour." The Jews counted the hours of daylight from about 6 a.m., so the sixth hour is about noon.
- b (4:12) This adds up to about 1,335 days, the number in Daniel 12:12, and it recalls the "time, times, and half a time" of Daniel 7:25 and Revelation 12:14. The Ethiopic text of the rest of this verse is broken and is not clear in the sources used here. It seems to say that many of the faithful, who had been hoping for the One who was crucified, Jesus the Lord Christ, will be left, after Isaiah has seen him who was crucified and ascended.
- c (4:14) The Ethiopic gives only "three hundred and thirty-two," and the "one thousand" is supplied from the other versions. It is close to the 1,335 days of Daniel 12:12.
- d (4:19) Hebrew Bavel, from Akkadian Bab-ili, "gate of the god"; Genesis 11:9 links it with the Hebrew word for "confuse." The writing meant is uncertain; it may refer to Isaiah's oracles against Babylon (Isaiah 13–14 and 21) or to a lost work.
- e (4:21) Hebrew She'ol, the place of the dead; the meaning is uncertain.
- f (4:21) Hebrew David, probably "beloved."
- g (4:21) Hebrew Yishay; the meaning is uncertain.
- h (4:21) Hebrew Shelomoh, "peaceful."
- i (4:21) Hebrew Qorach, perhaps "bald."
- j (4:21) Hebrew Eytan, "enduring."
- k (4:21) Hebrew Asaf, "he gathers."
- l (4:22) Hebrew Amos, "carried" or "borne."
- m (4:22) Hebrew Hoshea, "salvation."
- n (4:22) A short form of Micaiah, "who is like Yahweh?"
- o (4:22) Hebrew Nachum, "comfort."
- p (4:22) Hebrew Yonah, "dove."
- q (4:22) Hebrew Ovadyah, "servant of Yahweh."
- r (4:22) Hebrew Haggai, "festival."
- s (4:22) Hebrew Tsefanyah, "Yahweh has hidden" or "Yahweh has treasured."
- t (4:22) Hebrew Zekharyah, "Yahweh remembers."
- u (4:22) Hebrew Mal'akhi, "my messenger."
- v (4:22) Hebrew Yosef, "may he add" (Genesis 30:24).

- w (4:22) Hebrew Daniyye'l, "God is my judge."

Chapter 5

1 Because of these visions Beliar raged against Isaiah. He took up residence in Manasseh's heart, and Manasseh had Isaiah cut in half with a wooden saw. 2 As Isaiah was being sawn, Belchira stood and denounced him, and all the false prophets stood by, laughing and gloating over Isaiah. 3 With the help of Mechembechus,[a] Belchira stood before Isaiah and mocked him. 4 Belchira told Isaiah, "Say this: 'All that I have spoken was a lie, and Manasseh's ways are good and just. 5 The ways of Belchira and his companions are good too.'" 6 He said this to him as the sawing began. 7 But Isaiah was absorbed in a vision from the Lord; his eyes were open, yet he did not see them. 8 Belchira spoke to Isaiah again: "Say what I tell you, and I will change their minds. I will make Manasseh, the leaders of Judah, the people, and all Jerusalem show you respect." 9 Isaiah answered, "As far as I am able to speak, I say: Damned and cursed be you, and all your powers, and all your house. 10 For you cannot take anything from me except the skin of my body." 11 So they seized Isaiah son of Amoz and sawed him in two with a wooden saw. 12 Manasseh, Belchira, the false prophets, the leaders, and all the people stood watching. 13 Before the sawing, Isaiah had said to the prophets who were with him, "Go to the region of Tyre[b] and Sidon,[c] for God has mixed the cup for me alone." 14 While he was being sawn, Isaiah neither shouted nor wept; his lips spoke with the Holy Spirit until he was cut through. 15 Beliar did this to Isaiah through Belchira and Manasseh. For Sammael had been seething against Isaiah ever since the time of Hezekiah, king of Judah, over what Isaiah had seen concerning the Beloved, 16 and over the destruction of Sammael, which Isaiah had seen through the Lord while Manasseh's father Hezekiah was still king. Manasseh acted according to the will of Satan.

Chapter 6

1 In Hezekiah's twentieth year as king of Judah, Isaiah son of Amoz came from Gilgal[a] to Jerusalem with his son Josab, to see Hezekiah.
2 Isaiah went in and sat on the king's couch. A seat was brought to him, but he would not sit on it. 3 As Isaiah began to speak words of faith and truth with the king, all the leaders of Israel were seated, with the eunuchs and the royal counselors. Forty prophets and sons of prophets were also there, who had come from the villages, the hill country, and the lowlands on hearing that Isaiah was coming from Gilgal to Hezekiah. 4 They had come to greet him and to hear his words. 5 They wanted him to lay his hands on them so that they would prophesy, and so that he could hear their prophecy. They all stood before Isaiah. 6 While Isaiah was telling Hezekiah these words of truth and faith, everyone heard a door being opened, and heard the Holy Spirit speak. 7 The king gathered every prophet and every person present, and they came. Micaiah, aged Ananias, Joel, and Josab took seats at his right and at his left. 8 When all of them heard the Holy Spirit's voice, they knelt and bowed down, and gave glory to the true God, the Most High, who dwells in the upper world and sits on high, the Holy One who rests among his holy ones. 9 They gave glory to him because he had opened a door in a foreign world, and had opened it to a man. 10 As Isaiah was speaking by the Holy Spirit for everyone to hear, he suddenly went quiet. His mind was lifted out of him, and he no longer saw the men who stood before him, 11 though his eyes were open. His lips were still, and the mind within his body had been taken out of him. 12 Yet he was still breathing, because he was watching a vision. 13 The angel who had been sent to show it to him was not from this firmament, and he was not one of the glorious angels of this world, but had come from the seventh heaven. 14 The bystanders did not think so, but the company of the prophets believed the holy Isaiah had been carried up. 15 The vision the holy Isaiah beheld did not belong to this world; it came from the world kept hidden from flesh. 16 When Isaiah had seen the vision, he described it to Hezekiah, to his son Josab, and to the other prophets who had gathered. 17 But the leaders, the eunuchs, and the people heard nothing. Only Samnas the scribe, Joachim,[b] and Asaph the recorder heard, for they too did what is right, and the sweet fragrance of the Spirit rested on them. The people heard nothing, since Micaiah and his son Josab had sent them outside once the wisdom of this world was taken from Isaiah and he lay like a dead man.

Chapter 7

1 Isaiah described the vision he had seen to Hezekiah, his son Josab, Micaiah, and the other prophets. He said: 2 “A moment ago, while I was prophesying about the things you heard, I saw a glorious angel unlike the angels of glory that I used to see all the time. He had such glory and rank that I cannot describe his glory. 3 He took me by the hand and lifted me up, and I said to him, ‘Who are you? What is your name? And where are you taking me up to?’ I was given strength to speak with him. 4 He said to me, ‘When I have lifted you up through the different levels and shown you the vision I was sent to show, then you will understand who I am. But you do not know my name. 5 You will return to this body of yours, but you will see where I am lifting you up to, for I was sent for this purpose.’ 6 I was glad that he spoke so kindly to me. 7 He said to me, ‘Are you glad because I have spoken kindly to you?’ And he said, ‘You will see how one greater than I am will speak with you kindly and peacefully. 8 You will also see his Father, who is greater, for I was sent from the seventh heaven to explain all these things to you.’ 9 The two of us ascended to the firmament, and there I saw Sammael with his hosts. A great struggle was going on there, and Satan’s angels envied each other. 10 As it is above, so it is on the earth too, for what is on the earth is a likeness of what is in the firmament. 11 I asked the angel beside me, ‘What is the meaning of this war, and of this envy?’ 12 He answered, ‘It has been this way ever since the world was created, and this war will last until the one you will see arrives and destroys him.’ 13 Then he took me up above the firmament, to the first heaven. 14 There I saw a throne in the center, and angels stood to the right of it and to the left. [15] The angels on the left were unlike those standing at the right. The ones on the right had greater glory, and they praised together in a single voice. A throne stood between them, and those on the left praised after them, but their voice was different from the right-hand angels' voice, and their praise was different too. [16] I asked the angel who was leading me, 'Who is this praise sent to?' [17] He said, 'It is offered to the One who sits in the seventh heaven, who rests in the holy world, together with his Beloved, who sent me to you. That is where it goes.' [18] Then he carried me up to the second heaven. That heaven is as high above the first as the heaven is above the earth and the firmament. [19] As in the first heaven, I saw angels on the right and the left, a throne in the center, and angels praising in the second heaven. The one seated on the throne in the second heaven shone more brightly than all the others. [20] The glory in the second heaven was immense, and its praise was not like the praise of the first heaven. [21] I fell on my face to bow before him, but the angel who guided me would not allow it. He said, 'Do not worship any throne or angel of the six heavens—that is why I was sent to guide you—until I say so in the seventh heaven. [22] Your throne has been placed above every heaven and their angels, and so have your garments and your crown, which you will see.' [23] Great joy filled me, because the lovers of the Most High and of his Beloved will one day rise to that place under the guidance of the angel of the Holy Spirit. [24] Next he took me up to the third heaven, and again I saw the angels at the right and the left, with a throne in the center. But there the memory of this world is never heard. [25] I spoke to the angel with me (my appearance was shining ever more brightly as I rose from heaven to heaven): 'Not even a trace of the emptiness of that world is spoken of here.' [26] He replied, 'Nothing is spoken of, because of its weakness; yet nothing that is done there stays hidden.' [27] I wanted to learn how it all becomes known, and he replied, 'When I have brought you to the seventh heaven, the one above these, from which I was sent, then you will know that nothing is concealed from the thrones, from the dwellers in the heavens, or from the angels.' The praise they offered and the glory of the one on the throne were great, and the angels standing right and left had glory surpassing that of the heaven beneath. [28] Then he carried me up once more, to the fourth heaven; the distance from the third heaven to the fourth was larger than the distance from the earth to the firmament. [29] Once more I saw the angels at the right and the left, with the one seated on the throne between them, and they too were praising. [30] The right-hand angels' praise and glory were higher than those of the left-hand angels. [31] The glory of the one seated on the throne exceeded that of the right-hand angels, and their glory exceeded that of the ones below. [32] He lifted me to the fifth heaven. [33] Once more I saw the right and left, and the one on the throne, whose glory was higher than that of the fourth heaven's occupants. [34] The glory of the right-hand angels was higher than that of the left-hand ones, [35] and the one on the throne had more glory than the angels at his right. [36] Their praise was more splendid than the fourth heaven's. [37] I praised the one who has no name, the Only-begotten, who lives in the heavens and whose name no flesh knows, who has given each heaven its glory, who makes the glory of the angels great and increases still more the glory of the one who sits on the throne.

Chapter 8

[1] "Then he lifted me once more, into the sixth heaven's atmosphere, and I beheld a splendor unlike any I had seen in the five lower heavens. [2] I saw angels with great glory. [3] The praise there was holy and marvelous. [4] I asked the angel who guided me, 'What am I looking at, my lord?' [5] He said, 'I am not your lord, but your fellow servant.' [6] I asked him again, 'Why are there no angels on the left, as there are fellow servants of ours elsewhere?' [7] He replied, 'From the sixth heaven upward there are no more angels at the left, and no throne set in the center. They are ruled by the might of the seventh heaven, where the One without a name dwells, and the Chosen One, whose name has not been revealed, and no heaven can find out his name. [8] For he alone is the one whom all the heavens and thrones obey when he speaks. That is why I was given power and sent to bring you here, so that you could see this glory [9] and see the Lord of all those heavens, along with these thrones, [10] as he alters his shape, stage by stage, until he looks like you in form and likeness. [11] I tell you, Isaiah: no one who is about to return into a body in that world has gone up or seen what you see, or understood what you have understood and what you will see. [12] You have been granted, by the Lord's allotment, to come here, and from here flows the power of the sixth heaven and the air.' [13] I praised my Lord, because through his allotment I was to come here. [14] He said, 'Hear this too, then, from your fellow servant: when, by God's will, you have left the body behind and gone up, you will be given the garment you see, and you will see other garments too, counted and kept there, [15] and then you will be the equal of the angels in the seventh heaven.' [16] He took me up to the sixth heaven, where there were no angels at the left and no throne in the center, but all looked alike, and their praise was the same. [17] Power was given to me too, and I praised with them, and that angel too, and our praise was like theirs. [18] There they all spoke the name of the first Father and of his Beloved, the Christ,[a] and of the Holy Spirit, all in one voice. [19] Their voice was unlike that of the angels in the five lower heavens, [20] or like their speech, but the voice there was different, and there was much light. [21] Once I was in the sixth heaven, I took the light I had seen in the lower five to be just darkness. [22] I was glad, and I praised him who has given such lights to those who wait for his promise. [23] I begged the angel who was leading me not to send me back to the fleshly world. [24] I tell you, Hezekiah, my son Josab, and Micaiah, that the darkness here is deep. [25] The angel guiding me knew my thoughts and said, 'If this light makes you rejoice, how much more you will rejoice when you see the light in the seventh heaven, where the Lord and his Beloved are, who sent me, and who is to be named "Son" in this world. He has not yet been revealed—he who will live in the perishing world— [26] and the garments, thrones, and crowns kept for the righteous, for those who put their trust in that Lord who will come down in your form. The light there is vast and marvelous. [27] As for your not returning to the body, your days are not yet complete for coming here.' [28] On hearing this I was troubled, and he told me, 'Let it not trouble you.'

Chapter 9

1 "He brought me to the seventh heaven's air, and I heard a voice say, 'How high will a being of flesh climb?' I was terrified and shook. 2 While I was trembling, I heard another voice sent from there saying, 'The holy Isaiah is permitted to come up here, for his garment is here.' 3 I asked the angel beside me, 'Who was it that forbade me, and who was it that permitted me to come up?' 4 He said to me, 'The one who forbade you is the one in charge of the praise of the sixth heaven. 5 The one who permitted it is your Lord God, the Lord Christ, who will go by the name Jesus[a] in the world. But his name you cannot hear until you have left your body behind.' 6 He raised me to the seventh heaven, and there I saw a marvelous light and countless angels. 7 There I saw all the righteous ever since Adam.[b] 8 There I saw the holy Abel[c] and all the righteous. 9 There I saw Enoch[d] and everyone with him, stripped of the garments of flesh. They wore their garments of the upper world and stood like angels in great glory. 10 But they were not sitting on their thrones, and their crowns of glory were not on them. 11 I asked the angel who accompanied me, 'Why have they received the garments, but not the thrones and the crowns?' 12 He said, 'They are not given crowns and thrones of glory until the Beloved descends in the form you will see him take when he comes into the world at the end of days—the Lord who will be given the name Christ. 13 Even so, they see and know whose thrones and crowns these will be when he has come down and been made in your form. They will think he is only flesh and a man. 14 The god of that world will reach out a hand against the Son, and they will nail him to a tree and kill him without knowing who he is. 15 So his descent, as you will see it, will be concealed even from the heavens, so that nobody will know who he is. 16 After he has plundered the angel of death, he will rise on the third day and remain in that world five hundred forty-five days.[e] 17 Then many of the righteous will rise along with him; their spirits are not given their garments until the Lord Christ goes up and they go up with him. [18] Then they will receive their garments, thrones, and crowns, when he has gone up into the seventh heaven.' [19] I put to him the question I had asked in the third heaven: [20] 'Show me how everything that is done in that world is made known here.' [21] While I was still speaking with him, one of the angels who stood near, more glorious than the angel who had brought me up from the world, [22] showed me a book. He opened it, and it contained writing, but not like any book of this world. He handed it to me, and I read it: it recorded the deeds of the people of Israel, and of others unknown to me, my son Josab. [23] I said, 'Truly nothing that is done in this world is hidden in the seventh heaven.' [24] There I saw many garments laid up, with many thrones and many crowns. [25] I said to the angel, 'Whose are these garments, thrones, and crowns?' [26] He answered, 'Many from that world will be given these garments because they believed in the words of the One who will be named, as I told you; they will keep his commands, trust them, and trust in his cross. These are kept for them.' [27] I saw One standing there whose glory surpassed all the others. His glory was vast and wonderful. [28] When I had seen him, all the righteous I had seen, and the angels as well, drew near to him. Adam, Abel, and Seth[f] and all the righteous came forward first and bowed to him, and all of them praised him in one voice. I praised along with them, and my praise matched theirs. [29] Then all the angels came near, worshiped, and praised. [30] I was changed again and became like an angel. [31] Then the angel who was leading me said to me, 'Worship this One,' and I worshiped and praised. [32] The angel said to me, 'This is the Lord of all the praises that you have seen.' [33] As he was still speaking, I saw a second glorious One, similar to the first, and the righteous drew near, bowed, and praised, and I praised with them. But my glory was not changed to resemble theirs. [34] Then the angels came near and worshiped him. [35] There I saw the Lord with the second angel, both standing. [36] The second stood at my Lord's left. I asked, 'Who is this?' and he told me, 'Worship him. This is the Holy Spirit's angel, the one who speaks in you and in the other righteous.' [37] I saw the great glory with the eyes of my spirit open, and then I could not see, nor could my guiding angel, nor any of the angels I had watched worship my Lord. [38] But I saw the righteous looking with great power on the glory of that One. [39] My Lord approached me, together with the angel of the Spirit, and said, ‘See that it has been granted you to look on God, and that power has been given, for your sake, to the angel who is with you.’ [40] I saw my Lord and the Spirit’s angel bow down, and the two of them praised God together. [41] Then all the righteous came near and worshiped. [42] The angels came near and worshiped, and all the angels praised.

Chapter 10

[1] “Then I heard the voices and the praise that I had heard in each of the lower six heavens, rising up and sounding there. [2] All of it was being sent up to that Glorious One, on whose glory I could not gaze. [3] I myself was hearing and seeing the praise given to him. [4] The Lord and the Spirit’s angel watched all this and listened to it all. [5] All the praises sent up from the six heavens can be seen as well as heard. [6] I heard my guiding angel say, ‘This is the Most High among the high ones, who dwells in the holy world and rests among his holy ones, and whom the Holy Spirit, speaking through the lips of the righteous, will call “the Father of the Lord.”’ [7] I heard the Most High, my Lord’s Father, speak to my Lord Christ, who will take the name Jesus: [8] ‘Go out and descend through all the heavens. You will descend to the firmament and to that world, to the angel in Sheol, but you will not go as far as Haguel.[a] [9] You will take on the likeness of everyone in the five heavens. [10] You will take care to look like the angels of the firmament, and like those in Sheol. [11] None of the angels of that world will know that you are Lord with me over the seven heavens and their

angels. [12] They will not know you are with me until I call out to the heavens, their angels, and their lights, as low as the sixth heaven, in a loud voice, so that you may judge and destroy the rulers, angels, and gods who belong to that world, and the realm under their rule. [13] For they have denied me, saying, "We alone exist, and no one is beside us." [14] After that you will rise from the angels of death to your own place, and you will not be changed in each heaven, but ascend in glory and sit at my right side. [15] Then the rulers and powers of that world will bow down to you.' [16] I heard the Great Glory giving these commands to my Lord. [17] I watched my Lord leave the seventh heaven for the sixth. [18] The angel guiding me told me, 'Pay attention, Isaiah, and watch how the Lord's transformation and descent will appear.' [19] I looked, and when the angels in the sixth heaven saw him, they praised and honored him, for he had not been changed into the shape of the angels there. They praised him, and I praised with them. [20] I saw him descend to the fifth heaven, and there he took the shape of that heaven's angels. They neither praised nor worshiped him, because he looked just as they did. [21] Then he descended to the fourth heaven and took the shape of its angels. [22] When they saw him, they gave him no praise or honor, since he looked like them. [23] Again I saw him descend, to the third heaven, where he took the form of the angels there. [24] The keepers of the third heaven's gate asked for the password, and the Lord gave it so that he would not be recognized. When they saw him, they offered no praise or honor, since his appearance matched theirs. [25] Again I saw him descend to the second heaven, and there too he gave the password. The gatekeepers kept demanding it, and the Lord kept giving it. [26] I saw him make himself like the second heaven's angels, and they looked at him and did not praise him, because he looked like them. [27] Again I saw him descend to the first heaven, and there too he gave the password to the gatekeepers and made himself like the angels who stood at the left of that throne. They neither praised nor honored him, since he looked like them. [28] But no one questioned me, because of the angel who was leading me. [29] Next he descended into the firmament, where this world's ruler lives, and told the password to those at the left. He looked like them, and they did not praise him there. Instead they envied one another and fought, for evil has power there, and they quarrel over trifles. 30 I saw him descend and make himself resemble the angels of the air, so that he looked like one of them. 31 He gave no password, for there one was plundering and mistreating another.

Chapter 11

1 "After this the angel who spoke with me and led me said, 'Understand, Isaiah son of Amoz, for I was sent from God for this purpose.' 2 I saw a woman from the family of the prophet David, named Mary,[a] a virgin, engaged to a man called Joseph,[b] a carpenter, who also belonged to the line and household of the righteous David of Bethlehem in Judah. 3 He came into his allotment. When she was engaged, she was found to be with child, and Joseph the carpenter wanted to send her away. 4 But the Spirit's angel appeared in this world, and afterward Joseph did not divorce her; he kept Mary and told no one. 5 Joseph never went near Mary; he kept her a holy virgin even though she was pregnant. 6 For two months he did not live with her. 7 After two months, while Joseph was in his house with his wife Mary, the two of them alone, 8 it happened that when they were alone, Mary at once looked up and saw a small baby, and she was amazed. 9 After she was amazed, her womb was found as it had been before she conceived. 10 When her husband Joseph asked her, 'What has astonished you?' his eyes were opened; he saw the baby and praised God, for God had come into his portion. 11 A voice reached them: 'Do not tell anyone about this vision.' 12 The news about the baby spread in Bethlehem. 13 Some said, 'The virgin Mary has had a baby before she had been married two months.' 14 Many said, 'She has not had a baby, and no midwife went up to her, and we have not heard the cries of labor.' They were all blind about him, and they all knew about him, though they did not know where he was from. 15 They took him and went to Nazareth[c] in Galilee.[d] 16 Hezekiah and my son Josab, I saw this, and I tell it to the other prophets standing here: it escaped all the heavens, all the rulers, and all the gods of this world. 17 I saw that in Nazareth he nursed at the breast as a baby, as is usual, so that he would not be recognized. 18 When he was grown he performed great signs and wonders in Israel's land and in Jerusalem. 19 After this the adversary grew jealous of him and roused the people of Israel against him, unaware of who he was; they delivered him to the king, crucified him, and he went down to the angel of Sheol. 20 I saw him in Jerusalem, crucified on a tree, 21 and likewise, after the third day, rising again and staying for days. 22 The angel who was leading me said, 'Understand, Isaiah.' And I saw him send out the twelve apostles and go up. 23 I saw him in the firmament, but he had not taken on their form; all the angels in the firmament, with the Satans, saw him and worshiped. 24 There was great grief there as they said, 'How did our Lord descend among us without our seeing the glory upon him—the glory we see has been on him since the sixth heaven?' 25 He went up to the second heaven without changing himself, and all the angels at the right and the left, and the throne in the center, 26 worshiped him and praised him, saying, 'How did our Lord pass us by on his way down, and we never noticed?' 27 In the same way he ascended to the third heaven, and they praised him and spoke as the others had. 28 In the fourth heaven and the fifth they spoke in just the same way. 29 But there was one glory, and he did not change himself from it. 30 I saw him ascend to the sixth heaven, and they bowed to him and glorified him. 31 But in every heaven the praise swelled louder. 32 I saw him go up to the seventh heaven, and every righteous person and every angel praised him. Then I saw him take his seat at the right of the Great Glory, on whose glory, as I told you, I could not look. 33 I also saw the angel of the Holy Spirit sitting at the left hand. 34 This angel said to me, 'Isaiah son of Amoz, that is enough for you, for these are great matters, since you have seen what no child of flesh has ever seen. 35 You will return into your garment of flesh until your days are completed. Then you will come here.'" 36 Isaiah saw these things and told them to everyone who stood before him, and they praised. He said to King Hezekiah, "I have spoken these things." 37 Both the end of this world, 38 and all this vision will be completed in the last generations. [39] Isaiah made Hezekiah vow that he would not tell the people of Israel, nor give anyone these words to copy. [40] . . . You will read such things. Stay awake in the Holy Spirit so that you may receive your garments, thrones, and crowns of glory that are stored up in the seventh heaven. [41] Because of these visions and prophecies, Sammael Satan cut Isaiah son of Amoz, the prophet, in two with a saw, by Manasseh's hand. [42] Hezekiah handed all this over to Manasseh in the twenty-sixth year. [43] But Manasseh did not remember them or take them to heart; he became the servant of Satan and was destroyed. Here ends the vision of the prophet Isaiah, with his ascension.

Letter of Aristeas

Pseudepigrapha

Chapter 1

1 Philocrates,[a] the account of our meeting with Eleazar,[b] the high priest of the Jews, is worth telling. You have set great store by hearing it, by my going over each point and explaining why we were sent and for what purpose, and so I have tried to set it out plainly for you, knowing how much you love learning, 2 which is the highest good a person can have: to keep learning, and to keep taking in something further, whether through histories or through living the events oneself. For in this way a pure disposition is formed in the soul. It takes up what is finest, and, turning to piety, the most commanding thing of all, it governs itself by a rule that never misleads. 3 We were set on examining divine matters with care, and so we offered ourselves for an embassy to the man I mentioned. He is held in the highest honor for his nobility and good name by his citizens and by others, and he has won very great benefits for those with him and for his fellow citizens elsewhere. Our purpose was the translation of the divine law, since it is written among them on skins in Hebrew letters. 4 We carried this out eagerly, once we had found an opening with the king about the people who had been moved to Egypt from Judea[c] by the king's father, who had been the first to take possession of the city[d] and to take over Egypt.[e] It is worth telling you this as well. 5 I am convinced that you lean strongly toward reverence and toward the character of people who live by the holy law, and so you will gladly hear what we intend to tell. You have only lately come to us from the island,[f] and you wish to hear whatever helps to renew the soul. 6 I also sent you an account earlier of matters I thought worth remembering, which we received from the high priests of Egypt, that most learned land, about the people of the Jews. 7 You love learning, and so it is right to share with you whatever can benefit the mind. It is right to share it with all who are like you, and much more with you, who hold such an honest conviction. You are not only my brother by kinship in character; you are also the same as I am in your eagerness for what is good. [8] For the charm of gold, or any other costly possession prized by the vain, does not bring the same benefit as the discipline of education and the care taken over it. But so that we do not become tiresome by dragging out the preliminaries, I will go back to the continuous course of the account. [9] Demetrius of Phalerum,[g] who had been put in charge of the king's library, was given large and varied sums in order to gather together, if he could, all the books in the inhabited world. By purchases and by copying, he carried the king's purpose as far toward its end as was in his power. [10] We were present when he was asked, "About how many tens of thousands of books are there?" He said, "More than two hundred thousand,[h] O king. I will take pains, within a short time, to bring the rest up to five hundred thousand.[i] I have been told that the laws of the Jews are also worth copying and worth a place in your library." [11] "What is stopping you from doing this?" the king asked. "Everything you need has been put at your disposal." Demetrius said, "They need translation. They use letters of their own, as the Egyptians have their own arrangement of letters, and they have a language of their own as well. They are assumed to use Syriac,[j] but that is not so; theirs is a different kind." The king took in each point and gave orders that a letter should go to the Jews' high priest, so that what had been said might be carried out.

Notes

- a (1:1) Greek Philokrates, "lover of power" or "lover of rule." He is the narrator's brother (verse 7).
- b (1:1) Hebrew Elazar, "God has helped."
- c (1:4) Greek Ioudaia, from Hebrew Yehudah, "praised."
- d (1:4) The city is Alexandria, named for Alexander the Great (Greek Alexandros, "defender of men").
- e (1:4) Greek Aigyptos; the meaning of the name is uncertain.
- f (1:5) The text does not say which island is meant.
- g (1:9) Greek Demetrios, "devoted to Demeter," the goddess of grain; Phaleron was a harbor of Athens, and the meaning of its name is uncertain.
- h (1:10) Greek: "twenty myriads"; a myriad is ten thousand.
- i (1:10) Greek: "fifty myriads."

- j (1:11) Greek Syriake; here it probably means Aramaic, the language of Syria, which Jews of that time also spoke.

Chapter 2

1 I thought the moment had come to press what I had often asked of Sosibius[a] of Tarentum[b] and Andreas,[c] the chiefs of the bodyguard: the release of those who had been moved out of Judea by the king's father. For that king had gone through all of Coele-Syria[d] and Phoenicia,[e] using his success together with courage. Some people he deported, and others he took captive, bringing everything under his hand by fear. In the course of this he carried off to Egypt about a hundred thousand people[f] from the land of the Jews. 2 Of these he armed about thirty thousand[g] picked men and settled them in the country in the garrisons. (Many had already come in earlier, with the Persian[h], and others before them had been sent as allies to fight the king of the Ethiopians[i] with Psammetichus.[j] But those were not as many as the ones Ptolemy[k] son of Lagus[l] brought over.) 3 As I said, he chose those who were best in age and outstanding in strength and armed them. The rest of the crowd, older and younger and women as well, he left in servitude. This was not what he really wanted in his heart; he was overruled by his soldiers because of the services they had rendered in the struggles of war. When we found a pretext for their release, as I have already explained, we spoke to the king in these words. 4 "It would be absurd, O king, to be proved wrong by the facts themselves. A body of law lies before all the Jews, and we intend not only to copy it but to translate it. What reason could we give for sending it, while great numbers of the same people are in servitude in your kingdom? No, with a perfect and generous spirit, release those who are held in misery. For the God who gave them their law is guiding your kingdom, as I have found by inquiry.[m] 5 They worship the God who oversees all things and created them, whom all people worship, and we as well, O king, though under other names, Zeus and Dios.[n] The first people to name him this way did so fittingly: that by which everything receives life and comes into being is the guide and lord of all. You surpass all people in the brightness of your mind, so release those who are held in servitude." [6] After a short time, as we prayed in our hearts to God that he would shape the king's mind toward the release of them all (for the human race is God's creation, and God changes and turns it as he wishes; so in many and various ways I called on the one who rules the heart, that he might be compelled, as I asked, to do it), [7] for I had great hope, as I made my plea for the rescue of human beings, that God would bring about what was asked. What people believe they are doing in holiness, for justice and the care of good works, is directed in its deeds and plans by God, who rules over all. [8] The king looked up, glanced at me with a cheerful face, and said, "About how many tens of thousands do you think they will number?" Andreas, who was standing by, answered, "A little over a hundred thousand." "A small thing indeed," the king said, "that Aristeas[o] asks of us." Sosibius and some of those present said, "It is also worthy of your generosity to present their release to the most high God as an offering of thanks. You have been honored supremely by the one who rules all things, and made more glorious than your ancestors. So if you make very great thank offerings, it is fitting for you." [9] The king was greatly delighted. He ordered that the soldiers' pay be increased, that twenty drachmas[p] be paid for each person, and that an order be issued about this, with the registrations made at once. He acted with generous eagerness, since God was bringing to completion our whole purpose and forcing the king to ransom not only the men who had arrived along with his father's army but also anyone who had been there before or was brought into the kingdom afterward. They reckoned the payment at more than four hundred talents (about 30,000 pounds of silver).[q] [10] I think it is useful to include a copy of the order as well. The king's generosity will be far clearer and more obvious, since God was strengthening him to bring rescue to so many multitudes. [11] It read as follows. "By order of the king: All those who served in the army with our father in the regions of Syria[r] and Phoenicia, and who entered the land of the Jews and gained possession of Jewish persons and brought them to the city and the country, or sold them to others, and likewise anyone who had them earlier or has had them brought in since, are to release them at once, for money. Each owner is to receive twenty drachmas for each person: soldiers as an addition to their pay, and the others from the royal bank. 12 We consider that these people were taken captive against our father's wish and contrary to what is right, and that, because of the recklessness of soldiers, their land was laid waste and the removal of the Jews to Egypt took place. The gain the soldiers made in the field was enough. Therefore the oppression of human beings is altogether unreasonable. 13 We acknowledge that justice is owed to all people, and much more to those who are wrongly oppressed. We seek in every way what is right toward justice and toward piety for all. We therefore order that all Jewish persons who are in servitude anywhere in the kingdom, in whatever way, are to be released by those who hold them, on receipt of the stated sum, and that no one is to handle these matters with malicious delay. The registrations are to be made within three days from the day this order is posted, before those appointed for the purpose, and the persons are to be produced at once. 14 We judge that this will serve us and our affairs. Whoever wishes to report those who disobey may do so, on the understanding that he will gain control of the one found guilty. The property of such people will be taken into the royal treasury." 15 The order was brought in to be read to the king, and it contained all of this except the words "and anyone who had them earlier or has had them brought in since." The king added this himself, in his generosity and greatness of spirit. He also ordered that the whole sum of the payments be divided up among the officers' attendants in the divisions and the royal bankers. 16 So it was decided and confirmed within seven days. The payment came to more than six hundred sixty talents (about 49,500 pounds of silver).[s] Many nursing infants were set free with their mothers, too. When the king was asked whether the twenty drachmas would be paid for these as well, he ordered that this too be done, carrying out completely what he had decided.

Notes

- a (2:1) Greek Sosibios, "life-saving."
- b (2:1) Greek Taras, a Greek city of southern Italy; the meaning of the name is uncertain.
- c (2:1) Greek Andreas, "manly."

- d (2:1) Greek Koile Syria, “Hollow Syria,” the valley country between the Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon ranges, later used for all of southern Syria.
- e (2:1) Greek Phoinike, perhaps “land of purple.”
- f (2:1) Greek: “ten myriads.”
- g (2:2) Greek: “three myriads.”
- h (2:2) Greek Persēs; the Persian king Cambyses (reigned 530–522 BC) conquered Egypt. The name is Old Persian, perhaps from Pārsa, the land of Persia.
- i (2:2) Greek Aithiopes, “burnt-faced.”
- j (2:2) Greek Psammitichos, from the Egyptian royal name Psamtik; the meaning is uncertain.
- k (2:2) Greek Ptolemaios, “warlike.”
- l (2:2) Greek Lagos, “hare.”
- m (2:4) The Greek of the last clause is awkward, and the sentence may be damaged.
- n (2:5) Greek Zeus and Dios are the nominative and genitive forms of the same Greek name; the two forms were read as meaning “through whom” (di’ hon) life comes.
- o (2:8) Greek Aristeas, “best” or “excellent.”
- p (2:9) A drachma was a Greek silver coin; the amount is left unconverted because its buying power varied.
- q (2:9) Greek: “over four hundred talents.” A talent is taken here as about 75 pounds (34 kg); the weights used for talents varied. The text does not name the metal, and silver is assumed.
- r (2:11) Greek Syria, probably a shortened form of Assyria.
- s (2:16) Greek: “more than six hundred sixty talents.” A talent is taken here as about 75 pounds (34 kg).

Chapter 3

1 When this had been accomplished, the king ordered Demetrius to submit a proposal about the copying of the Jewish books. Everything under these kings was handled by written orders and with great care, and nothing was done carelessly or at random. For this reason I have included the text of the proposal and copies of the letters, the number of the gifts sent, and the workmanship of each, since every one of them stood out for its lavishness and skill. This is a copy of the proposal. 2 “To the great king, from Demetrius. You gave orders, O king, that the books still missing to complete the library be gathered in, and that those that have fallen into disrepair receive proper restoration. I have given careful attention to these matters, and I now report the following to you. 3 The books of the law of the Jews are missing, along with a few others. They happen to be written in Hebrew letters and language, but they have been set down rather carelessly and not as they really stand, as those who know them report; for they have never had the king's care. 4 It is necessary that these too be in your possession in an exact form, since this legislation is wiser and unspoiled, as one would expect of a divine law. For that reason, writers, poets, and the whole crowd of historians have kept their distance from mentioning these books and the men who have lived and still live by them, because the thinking in them is pure and solemn, as Hecataeus of Abdera[a] says. 5 If it seems good to you, O king, a letter will be written to the high priest in Jerusalem[b] to send elderly men whose lives have been the best, experienced in their own law, six from each tribe. We will then examine what the majority agree on, obtain an accurate translation, and set it down clearly, in a way worthy of the matter and of your purpose. May you prosper always." 6 When this proposal had been presented, the king ordered a letter to be written to Eleazar about these matters, reporting also the release of the captives that had taken place. He gave, too, for the making of mixing bowls, cups, a table, and bowls for pouring offerings, fifty talents' weight of gold (about 3,750 pounds)[c] and seventy talents of silver (about 5,250 pounds), along with a great quantity of precious stones. He ordered the keepers of the treasure chests to let the craftsmen choose whichever stones they preferred. He also gave coined money for sacrifices and other needs, nearly a hundred talents (about 7,500 pounds of silver). 7 I will tell you about the workmanship once I have gone through the copies of the letters. The king's letter was in this form. 8 "King Ptolemy sends Eleazar the high priest greetings, and wishes him health. It has happened that many Jews have been settled in our country, having been carried off from Jerusalem by the Persians during the time they ruled, and that others came to Egypt with our father as captives. 9 Of these our father enrolled many in the army on higher pay. He also judged those who were there earlier to be trustworthy, built forts, and handed these over to them, so that the nation of the Egyptians would be afraid because of them. Now that we have taken over the kingdom, we deal with everyone more kindly, and much more so with your fellow citizens. [10] We have set free more than a hundred thousand captives, giving their owners the silver they were owed, and putting right whatever was done wrongly through the rush of the crowds. We have judged that this was a pious thing to do, and we offer it in thanks to the greatest God, who has held our realm in peace and raised it to the height of glory throughout the whole inhabited world. We have placed those in the prime of life in the army, and those who are able to be near us and are worthy of trust at court we have set over our affairs. [11] We wish to show favor both to these people and to all the Jews in the world, and to those who come after them. We have therefore decided that your law be translated into Greek letters from the Hebrew letters, as they are called among you, so that these books too may be in our library with the other royal books. [12] You will do well, and in a manner worthy of our eagerness, to choose elderly men who have lived good lives, who are experienced in the law and able to translate it, six from each tribe, so that agreement may be found among the larger number, since the inquiry concerns weighty matters. For we believe that when this is finished we will win great fame. [13] We have sent Andreas, of the chiefs of the bodyguard, and Aristeas, who are held in honor among us, to talk with you. They are bringing first offerings of dedicated gifts for the temple, and a hundred talents of silver (about 7,500 pounds) for sacrifices and other needs. If you write to us about whatever you wish, you will please us and do something worthy of friendship, and what you choose will be carried out as quickly as possible. Farewell." [14] Eleazar answered this letter, in suitable terms. It went like this:

"Eleazar, high priest, to King Ptolemy, his true friend: greetings. May you be well, and the queen Arsinoe,[d] your sister, and your children; it would be as we wish. We are well also. [15] When we received your letter, we rejoiced greatly over your purpose and your good plan. We gathered the whole community and read it aloud to them, so that they would learn how devout you are toward our God. We also showed them the gifts you sent: bowls, twenty of gold and thirty of silver, with five mixing bowls, and a table for dedication, and a hundred talents of silver (about 7,500 pounds) for bringing sacrifices and for repairs of whatever the temple needs,

Notes

- a (3:4) Greek Hekataios, perhaps "far-shooter," a title of the god Apollo; Abdera was a Greek city on the coast of Thrace, and the meaning of its name is uncertain.
- b (3:5) Greek Hierosolyma, from Hebrew Yerushalayim, perhaps "foundation of peace."
- c (3:6) Greek: "fifty talents." A talent is taken here as about 75 pounds (34 kg); the weights used for talents varied.
- d (3:14) Greek Arsinoe, perhaps "man-minded." She was the king's sister and wife.

Chapter 4

1 for we will obey in everything that is to your advantage, even if it goes against our nature, since this is a sign of friendship and affection. You, too, have done great and unforgettable good to our citizens in many ways. 2 Immediately, then, we offered sacrifices for you, for your sister, your children, and your friends. The whole community prayed that all you intend may always come to you, that God, who rules over all, may keep your kingdom safe in peace and glory, and that the copying of the holy law may be carried out to your benefit and in safety. 3 In the presence of everyone we chose good and fine elderly men, six from each tribe, and we have sent them with the law. You will do well, righteous king, to give orders that when the copying of the books is finished, the men are brought back to us again in safety. Farewell." 4 These are the men. From the first tribe: Joseph, Hezekiah, Zechariah, John, Hezekiah, Elisha.[a] From the second: Judah, Simon, Samuel, Adaeus, Mattathias, Eschlemias.[b] From the third: Nehemiah, Joseph, Theodosius, Baseas, Ornias, Dakis.[c] 5 From the fourth: Jonathan, Abaeus, Elisha, Hananiah, Chabrias, Chelkias (this last name is doubtful in the Greek).[d] From the fifth: Isaac, Jacob, Jesus, Sabbataeus, Simon, Levi.[e] From the sixth: Judah, Joseph, Simon, Zechariah, Samuel, Selemias.[f] 6 From the seventh: Sabbataeus, Zedekiah, Jacob, Isaac, Jesias, Natthaeus.[g] From the eighth: Theodosius, Jason, Jesus, Theodotus, John, Jonathan.[h] From the ninth: Theophilus, Abram, Arsamus, Jason, Endemias, Daniel.[i] 7 From the tenth: Jeremiah, Eleazar, Zechariah, Baneas, Elisha, Dathaeus.[j] From the eleventh: Samuel, Joseph, Judah, Jonathan, Chabeu, Dositheus.[k] From the twelfth: Isael, John, Theodosius, Arsamus, Abietes, Ezekiel.[l] In all they were seventy-two. 8 Such was the reply that Eleazar and those with him made to the king's letter. I will now do as I promised and describe the works of craftsmanship. They were completed with outstanding skill, since the king contributed lavishly and looked in on the craftsmen at every stage. So they could not overlook anything or finish anything carelessly. First I will explain to you what concerns the table. 9 The king was eager to make the piece enormous in its measurements. He ordered inquiry to be made of people in that region about how large the table already standing in the temple in Jerusalem was. 10 When they told him the measurements, he asked whether he should also make a larger one. Some of the priests, and others, said that nothing prevented it. He said he wished to make it five times the size, but he was afraid it might become useless for the services. 11 For he did not want what came from him merely to sit in that place. He would be far more pleased if the proper services were carried out correctly on the pieces he had made, by those to whom that duty fell. 12 "The earlier pieces are small," he said, "not for lack of gold; it appears that they were made to these measures for some reason. If there had been an instruction to make them larger, nothing would have been withheld. So what has been rightly done must not be overstepped or set aside." 13 He ordered them to use as much variety of craftsmanship as possible, planning everything with dignity and having a fine natural sense for the expressiveness of things. Where nothing was prescribed in writing, he ordered them to make it beautiful; where it was prescribed in writing, the measures were to follow it. 14 They made it two cubits (3 feet) long and a cubit and a half (27 inches) high,[m] working it in tested gold, solid all the way through. I mean that the gold was not wrapped around some other material; the hammered plate itself was joined together. 15 They made a rim a palm (about 3 inches) wide[n] all around. The moldings were twisted, carved in relief with a pattern of cords, and wonderful in their run when seen from the three sides, for the piece was three-cornered. 16 On each side the design of the work had the same arrangement, so that whichever side was turned, the appearance was the same. With the molding laid along the rim, the slope toward the table itself held the pattern of beauty, and the outward slope faced the view of the person approaching. [17] So the ridge between the two slopes came to a sharp edge, standing up, as we said, because it was built three-cornered whichever side was turned. Settings of costly stones lay in it between the cords, one beside another, with a weaving that no one could imitate. [18] All were held through drilled holes by gold pins for security. At the corners, clasps drew them tight to hold them together. [19] At the sides, around the rim, on the part facing upward, a pattern of eggs was made with stones set in it, with a design that drew the eye in continuous fluted reliefs, set close together all around the table. [20] Beneath the stone-set pattern of eggs the craftsmen made a wreath of every kind of fruit, standing out clearly in relief: bunches of grapes and heads of grain, with dates, apples, olives, pomegranates, and the like. They cut the stones to the shapes of these fruits, each kind in its own color, and bound them in the gold, all around the whole edge of the table. [21] After the arrangement of the wreath, the same pattern was made as for the eggs, and the rest of the fluting and carving was done in the same way. This was because the table was made usable on both sides, whichever side was lifted, so that the placing of the moldings and of the rim was also at the end where the legs were. [22] They made a solid plate four fingers (about 3 inches) thick[o] across the whole width of the table, so that the legs could be set into it, fastened with pins and clasps at the rim. That way, whichever side was lifted would be the one in use. This can be seen on the surface, since the piece was made to be used either way up. [23] On the table itself they made a meander in relief, with costly stones standing out in the middle of it, of various kinds: carbuncles and emeralds, onyx, and other kinds outstanding in beauty. [24] After the arrangement of the meander lay a latticework, wonderful to see, making a diamond pattern in the middle. On it a crystal stone and what is called electrum[p] were set in relief, making a sight that no one could imitate. [25] They made the legs with capitals shaped like lilies, with the lilies bending back beneath the table, and the face toward the inside had its petals standing straight. [26] The base

on which the leg rested on the floor was a palm (about 3 inches) high on every side and made of stone, set like a plinth in appearance, and eight fingers (about 6 inches) wide. On it rested the whole plate of the leg.[q] 27 They made ivy growing out of the stone, interwoven with acanthus, winding with a vine around the leg, with clusters of grapes, which were also worked in stone, up to the top. The same arrangement was used on all four legs. Everything was made so lifelike and fitted so well that the skill of the craftsmen matched the real thing exactly. Even when a breath of wind stirred the air, the leaves would move, since everything was modeled on the living thing. 28 They made the top of the table in three parts, like a three-leaved panel, fitted to one another with dovetail joints through the thickness of the piece, and they made the joining of the seams so that it could not be seen or found. The thickness of the whole table was not less than half a cubit (about 9 inches), so that the whole piece was worth many talents. 29 For the king had decided not to add anything to the size, and what would have had to be spent on making larger pieces he gave instead for these, in greater amount. According to his plan, everything was completed wonderfully and notably, inimitable in its craftsmanship and outstanding in beauty. 30 Of the mixing bowls, two were made of gold. They had a scale pattern that ran from the base to the middle, and between the scales stones were set with great skill. 31 Then came a meander a cubit (18 inches) high, with its relief in varied stonework, showing with beauty the painstaking labor of the craft. Above this was fluting, and above that an interweaving of diamond shapes with a net-like face, all the way up to the mouth. 32 In the middle were little shields of stones, one beside another, each of a different kind, not less than four fingers (about 3 inches) across, and they filled out the clear beauty of the piece. On the rim of the body a relief of lilies with honeysuckle ornaments, and twisting cords of grape clusters, were modeled all around. 33 The gold ones had this construction, and each held more than two measures (more than 20 gallons).[r] The silver ones had a smooth surface that served as a mirror, wonderful for this purpose, so that anything brought near was reflected more clearly than in ordinary mirrors. 34 It is not possible to describe what was accomplished for the sake of lifelike effect. When the pieces were finished and set one beside another (I mean first a silver bowl, then a gold one, then silver and gold again), the effect on the eye was altogether indescribable, and those who came to look could not tear themselves away, because of the dazzling light and the pleasure of the sight. 35 The effect of the surface was varied. Those who looked at the gold work felt a spell of wonder, as the mind turned continually to each piece of craft. And when someone wished to look at the arrangement of the silver pieces, everything shone around from every side, wherever one stood, and increased the delight of those who watched. So the many arts used in them were beyond description. 36 The gold cups they engraved with wreaths of vine in the middle, and around the rims they wove a wreath in relief of ivy, myrtle, and olive, setting costly stones in them. The rest of the work they finished in different ways, all of them striving to add to the king's glory. 37 All in all, no work of such expense and craftsmanship existed in the royal treasuries or anywhere else. The king took no small care, since he loved glory in fine things. 38 He often put aside public business and sat attentively beside the craftsmen, so that they would finish the works in a way fitting to the place to which they were being sent. So everything was done with dignity, and worthy of the king who sent it and of the high priest who presided over the place. 39 The number of stones was lavish, and they were large, not fewer than five thousand, and all were of the highest craftsmanship, so that the gift of the stones and the work of the craftsmen were worth five times the gold.

Notes

- a (4:4) Greek forms of Hebrew names. In order: Joseph (Yosef), "may he add"; Hezekiah (Chizqiyah), "Yahweh strengthens"; Zechariah (Zekharyah), "Yahweh remembers"; John (Yochanan), "Yahweh is gracious"; Hezekiah again; Elisha (Elisha), "God saves." The Greek text gives the tribes by number, not by name.
- b (4:4) In order: Judah (Yehudah), "praised"; Simon (Greek form of Shim'on, Simeon), "he has heard"; Samuel (Shemu'el), "name of God" or "God has heard"; Adaeus, perhaps from Adayah, "Yahweh has adorned"; Mattathias (Mattityah),

"gift of Yahweh"; Eschlemias, perhaps from Shelemyah, "Yahweh repays," but the name is uncertain.

- c (4:4) In order: Nehemiah (Nechemyah), "Yahweh comforts"; Joseph; Theodosius, a Greek name meaning "gift of God"; Baseas, Ornias, and Dakis, whose meanings are uncertain.
- d (4:5) In order: Jonathan (Yehonatan), "Yahweh has given"; Abaeus, meaning uncertain; Elisha; Hananiah (Chananyah), "Yahweh has been gracious"; Chabrias, a Greek name, perhaps "graceful"; Chelkias, perhaps for Hilkiah (Chilqiyah), "Yahweh is my portion."
- e (4:5) In order: Isaac (Yitschaq), "he laughs"; Jacob (Ya'aqov), "he grasps the heel" or "may God protect"; Jesus, the Greek form of Yeshua, Joshua, "Yahweh saves"; Sabbataeus, "born on the Sabbath"; Simon; Levi (Levi), "joined."
- f (4:5) Selemias, perhaps for Shelemiah (Shelemyah), "Yahweh repays" or "Yahweh is peace." The other names are explained above.
- g (4:6) In order: Sabbataeus; Zedekiah (Tsidqiyah), "Yahweh is my righteousness"; Jacob; Isaac; Jesias, perhaps for Isaiah or Joshua; Natthaeus, meaning uncertain.
- h (4:6) Jason, a Greek name meaning "healer," often used by Jews in place of Joshua; Theodotus, a Greek name meaning "given by God."
- i (4:6) In order: Theophilus, "friend of God"; Abram (Avram), "exalted father"; Arsamus, a name of Persian or Semitic origin, meaning uncertain; Jason; Endemias, meaning uncertain; Daniel (Daniyel), "God is my judge."
- j (4:7) Jeremiah (Yirmeyahu), "Yahweh lifts up" or "Yahweh loosens"; Baneas, perhaps for Benaiah (Benayahu), "Yahweh has built"; Dathaeus, meaning uncertain.
- k (4:7) Chabeu, meaning uncertain; Dositheus, a Greek name meaning "gift of God."
- l (4:7) Isael, perhaps for Israel (Yisra'el), "he struggles with God"; Abietes, perhaps for Abiah (Aviyah), "Yahweh is my father"; Ezekiel (Yechezqel), "God strengthens."
- m (4:14) Greek: "two cubits" and "a cubit and a half"; a cubit is taken as 18 inches (45 cm).
- n (4:15) Greek: a "palm," one-fourth of a cubit's measure of six palms, taken here as about 3 inches (7.5 cm).
- o (4:22) Greek: "four fingers"; a finger is taken as about three-quarters of an inch (1.9 cm).
- p (4:24) Greek elektron, which can mean either amber or an alloy of gold and silver.
- q (4:26) The Greek of this verse is damaged, and the sense is uncertain.
- r (4:33) Greek: "more than two metretai." A metretes is taken here as about 10 gallons (39 L); the size varied from place to place.

Chapter 5

1 I thought a record of these things was also necessary, and so I have made them plain to you. Next comes the account of our trip to Eleazar; before that, I will describe the lie of the whole country. When we reached those parts, we saw the city lying in the middle of all Judea, on a mountain rising to a great height. 2 On the summit the temple had been built, splendid to look at. It had three enclosing walls, each more than seventy cubits (about 105 feet) in size,[a] and the breadth and length matched the design of the house itself. Everything was built with a grandeur and lavishness that surpassed all else. 3 The doorway, the fastenings around it along the doorposts, and the strength of the lintels made it plain that money had been spent without stint. 4 The curtain was made very much like the doorway in every respect. Because the air moved beneath it, the woven fabric was kept in constant motion, as the billowing, which began at the floor, stretched all the way up to the top. The sight was pleasant and hard to turn away from. 5 The altar was built to suit the place, and the sacrifices that were burned up by fire were offered on it. The approach to the altar was laid out for good order, and the priests who served were covered down to the ankles in tunics of fine linen. 6 The house faces east, with its back to the west. The whole floor is paved with stone and slopes toward suitable places so that water can be carried off, which is needed to wash away the blood of the sacrifices; for tens of thousands of animals are brought in on feast days. 7 The supply of water never fails. A spring with abundant flow wells up naturally from within, and there are also wonderful and indescribable reservoirs underground, reaching, as they showed us, five stadia (about 3,000 feet) around the foundation of the temple.[b] From each of these run countless pipes, where the streams join together on every side. 8 All of these were lined with lead on the floor and the wall, and a great quantity of plaster had been poured over them, everything done with care. There were many openings at the base, invisible to everyone except those who perform the service, so that at a signal all the blood of the great mass of sacrifices that collects can be washed away. 9 I will describe the construction of the reservoirs as I myself became convinced of it.

They led me out of the city more than four stadia (about half a mile), and at one place they told me to bend down and listen to the noise of the waters meeting. In this way the size of the vessels became clear to me, as I have said. [10] The service of the priests is in every respect unsurpassed in strength and in orderly, silent arrangement. All work hard of their own accord, though it is very toilsome, and each one cares for what has been assigned to him. They serve without pause, some bringing wood, others oil, others fine flour, others spices, and others burning the flesh of the offerings, using exceptional strength. [11] They take hold of the calves' legs with both hands (each calf weighs about two talents or more, about 150 pounds)[c] and fling them up to a wonderful height, one with each hand, and never miss the placing. The sheep and goats, too, are remarkable for weight and fat. Those in charge always choose animals without blemish and outstanding in plumpness, and so what I have described is accomplished. [12] A place is set aside for their rest, where those who are taking a break sit. When that happens, those of the others who have stopped rise up eagerly, with no one giving orders for the service. [13] Complete silence prevails, so that one would suppose no human being was present in the place, though the ministers there number about seven hundred, besides a great crowd of those bringing offerings. Yet everything is carried out with reverence, in a way worthy of great divinity. [14] It caused us great astonishment when we saw Eleazar at his service, with the splendor of his dress and the glory that comes from the robe he wears and the stones about him. Golden bells hang around his ankle-length robe, giving out a distinctive sound of melody, and beside each of these are little pomegranates embroidered with flowers, wonderful in color. [15] He was girded with a splendid belt of unusual make, woven through with the loveliest colors. On his chest he wears what is called the breastpiece, in which twelve stones of different kinds are fastened, set in gold, with the names of the tribal leaders in the order established from the beginning. Each one flashes out the natural color proper to it, beyond description. [16] He wears on his head the so-called turban, and on that the inimitable headband, the consecrated royal emblem, with the name of God[d] stamped in sacred letters on a gold plate in the middle of his brow. He is full of glory, since he was judged worthy of these things for the services. [17] The sight of all this brings fear and confusion, so that one thinks one has come into another world outside this one. I assure you that every person who comes near to see the things I have described will be filled with amazement and indescribable wonder, his mind changed by the holy arrangement of every part. [18] To get to know everything, we climbed to the citadel beside the city and looked around. It stands in a very high place, secured by many towers, which were built up to the top with long stones, as we learned, to guard the places around the temple, [19] so that if there should be an attack, an uprising, or an assault by enemies, no one could force a way into the enclosures around the house. Arrow-shooting engines stood on the towers of the citadel, and engines of various kinds, and the place lay above the enclosures I have described, [20] and the towers were guarded by the most trustworthy men, who had given great proofs of loyalty to their country. They had no authority to leave the citadel except on feast days, and then only some of them, and they allowed no one to come in. [21] They were very strict even when an order came through the one in command to admit certain people to see the place, as happened in our own case. They barely admitted the two of us, unarmed, to observe the sacrifices. [22] They said that this was also confirmed by oaths. All of them had sworn, under the compulsion of their religion, to keep the rule: since there were five hundred of them, no more than five persons could be let in together. For the whole guarding of the temple is the citadel, and whoever is in charge of it is made secure in this way against the dangers I have mentioned. [23] The extent of the city is proportionate, with a circuit of about forty stadia (about 4½ miles), as far as one can estimate. The towers are arranged like the rows of a theater, and passages can be seen, some lower down and some above, with ways through them. The ground slopes because the city is built on a mountain, and stairways lead up to the passages. [24] Some people take their road on the upper level and others beneath, and they keep well away from the road, because of those who are in states of purification, so that they touch nothing they should not.

25 It was not without reason that the first builders laid out the city in fitting proportion; they planned it wisely. The country is large and fine. Some of it is plain, the part around what is called Samaria[e] and the parts adjoining the land of the Idumeans,[f] and some is mountainous, the part adjoining the land of the Jews. These regions need constant attention to farming and the care of the soil, so that the people may have good harvests. This is what is done, and all of it is farmed with great abundance in the whole country I have described. 26
As for the cities, those of great size and a matching prosperity tend to be well populated while the countryside is neglected, since everyone is inclined toward cheerfulness of spirit, and by their very make-up all human beings are prone to pleasures. 27 That is what happened around Alexandria, which surpasses all cities in size and prosperity.
People who came into it from the country as visitors stayed on for a long time and caused farming to decline. 28 So, to keep them from staying, the king ordered that no one remain as a visitor for more than twenty days. He also gave written instructions to the officials, that if it was necessary to summon anyone, they should decide the matter within five days. 29 He gave great weight also to the revenue officers and their assistants, and he appointed them by districts, so that the farmers and the city's leading men, by making profit, would not run down the storehouses, I mean the produce of farming. 30 We have gone off on this subject because Eleazar showed us the things above so well. The industry of those who farm is great. The country is full of olive trees in large numbers, of grain crops and pulses, and also of vines and abundant honey. Other tree fruits and dates are not even counted among them. 31 There are many mixed herds, and abundant pasture for them. For that reason they saw rightly that the region needs a large population, and they laid out the city and the villages accordingly. 32 A great quantity of spices, costly stones, and gold is brought to the place through the Arabs.[g] The country is made for working and trade, the city is rich in crafts, and nothing brought by sea is lacking. 33 It has convenient harbors that supply it: the one at Ascalon,[h] Joppa,[i] and Gaza,[j] and also Ptolemais,[k] which the king founded. Jerusalem lies in the middle of these places and not far from them. The country has everything in abundance, well watered on every side and very secure. 34 The river called the Jordan,[l] which never stops flowing, runs around it. In ancient times the land measured no less than sixty million arouras (about forty million acres),[m] though later the neighbors encroached on it, and six hundred thousand men were established as landholders, each with a hundred arouras (about seventy acres). The river fills, like the Nile,[n] in the days of the harvest, and it waters much of the land. 35 This river sends its stream into another river in the territory of Ptolemais, and that one goes out to the sea. Other streams called torrents run down, taking in the parts toward Gaza and the land of the Azotians.[o] 36 The country is enclosed by natural defenses. It is hard to invade and impassable for large forces, because the approaches are narrow, with cliffs alongside and deep ravines, and the whole mountain range surrounding the entire country is rugged. 37 It was also said that mines of copper and iron used to be worked in the neighboring mountains of Arabia. These were abandoned in the time when the Persians ruled, because those then in charge spread the charge that working them was useless and very expensive, 38 so that, because of the mining of those metals, the country would not be ruined and, in effect, taken over through their power, since they would have a pretext for entering the land. I have now given you a summary of what was needed on these matters, my brother Philocrates. What concerns the translation I will explain in what follows.

Notes

- a (5:2) Greek: “seventy cubits”; a cubit is taken as 18 inches (45 cm). The Greek says “in size,” and height is probably meant.
- b (5:7) Greek: “five stadia.” A stadion is taken as about 600 feet (185 m); five stadia is therefore just over half a mile.
- c (5:11) Greek: “more than two talents.” A talent is taken here as about 75 pounds (34 kg).
- d (5:16) The name Yahweh, in holy Hebrew letters, is meant.
- e (5:25) Greek Samareitis, from Hebrew Shomron, “watch hill.”
- f (5:25) Greek Idoumaioi, the people of Edom, whose name means “red.”
- g (5:32) Greek Arabes, from a Semitic word probably meaning “desert dwellers” or “nomads.”
- h (5:33) Greek Askalon, Hebrew Ashqelon; the meaning is uncertain.

- i (5:33) Hebrew Yafo, “beautiful.”
- j (5:33) Hebrew Azzah, “strong.”
- k (5:33) Greek Ptolemais, “city of Ptolemy”; this was the old Phoenician port of Acco, renamed for a Ptolemy.
- l (5:34) Hebrew Yarden, “descender.”
- m (5:34) Greek: “six thousand myriads of aroura.” An aroura is taken as about two-thirds of an acre (0.28 hectare).
- n (5:34) Greek Neilos; the origin of the name is uncertain.
- o (5:35) Greek Azotioi, the people of Azotus, Hebrew Ashdod, “fortress.”

Chapter 6

1 For Eleazar had picked the best men, outstanding in education, since they came from distinguished parents. They had not only gained a command of the Jewish writings but had also paid serious attention to Greek learning. 2 For this reason they were well suited for embassies and carried them out whenever it was needed. They also had great natural ability in conversation and in discussions about the law. They pursued the middle course, which is the finest, laying aside what is rough and uncultured in the mind. Likewise they had risen above conceit and the belief that they were superior to others. They had taken up courtesy, listening, and giving each person a fitting answer. All of them kept these habits, and each wanted to outdo the others in them, and all were worthy of their leader and of his excellence. 3 It was easy to see how they loved Eleazar and could hardly be parted from him, and he loved them. Besides writing to the king about their return, he urged Andreas strongly to do the same, asking him to help as far as we could. 4 When we promised to see to this, he said that he was very anxious, for he knew that the king, who loves what is good, counts it the greatest thing of all to send for any person who is named, in whatever place, as outstanding above others in conduct and understanding. 5 I have learned that the king rightly says that if he has just and sensible men around him, he will have the greatest protection for his kingdom, since friends will advise him frankly for his benefit; and this is the case with those sent by him. 6 He also gave his oath not to let these men be used up on any other need of his own, but to send them out only for the common improvement of all the citizens. 7 “Living well,” he said, “lies in keeping the commandments of the law, and this is accomplished by hearing far more than by reading." By putting forward these and similar thoughts he made plain the attitude he had toward them. [8] It is worth mentioning briefly what he showed us in answer to what we asked. I think that many people are curious about certain things in the legislation, about foods and drinks and the animals thought to be unclean. [9] We asked why, when there is a single creation, some animals are held unclean for eating and others even for touching. (The law is scrupulous in most matters, and in these it is extremely so.) He began his answer in this way. [10] "You see," he said, "what effect our habits and our associations have, for when people keep company with the wicked they pick up twisted ways and are wretched through the whole of their lives. But if they live with the wise and sensible, they pass out of ignorance and find the setting right of their lives. [11] So our lawgiver first set out the matters of piety and justice and taught each of them, not only by forbidding but by showing, making plain both the harms and the punishments that God sends on those responsible— [12] for he showed first of all that God is the only God, that his power is made plain through all things, that every place is filled with his dominion, and that nothing done on earth by people in secret escapes him. Whatever anyone does is plain to him, and so are the things that will come about— [13] and by working these points out exactly and setting them in plain view, he showed that if anyone should even think of committing wrong, it would not go unnoticed, still less if he did it, since throughout the whole law he displays the power of God. [14] After this opening, having shown that all other peoples apart from us believe in many gods, though they are in themselves far stronger than the gods they worship for nothing— [15] for they make statues of stone and wood, and they say these are images of people who discovered something useful for living, and they bow down to them, though the lack of feeling in these things lies right at their feet. [16] If anyone were a god on that basis, because of an invention, it would be completely senseless. For these inventors took certain things already in creation, put them together, and showed that they were useful; they did not make the substance of them themselves. So it is empty and foolish to make gods of people like themselves. [17] Even now there are many people more inventive and better taught than the people of earlier times, and yet no one would be in a hurry to worship them. The Greeks who shaped these ideas and spun these tales believe themselves to be the wisest. [18] Why even speak of the other worthless worshipers, the Egyptians and those like them, who have trusted in wild beasts and in nearly every sort of reptile and animal, and bow down to them and sacrifice to them, both living and dead? [19] When our lawgiver, a wise man equipped by God for knowledge of all things, had considered each point, he fenced us in with unbroken palisades and walls of iron, so that we would not mix with any of the other nations in any way. We were to stay pure in body and soul, freed from empty beliefs, worshiping the one mighty God over the whole of creation. [20] For this reason the leading priests of Egypt, who have looked deeply into many things and shared in many affairs, call us "men of God." This title does not belong to the rest, unless someone worships the God who truly is. The others are men of food and drink and shelter, [21] for their whole outlook takes refuge in these things. Among our people these count for nothing, and their thought is given to the dominion of God throughout the whole of life. [22] So that we would not be corrupted by mixing with anyone or by keeping company with the base, he fenced us in on every side with rules of purity, in accordance with the law, concerning foods and drinks and touch and hearing and sight. [23] In general, all things are alike by natural reason, governed by one power, and each one has a deep meaning in what we avoid using and what we do use. As an example, I will go over one or two points briefly for you. [24] Do not fall into the cheap view that Moses[a] made these laws out of fussiness over mice and weasels and such creatures. No: everything has been arranged with dignity, for the sake of pure inquiry and the shaping of character toward justice. [25] Of the birds we eat, all are tame and distinguished by their cleanness, feeding on wheat and pulses: doves, turtledoves, francolins, and partridges, and also geese and others of the kind. [26] As for the birds that are forbidden, you will find them wild and meat-eating, lording it over the rest by their strength, and feeding unjustly on the tame birds I have mentioned. Not only this, but they snatch up lambs and kids, and they harm people, both dead and living. [27] By naming these birds unclean, he set a mark on them. It showed that those for whom the law was laid down must practice justice in their souls and not lord it over anyone, trusting in their own strength, nor take anything away, but steer the affairs of life by what is right, just as the tame birds I mentioned feed on the pulses that grow on the ground and do not use their power to destroy their own kind. [28] Through such examples the lawgiver handed down a sign for those with understanding: to be just, to carry out nothing by force, and not to lord it over others by relying on one's own strength. [29] Since he did not allow us even to touch the creatures I mentioned, because of the character of each, how could one fail to take great care that our own conduct is not bent toward such things? [30] So all the concessions made to us about these birds and about cattle are set out in figurative terms. For having a cloven foot, with the hoof divided into claws, is a sign of separating each action toward what is good. [31] The strength of the whole body, with its working power, rests on the shoulders and legs. So the sign given through these animals compels us to do everything with discrimination, toward justice. It also reminds us that we have been set apart from all other people. [32] Most of the rest of mankind defile themselves by their intercourse, and so commit great injustice, and whole countries and cities are proud of it. They not only take males as partners, but they also defile their own mothers and even daughters. We have been set apart from these things. [33] He has also stamped the mark of remembrance on the very same thing that the mode of separation concerns. For all animals that part the hoof and bring up the cud set forth, clearly for those who understand, the idea of memory. [34] For chewing the cud is nothing other than a recalling of life and existence, since he reckons that life is sustained by food. [35] That is why scripture also urges us, saying: "You shall remember well Yahweh,[b] who has done great and wonderful things in you." For when they are looked into, these things prove great and glorious: first of all, how the body is put together, how food is handled, and the separation of each limb; [36] and much more, the ordering of the senses, the working of the mind and its unseen motion, the quickness to act in each matter, and the invention of crafts, all of which hold a manner beyond understanding. [37] So he urges us to remember that these things are kept in being by divine power along with their construction. For he has set aside every time and every place for constantly remembering the God who rules and sustains. [38] He commands that over food and drink we first make an offering and only then use them. Through our garments, too, he has given us a mark of remembrance, and in the same way he has ordered us to place the words on our gates and doors, as a reminder of God. [39] On the hands he expressly commands that the sign be fastened, showing plainly that every action must be carried out with justice, remembering our own makeup, and above all the fear of God. [40] He commands also that when we lie down and when we rise we think over the works of God, observing not merely in speech but by reflection the movement and perception that come over us when we go to sleep, and our waking, and how divine and beyond grasp is the change from one to the other. [41] You have now been shown the deeper meaning of the law about separation and remembrance, in our account of the split hoof and the chewing of the cud. These things were not laid down at random or on whatever came into the mind, but for the sake of truth and the marking out of right reasoning. [42] For having given instructions about foods and drinks and everything to do with touch, he commands that we do nothing and hear nothing at random, and that we not use the power of speech to turn toward injustice. [43] The same can be found with the animals. The way of the weasel and of creatures like it, those named in the law, is harmful. [44] Mice damage and harm everything, not only for their own food but so as to make completely useless to a person whatever they happen to set upon harming. [45] The kind of weasel is peculiar. Apart from what was said, it has a damaging nature, for it conceives by way of the ears and gives birth by way of the mouth. [46] For this reason such a way among people is unclean. Those who take in things by hearing and then give them a body in speech, rolling others into evil, accomplish no ordinary wrong, and they are themselves wholly polluted with the stain of impiety. Your king does well to put such people to death, as we understand." [47] I said, "I suppose you mean the informers; for he keeps bringing on them torture and painful deaths." "Those are the very ones I mean," he said, "for keeping watch to bring about people's ruin is unholy. [48] Our law orders us to do no harm to anyone, whether in word or in deed. So on these matters, too, I have shown you briefly that everything has been regulated toward justice, and that nothing in scripture has been laid down at random or as a fable. Its purpose is that through the whole of life, and in our actions, we practice justice toward all people, remembering the ruling God. [49] So the whole account of foods and of unclean reptiles and animals points toward justice and just dealing among people." [50] It seemed to me that he defended each point well. He also said, about the offerings of calves, rams, and goats, that these must be taken from herds and flocks and be tame animals when sacrificed, and nothing wild, so that those who bring the sacrifices will be aware of nothing proud in themselves, keeping in view the sign given by the one who laid down the rule. For the person who brings the sacrifice makes the offering of his own soul, of his whole manner of life. [51] I think that what was said in that conversation is worth recording on these matters too. So I have gone on to explain to you, Philocrates, the dignity and natural reasoning of the law, because of your love of learning.

Notes

- a (6:24) Greek Mouses, from Hebrew Mosheh, "drawn out" (Exodus 2:10).
- b (6:35) The Greek has Kyrios, "Lord," the word the Greek Bible uses in place of the Hebrew name Yahweh. The words echo Deuteronomy 7:18 and 10:21.

Chapter 7

[1] Eleazar offered a sacrifice, chose the men, prepared many gifts for the king, and dispatched us with a heavy escort. [2] When we reached Alexandria, the king was told of our arrival. Andreas and I were admitted to the court, and we greeted the king warmly and handed over the letters from Eleazar. [3] He placed great value on meeting the men who had been sent, and ordered every other official dismissed and the men summoned. [4] This struck everyone as remarkable, since the custom was that people who came on business could reach the king's presence only on the fifth day, and envoys from kings or from important cities were barely admitted to the court within thirty. But he thought those who had come worthy of greater honor, and he judged the standing of the one who had sent them. So he dismissed those he thought unnecessary and waited, walking about, until he could greet them as they came in. [5] They came forward with the gifts that had been sent and the precious skins on which the law was written in gold letters in Hebrew script. The parchment was wonderfully worked, and the joins between the sheets had been made so that they could not be felt. When the king caught sight of the men, he inquired about the books. [6] They uncovered the wrappings and unrolled the sheets. The king stood there a long time, bowed down about seven times, and said, "I thank you, men, and the one who sent you even more, and above all God, whose words these are." [7] Everyone who had come, and everyone who was present, cried out together with one voice, "Well said, O king!" Tears came to him, and he was full of joy. For the strain on the soul and the weight of such an honor force tears at moments of success. [8] He ordered the rolls to be put back in order. Then he greeted the men and said, "It was right, you godly men, that I first pay reverence to the books for whose sake I sent for you, and only after that hold out my right hand to you. That is why I did this first. [9] I count this day, on which you arrived, a great day, and it will be marked every year all the days of our life. It also happens to coincide with news of our victory in the sea battle against Antigonus.[a] So today I will want to dine with you. [10] Everything will be provided for you in a fitting way," he said, "for you to use, and for me with you." They were delighted. He ordered that the best lodgings near the citadel be given them and that the banquet be prepared. [11] Nicanor,[b] the chief usher, called in Dorotheus,[c] who had been put in charge of these matters, and ordered him to carry out the preparations for each person. For this was how the kings had arranged it, as you can still see today: for every city that has its own customs in drink, food, and bedding, there was an officer in charge. Preparations were made according to those customs whenever the envoys came before the kings, so that, troubled in nothing, they could pass the time cheerfully. That was done for these men too. [12] Dorotheus was a very careful man and had charge of such matters. He laid out everything that was handled through him, divided up for such receptions. He made the arrangement of the couches in two groups, as the king had ordered: half of the guests were to recline at his right hand, and the rest after his own couch, leaving nothing lacking in honoring the men. 13 When they were seated, the king told Dorotheus to proceed according to the customs followed by all who come to him from Judea. For that reason he excused the sacred heralds, the sacrificers, and the others who were accustomed to make the prayers, and he asked Elisha,[d] who had come with us and was an elder among the priests, to make the prayer. Elisha stood and spoke in a worthy way. 14 "O king, may God Almighty fill you with all the good things he has created. May he grant that you keep these, with your wife and children and those who share your mind, never failing, all the days of your life." 15 When he had said this, applause burst out with shouting and glad joy for a long time. Then they turned to enjoy what had been prepared, with all the services carried out under Dorotheus's direction. Among those serving were royal pages and some of those honored by the king.

Notes

- a (7:9) Greek Antigonos, perhaps "worthy of his fathers." The sea battle is not identified with certainty.
- b (7:11) Greek Nikanor, "victorious."
- c (7:11) Greek Dorotheos, "gift of God."
- d (7:13) Hebrew Elisha, "God saves." He is the Elisha of the first tribe named in 4:4.

Chapter 8

1 When he found an opening after an interval, he asked the man on the first couch (for they were seated by age), "How could I keep my kingdom free of stumbling to the end?" 2 After a brief pause he said, "You would govern best by imitating God's constant gentleness. If you practice patience and treat those who deserve it more mildly, as each deserves, you will turn them from wickedness and bring them to repentance." 3 The king praised him and asked the next, "How could I do everything well?" He answered, "If you keep justice toward everyone, you will do each thing well for yourself, understanding that every thought is clear to God. If you begin from the fear of God, you will fail in nothing." [4] The king gladly accepted this answer and asked another, "How could I have friends who are like myself?" He said, "If they see you taking great care of the crowds you rule. You will do this by observing the good God does for the human race, supplying health and food and everything else in due season." [5] The king confirmed this and asked the next, "How could I win good reports in my business and judgments, even from those who lose their case?" He said, "If you are the same to all in what you say, and do nothing proudly or by the force of your own strength against those who do wrong. [6] You will do this by looking at the order God has set. Requests are granted to those who are worthy, and those who fail are shown, through dreams or events, the harm that is theirs. God does not strike them according to their sins or the greatness of his strength; he acts with gentleness." [7] He praised this man well too and asked the next in order, "How could I be undefeated in the demands of war?" He said, "If you do not put your trust in crowds or forces, but call on God in everything, so that he may direct your undertakings as you carry out everything justly." [8] He welcomed this man too and asked another, "How could I be feared by my enemies?" He said, "If, though you have a great supply of arms and forces, you know that these are empty and over a long time accomplish little in the end. For God, who grants respites and shows the fear of his dominion, builds it into every mind." [9] He praised this man as well and said to the next, "What would be the finest thing for me in life?" He said, "To know that God is ruler of all, and that even in our finest actions it is not we who direct what we have planned. God brings everyone's plans to completion and guides them with his power." [10] He said this man too spoke well, and asked another, "How could I keep everything unharmed and hand down the same disposition to my descendants to the end?" He said, "By praying always to God to receive good thoughts for what is to be done, and by urging your descendants not to be dazzled by fame or riches. For these are granted by God, and they do not hold their supremacy over everything by their own doing." [11] He confirmed this and asked the one after him, "How could I bear what happens with moderation?" He said, "If you accept in advance that God made all people to share in the greatest evils as well as in goods, and that no human being can be free from a mixture of them. God gives courage, and he must be asked for it." 12 He welcomed this man too, and said that everyone was answering well. "I will ask one more and then stop for now, so that we may turn to pleasure and pass the time agreeably. In the next six days, one after another, I will learn something more from the rest." 13 Then he asked the man, "What does courage aim at?" He said, "That what has been rightly planned be carried out as intended in the actions of danger. And God brings everything to completion for you, O king, since you plan well and to good purpose." 14 Everyone cheered and signaled their approval with applause. The king said to the philosophers (not a few were present with them), "These men, I think, stand out in virtue and have greater understanding, since, though given such questions on the spur of the moment, they answered as they should, all of them making God the starting point of their discourse." 15 Menedemus[a] of Eretria,[b] a philosopher, said, "Yes, O king. All things are governed by providence, and they have rightly assumed that man is God's creation, so it follows that all power and all beauty of speech begin with God." 16 The king nodded, the discussion of these matters ended, and they turned to merriment. When evening came, the banquet broke up. 17 On the next day the reclining and the drinking went on in the same arrangement. When the king thought it a good time to ask the men something, he questioned those who came next after the ones who had answered the day before. 18 He began the conversation with the eleventh, for ten had been questioned the day before. When there was silence, he asked, "How could one stay rich?" 19 After a short pause, the one who received the question said, "If he does nothing unworthy of himself or dissolute, if he does not spend on empty and vain things, and if he wins those under him to goodwill by kindness. For God is the cause of good things for all, and one must follow him." 20 The king praised this man and asked another, "How could one keep to the truth?" He answered, "By knowing that a lie brings great shame on everyone, and much more on kings. Since they have authority to do what they want, why would they lie? You must also take this in, O king: God loves truth." 21 He welcomed this man too, looked at the next, and said, “What does the teaching of wisdom consist of?” The other declared, “As you do not want evils to come to yourself but want a share in all good things, so you ought to deal with your subjects and with those who do wrong, and admonish the good and noble among people rather gently. For God leads all people with gentleness.” [22] He praised him and said to the next, “How could one be kind to people?” He said, “By observing that the human race grows and is born over a long time and with the greatest suffering. So one should not punish readily or heap abuse on people, knowing that human life is made of pains and penalties. If you think over each case, you will turn toward mercy, for God is merciful.” [23] He welcomed this man and put to the next man this question: “What does a kingdom need most?” “To keep oneself free of bribes,” he said, “to be sober for most of one’s life, to put justice first, and to make friends of such people. For God loves justice.” [24] He took note of this and turned to another: “What does piety consist of?” He said, “To understand that God is at work and aware of everything at every moment, and that no one who commits an injustice or an evil could escape him. As God benefits the whole world, so you also, if you imitate him, would be free from stumbling.” [25] He applauded this and said to another, “What is the limit of ruling?” He said, “To rule oneself well, and, not being carried away by wealth and glory, to desire nothing proud or unseemly, if you reason well. For everything is at your command as if it were nothing. God needs nothing and is gentle. You too, so far as you are human, should keep this in mind, and not reach for many things, but for what suffices for ruling.” [26] He praised him and asked another, “How could one best deliberate?” He answered, “If he constantly puts justice before everything and considers injustice a loss of life. For God always foretells the greatest good for the just.” [27] He praised this man and said to the next, “How could one be untroubled in sleep?” He said, “You have asked a thing that is hard to explain. We cannot keep ourselves in hand in what happens in sleep, but are held by a perception that does not reason. [28] In the soul we are affected by what comes upon us as if we were really seeing it. We lose our reason, in that we suppose we are out on the open sea in ships, or flying through the air and carried off to other places, and other things of the kind, and the one who supposes these things does not stand firm.[c] 29 Still, as far as I can reach it, I have understood it this way. In every way, O king, bring both what is said and what is done back to piety, so that you are conscious that, keeping to virtue, you choose neither to show favor against reason nor, using your authority, to set aside what is just. 30 In most cases, the matters in which each person passes the time while awake are the same ones in which the mind dwells during sleep. And a person who directs all reasoning and action toward what is finest does so awake and asleep. For that reason steadiness is always with you." 31 He praised this man warmly and said to the other, "Since you are the tenth to give an answer, once you have spoken we will turn to the dinner." 32 He asked, "How could we do nothing unworthy of ourselves?" He said, "Keep your eye always on your own reputation and eminence, so that you speak and think in keeping with them, knowing that all those you rule think and talk about you. 33 For you must not appear the least of the actors. The role they must play, they watch carefully and do everything to match it. But you are not playing a part; you truly reign, since God has given you rule that suits your character." 34 The king applauded him warmly and with great friendliness for a long time, and then the men were urged to go and sleep. When this was finished, they went on to the next day's banquet. 35 On the following day the same arrangement was followed, and when the king thought it a good time to ask the men something, he asked the first of those who remained for the next question: "What is the strongest rule?" 36 He said, "To rule oneself and not be swept along by one's impulses. For in every person the mind naturally leans toward something. 37 Most people are likely to be inclined toward food, drink, and pleasures; kings, toward the conquest of territory, in keeping with the greatness of their glory. But moderation in everything is good. Take what God gives and hold on to it; do not desire what is out of reach."

Chapter 9

1 Pleased with what had been said, he asked the next, “How could one be free of envy?” After a pause he said, “First, if he understood that God apportions glory and great wealth to kings, and that no one is king by his own doing. All people want a share in this glory, but they cannot have it, for it is God’s gift.” 2 He praised the man at some length and asked another, “How could one look down on his enemies?” He said, “If you have practiced goodwill toward all people and built up friendships, you would take no one into account. To be well liked by all and to have received this fine gift from God is the strongest protection.” 3 He agreed with this and told the next to answer, asking, “How could one keep a good reputation?” He said, “By being generous and open-handed to others, with eagerness and kindness, you would never lose your reputation. And so that what I have said may last for you, call on God always.” 4 He praised him and asked another, “How should one show a love of honor?” He said, “Everyone thinks one should show it to those who are friendly to us. I suppose we should show a gracious generosity above all toward those who think differently, so that we may thereby lead them to what is fitting and to their own advantage. One must pray to God that this be accomplished, for he controls the minds of all.” 5 He agreed with this and told the sixth to give his view, asking, “Whom should one show favor to?” He answered, “To parents always, for God has made the greatest commandment about honoring parents. Next he approves devotion to friends, calling a friend equal to one’s own soul. You do well to bring all people into friendship with you.” 6 He encouraged this man and asked the next after him, “What is worthy of being called beauty?” He said, “Piety. For this is a kind of beauty that takes first place, and its power is love, which is God’s gift. You too possess it, with all good things contained in it.” 7 He applauded most warmly and said to another, “How could one who has stumbled win back the same reputation?” He said, “It is not possible for you to stumble, since you have sown kindnesses among all people, and these sprout goodwill, which is stronger than the greatest weapons and carries the greatest security. [8] If some do stumble, they must no longer do the things at which they stumble, but win friendship and act justly. To be a doer of good, and not of the opposite, is God's gift." [9] He was pleased with this and said to the next, "How could one be free of grief?" He said, "If he harms no one but helps everyone, following justice. For its fruits produce freedom from grief. [10] One must also beg God to keep from harming us what comes up against our own choice. I mean such things as death, sickness, griefs, and the like. As for you, since you are pious, none of these will come near you." [11] He praised this man too, and asked the tenth, "What is greatest in glory?" He said, "Honoring God. This is done by neither gifts nor sacrifices, but by a pure soul and a holy understanding, that all things are made and governed by God according to his will. You have always held this view, and it can be seen by everyone from what you have accomplished and are accomplishing." [12] Raising his voice, the king welcomed them all and urged them on, and those present joined in the cheers, especially the philosophers. For the visitors were far ahead of them in conduct and speech, since they made God their starting point. After that the king went on to show his friendliness by proposing toasts. [13] On the next day the banquet followed the same arrangement. When the moment suited the king, he put his questions to those who followed the men already answered. He said to the first, "Can understanding be taught?" He said, "It is the makeup of the soul, through divine power, to take in everything fine and to turn away from the opposite." [14] He agreed and asked the next, "What contributes most to health?" He said, "Self-control. It cannot be gained unless God shapes the mind toward it." [15] He encouraged this man and said to another, "How could one repay parents with the thanks they deserve?" He said, "By causing them no grief. That cannot be unless God leads the mind to the finest things." [16] He nodded to this and asked the next, "How could one be a good listener?" He said, "By understanding that it is useful to know everything, so that when events come, one may choose something of what he has heard and set it against the circumstances of the moment, with God's hand to guide him. That is to say, the accomplishment of one's actions comes from God." [17] He praised this man and said to another, "How could one do nothing against the law?" He said, "By knowing that God gave the ideas to the lawmakers to preserve the lives of people, you would follow them." [18] He welcomed this man and said to another, "What is the benefit of kinship?" He declared, "If, when misfortune comes on our relatives, we count ourselves diminished and suffer as if it were ourselves, then the strength of kinship appears.[a] [19] When this is done, glory and progress will be found among such people. For help given with goodwill, as if from oneself, cannot be dissolved by anything, and in good times there is no need of anything from them. But one must pray to God, who makes everything good." [20] In the same way he welcomed this man and asked another, "How does fearlessness come about?" He said, "When the mind is aware that it has done nothing wrong, and God directs it to deliberate well in everything." [21] He applauded this and said to another, "How could one keep right reason ready at hand?" He said, "If he always keeps in view the misfortunes of people, knowing that God takes away prosperity and raises up others to be honored." [22] He welcomed this man too, and asked the next to answer, "How could one avoid turning to ease and pleasures?" He said, "By keeping in mind that he rules a great kingdom and leads many crowds, and that his thoughts should be on nothing else but the care of them. And by asking God that none of his duties be neglected." [23] He praised this man, the tenth, and asked, "How could one recognize those who act toward him with some deceit?" He declared, "By watching whether their conduct is free and whether good order holds in their greetings, in their counsel, and in the rest of their dealings with those around him, and whether they overdo nothing beyond what is right in friendliness and in the rest of their behavior. [24] God will lead your mind to the finest things, O king." The king applauded them all and praised each by name, and those present did the same. Then they turned to song. [25] On the next day, finding the occasion, he put a question to the next, "What is the greatest neglect?" He said, "If someone is careless about his children and does not strive to bring them up in every way. We always pray to God, less for ourselves than for our descendants, that every good thing may be theirs. That children come to share in self-control happens by God's power." [26] He said this man spoke well and asked another, "How could one be a lover of his country?" He said, "By setting it before himself that it is good to live, and also to die, in one's own country. Living abroad brings contempt on the poor and shame on the rich, as if they had been driven out for wickedness. By doing good to all, as you constantly do, since God gives you favor with all, you will appear a lover of your country." [27] He listened to him and asked the following man, "How should one get along with a wife?" He said, "By knowing that the female sex is bold, and energetic in whatever it wants, and easily turned by faulty reasoning, and by nature made weak. One must treat her sensibly and not oppose her in quarrels. [28] For life is steered rightly when the one at the helm knows to what goal the course must be made. And by calling on God, life is steered rightly in everything." [29] He agreed with this man and asked the next, "How could one be without fault?" He said, "By doing everything with careful thought and not believing slanders, but being yourself the tester of what is said, directing the matters brought before you by judgment, and carrying them out by judgment. In that way you would be without fault, O king. To devise such things and to live by them is the work of divine power." [30] He was delighted by what was said and asked another, "How could one be free of anger?" He said, "By knowing that he has authority over all, and that if he gave way to anger he would bring death, which is useless and painful if the life of many is taken away because he is lord. When all are subject and no one is opposing, why would he be angry? [31] One must know that God governs the whole world with kindness and without any anger. You must follow him, O king." [32] He said this man had answered well and asked the one after, "What is good counsel?" He declared, "To do everything well with careful thought, setting out in the planning the harmful things on the opposite side of the argument, so that when we have thought through each one, we may be well advised and what was proposed may be carried out. And best of all, by God's power every plan will reach its completion for you as you practice piety." [33] He said this man too had done well and asked another, "What is philosophy?" He declared, "To reason well about each thing that happens and not be carried away by impulses, but to study the harms that come out of desires, and to do what suits the moment in a properly measured way. To gain a firm grasp of these things, we must serve God." [34] He marked this answer and asked another, "How could one win acceptance as a stranger in a foreign land?" He said, "By being equal to everyone, and appearing to be lesser rather than greater than those among whom he is a stranger. For in general God welcomes what is humble according to nature, and the human race is kind to those who submit." [35] He affirmed these answers and asked another, "How could what one builds last afterward?" He said, "If he makes great and dignified works, so that those who see them spare them for their beauty; if he sends away none of those who work on them; and if he does not force others to do the needed work without pay. [36] By thinking that God cares for the human race, providing them with health and keen senses and the rest, he will himself do something fitting, paying back the reward for their labors. What is done in justice is also what lasts." [37] Saying that this man also spoke well, he questioned the tenth: "What does wisdom yield?" He said, "Not to be aware of having done any wrong, and to pass one's life in truth. [38] From these, the greatest joy and steadiness of soul come to you, O greatest of kings, and good hopes in God, as you hold your rule with piety." When all heard this, they cheered with louder applause. After this the king, filled with joy, turned to the toasts. [39] On the next day the arrangements for the drinking went as before, and when the moment came, the king put questions to those who were left. To the first he said, "How could one avoid turning to pride?" [40] He answered, "If he keeps equality and reminds himself in each case that, though a man, he rules over men. God brings down the proud and lifts up the gentle and humble." [41] He encouraged him and put a question to the next: "Which counselors should one use?" "Those who have been tested through many affairs," he said, "and who keep their goodwill toward him unspoiled, and all who share his ways. God shows himself to the worthy in such matters." [42] He praised him and turned to another: “What must a king possess above all?” “The kindness and love of those under him,” he answered. “For through these an unbreakable bond of goodwill comes about. That these arise by choice, God brings about.” 43 He praised him highly and questioned another, “What is the goal of speech?” He said, “To persuade the one who disagrees, by showing the harms through an ordered series of points. In this way you will win the listener not by opposing him but by using praise to persuade. Persuasion is directed by God’s working.” 44 He said this man spoke well and asked another, “How could one get along with the crowds of every kind in the kingdom?” “By playing the fitting part with each,” he said, “taking justice as your guide, as you do, since God gives you the ability to reason well.” 45 He was pleased with this and said to another, “What should one grieve over?” He answered, “What happens to friends, when we see it become long-lasting and inescapable. When they have died and are released from evils, reason does not call for grief. But people refer things back to themselves and to what concerns them, and so all people grieve. To escape every evil comes by God’s power.” 46 He said that this man had answered as he should, and said to another, “How does dishonor come about?” He said, “When pride leads, and boldness that never stops, contempt grows up with them, and the loss of glory. God is lord of all glory, and tips it where he wishes.” 47 He confirmed this answer too and asked the next, “Whom should one trust?” “Those who are with you out of goodwill,” he said, “and not out of fear or for the sake of attention, bringing everything round to profit. The one is a sign of love; the other, of ill will and opportunism, for whoever is driven by greed is born a traitor. You have well-wishers all around you, since God gives you good counsel.”

Chapter 10

1 He encouraged this man and asked another, “What preserves favor and honor?” He said, “Virtue. For it is the accomplishment of fine works and drives off evil. You keep up your nobility toward everyone, having it as a gift from God." [2] He received this man warmly too and asked the eleventh (for there were two more than seventy),[a] "How could one be at peace in spirit even in wars?" He declared, "By understanding that he has done no wrong to anyone under him, and that all will struggle on behalf of his benefactions, knowing that even if they depart from life, you are the caretaker of their lives. [3] For you never cease setting everyone right, since God has given you good sense." The king marked their approval with applause and welcomed them all warmly. Toasting each one at greater length, he turned to enjoyment, keeping company with the men in cheer and great joy. [4] On the seventh of the days, with greater preparation made and many more arriving from the cities (for there were a good number of envoys), the king, when the occasion came, asked the leader of those who remained to be questioned, "How could one avoid being led astray by false reasoning?" [5] He said, "By testing the speaker, and what is said, and what it is about, and by asking the same things over a longer time in different ways. A keen mind, able to judge each matter, is a fine gift of God, and you have it, O king." [6] The king marked his approval with applause and asked another, "Why do most people not accept virtue?" "Because all people are by nature lacking in self-control and have turned toward pleasures," he said. "From this injustice grows, and the flood of greed. [7] The state of virtue holds back those who are carried toward indulgence, and orders them to put self-control and justice first. And God leads in all of these." [8] The king said this man had answered well and asked, "What should kings follow?" He said, "The laws, so that through just actions they may rebuild people's lives. By doing this you have laid down a memorial of yourself that will never fade, following a divine command." [9] Saying this man had also spoken well, he asked the next, "Who should be made a general?" He said, "Those who hate evil, who imitate your conduct so as always to be well thought of, and who do what is just. This is what you do, greatest of kings, since God has given you a crown of justice." [10] He welcomed him aloud, looked at the next, and said, "Whom should one set over the armies as commanders?" He declared, "Those who excel in courage and justice, who think much more of saving their men than of winning, and who risk their own lives in daring. As God does good to all, you too, imitating him, do good to those under you." [11] The king said this man had answered well and asked another, "What kind of person is worth admiring?" He said, "One who is supplied with glory, wealth, and power and yet is equal to all in spirit. You are admirable in doing this, since God gives you the care for such things." [12] He applauded this man too and said to another, "What should kings occupy themselves with for most of their time?" He said, "With reading, and with studying the reports of missions and journeys, whatever has been written about kingdoms to set people right and keep them safe. In doing this you have gained a glory that others cannot reach, since God brings your wishes to completion." [13] He addressed this man too with energy and asked another, "What pastimes should one choose in times of relaxation and ease?" He said, "To watch whatever is played out with restraint, and to set before one's eyes the things of life that are done with propriety and decorum. For even in these there is some benefit. [14] Often even from the smallest things something worth choosing is shown. You, having practiced every kind of restraint, philosophize through your actions out of nobility, and are honored by God." [15] He was pleased with what had been said and asked the ninth, "How should one spend banquets?" He said, "By inviting those who love learning and are able to remind one of what benefits the kingdom and the lives of those who are ruled. You would find nothing more harmonious or more musical than these. [16] For such people are dear to God, having trained their minds toward the finest things. You do this too, since everything is directed for you by God." [17] He was delighted with this and asked the next, "Which is better for the crowds: to have as king over them one who was a private citizen, or one born of a king?" He said, "The one who is best by nature. [18] For kings born of kings become savage and harsh toward their subjects. And even more, some private citizens who have known evils and shared in poverty have, once they ruled crowds, turned out harsher than godless tyrants. [19] But as I said, a good character that has had a share in education is able to rule. So you are a great king, not so much for the glory of your rule and wealth as for the fact that in gentleness and kindness you surpass all people, since God has given you these." [20] He praised this man too for a long time and asked the last of all, "What is greatest in a kingdom?" He said, "That those under him always live in peace, and that justice is quickly obtained in the courts. [21] These come about through the leader, when he hates evil and loves good and values highly the saving of a human life. You too have regarded injustice as the greatest evil, and by governing everything justly you have built up a reputation that will not fade, since God has given you a mind that is pure and unmixed with any evil." [22] When he had finished, applause burst out with shouting and joy for a long while. When it stopped, the king took a cup and drank a toast to all who were present and to the words that had been spoken. Before them all he said, "The greatest good has come to me through your coming. [23] I have been helped in many ways, since you have laid down teaching for me on how to rule." He ordered three talents of silver[b] to be given to each one, and an attendant to take him back to his quarters. When all cheered, the banquet was filled with joy, and the king, without pause, turned to cheerfulness.

Notes

- a (10:2) The seventy-two translators had been questioned ten at a time on seven days. That leaves two more for the last day.
- b (10:23) About 225 pounds (102 kilograms) of silver for each man. The Greek says three talents, at about 75 pounds each.

Chapter 11

[1] Forgive me, Philocrates, if I have said too much on these matters. I admired the men beyond what was needed, since they gave on the spot answers that would have needed a great deal of time. [2] The questioner had thought through each point, and the answerers matched their replies to his questions. To me they seemed deserving of wonder, and so to those present, above all the philosophers. I think the record will seem unbelievable to all who take it up. [3] To lie about what is recorded is not fitting, and if I strayed at all, it would be unholy in matters like these. What happened is what we set out, keeping clear of every error. That is why, after I had accepted the force of their speech, I tried to get from the recorders each of the things that were done in the king's audiences and at the banquets. 4 For it is the custom, as you also know, that from the day the king starts his business until he lies down to sleep, everything said and done is written down, and this is a good and useful practice. 5 On the next day, what was done and said the day before is read aloud before the business begins, and if anything was done improperly, the act is corrected. 6 So I got everything accurately from the records, as I have said, and have set it down, knowing your love of learning for what is useful. 7 After three days Demetrius took them, crossed the sea-wall of seven stadia[a] that runs out to the island,[b] crossed the bridge, and went on toward the northern part. He held a meeting in a house prepared by the shore, splendid and set in great stillness, and urged the men to complete the translation, with everything needed provided. 8 They carried out each part, making their versions agree with one another by comparing them. What came out of the agreement was properly written down by Demetrius. 9 The sessions went on until the ninth hour,[c] and after that the men were released to care for their bodies, with everything they chose provided in abundance. 10 Besides this, Dorotheus also provided every day everything that was prepared for the king, since he had been ordered to by the king. At dawn each day they came to the court, and after greeting the king they went back to their own place. 11 As is the custom of all the Jews, they washed their hands in the sea so that they could pray to God, and then turned to reading and explaining each passage. 12 I asked this too: "Why do they pray after washing their hands?" They explained that it is a witness that they have done no evil, since every action is carried out through the hands. They were transferring everything, nobly and piously, to justice and truth. 13 As we said before, they gathered each day at that place, which was pleasant for its quiet and brightness, and completed the task set. And so it happened that the translation was finished in seventy-two days, as though it had been planned that way. 14 When it was completed, Demetrius gathered the Jewish community at the place where the translation had been finished and read it to everyone, with the translators present. They also received great approval from the crowd, as men who had brought about great good. 15 In the same way they welcomed Demetrius and urged him to give the whole law, now translated, to their leaders. 16 When the scrolls had been read, the priests, the elders of the translators, those from the community, and the leaders of the crowd stood and said, "Since it has been translated well and piously and with precision in every respect, it is right that it remain as it is and that no alteration be made." 17 All agreed. As is their custom, they ordered a curse on anyone who altered it by adding anything, changing any part of what was written, or removing anything. They did this rightly, so that it would always be kept lasting and unchanged. 18 When this was reported to the king, he rejoiced greatly, for the purpose he had held seemed to have been safely accomplished. All of it was read to him, and he was amazed at the thought of the lawgiver. He asked Demetrius, "Why is it that, though such great matters were accomplished, none of the historians or poets set out to mention them?" 19 Demetrius said, "Because the legislation is sacred and came through God. Some who tried were struck by God and gave up the attempt. 20 I heard from Theopompus[d] that when he was about to include in his history some of the things already translated from the law, rather rashly, his mind was disturbed for more than thirty days. In a lull he pleaded with God, and it became clear to him why this was happening. 21 It was shown to him in a dream that he wanted to pry into divine matters and carry them out to common people. After he held back, he recovered. 22 I also learned from Theodectes,[e] the tragic poet, that when he was about to bring something recorded in the book into a play, his eyes went blind with cataract. He suspected that this had happened to him for that reason, appeased God, and after many days recovered." 23 When the king, as I said, had learned these things from Demetrius, he bowed in reverence and gave orders that the books be guarded with great care and kept pure. 24 He urged the translators to come to him more often if they returned to Judea. It was right, he said, that he send them off, and when they came, as was proper, they would have him as a friend and would receive the greatest attention from him. 25 He ordered their departure to be prepared, and showed the men great generosity. He gave each of them three of the finest robes, two talents of gold,[f] a cup worth a talent,[g] and a complete set of furnishings for a dining room with three couches. 26 He also sent to Eleazar, along with their escort, ten couches with silver feet and all their equipment, a cup worth thirty talents,[h] ten robes, purple cloth, a splendid crown, a hundred bolts of fine linen, and bowls, dishes, and two golden mixing bowls for dedication. 27 He wrote also to urge that if any of the men chose to come back to him, Eleazar should not stop them. He valued the company of educated men and wished to spend his wealth lavishly on such people and not on vain things. 28 You, Philocrates, as I promised, now have the account. I think it will please you more than the books of the myth-tellers, for you lean toward the study of things that can benefit the mind, and spend most of your time on them. I will try to write down the rest of what is noteworthy as well, so that as you go through it you may carry off the finest prize of your wish.
